

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Box 5078.87.5

Harvard College Library

FROM

.....Clarence A. Bunker.....

.....

.....

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH RAILROAD CASES.

A complete collection of all the railroad law as decided by the American, English and Canadian courts of last resort.

Elaborate notes to the more important cases. As a means of giving the working lawyer a full collection of all the cases on the subjects treated, together with able and judicious criticism upon the points presented, they are simply invaluable.

AMERICAN AND ENGLISH CORPORATION CASES.

This series presents a full collection of the cases in all the courts of last resort, both in America and England, on the law of private and municipal corporations other than railroad companies.

1.—SCOPE. Among the topics treated of will be the following:

PRIVATE CORPORATIONS.—Agency, Assessments, Building Associations, Dissolution of Corporations, Dividends and Earnings, Ecclesiastical and Religious Corporations, Elections, Mandamus, Officers, Organisation, Powers, Stock and Stockholders, Taxation.

MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS.—Assessments, Bonds, Powers, Ordinances, Poor Laws, Streets, Taxes, Intoxicating Liquors, Injuries to Person and Property, etc., etc.

2.—NOTES. The annotations are a special feature, being very full and exhaustive.

These works are issued in monthly Parts, each Part containing not less than 224 pages. Three Parts make a complete volume. When Part 3 is published, the Parts are returned to the publisher by the subscriber, and are bound in best law sheep and returned by mail WITHOUT CHARGE FOR BINDING. The subscription price is $4.50 per volume, including NOTES OF CASES.

EDWARD THOMPSON CO., Publishers,
Northport, Long Island, N. Y.

THE
AMERICAN AND ENGLISH
ENCYCLOPÆDIA
OF
LAW.

COMPILED UNDER THE EDITORIAL SUPERVISION OF CHARLES F. WILLIAMS, ASSISTED BY DAVID S. GARLAND.

VOLUME XXVII.

NORTHPORT, LONG ISLAND, N. Y.:
EDWARD THOMPSON COMPANY, LAW PUBLISHERS.
1895.

Gov 5078.87.5

✓

Clarence A. Bunker

COPYRIGHT 1895.

By EDWARD THOMPSON CO.

All Rights Reserved.

MADE BY THE WERNER COMPANY,
AKRON, OHIO.
2-1-'95.

30-1-31

PARTIAL LIST OF CONTRIBUTORS, VOL. XXVII.

Trusts and Trustees,	CHARLES W. MOORES and W. F. ELLIOTT, of the Indianapolis Bar.
Turnpikes,	FRANK E. GARTLEY, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Ultra Vires,	CHARLES I. GIDDINGS, of the Boston Bar, and DAVID S. GARLAND, of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.*
Underground Waters,	THOMAS P. HOWELL, of the Philadelphia Bar.
Undue Influence,	GEORGE E. BEERS, of the New Haven Bar.
United States,	EDMUND RANDOLPH WILLIAMS, of the Editorial Staff of the Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law.
United States Courts,	GEORGE E. BEERS, of the New Haven Bar.
Usages and Customs,	EDGAR G. MILLER, JR., of the Baltimore Bar.
Usury,	M. L. COUNTRYMAN, of the St. Paul Bar.

* This article was outlined and much material collected by the late Mr. Giddings. Upon his death the work was taken up and carried to completion by Mr. Garland.

TABLE OF TITLES AND DEFINITIONS.

See index for numerous sub-titles and definitions contained in the notes.

- TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, 1
TRUSTS (CORPORATE). See Trade Combinations and Corporate Trusts.
Truth, 323
TUGS. See Towage; Tugs and Tows.
Tuition, 323
Tumbling, 323
Tumult, 323
Tumultuous, 323
Turbary, 323
Turn-out, 323
TURNPIKES, 324
TURN-TABLES, 344
Tutor, 350
Twelvemonth, 350
Twelve Months, 350
TWICE IN JEOPARDY. See Jeopardy.
TYPEWRITER. See Stenographer.
Ullage, 350
Ultimate, 350
ULTRA VIRES, 351
Umpire, 419
Unavoidable, 419
Unbecoming, 420
UNBORN CHILDREN, 420
UNCHASTE CONDUCT. See Chaste.
Uncompleted, 422
UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAINS, 421
Under, 422
UNDERGROUND WATERS, 423
Understand, 445
Understanding, 445
Understandingly, 446
Undertaking, 446
UNDERTAKINGS ON APPEAL, 446
Undertook, 451
Underwood, 451
Underwriter, 451
Undivided, 451
UNDUE INFLUENCE, 452
Unfairly, 517
Unfinished, 517
Unfit, 517
UNION DEPOTS, 517
UNIONS. See Trade Unions.
UNITED STATES, 521
UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS, 546
UNITED STATES COURTS, 567
UNITED STATES MARSHALS. See Sheriffs.
UNIVERSITIES AND COLLEGES, 682
Unknown, 694
Unlawful Assembly, 694
Unlawfully, 696
Unless, 697
UNLIQUIDATED. See Liquidate; Liquidated Damages.
UNLOAD. See Load.
Unmarried, 697
Unoccupied, 697
Unpaid, 697
Unreasonable, 698
UNREASONABLE SEARCHES AND SEIZURES. See Searches and Seizures.
UNSEATED. See Seated; Taxation.
Unsound, 698
Unsuitable, 698
Until, 698
Untrue, 698
Unused, 699
UNUSUAL. See Usual.
Unwilling, 699
Up, 699
Upon, 699
Us, 699
USAGES AND CUSTOMS, 700
Use, 907
Use and Occupation, 908
Useful, 908
Usefulness, 908
USER, 908
USES (STATUTE OF), 909
Usual, 915
Usance, 916
Usufructuary, 916
Usurped Power, 916
Usurper, 916
USURY, 917

THE AMERICAN AND ENGLISH ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF LAW.

TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES. — (See ASSIGNMENT FOR BENEFIT OF CREDITORS, vol. 1, p. 845; CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 5, p. 165; GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 9, p. 85; IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 1; PERPETUITIES, vol. 18, p. 335; POWERS, vol. 18, p. 877; REAL PROPERTY, vol. 19, p. 1028; TRUST DEEDS AND POWER OF SALE MORTGAGES, vol. 26, p. 859; WILLS.)

- I. Definition, 3.
- II. Origin and History, 4.
- III. Kinds of Trusts, 6.
 - 1. Express and Implied, 6.
 - 2. Simple and Special, 6.
 - 3. Legal and Illegal, 7.
 - a. Generally, 7.
 - b. Secret Trusts, 9.
 - c. Spendthrift Trusts (See SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, vol. 23, p. 5), 10.
 - 4. Public and Private, 10.
 - 5. Voluntary and for Value, 11.
 - 6. Executed and Executory, 11.
- IV. Who May Create a Trust, 13.
 - 1. General Rule, 13.
 - 2. The State, 13.
 - 3. Corporations, 13.
 - 4. Married Women, 13.
 - 5. Infants, 14.
 - 6. Lunatics, 14.
 - 7. Bankrupts and Insolvents, 15.
 - 8. Aliens and Non-Residents, 16.
- V. Who May Be a Trustee, 16.
 - 1. General Rule, 16.
 - 2. The United States and the Several States, 17.
 - 3. Corporations, 17.

- 4. Unincorporated Voluntary Associations, 19.
- 5. Public Officers, 19.
- 6. Married Women, 20.
- 7. Infants, 21.
- 8. Lunatics, 21.
- 9. Bankrupts and Insolvents, 21.
- 10. Aliens and Non-Residents, 22.
- 11. Other Persons, 22.
- VI. Who May Be Cestui Que Trust, 23.
 - 1. General Rule, 23.
 - 2. The United States and the Several States, 23.
 - 3. Corporations and Associations, 23.
 - 4. Married Women and Children, 23.
- VII. What Property May Be the Subject of a Trust, 24.
 - 1. Generally, 24.
 - 2. Choses in Action, 24.
 - 3. Foreign Property, 25.
- VIII. Creation of Trusts, 25.
 - 1. In General, 25.
 - 2. Powers Given to Trustees, 35.
 - 3. Provisions for Maintenance, 36.
 - 4. Provisions in Wills, 38.

5. Precatory Trusts, 38.
 6. Consideration, 43.
 7. Statute of Frauds, 46.
 8. Statute of Wills, 53.
 9. Personal Property, 54.
 - a. Generally, 54.
 - b. Bank Deposits, 58.
 - IX. Construction of Trusts, 62.
 1. Generally, 62.
 2. Executed Trusts, 65.
 3. Executory Trusts, 66.
 - a. Marriage Settlements, 66.
 - b. Wills, 67.
 - c. Deeds, 74.
 - X. Acceptance or Disclaimer by Trustee, 81.
 - XI. Resignation and Removal of Trustee, 85.
 - XII. Succession and Appointment of New Trustee, 89.
 - XIII. Statute of Limitations — Laches—Lapse of Time, 98.
 1. Generally, 98.
 2. As Between Trustee or Beneficiary and Stranger, 99.
 3. As Between Trustee and Beneficiary, 100.
 4. Accounts, 106.
 - XIV. Nature of the Trustee's Estate, 107.
 - XV. Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee, 133.
 1. Scope and Limitations, 133.
 - a. In General, 133.
 - b. Special Powers, 136.
 - c. Discretionary Powers, 140.
 2. Delegation of Powers and Duties, 143.
 3. The Duty of Diligence, 145.
 - a. In General, 145.
 - b. Mistake, 150. [150.
 4. Duty to Execute the Trust,
 - a. In General, 150.
 - b. Application for Instructions from the Court as to the Conduct of the Trust, 151.
 5. Duty to Care for the Trust Property, 153.
 - a. Possession and Safe Keeping, 153.
 - (1) Protection and Preservation, 155.
 - (a) In General, 155.
 - (b) Repairs—Waste, 157.
 - (2) Depositing Funds in Bank, 158.
 - (3) Confusion of Funds — Conversion, 160.
 - (4) Insurance, 163.
 - (5) Taxes, 164.
 - b. Investment (See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813), 164.
 - c. Profits and Losses, 164.
 - d. Accounting, 165.
 - (1) In General, 165.
 - (2) Settlement and Release, 168.
 - (3) Capital and Income, 169.
 - (4) Disbursements and Allowances, 173.
 - (5) Lien for Reimbursement, 178.
 - (6) Interest, 179.
 - e. Compensation of the Trustee, 180.
 - (1) In General, 180.
 - (2) Double Compensation, 191.
 6. The Duty of Good Faith, 191.
 - a. In General, 191.
 - b. Using the Trust for Personal Gain, 194.
 - c. Buying at His Own Sale, 197.
 - d. Dealings with the Beneficiary, 213.
 7. Co-Trustees, 215. [221.
 8. Contracts of the Trustee, 221.
 9. Sales by the Trustee, 221.
 - a. Power of Sale, 221.
 - b. Manner of Sale, 226.
 - c. Setting the Sale Aside, 231.
 - d. Rights of the Purchaser (See infra, this title, Rights and Liabilities of Third Parties), 234.
- XVI. Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary, 234.
 1. Nature of the Beneficiary's Estate, 234.
 2. Rights and Remedies as Against the Trustee, 245.
 - a. In General, 245.
 - b. Injunction, 248.
 - c. Personal Penalties Upon the Trustee—Removal—Withholding Compensation, 248.
 - d. Receiver, 249.
 - e. The Right to an Accounting, 250.
 - f. Following the Trust Property, 250.
 - g. Right to Reimbursement, 263.
 - h. Other Rights, 263.
- XVII. Rights and Liabilities of Third Parties, 264.

XVIII. Waiver and Estoppel, 269.

XIX. Procedure, 271.

1. In General, 271.
2. Jurisdiction, 271.
3. Parties, 278.
 - a. Who May Sue, 278.
 - b. Who are Necessary Parties and Who are Not, 285.
 - c. Who are Proper Parties Defendant, 292.
4. Pleading, 292.
5. Evidence, 296.

6. Costs, 303.7. The Decree, 306.

XX. Termination of the Trust, 309.

1. By Operation of Law, 309.
2. By Its Own Limitations, 309. [310.]
3. By the Act of the Parties,
 - a. By the Settlor—Revocation—Revocation of Trusts for Creditors, 310.
 - b. By the Trustee, 321.
 - c. By the Beneficiary, 322.

1. DEFINITION.—A trust is defined by Mr. Justice Story as “an equitable right, title, or interest in property, real or personal, distinct from the legal ownership thereof.”¹ This definition has, however, been criticised as describing the beneficial interest of the person in whose favor the trust is created, rather than the trust itself. Sir Edward Coke’s definition of a use has been adopted by Mr. Lewin and Mr. Perry as a correct definition of a trust; it is as follows: “A confidence reposed in some other, not issuing out of the land, but as a thing collateral annexed in privity to the estate of the land, and to the person touching the land, for which the cestui que trust has no remedy but by subpoena in Chancery.”² This definition seems, however, to be applicable to real estate only. It is exceedingly difficult to frame an accurate definition of a trust, but the following is submitted as more nearly correct than either of the definitions given above: A trust is an equitable obligation, either express or implied, resting upon a person by reason of a confidence reposed in him, to apply or deal with property for the benefit of some other person, or for the benefit of himself and another or others, according to such confidence.³

The position or relationship of an executor, administrator, guardian, assignee, bailee, factor, agent, commission merchant, common carrier, or officer of a public or private corporation, may be said to be one of trust, in the broadest sense of that term; but

1. 2 Story’s Eq. Jur., § 964. Substantially the same definition is given by Mr. Spence and Mr. Snell. See 2 Spence Eq. Jur. *875; Snell’s Princ. of Eq. (Lawson’s Am. Ed.) 59.

“A trust exists where the legal interest is in one person and the equitable interest in another.” Wallace v. Wainwright, 87 Pa. St. 263.

“A trust is where property is conferred upon and accepted by one person on terms of holding, using, or disposing of it for the benefit of another.” Per Owen, C. J., in Mannix v. Purcell, 46 Ohio St. 102; 15 Am. St. Rep. 562.

2. Co. Litt. 272b; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 13; 1 Lewin on Trusts *13.

A trust is “an obligation upon a person arising out of a confidence reposed in him, to apply property faithfully and according to such confidence.” Willes on Trustees 2, quoted, with approval, in Sinking Fund Com’rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 435.

3. See 1 Perry on Trusts, § 2; 2 Bouv. Law Dict., tit. “Trust;” Smith’s Princ. Eq. 22; Beers v. Lyon, 21 Conn. 614.

Mr. Abbott says that, in its most general sense, it is a “confidence reposed in a person that he will act in certain matters for the benefit of another; but, technically, it signifies a holding of property, subject to a duty of employing it or applying its proceeds according to directions given by these subjects are treated elsewhere in this work under the proper titles, and this article will be confined to the treatment of trusts in the more limited and technical sense of the term.

II. ORIGIN AND HISTORY.—"The elementary notion of trusts," says Mr. Pomeroy, "like so many other doctrines of equity, was borrowed from the Roman law."¹ The *fidei commissa*² of the Romans doubtless suggested the doctrine of uses and trusts to the early English chancellors and ecclesiastical lawyers, but a new structure has been built on the old foundation. At common law, the only mode of conveying land was by livery of seizin, or transmutation of possession. The power of alienation was greatly restricted, and the innumerable fines and reliefs required by the feudal law of tenure led to the introduction of uses and trusts, to the adoption of which additional impetus was given by the prohibitions imposed by Magna Charta and the Statute of Mortmain. The doctrine was greatly abused, however, and its application gave rise to the perpetration of so much fraud³ that the celebrated Statute of Uses⁴ was finally passed, with the intention of abolishing uses altogether by the statutory transfer of the legal estate from the feoffee to use directly to the cestui que use. But the statute was so construed as not to apply to a use upon a use or equitable estate capable of creation without being merged into the legal estate.⁵ Thus arose the modern doctrine of trusts, which are, in effect, uses not executed by the Statute of Uses.⁶

It was held that the Statute of Uses applied only to passive uses, and not to express active trusts in which some active duty was imposed on the trustee, rendering it necessary that the legal estate should remain in him.⁷ So, it was held also that leaseholds the person from whom it was derived." 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Trust."

1. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 976. This is the accepted doctrine. 2 Story's Eq. Jur., § 965; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 438; 2 Washb. Real Prop., 384-386; 1 Spence Eq. Jur., 439-442.

2. See Saunder's Justinian, 337, 338; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., §§ 976, 977; 2 Story's Eq. Jur., § 966.

3. According to an old English counsellor, the parents of uses and trusts were fraud and fear, and a court of conscience was the nurse. Atty. Gen'l v. Sands, Hard. 491.

4. 27 Hen. VIII., ch. 10.

5. Thus, where A, the legal owner, is directed to hold the land to the use of B, who is directed to hold it to the use of C, the Statute of Uses will carry the land to B, at law, but no further; and the ultimate use to C, being a use upon a use, will remain unaffected by the statute. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 463; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 985; 2 Washb. on Real Prop., 406, 409, 457, 460; Ramsay v. Marsh, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 252; 13 Am. Dec. 718; Wyman v. Brown, 50 Me. 157; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 282; Guest v. Farly, 19 Mo. 147; Cueman v. Broaduax, 37 N. J. L. 508; Hutchins v. Heywood, 50 N. H. 496; Reed v. Gordon, 35 Md. 183; Hurst v. McNeil, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 70; Hopkins v. Hopkins, 1 Atk. 591.

6. Ware v. Richardson, 3 Md. 505; 56 Am. Dec. 769; Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 698; 1 Spence's Eq. Jur. 494; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 986.

7. Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden 125; Pybus v. Smith, 3 Bro. C. C. 340; Nevil v. Saunders, 1 Vern. 415; Harton v. Harton, 7 T. R. 654; Philadelphia Trust, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 209; Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399; Shallcross' Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 374; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Turley v. Massengill, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 353; Meacham v. Steele, 93 Ill. 135; Preachers' Aid Soc. v. England, 106 Ill. 129; Kellogg v. Hale, 108 Ill. 164; Manice v.

and chattel interests were not executed by the statute.¹ And Manice, 43 N. Y. 203; Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596; 28 Am. Dec. 451; Morton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 257; 39 Am. Dec. 575; Nickell v. Handly, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 336; Howard v. Henderson, 18 S. Car. 189; Exeter v. Odiorno, 1 N. H. 232; Hutchins v. Heywood, 50 N. H. 500; Sprague v. Sprague, 13 R. I. 701; Chamberlain v. Thompson, 10 Conn. 243; 26 Am. Dec. 390; Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 230; Cooper v. Cooper, 36 N. J. Eq. 121; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 152; Phelps v. Phelps, 143 Mass. 570. And see the extended discussion in Leggett v. Perkins, 2 N. Y. 297. See infra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

Trusts for married women being favored, the legal estate will remain in the trustee to enable him to carry out the trust, even in some cases in which it would otherwise pass to the beneficiary, under the Statute of Uses. Robinson v. Grey, 9 East 1; Richardson v. Stodder, 100 Mass. 528; Williman v. Holmes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 475; Rogers v. Ludlow, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 104; Francis v. Reigart, 4 Watts (Pa.) 109; Steacy v. Rice, 27 Pa. St. 75; 67 Am. Dec. 447. But see Lancaster v. Dolan, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 231; 18 Am. Dec. 625; Snyder's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 504.

So it has been held in a recent case that where the duty imposed upon the trustee is an active one, even though merely to convey the estate, the trust is not executed by the Statute of Uses until such duty has been performed, or may properly be presumed to have been performed. Sprague v. Sprague, 13 R. I. 701. And where there was a devise to trustees directing them to permit the beneficiary to receive such sums from the rents and profits of the subject-matter of the trust as he should deem proper for his support, "in such manner, however, that the same shall not be liable for his debts," and providing that he should be allowed, within certain limitations, to exercise control over the property, it was held to create an active trust not executed by the Statute of Uses. Hooberry v. Harding, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 392. But it was held by the same court that where property is given in trust by an instrument providing that it should not be liable for the debts of the beneficiary, but that he was to have only the rents and profits with power to dispose of it by will only, and not to sell it or otherwise control it, the beneficiary takes both the legal and equitable estate, and that the trust, being merely a dry trust, fails. Turley v. Massengill, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 353.

In Pennsylvania, where an estate was devised in trust for a woman for life, remainder to the heirs of her body lawfully begotten, and she was neither married nor contemplating marriage, the trust was held to be a dry trust merely, executed by the Statute of Uses, and her estate, therefore, an estate tail. Pennsylvania Trust, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 209.

But in Pennsylvania the doctrine in regard to trusts for married women is peculiar. If there be no marriage in fact, or actually in contemplation, the trust for coverture will fail, notwithstanding the trust also imposes active duties on the trustee. Kuntzleman's Estate, 136 Pa. St. 142; 20 Am. St. Rep. 909; Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 501; Williams' Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 377.

Where property is given by will upon a dry trust, the beneficiary may be treated as the absolute owner, and if the estate is such that a court of equity would compel a conveyance, the legal title will be treated as already conveyed. Shallcross' Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 374. See also Allen v. Craft, 109 Ind. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 425.

In Georgia, it has been held that where a conveyance was made after the Married Woman's Separate Property Act of 1866, to a trustee for a married woman, without remainder over, and nothing was prescribed for the trustee to do, the trust was executed and the legal title passed to her at once. Sutton v. Aiken, 62 Ga. 733. But see Boyd v. England, 56 Ga. 598.

In New York, it has been held that where the beneficial use declared by deed cannot take effect as a legal estate in the beneficiary, it will, providing it can take effect as a trust consistently with the rules of the common law, take effect as a trust in the same manner as if the Statute of Uses had never been enacted. Vander Voigen v. Yates, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 242. See infra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

1. Ramsey v. Marsh, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 252; 13 Am. Dec. 717, 720; Scott v. Scholey, 8 East 468; Schley v. Lyon, the statute did not purport to execute trusts of things in action or other kinds of personal property.¹

The Statute of Uses has been substantially adopted, either wholly or in part, in most of the states, but it is not in force in all.²

III. KINDS OF TRUSTS—1. Express and Implied.—Considered with reference to their inception or creation, trusts are of two kinds, express and implied. An express trust is one created by words evincing an intention to create a trust.³ Such trusts are generally created by instruments which expressly indicate or point out the persons, property, and purposes of the trust—hence they are called express or direct trusts, in contradistinction from such as are implied or presumed by law from the language, conduct, or relation of the parties.⁴ They may be either discretionary or imperative, absolute or on condition.⁵

Implied trusts are such as arise by operation of law, or are presumed, without any express declaration of trust, in order to prevent fraud and satisfy the demands of justice.⁶

2. Simple and Special.—With reference to the nature of the duty imposed upon the trustee, trusts may be either simple or special. A simple or passive trust is a trust in which the trustee is a mere passive depositary of the trust property, with no active duties to perform.⁷ In such a case, the law regulates the trust, and the trustee has nothing to do but convey the property upon the request of the beneficiaries.⁸

6 Ga. 530; Slevin v. Brown, 32 Mo. 176; Denton v. Denton, 17 Md. 403; Doe v. Routledge, 2 Cowp. 709; 1 Saunders on Uses, 86.

1. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 984; Rice v. Burnett, 1 Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 579; 42 Am. Dec. 336; Watson v. Pitts, 2 McMull. (S. Car.) 298.

2. See 1 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 299, and notes; 4 Lawson's Rights and Remedies, § 1974; REAL PROPERTY, vol. 19, p. 1056. See the statutes of the various states.

3. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 12; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 987. See infra, this title, Creation of Trusts.

4. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 24; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 5; Sheldon v. Harding, 44 Ill. 68; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 328; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Gibson v. Foote, 40 Miss. 792; Farnham v. Clements, 51 Me. 426; Elliott v. Armstrong, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 198.

5. Little v. Wilcox, 119 Pa. St. 439; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 24.

Trustee of Express Trust.—As to who is within the meaning of statutes authorizing suits by trustees of an express trust, see PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, pp. 552-554, and the following recent cases: Platt v. Iron Exch. Bank, 83 Wis. 358; Landwerlen v. Wheeler, 106 Ind. 523; Rinker v. Bissell, 90 Ind. 375; Holmes v. Boyd, 90 Ind. 332; Coffin v. Grand Rapids Hydraulic Co., 61 N. Y. Super. Ct. 154; Catron v. La Fayette County, 106 Mo. 659; Clark v. Fosdick, 118 N. Y. 7; 16 Am. St. Rep. 733.

6. IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 2; Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 12. Resulting and constructive trusts are intended to be included in implied trusts, and are treated under that heading in the article above referred to.

7. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 14; 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Trusts"; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 494; Bowen v. Chase, 94 U. S. 819; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 588. Sometimes called a dry, passive, or naked trust. See Philadelphia Trust, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 209; Turley v. Massengill, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 353; Fisher v. Wister, 154 Pa. St. 65.

8. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 18; Lewin on Trusts, *18; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 3; Fisher v. Wister, 154 Pa. St. 65. Express passive trusts in land are not common in the United States, and

A special or active trust is one in which the trustee is not a mere depositary, but has special and particular duties to perform, which are pointed out by the settlor or creator of the trust.¹ It may be either ministerial or discretionary.²

3. Legal and Illegal—a. GENERALLY.—With reference to the purpose or object in view, trusts are either legal or illegal. A legal trust is one for an honest and lawful purpose, while an illegal trust is one for some dishonest purpose or contrary to public policy or some statute.³ If part of a trust is legal and part in many states they have been abolished by statute, the effect of which is to vest the entire estate, legal as well as equitable, in the beneficiary. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., §§ 988, 1003, 1004. See also Thompson v. Conant, 52 Minn. 208.

1. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 18; Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, § 3; Lewin on Trusts, *18; 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Special Trust." See also Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N.Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. 27; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 588; Earp's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 119; Butler v. Butler, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 269; Phillips' Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 472; Goodrich v. Milwaukee, 24 Wis. 422.

2. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 19; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 3; Lewin on Trusts, *18; Atty. Gen'l v. Gleg, 1 Atk. 356; Hibbard v. Lamb, Amb. 309; Atty. Gen'l v. Scott, 1 Ves. 417; Gower v. Mainwaring, 2 Ves. 89.

3. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 21; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 4; Lewin on Trusts, *19; Servis v. Nelson, 14 N. J. Eq. 94; Sloan v. Birdsall, 58 Hun (N. Y.) 317; Myers v. Little, 60 Miss. 203. See PERPETUITIES, vol. 18, p. 335; CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122; SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, vol. 23, p. 5.

A trust founded upon an illegal contract, or created in contravention of the general policy of the law, is illegal. Bettinger v. Bridenbecker, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 395.

A trust for the future illegitimate children of another is illegal. Bladwell v. Edwards, Cro. Eliz. 509; Mettham v. Devonshire, 1 P. Wms. 529; Dorin v. Dorin, L. R., 7 H. L. 568; Re Ayles' Trusts, 1 Ch. Div. 282.

So, a trust in restraint of marriage, Lloyd v. Lloyd, 2 Sim. N. S. 255; or upon condition and in encouragement of the future separation of husband and wife, is illegal. Westmeath v. Westmeath, 1 Dow. N. S. 519; Proctor v. Robinson, 15 W. R. 138; Bindley v. Mulloney, L. R., 7 Eq. 343.

Where the trustee is neither vested with the right to possession, nor to the rents and profits for any purpose, either for himself or another, the deed of trust is void. Hotchkiss v. Elting, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 38.

Where the trustees of a will were directed to purchase in the names of the testator's children, real estate for their benefit, a direction to the trustees to take the rents and profits for the benefit of the children, was held void, and that no estate or interest vested in the trustees, but that they held the fund as testamentary guardians merely. Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596.

An authority, given by a will to a trustee, to pay the interest on the incumbrances of the trust estate out of the rents and profits, and apply the residue to the reduction of the principal, is valid. Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 107.

Where an executor was directed by his testator to send certain slaves to Africa and sell the balance of his estate and pay the proceeds to the American Colonization Society for their maintenance, and that of their descendants, the trust was held valid. Walker v. Walker, 25 Ga. 420.

A trust to receive the rents and profits of real estate, and pay certain annuities for the period of five years to two of the testator's sons, if they shall so long live, and to pay the surplus rents and profits to one of them, is a valid trust under the provisions of the New York statute, and will continue for five years, notwithstanding the death of one of the annuitants within that time, or until the trust is terminated by the death of both annuitants within that period. McCosker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329.

A trust to accumulate rents and profits for the benefit of the testator's wife and minor children is void, such trust being allowed under the New York statute only for the benefit of minors; but a devise of lands in trust to receive illegal, the former will be upheld if it can be separated from the latter.¹

the rents and profits and apply them to the use of the testator's family, will be valid and pass the title to the trustees. Boynton v. Hoyt, 1 Den. (N. Y.) 53.

In Louisiana, a disposition in a will, having for its object the foundation and maintenance of colleges under the administration of a municipal corporation as trustee forever, is a prohibited fidei-commissum and substitution. Perrin v. McMicken, 15 La. Ann. 154.

In Michigan, a conveyance to certain persons in trust for the stockholders of a company, to be subsequently incorporated, but at the time a partnership, of which the trustees named in the conveyance were trustees and, together with others, entitled to shares on certain contributions, was held to be a conveyance of a partnership, some of the partners being named and others to be determined, and not void as failing to comply with the Statute of Uses and Trusts. Turner v. Ontonagon River Improvement Co., 77 Mich. 603.

It has been held in Pennsylvania that the fact that the settlor conveyed the property to the trustee, with the intention of evading the collateral inheritance tax, will not invalidate the trust. Tritt v. Crotzer, 13 Pa. St. 451. See also Millbank v. Jones, 127 N. Y. 370.

Conflict of Laws.—It is sometimes difficult to determine by what law trusts will be governed, where the settlor is in one state and the property in another, but the following cases will show the views of the different courts upon the question. Where a will directs property to be invested in real estate upon trusts, illegal by the law of the testator's domicile, it will be held invalid, though the trust would be valid in the state where the investment is directed to be made. Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 506; 28 Am. Dec. 451. See also Bascom v. Nichols, 1 Redf. (N. Y.) 340. And generally the validity of a trust directed by will is determined by the law of the testator's domicile. Bascom v. Albertson, 34 N. Y. 584; Ward v. Starr (Pa.), 11 Pitts. L. J. 155.

Property conveyed in trust to manage and pay over the profits was situated in Tennessee, where the conveyance was made; the trustee resided in Mississippi, but there was nothing in the deed requiring the property to be removed to the latter state, nor did it appear to be the intention of the parties that the trust should be performed there. The conveyance was held to be governed by the laws of Tennessee, and the subsequent removal of the property to Mississippi did not change the rights of the parties. Wyse v. Dandridge, 35 Miss. 672; 72 Am. Dec. 149.

Where a citizen of Louisiana, while in the state of New York, executed a deed of trust in conformity with the laws of New York, conveying to a citizen of that state a sum of money, in cash, for the use and benefit of other parties, it was held that, since the deed was made and executed in New York, and bore upon a fund in that state, and was admitted to be in accordance with its laws, it was not in violation of the laws of Louisiana. Hullin v. Faure, 15 La. Ann. 622.

The effect of a trust deed executed in another state, but recorded in Louisiana, in a parish where the land lies, must be determined by the laws of the latter state. Ricks v. Goodrich, 3 La. Ann. 212. Compare Antignance v. Central Bank, 26 Miss. 110. Where in another state the legal title to slaves is vested by deed of trust in the father, who covenants to transfer the title to his children at their majority, if the slaves are brought into Louisiana by him, upon his change of domicile they will become subject to the laws of that state, which recognize no such right of property in the children. Terrell v. Alden, 7 La. Ann. 46.

It would seem that, notwithstanding the general rule that personal property is governed by the lex domicilii, the validity of a deed of trust executed in the state in which the personalty is actually situated, is to be determined by the law of that state, although the settlor lives in another state. See Pond v. Sweetzer, 85 Ind. 145; Ames Iron Works v. Warren, 76 Ind. 512; 40 Am. Rep. 258; Clark v. Tarbell, 58 N. H. 88; Green v. Van Buskirk, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 139. But see also 31 Cent. Law J. 224-227.

1. Trusts Illegal in Part.—Lorillard v. Coster, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 172; Underwood v. Curtis, 127 N. Y. 523; Leavitt v. Wolcott, 65 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 51; Knot v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 389; Dupre v. Thompson, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 537; Butler v. Huestis, 68 Ill. 594;

A trust to sell or lease the trust estate may be supported as a trust to sell, even though void as to the power to lease.¹

b. SECRET TRUSTS.—"A court of equity will compel the discovery of a secret trust, to enforce it, if lawful, or declare it void, if unlawful, whenever the fact of its not being declared in the conveyance, creating the legal estate, is caused by fraud or circumvention, or is the result of accident or mistake, or the omission is by design, the trust being unlawful and the object of secrecy being to evade the policy of the law; the court in all these cases proceeds upon the idea of preventing fraud."² A secret trust created for the purpose of defrauding creditors, may be proved by parol evidence, and, when so proved, will vitiate the entire transaction.³ Equity will not permit an insolvent debtor to convey real estate, without any apparent reservation, and yet ² Am. Rep. 589; Delbert's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 462. But see Fisk v. Atty. Gen'l, 4 L. R. Eq. 531; Magistrates of Dundee v. Morris, 3 Macq. 134; Mitford v. Reynolds, 1 Phil. 185; Re Rigley's Trust, 15 W. R. 190. Compare Curtis v. Smith, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537. And see Dawson v. Small, 18 L. R. Eq. 114; Hunter v. Bullock, 14 L. R. Eq. 45; Re Williams, 5 Ch. Div. 735; Champney v. Davy, 11 Ch. Div. 949.

This rule will not be applied, however, where it would result in defeating the testator's entire scheme and do injustice to the beneficiaries. Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29; Manice v. Manice, 43 N. Y. 303; Benedict v. Webb, 98 N. Y. 460; Kennedy v. Hoy, 105 N. Y. 135; Holmes v. Mead, 52 N. Y. 332; Howse v. Chapman, 4 Ves. 404; Atty. Gen'l v. Bayley, 2 Bro. C. C. 429.

Where an estate was devised to a trustee in trust, to be divided at a certain time, and, until such time, to pay the rents and profits to the testator's widow for her life, and, after her death, to the support of his children until the time appointed for the division, the trust, though void under the statute as to the residuary provisions for the children, was held valid as to the provision for the widow. Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 521; 5 Den. (N. Y.) 646.

Where a tract of land was conveyed by R. to W., upon a parol trust that W. would put upon it twenty negroes and, at his death, convey them and their increase, together with the land, to M., and W. entered into the possession of the land, it was held that although a court of equity could not enforce a parol trust of lands in the absence of fraud, yet the trust of personalty was one which it would execute against the representatives of W., in favor of M. Robson v. Harwell, 6 Ga. 589.

So, where a declaration of trust recited that the trustees should collect the rents of the trust property and apply them to the maintenance of the plaintiff during her life, and for the benefit of her husband after her death; should divide the property among her issue after the death of herself and husband; and should mortgage or otherwise dispose of it, should it appear to be beneficial to the trust, the court held the first trust to be valid, and that even if the others were void they could be so easily separated from the first that it should be upheld. Culcross v. Gibbons, 130 N. Y. 447.

But, where invalid trusts were united and coupled with a direction to the trustees to use a portion of the income of the trust fund for the printing and circulation of books of a religious character, it was held that the latter trust, though valid, must fall with the rest, as it could not be determined what portion of the income belonged to the valid trust, and what to that which was invalid. Kelley v. Nichols, 17 R. I. 306.

1. For a devise of real estate in trust may be good, if any of the purposes of the devise are legal. Van Vechtan v. Van Veghtan, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 104.

2. Per Pearson, J., in Brown v. Clegg, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 90; 51 Am. Dec. 413. See also Thompson v. Newlin, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 338; 42 Am. Dec. 169, and note 175; Catalani v. Catalani, 124 Ind. 54. See IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, pp. 1, 59.

3. Hills v. Elliot, 12 Mass. 26; 7 Am. Dec. 26; Harris v. Sumner, 2 Pick.

secretly retain an interest therein or the right to occupy and use it for his own benefit.¹ Such a transaction, although founded upon a good consideration, constitutes a fraud upon creditors.² And a bill of sale, privately understood between the parties to be merely a mortgage, is a secret trust as to the surplus over the debt secured for the benefit of the vendor, and is void as to creditors.³ But a conveyance upon a secret trust may be purged of the fraud, where the fraudulent intent is abandoned, and the conveyance afterwards confirmed and made absolute in good faith for a valuable and adequate consideration.⁴

c. SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS.—(See SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, vol. 23, p. 5.)

4. Public and Private.—With reference to the beneficiaries or (Mass.) 137; Rice v. Cunningham, 116 Mass. 469; Robinson v. Bliss, 121 Mass. 430.

1. Lukins v. Aird, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 79. See also Wait on Fraudulent Conveyances, § 272; Wooten v. Clark, 23 Miss. 76; Arthur v. Commercial, etc., Bank, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 394; Towle v. Holt, 14 N. H. 61; Paul v. Crooker, 8 N. H. 288; Smith v. Lowell, 6 N. H. 67; Sparks v. Mack, 31 Ark. 670; Moore v. Wood, 100 Ill. 454; Plunkett v. Plunkett, 114 Ind. 484; Blythe v. Thomas, 45 Fed. Rep. 784.

So, where the owner of lands caused foreclosure proceedings to be instituted against himself at his own expense, and the premises were sold to the son, whose creditors afterward attached his interest therein, to which proceedings his son entered an appearance and in which the creditors recovered judgment and sold the property on execution, it was held that the original owner could not assert a secret trust therein, since the son had dealt with it as his own, leasing it and receiving the rent, and had attempted to negotiate a loan upon it. Conover v. Beckett, 38 N. J. Eq. 384.

2. Twyne's Case, 3 Rep. 80; 1 Smith's Lead. Cas. 1; Young v. Heermans, 66 N. Y. 382; Crouse v. Frothingham, 27 Hun (N. Y.) 125; Giddings v. Sears, 115 Mass. 505; Beidler v. Crane, 135 Ill. 92; 25 Am. St. Rep. 349; Dean v. Skinner, 42 Iowa 418; Blennerhassett v. Sherman, 105 U. S. 117; Lyons v. Leahy, 15 Oregon 8; Sims v. Gains, 64 Ala. 397; Coolidge v. Melvin, 42 N. H. 510; Winkley v. Hill, 9 N. H. 31; 31 Am. Dec. 215; North v. Belden, 13 Conn. 376; 35 Am. Dec. 83, and note. But it has been held that a secret trust, inconsisent with the terms of a sale, is merely evidence of fraud, and not fraudulent per se. Harvey v. Varney, 98 Mass. 120; Oriental Bank v. Haskins, 3 Met. (Mass.) 332; 37 Am. Dec. 140; Lynde v. McGregor, 13 Allen (Mass.) 181; 90 Am. Dec. 188. See also Bigelow v. Topliff, 25 Vt. 273; 60 Am. Dec. 264; Beidler v. Crane, 135 Ill. 92; 25 Am. St. Rep. 349; Lobstein v. Lehn, 120 Ill. 549. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCES, vol. 8, pp. 761, note 2, and 770, note 10.

3. Chenery v. Palmer, 6 Cal. 119; 65 Am. Dec. 493; Hodgkins v. Hook, 23 Cal. 584; McCulloch v. Hutchinson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 434; 32 Am. Dec. 776; Passmore v. Eldridge, 12 S. & R. (Pa.) 201. See also Chamberlin v. Jones, 114 Ind. 458.

So, a bona fide purchaser of corporate stock will be protected against a secret trust in favor of a stranger. Crocker v. Crocker, 31 N. Y. 507; 88 Am. Dec. 291; Scott v. Gallagher, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 333; 16 Am. Dec. 508. See also Beidler v. Crane, 135 Ill. 92; 25 Am. Rep. 349. But see and compare Pell v. McElroy, 36 Cal. 268; Borland v. Clark, 26 Kan. 349; Gray v. Turley, 110 Ind. 254; De Arusmant v. De Lagerty, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 188; Wheat v. Moss, 16 Ark. 243; Conover v. Beckett, 38 N. J. Eq. 384; Knox v. Thompson, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 350; 13 Am. Dec. 246.

Where knowledge of the trust on the part of the purchaser is relied upon, it must be clearly proved. Wilson v. McCullough, 23 Pa. St. 440; 62 Am. Dec. 347.

4. Oriental Bank v. Haskins, 3 Met. (Mass.) 332; 37 Am. Dec. 140; Langsdale v. Woollen, 99 Ind. 575; Parker v. Tiffany, 52 Ill. 286; Matthews v. Buck, persons whom they concern, trusts are either public or private. Public or charitable trusts are for public charities or for the general public good,¹ while private trusts are for the benefit of individuals and are limited in duration.²

5. Voluntary and for Value.—With reference to the consideration, trusts may be either voluntary or for value. Voluntary trusts are those in favor of mere volunteers, not based on a valuable consideration, while trusts for value are such as have a sufficient consideration to support them.³

6. Executed and Executory.—With reference to their completeness and the rules of construction applicable to them, trusts may be either executed or executory. An executed trust is one fully and finally declared by the person creating it, so that nothing further remains to be done in order to make it effective.⁴ It is construed in conformity with the strict legal rules governing limitations of estates.⁵ An executory trust is one which is not fully and finally declared, but requires some other act or acts in order to perfect it and carry out the intention of the settlor.⁶ A court of equity will endeavor, in such a case, to discover the intention of the testator or settlor, and carry it out without regard to the strict legal rules applicable to executed trusts.⁷ On the other hand, 43 Me. 265; Bump on Fraud. Convey. (3d ed.) 452.

A secret trust cannot, however, be revoked by the trustee alone. Tyler v. Tyler, 25 Ill. App. 333.

1. See CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122.

2. 1 Perry on Trusts, §§ 22, 23; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 4.

3. Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 4; 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Trusts;" Eastwood v. Kenyon, 11 Ad. & El. 438; 39 E. C. L. 137; Jeffries v. Jeffries, 1 Craig & P. 138; Moore v. Crofton, 3 Jones & L. 443. See also Bowen v. Chase, 94 U. S. 820, 822; Lynn v. Lynn, 135 Ill. 18.

A voluntary trust upon a meritorious consideration, perfectly created and fully executed, is irrevocable, and may be enforced in equity. Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238; Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 300; 50 Am. Rep. 677; Souveryby v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 240; Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Crawford's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 52; 100 Am. Dec. 609; Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219; Howard v. Windham County Sav. Bank, 40 Vt. 597; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Lane v. Ewing, 31 Mo. 75; 77 Am. Dec. 632. But where it is merely executory, equity will not enforce it in ordinary cases. Badgley v. Votrain, 68

Ill. 25; 18 Am. Rep. 541; Clarke v. Lott, 11 Ill. 115; Milroy v. Lord, 4 De G. F. & J. 264; Evans v. Pattle, 19 Ala. 398; Swan v. Frick, 34 Md. 141; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1001. See infra, this title, Creation of Trusts—Consideration.

4. Lewin on Trusts, *111; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 4; 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Trusts;" Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. St. 175; 47 Am. Dec. 506; Lynn v. Lynn, 135 Ill. 18; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 429; Ireland v. Geraghty, 15 Fed. Rep. 35.

5. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1000; Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 137; Wright v. Pearson, 1 Ed. 125; Brydges v. Brydges, 3 Ves. 125; Jervoise v. Northumberland, 1 Jac. & W. 571. See infra, this title, Construction of Trusts.

6. 2 Abbott's Law Dict., tit. "Trusts;" Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 137; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 495; Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 656; Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H. L. Cas. 1, 210; Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 689; Nicoll v. Ogden, 29 Ill. 323; 81 Am. Dec. 311; Tillinghart v. Coggeshall, 7 R. I. 383; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Schley v. Lyon, 6 Ga. 530.

7. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1000; "Executory Trusts," 15 Sol. J. & Rep. 54, 76; Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 689; Humbertson v. Humbertson, 1 P. Wms. 332; Glenorchy v. Bosville, 1 courts of equity will generally enforce an executed voluntary trust resting upon a good or meritorious consideration, while they will generally refuse to enforce a mere executory trust in favor of a volunteer.¹

Lead. Cas. Eq. 1; Griffith v. Buckle, 2 Vern. 13; Davies v. Davies, 4 Beav. 54; Sackville West v. Holmesdale, L. R., 4 H. L. Cas. 543; Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & B. 369. Compare Howel v. Howel, 2 Ves. 358; Powell v. Price, 2 P. Wms. 535. See infra, this title, Construction of Trusts.

1. In the recent case of Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 429, the distinction between executed and executory trusts is well drawn, and the difference between the rule applicable to voluntary trusts completely executed and that applicable to voluntary trusts which are merely executory, is tersely and forcibly stated by Mitchell, J., as follows: "A trust may be said to be executed when it has been perfectly and explicitly declared in a writing duly signed, in which the terms and conditions upon which the legal title to the trust estate has been conveyed, or is held, and the final intention of the creator of the trust in respect thereto, appear with such certainty that nothing remains to be done, except that the trustee, without any further act or appointment from the settlor, carry into effect the intention of the donor as declared. In such a case, even though there was no valuable consideration upon which the trust was originally declared, a court of chancery will enforce it in favor of one whose relation to the donor was such as to show a good or meritorious consideration. Crawford's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 52; 100 Am. Dec. 609; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 656; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 175; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1001; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 98. Where, however, property has been conveyed upon a trust, the precise nature of which is imperfectly declared, or where the donor reserves the right to define or appoint the trust estate more particularly, although it may be apparent that the creator of the trust has, in a general way, manifested his purpose ultimately, at a time and in a manner thereafter to be determined, either by himself or by the trustee, to bestow the property upon a person named, the trust is incomplete and executory, and not within the jurisdiction of a court of chancery, the rule being that courts of equity will not aid a volunteer to carry into effect an imperfect gift or an executory trust. Adamson v. Lamb, 3 Blackf. (Ind.) 446; Harmon v. James, 7 Ind. 263; Dillon v. Coppin, 4 Myl. & C. 647; Colyear v. Mulgrave, 2 Keen 81; Edwards v. Jones, 1 Myl. & C. 226; 2 Story Eq. Jur. 793 b; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1001."

In determining whether or not a trust is perfectly created or executed, the situation and relation of the parties, the object of the trust, and the property involved, should be considered. Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Braubrook v. Boston Five Cent Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 231; 6 Am. Rep. 222; Hackney v. Vrooman, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 650; O'Brien, Petitioner, 11 R. I. 419; Stone v. Bishop, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 593; Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550; 30 Am. Rep. 486. And in such a case, as in nearly all cases where a writing is ambiguous and indefinite, the practical construction given by the parties themselves is entitled to great weight. See Reissner v. Oxley, 80 Ind. 580; Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 50.

Lord St. Leonards suggests the following test for determining whether a trust is executed or merely executory: "Has the testator been what is called, and very properly called, his own conveyancer? Has he left it to the court to make out, from general expressions, what his intention is, or has he so defined that intention that you have nothing to do but to take that which is given to you, and to convert them into legal estates?" Egerton v. Brownlow, 4 H. L. Cas. 210.

If the settlor contemplates performing some additional act in order to complete the trust, it is merely executory, and, if purely voluntary, will not ordinarily be enforced by the courts, and this rule was applied where the donor, intending to create a trust by deed, caused the instrument to be prepared, designated a trustee who accepted the trust, placed the fund in his hands, and then destroyed the instrument without having ever executed or delivered it. Lloyd v. Brooks, 34 Md. 27; Swan v. Frick, 34 Md. 139.

So, it has been held that a deposit in a savings bank in trust for another,

IV. WHO MAY CREATE A TRUST—1. General Rule.—Every person who can hold and dispose of any legal or equitable estate or interest in property, may create a trust in respect of such estate or interest.¹ Any person, sui juris, who can legally dispose of his property can create a trust, and a trust created by a person not sui juris is valid to the extent of his legal capacity.²

2. The State.—A state may create a trust.³

3. Corporations.—Corporations, subject to their charters and the laws under which they exist, may alienate their property, appoint trustees, and declare trusts.⁴

4. Married Women.—Married women can, as a general rule, convey their property to trustees by joining their husbands in deeds who is neither a party nor privy thereto, the depositor retaining the title and control over the deposit, is held by him upon an executory trust. Bartlett v. Remington, 59 N. H. 364.

Where a testator bequeathed real estate in trust for his son without defining or limiting the extent of his interest therein, but providing that his expenses should be restricted to the income thereof, and that the trust property should not be liable for his debts, unless incurred with the written consent of the trustee, it was held that when the son became of age, the trust was executed and he took an absolute estate in fee. Gray v. Obear, 54 Ga. 231. But the same court held in another case that, where property was given in trust "for the sole and separate use of my said daughters severally during life, and at the death of either of them, then her portion to descend to such children as she may leave alive at the time of her death," the trust was executory until the death of a daughter, and that her interest could be reached during her life only by equitable proceedings and not by execution of sale. Jennings v. Coleman, 59 Ga. 718. Compare Johnston v. Red, 59 Ga. 621.

Where the sons of a testator, shortly after his death, executed a sealed instrument conveying to their sisters such an interest in land, devised to the widow with remainder to the sons, as might be necessary to make the shares of the children equal, taking into consideration all prior advancements, it was held to be a valid executed trust. Buchanan v. Howard, 3 Tenn. Ch. 206.

This subject was carefully considered in the case of Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 689, and the court distinguished executed and executory trusts as follows: "The distinction between executed and executory trusts depends upon the manner in which the trust is declared. When the limitations and trusts are fully and perfectly declared, the trust is regarded as an executed trust. It is only where the limitations are imperfectly declared, and the intent of the creator is expressed in general terms, leaving the manner in which his intent is to be carried into effect substantially in the discretion of the trustee, that a court of equity regards the trust as an executory trust." The court also held that a trust is not made executory by a mere direction to the trustee to convey, where the trust is fully and accurately expressed. See also Padfield v. Padfield, 72 Ill. 322.

1. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 91; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 6; Gilbert v. Overton, 2 H. & M. 110; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 Hare 464; Donaldson v. Donaldson, Kay 711.

2. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 28.

3. Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433; Coterel v. Hampson, 2 Vern. 5; Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722.

4. Atty. Gen'l v. Wilson, 1 Cr. & Ph. 1; Evan v. Corp. of Avon, 29 Beav. 144; Colchester v. Lowten, 1 Ves. & B. 244; State v. Bank of Md., 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 205; 26 Am. Dec. 561; Arthur v. Commercial, etc., Bank, 9 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 394; 48 Am. Dec. 719; Leggett v. New Jersey Mfg. Co., 1 N. J. Eq. 541; 23 Am. Dec. 728, and note 740; De Ruyter v. St. Peter's Church, 3 N. Y. 238; Haxtun v. Bishop, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 13; Reynolds v. Stark County, 5 Ohio 204; Dana v. U. S. Bank, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 224; Hopkins v. Gallatin Turnpike Co., 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 403; Catlin v. Eagle Bank, 6 Conn. 233; West v. Madison County Agr. Board, properly executed.¹ In England, under the Married Women's Property Act of 1882, they have the same rights over their property as spinsters, and can, therefore, create trusts in relation to it, either by act inter vivos or by testamentary disposition.² In the United States, also, recent legislation in many of the states has greatly extended the rights of married women over their separate property, and their power to create trusts is usually coextensive with their power of alienation.³ Where they are given a testamentary capacity, they can generally create trusts, and appoint trustees by will.⁴

5. Infants.—Infants may create trusts which are good until avoided.⁵ Infancy is a personal privilege,⁶ and so long as an infant settlor lives, no one but himself can avoid the trust.⁷ But it has been held that if he should die while still a minor, without avoiding the trust, a court of equity will investigate it, and see that no unfair advantage was taken.⁸

6. Lunatics.—Conveyances by lunatics are generally voidable and

82 Ill. 205; Pierce v. Emery, 32 N. H. 484; Shaw v. Bill, 95 U. S. 10. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 220, 236, 238.

1. Durant v. Ritchie, 4 Mason (U. S.) 45; Young v. Graff, 28 Ill. 20; Johnson v. Yates, 9 Dana (Ky.) 495; Shipp v. Bowmar, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 163; Peacock v. Monk, 2 Ves. Sr. 190; Wright v. Cadogan, 2 Eden 257.

2. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 92; Lewin on Trusts *23. Before said act, a married woman could create a trust of real estate settled to her separate use without her husband joining, but in all other cases of real estate trusts, the husband was required to join.

3. See MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 589; SEPARATE PROPERTY OF MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 22, p. 41; Durant v. Ritchie, 4 Mason (U. S.) 45; 1 Redf. on Wills 21-28. They must, however, comply with the formalities required by the law. Temple v. Hawley, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 153; Eagle Fire Co. v. Lent, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 635; McGan v. Marshal, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 121; Tiedeman on Real Prop., §§ 469, 794.

4. 1 Redf. on Wills, 21-28; 2 Perry on Trusts, § 668; MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 589.

5. Bool v. Mix, 17 Wend. (N. Y.) 119; 31 Am. Dec. 285; Gillett v. Stanley, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 121; Eagle Fire Co. v. Lent, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 635; Tucker v. Moreland, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 71; Irvine v. Irvine, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 617; McCall v. Parker, 13 Met. (Mass.) 372; 46 Am. Dec. 735; Fouch v. Parsons, 3 Burr. 1794; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 33.

6. Harris v. Ross, 112 Ind. 314, and the authorities cited in notes 2 and 3 in the article on INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 637.

7. Ingraham v. Baldwin, 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 9, 19.

8. Starr v. Wright, 20 Ohio St. 97; Lewin on Trusts *25; 4 Cruise Dig. 130.

Infants contemplating marriage may create trusts in their personal property, which will prevent it from going to their husbands. Field v. Moore, 7 De G. M. & G. 691; Ainslie v. Medlycott, 9 Ves. 19; Stamper v. Barker, 5 Madd. 154; Johnson v. Smith, 1 Ves. 315; Wilder's Succession, 22 La. Ann. 219. As to real estate, see Drury v. Drury, 2 Eden 39; Harvey v. Ashley, 3 Atk. 607; Healy v. Rowan, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 414; 52 Am. Dec. 94; Lester v. Frazer, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 529; McCartee v. Teller, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 511; Durnford v. Lane, 1 Bro. C. C. 106, and compare Cannell v. Buckle, 2 P. Wms. 243; Milner v. Harewood, 18 Ves. 259; Wilson v. McCullough, 19 Pa. St. 77; Levering v. Heighe, 3 Md. Ch. 365; Temple v. Hawley, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 153. Under statutes removing the disability of coverture, a conveyance or mortgage executed by an infant married woman in accordance with the statute, stands on the same footing as a deed or mortgage executed by an infant feme sole, that is, it is voidable, but not absolutely void. Lozey v. Bond, 94 Ind. 67; Scranton v. Stewart, 52 Ind. 68; Law v. Long, 41 Ind. 586; Miles v. Lingerman, 24 Ind. 385; Magee v. Welsh, 18 Cal. 155; Dixon v. Merritt, 21 Minn. 196; Watson v. Billings, 38 Ark. 278; 42 Am. Rep. 1; Hoyt v.

not absolutely void.¹ But they may be avoided by the representatives of the lunatic as well as by himself.² A conveyance by a lunatic in trust is good until avoided, and a court of equity will not set it aside if it is fair and reasonable and the parties cannot be restored to their original condition,³ nor as against bona fide purchasers without notice.⁴ But a conveyance by him after an inquisition and the appointment of a guardian or committee, is absolutely void.⁵ And he cannot create a valid and binding trust in favor of mere volunteers who have paid no valuable consideration.⁶

7. Bankrupts and Insolvents.—In England, bankrupts cannot create a trust in property acquired prior to the date of the certificate of discharge, where there is no surplus,⁷ because, by act of Parliament, all property to which they may be entitled up to that time vests in the assignee. But it was held, under the bankrupt laws of the United States, that only the interests of the bankrupt existing at the date of the assignment vested in his assignee, and that he might, therefore, create a valid trust in property acquired after the assignment and before the date of the certificate of discharge.⁸ It would seem, also, that an insolvent might create a valid trust in property which is exempt from execution, and does not pass by the deed of assignment, as it is well settled that fraud cannot be predicated upon the alienation of such property, and the owner may dispose of it as he will.⁹

Swar, 53 Ill. 134; Schaffer v. Lavretta, 57 Ala. 14; McMorris v. Webb, 17 S. Car. 558; 43 Am. Rep. 629; Epps v. Flowers, 101 N. Car. 158; Sandford v. McLean, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 117; 23 Am. Dec. 773; Walsh v. Young, 110 Mass. 396; and note to Craig v. Van Bebber, 100 Mo. 584, in 18 Am. St. Rep. 584.

1. See INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 147; and note to Allis v. Billings, 6 Met. (Mass.) 415, in 39 Am. Dec. 749.

2. See INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 149. In addition to the authorities there cited, see also Allis v. Billings, 6 Met. (Mass.) 415; 39 Am. Dec. 744; Snowden v. Dunlavy, 11 Pa. St. 522; Owing's Case, 1 Bland Ch. (Md.) 370; 17 Am. Dec. 311; Molton v. Camroux, 2 Exch. 437; Elliot v. Luce, 7 De G. M. & G. 488.

3. Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. 478; 1 Story's Eq. Jur., § 228; Perry on Trusts, § 35.

4. Carr v. Holliday, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 344; Price v. Berrington, 3 Mac. & G. 486; Greenslade v. Dare, 20 Beav. 285.

5. Leggate v. Clark, 111 Mass. 308; L'Amoureux v. Crosby, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 422; 22 Am. Dec. 655; Pearl v. McDowell, 3 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 658; 20

Am. Dec. 199; Jackson v. King, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 207; 15 Am. Dec. 354, and note 368.

6. Niell v. Morley, 9 Ves. 478; Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 93; Elliot v. Luce, 7 De G. M. & G. 475; Clark v. Clark, 2 Vern. 412; Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jones & L. 1.

A deed of trust will be set aside by a court of equity, in such a case, especially where there is fraud. Miskey's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 611; and 11 Am. & Eng. Encyc. of Law 147, note 1, where the facts in the case just cited are set forth.

7. Lewin on Trusts *26; Hill on Trustees 47.

8. In re Grant, 2 Story (U. S.) 312; Ex p. Newhall, 2 Story (U. S.) 360; Mosby v. Steele, 7 Ala. 299; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 37.

So, it is held, under the state laws governing voluntary assignments for the benefit of creditors, that property acquired subsequent to the assignment, does not pass. McCabe's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 427; Lorenz v. Orlady, 87 Pa. St. 226; Shipman v. Graves, 41 Mich. 675; Haskins v. Alcott, 13 Ohio St. 210.

9. Taylor v. Duesterberg, 109 Ind. 165; Faurote v. Carr, 108 Ind. 123; Burdge v. Bolin, 106 Ind. 175; 55 Am.

8. Aliens and Non-Residents.—Aliens and non-residents may, unless prohibited by statute, create valid trusts in personal property,¹ and a trust in real estate created by an alien is good until office found.² It is at least doubtful if the legislature of a state can constitutionally prohibit a non-resident citizen of the United States from creating a trust in property within the state, especially if it be personal property. A statute of Indiana,³ prohibiting the appointment of a non-resident trustee, was held invalid by the circuit court of the United States for the district of Indiana, upon the ground that it was unconstitutional as being in contravention of the constitution of the United States.⁴

V. WHO MAY BE A TRUSTEE—1. General Rule.—As a general rule, all persons capable of confidence, and of taking and holding either the legal estate or the beneficial interest in property, may hold it in trust for others.⁵

It is a well-settled rule that equity never wants a trustee, or, in other words, that a trust will not be permitted to fail for want of a trustee.⁶ If, therefore, no trustee is appointed by the settlor,⁷ or the person named is incompetent,⁸ or dies, refuses to take, or resigns before the trust is carried out, a court of equity will

Rep. 724; Dumbould v. Rowley, 113 Ind. 353; Blair v. Smith, 114 Ind. 114; Buckley v. Wheeler, 52 Mich. 1; Derby v. Weyrich, 8 Neb. 174; 30 Am. Rep. 827; Bridgers v. Howell, 27 S. Car. 425; Sannoner v. King, 49 Ark. 299; Carhart v. Harshaw, 45 Wis. 340; 30 Am. Rep. 752; Delashmut v. Trau, 44 Iowa 613.

But the transfer by a debtor of all his property, without consideration, in trust for himself during his life, and after his death for the payment of his debts, is fraudulent as to existing creditors. Young v. Heermans, 66 N. Y. 374.

1. Lewin on Trusts *27; Hill on Trustees 47.

2. Lewin on Trusts *26; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 36.

3. Indiana Rev. St. 1881, § 2988.

4. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 146.

5. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 39; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 14; Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433; Pickering v. Shotwell, 10 Pa. St. 23; Potter v. Chapin, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 649; Dunbar v. Soule, 129 Mass. 284; Adams v. Adams, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 186; Huntly v. Huntly, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 250. See Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257.

In a recent case, a woman entitled to the income of a trust fund during her life, petitioned for the appointment of a certain person as trustee; others entitled to a portion of the fund after her death, opposed such appointment on the ground that the proposed trustee was one of the sureties on the bond of the petitioner as executrix of the estate of her late husband, who had held the fund for his life and had left her all his property, amounting to much more than the trust fund. It was held that the proposed trustee was not, as a matter of law, incompetent. Gaskell v. Green, 152 Mass. 526.

6. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 38; Lewin on Trusts *833; 2 Story's Eq. Jur., § 976; Adam's Eq. 36, 61; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 508.

7. Dailey v. New Haven, 60 Conn. 322; 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1087; Malin v. Malin, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 625; King v. Donnelly, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 46; Levy v. Levy, 33 N. Y. 102; Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Oregon 172; 3 Am. St. Rep. 142; Varner's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 140; Maus v. Maus, 80 Pa. St. 194.

8. Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 188; Sheldon v. Chappell, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 59; Brown v. Pancoast, 34 N. J. Eq. 327; Skinner v. Harrison Tp., 116 Ind. 142; Bailey v. Kilburn, 10 Met. (Mass.) 176; 43 Am. Dec. 423; Field v. Arrowsmith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185; In re Petraneks Estate, 79 Iowa 410; Winslow v. Cummings, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 358; Sonley v. Clock- appoint a trustee to execute the trust,¹ provided it was properly created in the first instance. Property charged with a valid trust will be followed into the hands of the personal representatives, heirs or devisees, and a court of equity may, and generally will, compel them to execute the trust.²

2. The United States and the Several States.—The United States and the several states may be trustees,³ but, in the absence of legislative action, decrees cannot be enforced against the sovereignty, and it has been denied that either the United States or a state can act as a trustee.⁴

3. Corporations.—Corporations may hold property and execute trusts for any purpose within the scope of their corporate existence,⁵ and courts of equity will compel them, in all proper cases, to carry the trusts into execution, either directly or by the maker's Co., 1 Bro. C. C. 81; Dailey v. New Haven, 60 Conn. 315; Skipwith v. Martin, 50 Ark. 141.

1. Irvine v. Dunham, 111 U. S. 334; Leggett v. Hunter, 19 N. Y. 445; Quackenboss v. Southwick, 41 N. Y. 117; Matter of Stevenson, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 420; Green v. Blackwell, 31 N. J. Eq. 37; Atty. Gen'l v. Barbour, 121 Mass. 568; Collier v. Blake, 14 Kan. 250; Pearson v. Concord R. Co., 62 N. H. 537; 13 Am. St. Rep. 605; Scott v. Rand, 118 Mass. 215; Bloomer's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 45; North Carolina R. Co. v. Wilson, 81 N. Car. 223; Meeting St. Baptist Soc. v. Hail, 8 R. I. 234.

2. Seda v. Huble, 75 Iowa 429; 9 Am. St. Rep. 495; Johnson v. Mayne, 4 Iowa 180; Piatt v. Vattier, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 405; Withers v. Yeadon, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 325; Cushney v. Henry, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 345; De Barante v. Gutt, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 492; Kerr v. Day, 14 Pa. St. 114; 53 Am. Dec. 526; Treat's Appeal, 30 Conn. 113; Bennet v. Davis, 2 P. Wms. 316; Moggeridge v. Thackwell, 1 Ves. Jr. 475; 3 Bro. C. C. 528; Atty. Gen'l v. Lady Downing, 1 Wilm. 22. The trust "fastens itself upon the conscience of the legal owner." Lewin on Trusts *833.

An executor may be a trustee by necessary implication where a will directs that he shall do certain acts, which can be done only by a trustee. Nash v. Cutter, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 67; Dorr v. Wainwright, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 328; Wheeler v. Perry, 18 N. H. 307; Anck's Estate, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 118. See also Parsons v. Lyman, 5 Blatchf. (U. S.) 170; Berry v. Hamilton, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 129. And compare Perkins v. Moore, 16 Ala. 9. For the difference between an executor and a trustee, see Greenland v. Waddell, 116 N. Y. 234; 15 Am. St. Rep. 400.

3. Shoemaker v. Grant County, 36 Ind. 184; Mitford v. Reynolds, 1 Phill. 185; Nightingale v. Goulbourn, 2 Phill. 594; 5 Hare 484; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 41. See also Briggs v. Life Boats, 11 Allen (Mass.) 157; McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367.

4. Levy v. Levy, 33 N. Y. 122. Mr. Perry and Mr. Flint also cite the case of Shoemaker v. Board, 36 Ind. 184, as holding that the United States cannot be a trustee, but no such question was involved in that case, and no statement of the kind is made in the opinion. So far as the case can be considered in point, it is to the contrary, for it holds that a state may be a trustee.

5. Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433; Phillips Academy v. King, 12 Mass. 557; Deringer v. Deringer, 5 Houst. (Del.) 416; 1 Am. St. Rep. 150; Amherst Academy v. Cowsils, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 427; 17 Am. Dec. 387; Protestant Episcopal Soc. v. Churchmen, 80 Va. 718; First Congregational Soc. v. Atwater, 23 Conn. 34; Philadelphia v. Elliott, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 170; Witman v. Lex, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 88; 17 Am. Dec. 644; Mason v. M. E. Church, 27 N. J. Eq. 47; Lincoln Sav. Bank v. Ewing, 12 Lea (Tenn.) 598; Ex p. Greenville Academies, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 471. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 218.

If a corporation is appointed trustee to execute trusts arising under a will, the trusts being valid in point of law, neither the heirs of the testator, nor any other private person, can inquire into the power of the corporation to act; that can be done only by the state which appointment of new trustees.¹ This rule applies to municipal corporations² as well as to private corporations. Thus towns, cities, and counties may take and hold property in trust for educational³ and charitable⁴ purposes, and trusts for many other public purposes have been upheld.⁵

It is not always necessary that the trust should be for a purpose specified as one of those for which the corporation was created, it being sufficient if it be for a collateral purpose germane to the general purposes for which the corporation was created, and calculated to aid and promote the same.⁶ But corporations granted its charter. Wade v. American Colonization Soc., 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 663; 45 Am. Dec. 324.

A school society is a corporation capable of taking a bequest or devise in trust for educational purposes, and it cannot be objected that the trustees who are to have control of the fund, are required to be selected from certain ecclesiastical societies. First Congregational Church v. Atwater, 23 Conn. 34.

1. Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 188; Jackson v. Hartwell, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 422; Pickering v. Shotwell, 10 Pa. St. 27; Oxford Union, etc., Soc. v. West Congregational Soc., 55 N. H. 463; Peynado v. Peynado, 82 Ky. 5; Richmond v. Davis, 103 Ind. 449; Barnum v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 275; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203; 50 Am. Rep. 219; Atty. Gen'l v. St. Johns Hospital, 2 De G. J. & S. 621; Atty. Gen'l v. Foundling Hospital, 2 Ves. Jr. 46; Green v. Rutherford, 1 Ves. 468; Atty. Gen'l v. Ironmonger's Co., 2 Beav. 313; Coventry v. Atty. Gen'l, 2 Madd. Ch. 77; 2 Bro. P. C. 235.

2. Craig v. Secrist, 54 Ind. 419; Lagrange County v. Rogers, 55 Ind. 297; Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Oregon 172; 3 Am. St. Rep. 142; Chambers v. St. Louis, 29 Mo. 543; Philadelphia v. Fox, 64 Pa. St. 169; Bell County v. Alexander, 22 Tex. 350; 73 Am. Dec. 268; Carter v. Fayette County, 16 Ohio St. 353; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Girard v. Philadelphia, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 1; McDonough Will Case, 8 La. Ann. 171; 15 How. (U. S.) 367; 2 Dillon's Munic. Corp., § 567. In England, Atty. Gen'l v. Landerfield, 9 Mod. 286; Dummer v. Chippenham, 14 Ves. 252; Atty. Gen'l v. Clarendon, 17 Ves. 499.

"A municipal corporation may be a trustee under the will of an individual when the trust created is germane to the purposes for which the corporation was called into being, and when the administration of the trust, and the liabilities it imposes, are not foreign to the objects for which the corporation was instituted." Skinner v. Harrison Tp., 116 Ind. 142. See CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, pp. 996, 1060.

3. Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 127; McDonogh v. Murdoch, 15 How. (U. S.) 367; Skinner v. Harrison Tp., 116 Ind. 139; Allen School Tp. v. Macy School Tp., 109 Ind. 559; Sutton v. Cole, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 232; Piper v. Moulton, 72 Me. 155; Dascomb v. Marston, 80 Me. 223; First Congregational Soc. v. Atwater, 23 Conn. 34; Beardsley v. Bridgeport, 53 Conn. 489; Russell v. Allen, 107 U. S. 163; Barnum v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 275; 6 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 203 and note; 50 Am. Rep. 219; South New market Methodist Seminary v. Peaslee, 15 N. H. 331; Chapin v. School Dist., 35 N. H. 445; Maynard v. Woodward, 36 Mich. 423; Christy v. Ashtabula County, 41 Ohio St. 711.

4. See CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122.

5. See Cresson's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 437; Wright v. Linn, 9 Pa. St. 433; Philadelphia v. Elliott, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 170; Sargent v. Cornish, 54 N. H. 18; Webb v. Neal, 5 Allen (Mass.) 575; Hamden v. Rice, 24 Conn. 350; Coggeshall v. Pelton, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 292; 11 Am. Dec. 471.

But it has been held that they cannot take and hold property in trust for private purposes not within the scope of their powers. Holifield v. Robinson, 79 Ala. 419. And see also note to 22 Cent. L. J. 520; Gillespie's Appeal, 150 Pa. St. 50.

6. Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 189; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 189; Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Oregon 172; 3 Am. St. Rep. 142; Wetmore v. Parker, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 121; cannot act as trustees where the matter is entirely foreign to the purposes of their creation, repugnant thereto, or inconsistent therewith.¹ The power of any particular corporation to take property and act as trustee in any particular instance, must generally be determined from the provisions of its charter, and the laws of the state in which it acts.²

If a corporation takes property which is granted or bequeathed to it, either in trust or otherwise, its title thereto will be good as against third persons, notwithstanding its charter does not authorize it to hold such property, and only the state can question it.³ Where the trust is valid, the fact that the corporation is incompetent to act as trustee, will not cause the trust to fail, for a court of equity will, whenever it is necessary in such a case, appoint another trustee to carry out the trust.⁴

4. Unincorporated Voluntary Associations.—Unincorporated voluntary associations, such as charitable and religious societies, may become trustees and hold property in trust for charitable and religious purposes.⁵

5. Public Officers.—Public officers may act as trustees for pur-

First Congregational Soc. v. Atwater, 23 Conn. 34; Barnum v. Baltimore, 62 Md. 275; 6 Am. & Corp. Cas. 203; 50 Am. Rep. 219. See also Oxford Union, etc., Soc. v. West Congregational Soc., 55 N. H. 463; Sargent v. Cornish, 54 N. H. 18; Pickering v. Shotwell, 10 Pa. St. 27; Chambers v. St. Louis, 29 Mo. 543; Green v. Rutherford, 1 Ves. 462.
1. Jackson v. Hartwell, 8 Johns. (N. Y.) 422; Matter of Howe, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 214. And it has been held that a municipal corporation cannot, in the absence of statutory authority, take and hold lands in trust for religious purposes, Corning v. Christ Church, 33 N. Y. St. Rep. 766; nor can a city accept a trust for the establishment and maintenance of a county poor-house, Augusta v. Walton, 77 Ga. 517.

2. See Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 636; Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 127; Beatty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152; People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; 8 Am. Dec. 243; New York F. Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 678; State v. Mobile, 5 Port. (Ala.) 279; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 44; ULTRA VIRES, vol. 27.

3. Runyan v. Coster, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 122; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Chapin v. School Dist., 35 N. H. 445; Troy v. Haskell, 33 N. H. 533; Sargent v. Cornish, 54 N. H. 18; Philadelphia v. Girard, 45 Pa. St. 9; Leazure

v. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 321; Bogardus v. Trinity Church, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 758; Humbert v. Trinity Church, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 587; Raley v. Umatilla County, 15 Oregon 172; 3 Am. St. Rep. 148; Land v. Coffman, 50 Mo. 243; De Camp v. Dobbins, 29 N. J. Eq. 36; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 273; 41 Am. Rep. 221; Wade v. American Colonization Soc., 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 663; 45 Am. Dec. 324.

4. Dalley v. New Haven, 60 Conn. 315; Skinner v. Harrison Tp., 116 Ind. 142; Winslow v. Cummings, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 358; Vidal v. Girard, 2 How. (U. S.) 188; Jones v. Habersham, 107 U. S. 174; Sonley v. Clockmaker's Co., 1 Bro. C. C. 81. And see supra, this title, Who May Be a Trustee—General Rule.

5. See CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122.

But where property devised to a church was intended by the testator to be a perpetual fund for raising sums directed to be annually applied for the missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it was held that trustees were necessary to administer the property, and the church as an unincorporated society could not execute the trust. Johnson v. Mayne, 4 Iowa 180.

In a case where the bequest was made in trust for a Sunday school, which was unincorporated but was connected with an incorporated church, the New Jersey court appointed the poses within the scope of their official duties.¹ Thus, a bequest to the Chancellor of the Exchequer for the benefit of Great Britain, has been held valid,² and a bank comptroller has been held to be a trustee of securities held by him for the banks.³

6. Married Women.—Married women, as well as those who are unmarried, may become trustees;⁴ but because of the influence which husbands—whose interests may be antagonistic to the trust—usually have over their wives, because of their lack of business qualifications, and because of the necessary joinder of their husbands, under the laws of many of the states, in the performance of certain duties which are usually required in executing a trust, it is not advisable to appoint them.⁵ At common law a wife could not be trustee for her husband,⁶ but in some jurisdictions it has been held that she may be such a trustee,⁷ and the modern tendency, as shown by recent enabling statutes, is cer-church trustee. Mason v. M. E. Church, 27 N. J. Eq. 47.

1. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 47.

Where money was bequeathed to certain persons by name, "and the mayor of the city," in trust for the establishment of a free school, the money to be paid over to the city for purposes of education, if, in the opinion of two-thirds of the trustees, the trust could not be administered in accordance with the testator's plan and purpose, it was held that as long as the trustees held the fund, the city had no control over it or interest in it, and that the "mayor of the city" at the time the testator died, and not at the time the trustees were appointed, was intended by the testator to be a trustee. Dunbar v. Soule, 129 Mass. 284.

Where a railroad company deposited certain company bonds with its president, under an agreement with an accommodation indorser that they should be held for the purpose of paying notes indorsed by him for the benefit of the company, the president becomes a trustee independently of his official character, and is personally responsible for the execution of the trust, and it is no defense for him to allege that he was directed by the company to make a different disposition of the bonds. Wilkinson v. Stewart, 30 Ill. 48.

2. Nightingale v. Goulbourn, 2 Phill. 594; 5 Hare 484. So it was held that the Governor General of India might take property in trust for a city in that country. Mitford v. Reynolds, 1 Phill. 185. See also Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433, where it was held that the trust was to the incumbents of the office as individuals and not in their official capacity, but that they properly described themselves as officers in suing to collect money in pursuance of the trust.

3. State v. Rush, 20 Wis. 212.

4. Lake v. De Lambert, 4 Ves. 592; Blithe's Case, 2 Freem. 91; Lord Antrine v. Buckingham, 2 Freem. 168; Compton v. Collinson, 2 Bro. C. C. 377; Godolphin v. Godolphin, 1 Ves. 23; Hearle v. Greenbank, 1 Ves. 304; Moore v. Hussey, Hob. 95; Dundas v. Biddle, 2 Pa. St. 160; Springer v. Berry, 47 Me. 330; People v. Webster, 10 Wend. (N. Y.) 554; Livingston v. Livingston, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 497; 10 Am. Dec. 353; Thompson v. Murray, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 204; 29 Am. Dec. 68; Trust Co. v. Sedgwick, 97 U. S. 304; Bouldin v. Reynolds, 58 Md. 495; Moore v. Cottingham, 90 Ind. 243. See MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14 p. 681.

5. Compton v. Collinson, 2 Bro. C. C. 377; In re Kaye, L. R., 1 Ch. 387. See also Graham v. Long, 65 Pa. St. 383; Still v. Ruby, 35 Pa. St. 373.

But where an estate comes to a married woman charged with a trust, her coverture cannot be pleaded in bar of the trust. Clarke v. Saxon, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 69; Berry v. Norris, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 302.

6. Dickinson v. Davis, 43 N. H. 647; 80 Am. Dec. 202; Mutual Ins. Co. v. Deale, 18 Md. 46; Woodbeck v. Havens, 42 Barb. (N. Y.) 70.

7. Livingston v. Livingston, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 541; Moore v. Cottingham, 90 Ind. 239.

The husband may also be a trustee tainly in that direction. The matter is largely regulated by statutory provisions in the different states. In a case recently decided by the New York court of appeals, it was held that a married woman was capable of being a trustee under the New York statute, and, having become a trustee in that state, where the trust fund remained, her title thereto was not lost, but could be enforced in New York, notwithstanding she had removed to New Jersey, where a married woman cannot be appointed a trustee.¹

7. Infants.—Infants are even less fit than married women to become trustees, and the courts will never appoint them, but if an infant trustee is nominated by the creator of the trust, the estate will pass, and the courts will see that the trust is properly executed. If the infant cannot execute it himself, his guardian may be directed to do it for him, or some competent third person may be appointed by the court to carry out the trust.²

8. Lunatics.—Lunatics are incapable of accepting a conveyance, and they cannot execute trusts requiring the exercise of judgment and discretion;³ but long acquiescence by all parties, especially where the cestui que trust accepts the deed, will be sufficient,⁴ and equity will not permit a valid trust to fail merely because a lunatic is nominated as the trustee. The court will see that the trust is administered by his guardian, or, if necessary, will remove him and appoint a competent trustee.⁵

9. Bankrupts and Insolvents.—Bankrupts and insolvents may act as trustees.⁶ Trust estates do not pass to the assignees of insolvent trustees,⁷ nor does a certificate of discharge in bankruptcy operate as a discharge of fiduciary debts and obligations. The estate, being held only for the cestui que trust, can be incumbered only for his benefit, and not for the benefit of the trustee or others.⁸

for his wife. Bennet v. Davis, 2 P. Wms. 316; Shirley v. Shirley, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 363; Picquet v. Swan, 4 Mason (U. S.) 455; Boykin v. Ciples, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 200; 29 Am. Dec. 67; Griffith v. Griffith, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 113; Jamison v. Brady, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 467; 9 Am. Dec. 460; Camp v. Smith, 98 Ind. 409; Derry v. Derry, 74 Ind. 560; Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410. But see Dean v. Lanford, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 423.

1. Schluter v. Bowery Sav. Bank, 117 N. Y. 125.

2. The capacity of infants to act as trustees, and the supervisory powers of the courts over trusts, where infants have been named as trustees, are fully treated under the title INFANTS, vol. 10, pp. 616-618.

A deed made by an infant in execution of a trust, cannot be disaffirmed by him. Nordholt v. Nordholt, 87 Cal. 552; 22 Am. St. Rep. 268; note to Craig v. Van Bebber, 18 Am. St. Rep. 642; Starr v. Wright, 20 Ohio St. 97; Elliott v. Horn, 10 Ala. 348; 44 Am. Dec. 488; Bridges v. Bidwell, 20 Neb. 185; Prouty v. Edgar, 6 Iowa 353.

3. Loomis v. Spencer, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 153; Person v. Warren, 14 Barb. (N. Y.) 488; Swartwout v. Burr, 1 Barb. (N. Y.) 495.

4. Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 494.

5. In re Bloomer, 2 De G. & J. 88.

6. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 58; Hill on Trustees *51; Rankin v. Barcroft, 114 Ill. 441.

7. Kip v. Bank of N. Y., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 63; Blin v. Pierce, 20 Vt. 25; Ontario Bank v. Mumford, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 596; Butler v. Merchant's Ins. Co., 14 Ala. 798; Scott v. Surman, Willes 402; Carpenter v. Marnell, 3 B. & P. 40. See also Shryock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 430.

8. Shryock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 431; Ludwig v. Highley, 5 Pa. St. 132;

10. Aliens and Non-Residents.—Aliens and non-residents can take and hold property conveyed to them in trust to the same extent that they can take and hold the legal title thereto, that is, in the case of real estate, until office found.¹ They cannot plead their alienage to defeat a trust charged upon real estate which comes into their hands.² But it is a serious objection to the appointment of a non-resident trustee, that he is not within the jurisdiction of the court.³ A statute prohibiting the appointment of non-residents, and making it unlawful for a non-resident to act as trustee, would seem to invade the rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States.⁴

11. Other Persons.—A nun or a monk may be a trustee;⁵ so may an habitual drunkard, but he is subject to removal by the court.⁶ A guardian may be a trustee, and it is the duty of an administrator or executor into whose hands the trust property comes, to settle the accounts of the decedent relating to the trust, although he is not bound to execute it.⁷ A cestui que trust or a near relative ought not to be appointed trustee, but there is no rule of law positively forbidding such appointment.⁸ The same Lounsbury v. Purdy, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 490; Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 107; Gardner v. Rowe, 2 Sim. & S. 346; Copeman v. Gallant, 1 P. Wms. 314.

1. See ALIEN, vol. 1, pp. 458, 459, 463.

As to personal property, their rights are the same as those of citizens. Hughes v. Edwards, 9 Wheat. (U. S.) 489.

2. Dunlop v. Hepburn, 1 Wheat. (U. S.) 179; Scott v. Thorpe, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 512; Waugh v. Riley, 8 Met. (Mass.) 290.

3. Meinhertzhager v. Davis, 1 Coll. 335; In re Tempest, L. R., 1 Ch. 485; Mesnard v. Welford, 1 Sm. & G. 426; Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257.

In Maryland, the court of chancery may appoint as agent or trustee to make a sale under its decree, a female, or other competent person, on the recommendation of the parties in interest, but a non-resident or person under disability, or one whose interest or office is incompatible with the trust, will not be appointed. Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138.

4. Such a statute is Indiana Rev. Stat. 1881, § 2988. This statute has been held to apply to express trusts only, and not to those created by operation of law. Rinker v. Bissell, 90 Ind. 375; Meikel v. Greene, 94 Ind. 344. But the validity of this statute was questioned by the supreme court of Indiana in Bryant v. Richardson, 126 Ind. 153; and it was expressly held unconstitutional in Robey v. Smith, 131 Ind. 342, as well as by the federal court in Shirk v. Lafayette, 52 Fed. Rep. 857. See also Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 27 Fed. Rep. 146.

5. Smith v. Young, 5 Gill (Md.) 197. 6. Webb v. Deitrich, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 401.

7. Silvers v. Canary, 114 Ind. 129; Lucas v. Donaldson, 117 Ind. 140; Schenck v. Schenck, 16 N. J. Eq. 174; Nichols v. Campbell, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 561.

But the duties of an executor pertain to the office, and those of a trustee pertain to the person. If a discretionary power of sale is given to an executor, he will be deemed a trustee, and the power cannot be executed by a mere administrator with the will annexed. Greenland v. Waddell, 116 N. Y. 234; 15 Am. St. Rep. 400; Mott v. Ackerman, 92 N. Y. 553; Hood v. Haden, 82 Va. 588; Joralemon v. Van Reper, 44 N. J. Eq. 299; Compare Davis v. Hoover, 112 Ind. 423; Warnecke v. Lemba, 71 Ill. 91; 22 Am. Rep. 85.

8. Wilding v. Bolder, 21 Beav. 22; Forster v. Abraham, L. R., 17 Eq. 351; Ex p. Clutton, 17 Jur. 988; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 59; Story v. Palmer, 46 N. J. Eq. 1. Compare Craig v. Hone, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 554.

The trust is not rendered void by the appointment of a beneficiary as trustee. Rogers v. Rogers, 18 Hun (N. Y.)

may be said of a remainderman,¹ a tenant for life,² and the solicitor of the trust.³

VI. WHO MAY BE CESTUI QUE TRUST—1. General Rule.—“Equity follows the law,” and, as a general rule, any person capable of taking and holding the legal title to property, may take the equitable title thereto as cestui que trust or beneficiary.⁴

2. The United States and the Several States.—A state or the United States may be a cestui que trust,⁵ and so may the sovereign in England.⁶

3. Corporations and Associations.—Corporations and associations which are not incorporated may be beneficiaries of trusts in personal property,⁷ but, in the case of real estate, their rights depend upon their charters or the statutes by which they are governed, and if they cannot take or hold the legal title to real estate, they cannot become beneficiaries.⁸

4. Married Women and Children.—Married women⁹ and children¹⁰ may be the beneficiaries of a trust. Even an illegitimate child en ventre sa mere may be a cestui que trust.¹¹ A trust to legitimate 409; Cocks v. Barlow, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 406; Story v. Palmer, 46 N. J. Eq. 1.

1. Re Paine, 33 W. R. 564.

2. Forster v. Abraham, L. R., 17 Eq. 351.

3. In re Norris, 27 Ch. Div. 333. But see Sternberg v. Valentine, 6 Mo. App. 176.

4. Tiffany & Bullard on Trusts and Trustees 3; Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 445; 1 Lewin on Trusts *43; Ashurst v. Given, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 330; Frazier v. Frazier, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 305.

In the days of slavery, a slave, being prohibited from holding property, could not be a cestui que trust. Skrine v. Walker, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 262; Pool v. Harrison, 18 Ala. 514. A donee must have capacity to take, whether it is attempted to convey title to him directly, or to another in trust for him. Trotter v. Blocker, 6 Port. (Ala.) 269.

5. Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. (U. S.) 107. See also Lamar v. Simpson, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 71; 42 Am. Dec. 345; Com. v. Pennsylvania Bank, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 184.

6. Hill on Trustees 52; Rogers v. Rogers, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 409; Moke v. Norrie, 14 Hun (N. Y.) 128; Middleton v. Spicer, 1 Bro. C. C. 201; Ashton v. Langdale, 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 80; Mitford v. Reynolds, 1 Phill. 185; Brummel v. McPherson, 5 Russ. 264.

7. Langston v. Gordon, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 755; Second Congregational Soc. v. Waring, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 304;

Swedesborough Church v. Shivers, 16 N. J. Eq. 453.

8. Lewin on Trusts 44; Hill on Trustees 52. See also Coleman v. R. Co., 49 Cal. 518. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, pp. 217, 230-235.

A deed or trust of land for the benefit of a voluntary association, having no legal existence, was held void under the Minnesota statute requiring a trust to be “fully expressed and clearly defined on the face of the instrument creating” it. German Land Assoc. v. Scholler, 10 Minn. 331.

9. MARRIED WOMEN, vol. 14, p. 592; MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, vol. 14, p. 538; Peacock v. Monk, 2 Ves. 190; Taylor v. Meads, 34 L. J. Ch. 203. The old learning in regard to trusts for married women has now become obsolete in most of the states, by reason of the modern legislation enabling them to take and dispose of the legal title the same as if unmarried. See 1 Beach Mod. Eq. Jur., ch. VII.

10. Bethea v. McColl, 5 Ala. 308, and the authorities cited in the following note.

11. Gardner v. Heyer, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 11; Collins v. Hoxie, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 81; Owens v. Bryant, 21 L. J. Ch. 860; Gable v. Prendergast, 3 Eq. 648; Pratt v. Flamer, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 10. But it is held that a trust to illegitimate children to be thereafter begotten, is against good morals and will not be enforced. Medworth v. Pope, 27 Beav. 21; Pratt v. Mathew, 22 Beav. 328; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 1 Y. & Coll.

children not yet in esse is valid,¹ and a trust for the heirs of a person has been held good as a trust for his children.²

VII. WHAT PROPERTY MAY BE THE SUBJECT OF A TRUST—1. Generally.—As a general rule, all property, real or personal, legal or equitable, in possession or action, in remainder, reversion or expectancy, may be the subject of a trust, unless the policy of the law or some statutory provision prohibits the settlor from parting with the beneficial interest therein, or, in the case of real estate, unless the tenure under which it is held is inconsistent with the trust sought to be created.³

2. Choses in Action.—Choses in action may generally be assigned in equity,⁴ and where such is the case they may be the subjects

C. C. 657; Howarth v. Mills, L. R., 2 Eq. 389.

1. Ashurst v. Given, 5 W. & S. (Pa.) 329; Frazier v. Frazier, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 305; Carson v. Carson, 1 Winst. Eq. (N. Car.) 24. See also Salem Water-Ditch Co. v. Stayton Capital Flour Mills Co., 33 Fed. Rep. 146.

Where property is left in trust for the children of a certain person, the trustee cannot, until it is shown that there can be no more children entitled to take, be required to pass the legal estate to the children that have been born. Dial v. Dial, 21 Tex. 529.

2. Flint v. Steadman, 36 Vt. 210.

Where land held in trust for the benefit of a wife and children was sold at a judicial sale, and purchased under an agreement made by the vendee with the husband that the latter should be permitted to redeem, the trust was held to inure to the benefit of the wife and children, although the vendee was ignorant of the trust. Haywood v. Ensley, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 460.

3. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 63; 1 Lewin on Trusts *47. See ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 1, pp. 827, 830.

Equitable interest may be the subject of a trust. Gilbert v. Overton, 2 Hem. & M. 110; Knight v. Bowyer, 23 Beav. 609; Luco v. De Toro, 91 Cal. 405.

Reversionary interests may be conveyed in trust. Shafto v. Adams, 4 Giff. 492; Kekewich v. Manring, 1 De G. M. & G. 187; Vogle v. Hughes, 2 Sm. & G. 18.

Expectancies and contingent interests may be the subjects of a trust. Wethered v. Wethered, 2 Sim. 183; Douglas v. Russell, 4 Sim. 524; Langton v. Horton, 1 Hare 549; Beckley v. Newland, 2 P. Wms. 182; Fitzgerald v. Vestal, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 258; Ham v. Van Orden, 84 N. Y. 257; Hinkle v. Wanzer, 17 How. (U. S.) 368.

Other Property.—A receipt for medicine may be transferred in trust. Green v. Folgham, 1 Sim. & S. 398. So may the copyright of a book, Sims v. Marryat, 17 Q. B. 281; 79 E. C. L. 280; a patent right, Russell's Patent, 2 De G. & J. 130; a trade secret, Morrison v. Moat, 6 Eng. L. & Eq. 14; 9 Hare 241; growing crops, Robinson v. Maulden, 11 Ala. 977; Grantham v. Hawley, Hob. 132; Petch v. Tutin, 15 M. & W. 110; or a colt not yet born, McCarty v. Blevins, 5 Yerg. (Tenn.) 195; 26 Am. Dec. 262; future earnings and property not even in esse may be assigned, Field v. New York, 6 N. Y. 179; 57 Am. Dec. 435; Mitchell v. Winslow, 2 Story (U. S.) 630; Pennock v. Coe, 23 How. (U. S.) 117; Wade v. Bessey, 76 Me. 413; Rio Grande Extension Co. v. Coby, 7 Colo. 299; Stewart v. Kirkland, 19 Ala. 162; Leslie v. Guthrie, 1 Bing. N. Cas. 697; 27 E. C. L. 550; Brooks v. Hatch, 6 Leigh (Va.) 534; Calkins v. Lockwood, 17 Conn. 154; In re Ship Warre, 8 Price 269; Holroyd v. Marshal, 2 Giff. 382; 2 De G. F. & J. 596; Langton v. Horton, 1 Hare 549. And a valid trust may be created even in a naked power. Brown v. Higgs, 8 Ves. 570. A trust may be created in rents and profits, but where the title to the realty is conveyed and the object is security, the mere direction to appropriate the rents and profits will not relieve the realty. Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326.

The fiduciary relation between the trustee and the beneficiary is not altered by the mere change of the trust property from real estate to personalty. Frather v. Weissiger, 10 Bush (Ky.) 117.

4. See ASSIGNMENTS, vol. 1, p. 827; CHOSSES IN ACTION, vol. 3, p. 236.

of a valid trust.¹ But there are some choses in action, rights and causes of action or claims, that cannot be assigned because the statute or public policy forbids, and they cannot, therefore, be made the subject of a valid trust.²

3. Foreign Property.—Personal property follows the person, and, no matter where it may be in reality, if the court has jurisdiction of the parties, it can enforce the trust.³ But, in the case of real estate, there is more difficulty, especially where neither the parties nor the property can be reached by the court.⁴ It seems, however, that if the court has jurisdiction of the parties, the trust may be enforced, notwithstanding it may affect real estate not within the jurisdiction of the court.⁵

VIII. CREATION OF TRUSTS—1. In General.—Trusts may be created by the express declaration of the settlor, or they may arise by implication or operation of law. As the subject of implied trusts is fully treated elsewhere in this work,⁶ we shall here consider only the manner in which express trusts may be created.

1. Row v. Dawson, 1 Ves. 322; Ryall v. Rolle, 1 Ves. 348; Townsend v. Windham, 2 Ves. 6; Yeates v. Groves, 1 Ves. Jr. 280; Burn v. Carvalho, 4 Myl., & C. 690; Ex p. Alderson, 1 Madd. 53; Ex p. South, 3 Swanst. 393; Clemson v. Davidson, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 392; Morton v. Naylor, 1 Hill (N.Y.) 583; Hinkle v. Wanzer, 17 How. (U. S.) 353.

A contract for the delivery of stock in a corporation may be assigned. Morrison v. Ross, 113 Ind. 186.

2. Grenfell v. Dean, 2 Beav. 554; Davis v. Marlborough, 1 Swanst. 74; Tunstall v. Boothby, 10 Sim. 540; Stone v. Lidderdale, 2 Anstr. 533; Priddy v. Rose, 3 Mer. 102; Flarty v. Odium, 3 T. R. 681; Lidderdale v. Montrose, 4 T. R. 248; Arbuthnot v. Norton, 5 Moore P. C. C. 219; Cooper v. Reilly, 2 Sim. 560; Hill v. Paul, 8 Cl. & F. 295; Collyer v. Fallon, 1 T. & Rus. 459; McCarthy v. Gould, 1 B. & B. 387; Price v. Lovett, 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 110. But compare State Bank v. Hastings, 15 Wis. 75. In most of the cases just cited, it is held that a pension or an official salary cannot be assigned. It is also held that a mere right to file a bill in equity or sue in tort, cannot be assigned in trust. Prosser v. Edmonds, 1 Y. & Coll. 481; Gardner v. Adams, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 297; Dunklin v. Wilkins, 5 Ala. 199.

3. Hill v. Reardon, 2 Russ. 608; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.) 101; Mason v. Chambers, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 401. But compare Jenkins v. Lester, 131 Mass. 357; Booth v. Clark, 17 How. (U. S.) 327.

4. See Spurr v. Scoville, 3 Cush. (Mass.) 578; Menx v. Maltby, 2 Swanst. 277; Fell v. Brown, 2 Bro. C. C. 276.

5. Massie v. Watts, 6 Cranch (U. S.) 160. See also Toller v. Carteret, 2 Vern. 494; Roberteau v. Rous, 1 Atk. 543; Scott v. Nesbitt, 14 Ves. 438; Penn v. Lord Baltimore, 1 Ves. 444; Cood v. Cood, 33 Beav. 314; Tullock v. Hartley, 1 Y. & Coll. 114; Norris v. Chambers, 29 Beav. 246; Martin v. Martin, 2 R. & M. 507; Cranstown v. Johnston, 5 Ves. 278; Bunbury v. Bunbury, 1 Beav. 318; Hope v. Carnegie, L. R., 1 Ch. 320; Arglasse v. Muschamp, 1 Vern. 419; Archer v. Preston, 1 Vern. 77; Cooley v. Scarlett, 38 Ill. 316; Curtis v. Smith, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Sutphen v. Fowler, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 280; Shattuck v. Cassidy, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 152; White v. White, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 208; Guild v. Guild, 16 Ala. 121; Vaughn v. Barclay, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 392; Watkins v. Holman, 16 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Dickinson v. Hoomes, 8 Gratt. (Va.) 353; EQUITY, vol. 6, pp. 712, 713, and the authorities cited in the note.

6. IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 1. The writer of the article referred to, follows Pomeroy, whose classification is preferable to that of Perry and Lewin. As the definitions which we have given of express and implied trusts show, we have also followed Mr. Pomeroy, and some trusts are, therefore, included in this article, which are treated by Perry and Lewin as implied trusts. We have adopted this classifica-

"Where a person has used language from which it can be gathered that he intended to create a trust, and such intention is not negatived by the surrounding circumstances, and the settlor has done such things as are necessary in equity to bind himself not to recede from that intention, and the trust property is of such a nature as to be legally capable of being settled, and the object of the trust is lawful, and the settlor has complied with the provisions of the law as to evidence, a good and valid declaration of trust has (prima facie) been made. But a trust prima facie valid, may yet be impeachable from incapacity of the settlor, or of the cestui que trust, or from some mistake or fraud attendant upon its creation; or, again, it may be valid as between the parties, and yet invalid as against the settlor's creditors, or trustee in bankruptcy, or as against subsequent purchasers."¹ No technical terms or expressions need be used.² It is sufficient if the language used shows that the settlor intended to create a trust, and clearly points out the property, the beneficiary, and the disposition to be made of the property.³

tion, both because we believe it to be the best one, and because it is necessary that this article should include all kinds of trusts, not treated elsewhere in the Encyclopedia.

Trustee de son Tort.—A person who, without authority, enters into possession, and assumes to manage property which belongs beneficially to another, is a trustee de son tort, and may be held as any other constructive trustee. Morris v. Joseph, 1 W. Va. 256; 91 Am. Dec. 386. See also Coleman v. Cocke, 6 Rand. (Va.) 618; 18 Am. Dec. 757; Piper v. Hoard, 107 N. Y. 73; 1 Am. St. Rep. 789, and note.

1. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 18.

2. Dipple v. Corles, 11 Hare 184; Cox v. Page, 10 Hare 163; Anderson v. Crist, 113 Ind. 65; Cockrill v. Armstrong, 31 Ark. 580; Cumming v. Reid Memorial Church, 64 Ga. 106; Blake v. Dexter, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 559; Norman v. Burnett, 25 Miss. 183; Quinn v. Shields, 62 Iowa 129; 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 498; 49 Am. Rep. 141; Dyer's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 446; "Imperfect Declaration of Trust," 22 Sol. J. & Rep. 852.

On the other hand, where there is no such intention, the use of the word "trust" or "trustee" will not create a trust. Hurst v. McNeil, 1 Wash. (U. S.) 70; Richardson v. Inglesby, 13 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 59; Matter of Hawley, 104 N. Y. 250; Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ind. 206; Allen v. Craft, 109 Ind. 476;

58 Am. Rep. 525; Bacon v. Bacon, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 5.

3. Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 148; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67; McLaurie v. Partlow, 53 Ill. 340; Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447; Tobias v. Ketchum, 32 N. Y. 327; Wright v. Douglass, 7 N. Y. 564; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 475; Brown v. Combs, 29 N. J. L. 36; Ferry v. Laible, 31 N. J. Eq. 566; De Laurencel v. De Boom, 48 Cal. 581; Hellman v. McWilliams, 70 Cal. 449; Raybold v. Raybold, 20 Pa. St. 308; Loring v. Loring, 100 Mass. 340; Andrews v. Cape Ann Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 313; Whiting v. Whiting, 4 Gray (Mass.) 236; McElroy v. McElroy, 113 Mass. 509; Taft v. Taft, 130 Mass. 461; Homer v. Homer, 107 Mass. 82; Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180; Ready v. Kearsley, 14 Mich. 226; Lyle v. Burke, 40 Mich. 499; Conway v. Kingsworthy, 21 Ark. 9; Cockrill v. Armstrong, 31 Ark. 580; Russell v. Switzer, 63 Ga. 711; Wallace v. Wainwright, 87 Pa. St. 263; Gadsden v. Whaley, 14 S. Car. 210; Morrison v. Kinstra, 55 Miss. 71; Norman v. Burnett, 25 Miss. 183; Pownal v. Taylor, 10 Leigh (Va.) 183; 34 Am. Dec. 725; Harris v. Barnett, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 339; Whitcomb v. Cardell, 45 Vt. 24; Barron v. Barron, 24 Vt. 375; Kitchen v. Bradford, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 413; Smith v. Ford, 48 Wis. 115; Ellsworth v. Mace, 33 Ind. 73; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423.

But the beneficiaries, objects, and subject-matter of the trust must be so identified or indicated that the intention of the settlor can be determined and carried out. Weeks v. Cornwell, 64 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 276; First Presbyterian Soc. v. Bowen, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 389; Matter of Johnson's Will (Surr. Ct.), 5 N. Y. Supp. 922; Heermans v. Schmaltz, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 323; Kramer v. McCaughey, 11 Mo. App. 426; District of Columbia v. Washington Market Co., 3 McArthur (D. C.) 559; Stonestreet v. Doyle, 75 Va. 356; 40 Am. Rep. 731; Carskadon v. Torreyson, 17 W. Va. 43; Harland v. Trigg, 1 Bro. C. C. 142; Flint v. Hughes, 6 Beav. 342; Gregory v. Smith, 9 Hare 708; Pope v. Pope, 10 Sim. 1. See also infra, this title, Precatory Trusts; "Imperfect Declaration of Trust," 22 Sol. J. & Rep. 852.

No greater certainty or formality is requisite in designating the trustee to take charge of the fund, than in the creation of the fund itself; in fact, it is not necessary, in order to sustain a trust in equity, that a trustee should have been designated in the instrument creating the trust fund, or by any simultaneous or subsequent instrument. Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410.

The conveyance of lands in trust to rent and sell, and pay the proceeds to the grantor during his life, and after his death to those named in a supplementary writing, creates a valid trust under the Wisconsin statute providing that express trusts may be created "for the benefit and interest of any person or persons, when such trust is fully expressed and clearly defined on the face of the instrument creating it," and it is immaterial that a portion of the beneficiaries are designated by class instead of individually. Heermans v. Schmaltz, 10 Biss. (U. S.) 323.

Questions in regard to certainty in the beneficiaries and objects of the trust, arise most often in cases of trusts for charities, but as the subject of charities has been already treated in this Encyclopedia (vol. 3, p. 122), it is sufficient to here call attention to the recent case of Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29, where the matter is elaborately considered, and to an article on "The Failure of the Tilden Trust," in 5 Harv. Law Rev. 389, where the authorities are reviewed and the conclusion is reached that the Tilden trust would have been held good in England and in a majority of the states.

Cases in Which Declarations of Trust Were Held Sufficient — Generally. — A member of a firm transferred to A., a firm creditor, as collateral security for a debt, two acceptances secured by a deed of trust, under an agreement by A. that if he should purchase the property on foreclosure of the trust deed, he would, on payment of his debt, re-convey the property, and it was held that a trust was created in favor of such partner for the two acceptances which extended to the property in case of its purchase by A. Peeler v. Lathrop, 48 Fed. Rep. 780. See also Smith v. Eckford (Texas, 1891), 18 S. W. Rep. 210.

A mother made a conveyance of land, absolute on its face, to her daughter; the deed was without consideration and the mother continued to receive the rents and profits; the daughter, while claiming the conveyance to be absolute, admitted that it was made to her for her mother's protection, and in reply to a request of the latter that the property be reconveyed, wrote that she had made a will leaving the land to her mother and that she "could not touch a dollar contrary to her mother's wishes; that she had always considered the transfer of the land sacred, and that she would have the deed drawn up, and that her mother should have the land," and it was held that a trust was sufficiently established. Newkirk v. Place, 47 N. J. Eq. 477.

A, being the owner of a third interest in a gold mine, purchased the other two-thirds with money supplied by a firm of which B was a member, and conveyed the entire mine by warranty deed to B, as trustee, who executed a declaration of trust, reciting that he held the mine in trust to receive the rents and profits and, after the payment of the operating expenses of the mine and the costs of keeping it in repair, to apply the balance to the payment of the money advanced by his firm for the purchase of the two-thirds interest, with interest thereon, and then to reconvey to A; and it was held that B was merely a trustee and that the mine was liable for the advances, upon the profits proving insufficient to satisfy the claim. Gisborn v. Charter Oak, etc., Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326. See also Brotherton v. Wethersby, 73 Tex. 471; Compo v. Jackson Iron Co., 49 Mich. 39.

A gave an acknowledgment to B that he had received certain property belonging to the latter which had been invested by him in other property, and it was held that this was, by implication, a declaration of trust, and that B was entitled to a preference in payment of A's estate. M en u d e v. Delaire, 2 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 564.

Where the payee of notes at the time of their execution declares her intention of holding them for the benefit of the maker's children, a trust is created and the title passes regardless of want of consideration or failure to deliver possession. Williamson v. Yager, 91 Ky. 282. See also Egerton v. Carr, 94 N. Car. 648; 55 Am. Rep. 630.

S. and P. agreed that S. should furnish a sum of money not exceeding $5,000, which P. should invest in land, devoting his time and judgment to the selection thereof; that the purchases should be made within the current year, all contracts and conveyances to be made in the name of S., and that the lands purchased should be sold within five years, one-half the profits to be paid to P. in full for his services and expenses. It was held that S. took the legal title in trust to sell within the time limited, and, after deducting the outlay, interest and taxes, to pay P. one-half the remainder of the proceeds, and that to that extent he was the trustee, and P. the beneficiary; it was held, also, that the trust did not end at the expiration of five years unless P. should subsequently relinquish his claim. Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 202. See also Paige v. Sommers, 70 Cal. 101; Franks v. Williams, 27 Tex. 24.

Where the owner and mortgagor of land conveyed it to the mortgagee upon the latter's promising to pay over the surplus after three years, it was held to create a trust enforceable in equity, the mortgagee having sold before the expiration of the three years, and the land having increased in value. Freer v. Lake, 115 Ill. 662.

Pending a suit to enforce a vendor's lien, the purchaser secured a stay of the sale with leave to sell at private sale, agreeing to apply the proceeds to the satisfaction of the claims of the vendor and other incumbrancers, and it was held that the fund became a trust fund in the hands of anyone to whom it came with notice. Boyce v. Stanton, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 546.

A's husband had the management of her property and invested a portion of it in certificates of stock, which had originally been made out in his name, as trustee for his wife, and her name afterwards erased, leaving one of the certificates in the name of the husband individually and the other in his name as trustee, the rules of the companies being such that the certificates could not be conveniently issued in trust; the dividends had been deposited to A's credit; after the death of her husband, the certificates were found in his safe in an envelope with other certificates belonging to her, on the outside of which was indorsed her name, in her husband's hand-writing, and a statement signed by him setting forth the contents of the envelope, including such certificates, and directing his executor to transfer them to A. It was held that the certificates were held in trust for A by her husband. Guion v. Williams, 7 N. Y. Supp. 786.

The holder of a tontine insurance policy made payable to himself and his estate, or his assigns, executed a writing which he attached to the policy, reciting that the policy was for his children's benefit, and that in case of his death before its maturity, the proceeds should be divided equally among them. Afterwards, in the presence of the children, he declared that the policy was for them. These acts were held to create a valid trust in favor of the children. Phipard v. Phipard, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 433.

In Warburton v. Camp, 55 N. Y. Super. Ct. 290, it was held that an agreement in parol, made in connection with a written assignment of a claim, to the effect that a certain sum out of the proceeds of the claim should be paid to a certain person, creates a trust for the benefit of such person in the assignment of the claim. See also Roche v. George (Ky. 1893), 20 S. W. Rep. 1039.

A bequest of personal property to A "for the support of" B, creates a trust. Buffinton v. Maxam, 140 Mass. 557. See also Moore v. Stinson, 144 Mass. 594. See infra, this title, Provisions in Wills and Precatory Trusts.

Deeds and Written Contracts.—A conveyance made in contemplation of marriage, by which the grantor conveys property to a third person "upon trust and confidence," and "for the sole use, profit and benefit of" the intended wife during her lifetime, with the remainder over to her child or children surviving, creates an express trust. McCarthy v. McCarthy, 74 Ala. 546.

Certain heirs owned a piece of real estate as tenants in common, and two of the tenants in common conveyed their interest in said real estate to the other tenant in common by a deed absolute on its face, naming a money consideration, but contemporaneously with the transaction, and as a part of it, the grantee signed and delivered to the grantors a written agreement which required of her certain duties in respect to the payment of the ancestor's debts, the making of repairs, the ultimate disposition of the property, and the distribution of the proceeds after reimbursing herself. It was held that this constituted a perfectly executed and explicit declaration of trust which a court of equity must recognize and enforce. Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148.

Where a wife unites with her husband in the conveyance of her land on condition that the proceeds be applied to the payment of a debt binding her children's land, it has been held that a trust is thereby created which is enforceable in equity against the husband, even though all bonds for the proceeds are made payable to him. Barnes v. Trafton, 80 Va. 524.

A father who was afraid of complications which might arise from certain differences with his wife, transferred to his son a quantity of personal property, taking from the son an agreement to surrender it upon demand. This was held to create a trust enforceable in equity. Tyler v. Tyler, 25 Ill. App. 333.

So, it has been held in Texas that a deed of mortgaged lands executed by the mortgagors, husband and wife, to the mortgagee, upon an old promise by the latter to the wife to sell the land and, after discharging the debt, pay over the surplus or reconvey any portion unsold, creates a valid and enforceable trust. Clark v. Haney, 62 Tex. 511; 50 Am. Rep. 536. But as will be hereafter shown, in most of the states, the Statute of Frauds would prevent the admission of parol evidence to show that a deed, absolute on its face, was executed upon a parol trust. See also, as to the Texas rule, Brotherton v. Wethersby, 73 Tex. 471.

A son, having made a parol division of his property, which was personal, among his brothers and sisters, except a small part which was to go to his mother, then a widow, died intestate and without issue. The mother, though entitled to the whole, signed articles of agreement with the children, by which the balance of the estate, remaining after taking out her part, was to be invested, and the interest to be used for the benefit of an invalid son, the principal, at his death, to go to the brothers and sisters of the intestate. She also waived administration, and agreed that letters should be granted to a son-in-law, which was done. After the account was filed, the administrator took the net estate as appropriated by the mother, invested it, and paid her the interest for several years for the use of her son, as agreed upon, when an auditor was appointed, at the instance of the mother, to distribute the fund, before whom she claimed the whole balance as mother and heir-at-law. It was held that the instrument executed by her must be regarded as an assignment and declaration of trust, with a trustee competent to carry all its trusts into complete effect without the aid of a court of equity. Cresman's Appeal, 42 Pa. St. 147; 82 Am. Dec. 498.

Where different persons have claims upon, and are interested in, a tract of land, and one undertakes to enter the same, the others agreeing to repay him a suitable pro rata sum to cover expenses and his trouble, a trust is created and the undertaking will be enforced. Bryant v. Hendricks, 5 Iowa 256.

Where a purchaser at a judicial sale, by giving notice of an agreement with the owner to reconvey the property on payment of a certain sum, prevented competition at the sale, he was adjudged to hold the land in trust for the owner. Miller v. Antle, 2 Bush (Ky.) 407; 97 Am. Dec. 495. But compare Gilbert v. Carter, 10 Ind. 16; 68 Am. Dec. 655.

No form of words is necessary to give effect to a deed conveying personal property in trust for the use of another, and the words, "for the full and sure conveyance of said slave-negroes above named, to be for them and their use, I do hereby deliver the said negroes, and all the property herein mentioned, into the possession of my wife A, and my sons, B and C," have been held good conveyances of the legal estate to the grantor, and to give the trustees a right to recover against a stranger disturbing the possession. Youmans v. Buckner, Riley (S. Car.) 204.

A deed to lands giving the grantee power to sell and pay certain debts of the grantor, but reserving no right of redemption, is not a mortgage, but a deed of trust. Cooper v. Whitney, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 95.

Where A and B satisfied certain judgments outstanding against the owner of mortgaged property, which the owner subsequently conveyed to B to sell, subject to the mortgage, and apply the proceeds, after the repayment of the sum advanced by B, to reimburse A, such conveyance, together with a judgment confessed by A, as part of the same transaction, conditioned to secure B from any wrongs arising from liens on the same property, was held to create the relation of trustee and beneficiary between A and B. Diefendorf v. Spraker, 10 N. Y. 246.

A stipulation in a deed, absolute on its face, that a part of the property conveyed should be sold and the proceeds accounted for by the grantee, is demonstrative evidence that there was a trust reposed in the grantee, and that the conveyance was only a security for the payment of a debt due the grantee. Simpson v. Mitchell, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 417.

A deed to an administrator, reciting that the grantor had sold or agreed to sell to, and receive the consideration from, the intestate, appears upon its face to be in trust for the heirs. Blythe v. Easterling, 20 Tex. 565.

Where a deed conveys land in trust, it is not necessary to its validity that the cestui que trust should execute or express an assent to it; until the contrary appears, his assent will be presumed. Wissall v. Ross, 4 Port. (Ala.) 321.

In a recent case in California it was held by a divided bench that where the owner of an equitable interest in an undivided tract of unpatented land, employed an attorney to procure a patent thereto for the person through whom such owner derived his interest, and agreed to give the attorney a certain portion of the land if he succeeded, the contract created an express trust, and, when completed, rendered the owner a trustee of the attorney to the extent of such interest. Luco v. De Toro, 91 Cal. 405.

A trust may be created by indorsement on a deed absolute on its face made before delivery, the indorsement stating that the grantor's daughter "doth hold a lifetime possession in said deed." Blackburn v. Blackburn, 109 N. Car. 488.

Where a devisee entered into an agreement with the executor by which he released his interest in the estate and directed the executor to pay, or have expended or invested yearly, for the devisee's children, the amount held for him under the will, it was held to create a trust for the children which, in the absence of a reservation of the power of revocation, could not be revoked. Beekman v. Hendrickson (N. Y.), 21 Atl. Rep. 567.

By a deed of conveyance which was placed on record, a father, in consideration of love and affection, transferred to his infant daughter certain described promissory notes due him from other persons, to have and to hold for her use and benefit, reserving in himself "the right to manage the above amounts as agent for my said infant daughter, with the privilege to collect the money on said notes." It was held that there was a delivery of the notes, and that the deed created an executed trust which could not be revoked. Walker v. Crews, 73 Ala. 412.

By a contract in writing, the defendant acknowledged the receipt from the plaintiff of five thousand dollars, which he agreed to return in case a certain resolution therein set forth was not passed by the common council of the city of New York, which resolution authorized the street commissioner to enter into a contract for lighting the streets, etc. It did not appear that the defendant was a member of the common council or a city official, and no evidence was given upon the part of the plaintiff outside of the instrument itself. It was held that this contract, by its terms, created a valid trust, and was not upon its face within the condemnation of the law as against public policy. Milbank v. Jones, 127 N. Y. 370.

In Adams v. Adams, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 185, the defendant signed, sealed and put on record a deed to a trustee in trust for his wife, and afterwards kept the deed in his possession, and openly and repeatedly declared to his wife and her brothers and sisters, that it was a complete provision for her, and that it perfectly protected her. The court held that there was a sufficient delivery of the deed and that a trust would be deemed created.

Where the purchaser of lands directs the seller, when drawing up the conveyance, to insert trusts for the benefit of another, intending it as a gift, which is done, he is bound by them. Reilly v. Whipple, 2 S. Car. 277.

So, where the name of the trustee is omitted, but the beneficiary is authorized by the grantor to insert the name of a suitable person as trustee, the deed may be reformed and the name of a proper person inserted. Burnside v. Wayman, 49 Mo. 356. And where the trustee accepts a trust by signing the deed before it is acknowledged by the grantor, this will supply the omission of the trustee's name in the body of the deed. Boyce v. Sikes, 97 Mo. 362.

Signature of Trust.—A trust deed, purporting to be signed by the trustee, is not vitiated by his failure to sign, where the signature forms no element of the consideration for the signature of the other parties, and it is expressly provided in the deed that it shall be binding regardless of the trustee. Smith v. Davis, 90 Cal. 25. See also as to the execution of deed, Ewing v. Buckner, 76 Iowa 467.

Separate Instruments.—Where land is conveyed by a deed absolute in form, but intended simply as a conveyance in trust, the grantee may make a valid declaration of the trust in a separate instrument, McLaurie v. Partlow, 53 Ill. 340; and while it is usual for the declaration of trust to be made in the same instrument which vests the legal estate in the trustee, it is not necessary that such should be the case, for it may be made in another instrument contemporaneous therewith. Inchiquire v. French, 1 Cox 1; Wood v. Cox, 2 M. H. & C. 684; Blake v. Collins, 69 Me. 156. See also Stubbs v. Sargon, 2 Keen 255; Smith v. Altersoll, 1 Russ. 266; Van Cott v. Prentice, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 322; Hanning v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235.

But it has been held that the grantee is not affected by a declaration of trust as to the property conveyed, made by the grantor in a separate paper, without his knowledge and not referred to in the deed. Rogers v. Rogers, 53 Wis. 36; 40 Am. Rep. 756.

Other cases in which trusts were held to have been created are: Sprague v. Thurber, 17 R. I. 451; Laclede, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Williams, 14 Colo. 37; Mull v. Bowles, 129 Ind. 343; Alexander v. Scotland Mortgage Co., 47 Fed. Rep. 131; King v. Remington, 36 Minn. 15; Butler v. Hyland, 87 Cal. 575; Tyler v. Mayre, 95 Cal. 160; Van Cott v. Prentice, 104 N. Y. 45; Chadwick v. Chadwick, 59 Mich. 87; Frost v. Frost, 63 Me. 399; Cresman's Appeal, 42 Pa. St. 147; 82 Am. Dec. 498; Walden v. Karr, 88 Ill. 49; Rielly v. Whipple, 2 S. Car. 277; Smith v. Smith, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 134; Lake v. Freer, 11 Ill. App. 576; Adams v. Adams, 64 N. H. 224; Brisson v. Brisson, 90 Cal. 323; Beach v. Cum- mins (Ky. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 360; Woodruff v. Jabine (Ark. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 830; Drosten v. Mueller, 103 Mo. 624; Hance v. Frome, 39 N. J. Eq. 324; Culbertson v. Witbeck Co., 127 U. S. 326; Fagan v. Thompson, 38 Fed. Rep. 467; Stephens v. Stephens, 89 Ky. 185; Beadle v. Beadle, 40 Fed. Rep. 315; Pinson v. McGehee, 44 Miss. 229; Lyle v. Burke, 40 Mich. 499; Shields v. McAuley, 37 Fed. Rep. 302; McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500.

Declarations of Trust Held Insufficient.—Conveyances, Mortgages.—Where a grantor conveyed to his son-in-law, in consideration of "the natural love and affection" which he entertained for his daughter and her husband, "and for the purpose of advancing the latter in life," it was held that no trust was created in favor of the daughter, there being nothing to indicate an intention to separate the legal estate from the beneficial interest. Thompson v. Thompson, 18 Ohio St. 73; Mosely v. Mosely, 87 N. Car. 69.

The plaintiff's decedent, in order to avoid his creditors, conveyed land to his brother, the defendant, who, at the time, signed and acknowledged a deed of the land to the decedent, which was not delivered, and the nature of which was not shown; the defendant testified that he afterwards paid for the land, and the deed was destroyed by consent, and it was held not to constitute a written declaration of trust. Haashagen v. Haashagen, 80 Cal. 514.

A conveyed his property to his nephew, taking a mortgage on the realty payable at his death to his executors, and an agreement for the support of himself and sister. Subsequently, wishing to provide for his grand-nephews, he took a bond and mortgage from his nephew, providing for the payment of interest to himself for life, and the principal, at his death, to his grand-nephews. No consideration passed between him and his grand-nephews for the bond and mortgage which he retained. The mortgage was afterwards satisfied; and it was held that the mortgage was in the nature of a will, and that A had power to change it in his lifetime, and that no trust was created in favor of the grand-nephews. Kelsey v. Cooley, 11 N. Y. Supp. 745.

A stipulation that the grantee of land was not to alien without the consent of his wife, and that if not sold it shall descend to the heirs of their bodies, does not create a trust for the use of the wife. Huff v. Thomas, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 158.

Agreements and Promises.—Where land is held by A on a resulting trust for B, an agreement by the former to hold it in trust for the latter's wife, does not create a trust enforceable by her, B having failed to join in the execution of the agreement. Fussell v. Hennessey, 14 R. I. 550.

A trust for the benefit of creditors is not created by a promise by a creditor, to whom an insolvent debtor conveys property, to pay the debt of another creditor. Saunderson v. Broadwell, 82 Cal. 132.

An agreement between the holders of mortgage bonds that certain parties therein appointed trustees, may purchase the mortgaged property at the sale under the mortgage, and sell, lease, occupy and manage the same, being at all times accountable for the proper performance of their trust, does not create a trust authorized by the statutes of New York, but the title to the property, upon its purchase by such persons, vests in the beneficiaries as tenants in common. Cassagne v. Ostrand, 3 N. Y. Supp. 844.

Where the plaintiff conveyed real estate to T., in consideration of T.'s agreement to furnish support to the plaintiff during life, and afterwards, by agreement between the plaintiff and T. and the defendant, T. conveyed the land to the defendant, who assumed the obligation to support the plaintiff, it was held that no trust was created as between the plaintiff and T., or the plaintiff and the defendant, by these transactions. Riddle v. Beattie, 77 Iowa 168.

In Nickerson v. Nickerson, 127 U. S. 668, a wife brought a suit to establish a trust in real estate which had been purchased with the proceeds of land which it was charged her husband had promised before their marriage should be settled on her. The husband obtained a fraudulent divorce from the plaintiff and married the defendant, and thereupon conveyed the land in controversy to the defendant. The evidence consisted of mere verbal and indefinite promises, and the court denied her prayer. See also Emerson v. Galloupe, 158 Mass. 146.

Letters.—It was held in Campbell v. Campbell, 70 Wis. 311, that the use of an ambiguous expression in a letter, which was not inconsistent with the writer's claim of absolute ownership in real estate, was not to be regarded as a declaration of trust.

A wrote two personal letters to B, wherein he admitted the existence of a trust, but did not name the beneficiaries, nor state the proportions which they were to take, nor define the exact nature of the trust. This was held insufficient to create a trust under the Pennsylvania Act of April 22d, 1856, requiring that all trusts "be manifested by writing"; and it was further held that parol evidence could not be introduced in aid of it. Dyer's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 446.

So, where a stepson brought suit to recover, after his stepfather's death, the whole of the decedent's estate on the ground of an alleged trust, it was held that the trust relied on was not established by letters and parol declarations of the stepfather, which indicated a settled intention that the stepson should succeed to the estate, but only by virtue of the supposed rule of inheritance. Russell v. Switzer, 63 Ga. 711.

And where one wrote to his father and sisters that his life had been insured for their benefit, but made no transfer or delivery of the policy to them, it was held that this constituted merely an executory agreement to create a trust in the future, and that it could not be enforced in equity. Webb's Estate, 49 Cal. 542.

So, where a mother, two years after the purchase by her of her son's interest in land sold under execution, wrote to the son promising to satisfy certain judgments against him and fix the land so that he should have it, and expressing her intention of charging him with all the advances made him and deducting it from his portion of the estate, it was held insufficient to prove an express trust in the land for his benefit. Wolf's Appeal, 123 Pa. St. 438. See also Lane v. Lane, 80 Me. 570, in which a letter from a wife to her husband, saying that she had intended he should have certain land back which he had conveyed to her through another, but that she had changed her mind, was held insufficient to prove an express trust.

Wills.—Where a testator in his will directed his executors to divide the residuary estate among his children, share and share alike, each to have the use and benefit of one of such equal shares for life, the principal afterwards to go to the children's children, it was held not to create a trust, and that a direction to the trustees to sell the realty, and deposit or invest the proceeds "un-

The declaration of trust may be contained in letters or other writings,¹ even, it has been held, where they are not contempo-til a final settlement," had reference only to a final settlement of the accounts as executors. Williams v. Freeman, 98 N. Y. 577. See also Rock River, etc., Co. v. Fisk, 47 Mich. 212.

Where a mother devises land in compliance with an oral agreement under which it was conveyed to her, but without any declaration of trust, and afterwards, by the execution of a second will, revokes the first, there is no such declaration as will create a trust. Champlin v. Champlin, 136 Ill. 309.

Where property is devised to executors in trust for such persons and objects as the testatrix may in writing direct, she expressing an intention to execute a codicil, and two days after the will was executed, the testatrix signed a paper not attested as required in the case of a will, it was held not to be good as a declaration of trust in favor of the persons named in it, to whom the executors were directed to turn over the property held by them. Chase v. Stockett, 72 Md. 235.

A testator devised his estate to two executors "upon the uses and trusts following, viz.: At the time of my death, should my daughters, or either of them, be unmarried, I give and bequeath, to such of them as may be unmarried, the sum of $5,000." The will contained other bequests, and also the clause, "I give to my said trustees, executor, and executrix, full power and authority to sell any or all of my real estate at public or private sale, and invest the proceeds thereof, or to let or sell the same, as they may deem best," and it was held that, under 2 New York Rev. Stat., p. 2438, § 56, providing that a devise of land to executors or trustees to be sold, where the trustees are not also empowered to receive rents and profits, shall vest no estate in the trustees, the provisions of the will did not create a valid express trust. Steinhardt v. Cunningham, 130 N. Y. 292. See also infra, this title, Precautionary Trusts.

Miscellaneous Cases.—A written acknowledgment that money received was to be invested for the benefit of the daughter of the person who paid the money, and the interest to be paid to her for the support of herself and children when the payor should decide that she needed it, was held not to constitute a sufficient declaration of trust to prevent him from collecting and using the money himself. Matter of Crise's Estate (Surr. Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 202. And it has also been held that a trust is not created by a written acknowledgment by one person that another is entitled to certain land, where no consideration is shown. Thompson v. Branch, Meigs (Tenn.) 390; 33 Am. Dec. 153. See also Hasshagen v. Hasshagen, 80 Cal. 514.

In a recent case, land was conveyed for an expressed consideration of ten thousand dollars, and represented by the grantee's note, payable on demand with interest; at the same time the grantee leased the land of the grantor for ten years at an annual rental equal to the amount of the interest, the rental to be set off against the interest. They also entered into a written contract, setting out these facts, and provided that on the death of either of the contracting parties, while the contract continued to be in force, "all the papers this day executed and delivered, shall be canceled, surrendered and held for nought, and that the administrator or executor of the deceased party shall make a delivery to the party surviving of such deeds or other instruments in writing, as may be effectual for the purpose of restoring the parties and their personal representatives to the same condition, and with the same rights and obligations that existed before the execution of the said deed, note, or lease." The parties both outlived the term of the lease, and no showing was made as to what became of the note. It was held that the writing did not declare a trust. Salisbury v. Clark, 61 Vt. 453. See generally Wight v. Sampter, 127 Ill. 167; Harris v. Bratton, 34 S. Car. 259; Modrell v. Riddle, 82 Mo. 31; Hawks v. Sailors, 87 Ga. 234; Gibson v. Decius, 82 Ill. 304; Jacoby v. Crowe, 36 Minn. 93; Harvey v. Pennypacker, 4 Del. Ch. 445.

1. Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148; Packard v. Putnam, 57 N. H. 43; Pinnock v. Clough, 16 Vt. 500; 42 Am. Dec. 521; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Hamer v. Sidway, 124 N. Y. 538; 21 Am. St. Rep. 693; Hollinshead v. Allen, 17 Pa. St. 275; Raybold v. Raybold, 20 Pa.

aneous with the conveyance of the property.¹ So it may be made in an answer in equity,² in an affidavit,³ in a bond,⁴ in a recital in a deed,⁵ in a receipt,⁶ or even in a pamphlet.⁷ It may also be made by the owner of property, stating that he holds it in trust for certain persons, in a declaration of trust.⁸ And it is not

St. 308; Newkirk v. Place, 47 N. J. Eq. 477; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Lake v. Freer, 11 Ill. App. 576; Forster v. Hale, 3 Ves. 606; Montague v. Hayes, 10 Gray (Mass.) 609; Phelps v. Seely, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 573; Loring v. Palmer, 118 U. S. 321; Bentley v. Mackay, 15 Beav. 12. But compare Russell v. Switzer, 63 Ga. 711; De Laurencel v. De Boom, 48 Cal. 581; Moore v. Pickett, 62 Ill. 158.

Thus, where a grantee of land who had paid a valuable consideration therefor, wrote letters to different persons stating that he held the land "for A;" that he had "bought it for A;" "that he was going to turn it over to A;" and that he bought it "for the purpose of securing half the property for A," it was held to be a sufficient declaration of trust. McCandless v. Warner, 26 W. Va. 754.

An uncle agreed with his nephew that if he would refrain from drinking liquor, using tobacco, etc., until he should become twenty-one years of age, he would pay him five thousand dollars. The nephew performed his part of the agreement, coming of age in 1875. Soon afterward, he wrote to his uncle, advising him that he had fulfilled his part of the agreement and stating that the sum specified was due him, and asked for payment. The uncle replied, admitting the agreement, and the nephew's performance of his obligations under it, and stating that he had the money in the bank set apart, which he proposed to hold for the nephew until the latter was able to take care of it. It was thereupon agreed between them that the money should remain in the uncle's hands on interest. Suit was brought upon the agreement, and the court held that the consideration was sufficient, that the agreement was enforceable, and that the relation of the parties was that of trustee and cestui que trust, and not of debtor and creditor. Hamer v. Sidway, 124 N. Y. 538; 21 Am. St. Rep. 693.

1. Malin v. Malin, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 625; Newkirk v. Place, 47 N. J. Eq. 477; McArthur v. Gordon, 126 N. Y.

597; De Laurencel v. De Boom, 48 Cal. 581. But see Addlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 151; Crabb v. Crabb, 1 Myl. & K. 511; Walgrave v. Tebbs, 2 Jur. N. S. 85; Lomax v. Ripley, 24 L. J. Ch. 256; Johnson v. Ball, 5 De G. & S. 85; Johnson v. Clarkson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 305; Hill on Trustees *64.

2. Cottingham v. Fletcher, 2 Atk. 155; Hampton v. Spencer, 2 Vern. 288; Wilson v. Dent, 3 Sim. 385; Pratt v. Ayer, 3 Chand. (Wis.) 265; McLaurie v. Partlow, 53 Ill. 340.

3. Pinney v. Fellows, 15 Vt. 525; Barkworth v. Young, 4 Drew 1.

4. Moorecroft v. Dowding, 2 P. Wms. 314; Gomez v. Tradesmen's Bank, 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 102; Hannig v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235.

5. Wright v. Douglass, 7 N. Y. 564; Blythe v. Easterling, 20 Tex. 565; Simpson v. Mitchell, 8 Yerg. (Tenn.) 417.

6. Robert's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 407; Kitchen v. Bradford, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 413. See also Morris v. Webb, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 305; Milbank v. Jones, 127 N. Y. 370.

A purchased certain land for cash, and B agreed to buy one-fourth of the land, also for cash; A gave B a receipt in full, which was duly witnessed and set forth that one-fourth of the purchase-money had been furnished by B, but instead of cash, A took from B a due bill payable at once, and it was held that the receipt was a sufficient declaration of trust. Robert's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 407.

So where A signed the following writing, "received of B $800 in gold, valued at $1,000 in currency, in trust for C, a minor, my brother B's only living child, to be kept and used for his benefit to the best of my ability until he becomes of age or marries," it was held to evidence a trust created by B and accepted by A as trustee, by which the sum of money specified, with its gains under the management of the trustee, was vested absolutely in the beneficiary. Boykin v. Pace, 64 Ala. 68.

7. Barrell v. Joy, 16 Mass. 221.

8. Doe v. Harris, 16 M. & W. 517; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 95 necessary that the beneficiary should expressly assent to a deed of trust, in an ordinary case, as his assent will be presumed, in the absence of proof of repudiation;¹ but the consent of the beneficiary will not be presumed where the deed imposes burdensome conditions upon him.² A trust created without the knowledge of the beneficiary may afterwards be affirmed and enforced by him,³ but he cannot accept it in part and reject it in part.⁴

2. Powers Given to Trustees.—Powers given to the trustee may be of such a nature that a trust will be inferred, although not declared in express terms.⁵

Ill. 267; 35 Am. Rep. 166; Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180; Urann v. Coates, 109 Mass. 581; Tanner v. Skinner, 11 Bush (Ky.) 120; Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 292.

Thus, where by a written instrument executed in form to be recorded, the grantee of land declares that he holds it "in trust for the Indians whose names are hereunto attached, they having paid towards the purchase of such lands the sums set opposite their names respectively," to which is attached a list of names and amounts paid, it is a sufficient declaration of trust in favor of such persons. Obermiller v. Wylie, 36 Fed. Rep. 641.

So, where the grantee of a farm, after the death of the grantor, executed and recorded an instrument reciting "that because of certain real estate conveyed to me by the grantor, I do hereby consider myself holden and firmly bound to appropriate for the comfortable support of L., a son of the grantor, of sound mind, "during his life, all the rents, after deducting necessary expenses," of certain real estate, etc., it was held that the instrument constituted a declaration of trust, it being immaterial that the declaration was not contemporaneous with the deed. McArthur v. Gordon, 129 N. Y. 597.

1. Cloud v. Calhoun, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 358; Saunders v. Harris, 1 Head (Tenn.) 185; Furman v. Fisher, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 626; 94 Am. Dec. 210; Penny v. Davis, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 313; Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 493; Wise v. Wise, 2 Jones & L. 412.

2. Kemp v. Porter, 7 Ala. 138.

3. Pleasants v. Glasscock, 1 Smed. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 17; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 119; 7 Am. Dec. 478; Shepherd v. McEvers, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 136; 8 Am. Dec. 561; Berly v. Taylor, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 577; Field v. Arrowsmith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185.

4. Swanson v. Tarkington, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 612; Williams v. Gideon, 7 Heisk. (Tenn.) 617; Judice v. Provost, 18 La. Ann. 601.

5. Tobias v. Ketchum, 32 N. Y. 319; Ward v. Ward, 105 N. Y. 68; Garvey v. McDevitt, 72 N. Y. 556; Brewster v. Striker, 2 N. Y. 19; Leggett v. Perkins, 2 N. Y. 297; Wagstaff v. Lowerre, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 209; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 421; White v. Parker, 1 Bing. N. Cas. 573; 27 E. C. L. 493; Birmingham v. Kinvan, 2 Sch. & Lef. 444; Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden 125; Mott v. Buxton, 7 Ves. 201; Reynell v. Reynell, 10 Beav. 21; Collier v. McBean, 34 Beav. 426; Sylvester v. Wilson, 2 T. R. 444; Ferry v. Laible, 31 N. J. Eq. 566; Randolph v. Randolph, 40 N. J. Eq. 73; Carson v. Carson, 6 Allen (Mass.) 397; Blake v. Dexter, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 559. Compare Huff v. Earl, 3 Ind. 306.

In the leading case of Tobias v. Ketchum, 32 N. Y. 319, a testator gave to his widow, the furniture and one-third of the income of his land during her life, and to his children, the rest of his property to be equally divided among them within six months after the widow's death. He appointed executors with full power and authority to carry out all the provisions of the will, to sell real estate if necessary to make a fair division, to divide the proceeds, and to rent, lease, repair, and insure the real estate, etc. The court said: "The first question then is, are the executors under this will made trustees of an express trust? The word trust or trustee is not used in the will, but that is only a circumstance to be noted in considering the question. It is by no means necessary that the donee should be expressly directed to hold the property to certain uses, or in trust, or as a trustee. . . . It is one of the fixed rules of equitable construction that there is no magic in particular

3. Provisions for Maintenance.—Provisions for maintenance of children or family in a will or deed, wherein property is given to the parent, may be sufficient to create a trust, without any declaration thereof in express terms. But, as a learned text-writer says: "No definite rule can be laid down; each case must stand upon its own circumstances. If the language is sufficient for the intention to be clearly inferred, the trust will be enforced; otherwise the donee will take an absolute estate, and the provisions concerning maintenance will be regarded as mere motives for the gift and recommendations addressed to his discretion."¹ words; and any expressions that show unequivocally the intention of the parties to create a trust will have that effect." The court held, in conclusion, that "the authority to lease, rent, repair, insure, pay taxes, assessments, and interest, and pay net income to devisees, carried the legal title to the executors in this case, and created a trust in them valid under the statute." See also Smith v. Scholtz, 68 N. Y. 41; Knox v. Jones, 47 N. Y. 396; Vernon v. Vernon, 53 N. Y. 359; Van Nostrand v. Moore, 52 N. Y. 18; Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 123 N. Y. 44; Morse v. Morse, 85 N. Y. 53. This branch of the subject is treated more in detail in the article on POWERS, vol. 18, p. 877.

1. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1012, citing Woods v. Woods, 1 Myl. & C. 401; Raikes v. Ward, 1 Hare 445; Carr v. Living, 28 Beav. 644; Bird v. Maybury, 33 Beav. 351; Byne v. Blackburn, 26 Beav. 41; Longmore v. Elcum, 2 Y. & C. Ch. 369; Berry v. Bryant, 2 Dr. & Sm. 1; Whiting v. Whiting, 4 Gray (Mass.) 240; Andrews v. Bank of Cape Ann, 3 Allen (Mass.) 313; Smith v. Wildman, 39 Conn. 387; Paisley's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 158; Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597; Bryan v. Howland, 98 Ill. 625.

There is considerable conflict among the authorities. In England, generally, and in some of the states, it is held that when a bequest is so made that the legatee is to use the income both for himself and for the maintenance of his children, a trust is created in their favor. See English cases above cited, and Staniland v. Staniland, 34 Beav. 536; Blakeney v. Blakeney, 6 Sim. 52; Armstrong v. Armstrong, L. R., 7 Eq. 518; Anderson v. Crist, 113 Ind. 65; Beshore v. Lytle, 114 Ind. 8; Robertson v. Robertson, 120 Ind. 333; Smith v. Bowen, 35 N. Y. 83; Lyon v. Lyon, 65 N. Y. 339; Goodrich's Estate, 38 Wis. 492;

Young v. Young, 68 N. Car. 309; Major v. Herndon, 78 Ky. 123. But in other cases, bequests to parents to enable them to support their children, or with power to dispose of the property and devote the proceeds to the maintenance of their children, have been held insufficient to create a trust in favor of the latter. Brown v. Casamajor, 4 Ves. 498; Benson v. Whittam, 5 Sim. 22; Jones v. Greatwood, 16 Beav. 527; Taft v. Taft, 130 Mass. 461; Biddle's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 258; Bryan v. Howland, 98 Ill. 625; Billar v. Loundes, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 590.

Where property was given to a man with authority "to dispose thereof for the benefit" of himself and his children, it was held that a trust was created. Raikes v. Ward, 1 Hare 445; Whiting v. Whiting, 4 Gray (Mass.) 240. So, where it was given "for his own use and benefit, and the maintenance and education of his children," or "for the maintenance of himself and family," or the like. Carr v. Living, 28 Beav. 644; Bird v. Maybury, 33 Beav. 351; Longmore v. Elcum, 2 Y. & C. Ch. 369; Andrews v. Bank of Cape Ann, 3 Allen (Mass.) 313; In re Robertson's Trust, 6 W. R. 405; Smith v. Wildman, 37 Conn. 387; Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597; Rittgers v. Rittgers, 56 Iowa 218. To the same effect are Crockett v. Crockett, 1 Hare 451; Bibby v. Thompson, 32 Beav. 646; Woods v. Woods, 1 Myl. & C. 401; Gilbert v. Bennett, 10 Sim. 371; Jubber v. Jubber, 9 Sim. 503; Leach v. Leach, 13 Sim. 304; Lucas v. Lockhart, 10 S. & M. 468; Jackson v. Jackson, 2 Pa. St. 212; Pierce v. McKeehan, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 280; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318; Wright v. Miller, 8 N. Y. 10; 59 Am. Dec. 438; Loring v. Loring, 100 Mass. 340; Cole v. Littlefield, 35 Me. 439; Babbitt v. Babbitt, 26 N. J. Eq. 44; Johnson v. Billups, 23 W. Va. 685. In Byne

Where a trust for the maintenance of children is created, they have an interest in the fund which cannot be reached by creditor's bill or trustee process against the parent or other person charged with such maintenance;¹ and the person so charged with the trust is regarded in the same light as a guardian.²

Such a trust generally terminates, where no contrary intention is shown, when the children, by marriage or otherwise, cease to be members of the trustee's family and become members of another family.³ It may also cease when the children become of age; but this is not always the case, as it depends upon the intention of the testator.⁴

v. Blackburn, 26 Beav. 41, it was held that, where the property was given to a stranger, as trustee, instead of the parent, no trust was created in favor of the children; but the contrary was held in Gilbert v. Bennett, 10 Sim. 371; Longmore v. Elcum, 2 Y. & C. Ch. 363; Carr v. Living, 28 Beav. 644; Donovan v. Van De Mark, 78 N.Y. 244.

On the other hand, the words used in the following cases were held to simply state the motive of the gift, and not to create a trust: "To enable" the parent "to maintain his children," or "that he may support himself and children." Benson v. Whittam, 5 Sim. 22; Brown v. Casamajor, 4 Ves. 498; Thorp v. Owen, 2 Hare 607; Burt v. Herron, 66 Pa. St. 400; Burke v. Valentine, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 412; Rhett v. Mason, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 541. So, where a testator gave his wife personal property "absolutely, having full confidence that she would leave the surplus to be divided justly among his children." Pennock's Estate, 20 Pa. St. 268; 59 Am. Dec. 718; Paisley's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 158; Sears v. Cunningham, 122 Mass. 538; Barrett v. Marsh, 126 Mass. 213; Fox v. Fox, 27 Beav. 301. And where the trustees are given full discretion to determine the amount of money and the manner in which it shall be applied, the beneficiaries cannot, ordinarily, insist upon a greater amount than the trustees think proper. In re Sanderson's Trust, 3 Kay & J. 497; Beever v. Partridge, 11 Sim. 229; Cowper v. Mantell, 22 Beav. 231; Reedland v. Crozier, 2 De G. & J. 143; McCormick v. Grogan, L. R., 4 H. L. Cas. 82.

Where a will expressly made the executor trustee for one of the testator's children, and gave him power to sell and invest the property bequeathed to the other children, and pay interest annually to them during their respective lives, but did not call him a trustee, he was held, nevertheless, to be trustee for all the children. Sheet's Estate, 52 Pa. St. 257.

So, where a testator devised to his son, "during his natural life, the use and benefit of" certain negroes, "said negroes not to be removed from the estate or disposed of by him or any other person whatsoever, but to remain exclusively for the annual support of my said son and family," a trust was held to be thereby created in favor of the son's wife and children, and that the negroes could not be levied upon under an execution at law against the son. Wylie v. White, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 294. And the supreme court of Vermont reached the same conclusion in a like case, where the testator bequeathed a sum of money to his son "for the support of himself and family and for no other purpose," and the executor paid the money to the son's attorney. White v. White, 30 Vt. 338.

1. Clute v. Bool, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 83; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 44; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Wells v. McCall, 64 Pa. St. 207; White v. White, 30 Vt. 342; Doswell v. Anderson, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 185.

2. Jodrell v. Jodrell, 14 Beav. 411. See also Woods v. Woods, 1 Myl. & C. 409; Webb v. Wools, 2 Sim. N. S. 272; Cooper v. Thornton, 3 Bro. C. C. 186; Raikes v. Ward, 1 Hare 449; Robinson v. Tickell, 8 Ves. 449; Leach v. Leach, 13 Sim. 304; Carr v. Living, 28 Beav. 644; Hadow v. Hadow, 9 Sim. 438; Smith v. Smith, 11 Allen (Mass.) 423; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.) 101; Bowditch v. Andrew, 8 Allen (Mass.) 339, as to his rights and duties.

3. McDowell v. Black, Riley Eq. (S. Car.) 152; Baker v. Red, 4 Dana (Ky.) 158; Connolly v. Farrell, 8 Beav. 350.

4. Carr v. Living, 33 Beav. 464;

4. Provisions in Wills.—Provisions in wills may be such that a trust is necessary in order to carry out and enforce them. In such a case an intention on the part of the testator to create a trust will generally be inferred.¹

5. Precatory Trusts.—Mere precatory words may be sufficient to create a trust, when used by a testator in such connection that an intention to create a trust can be clearly inferred from the entire

Gardner v. Barker, 18 Jur. 508; Bowditch v. Andrew, 8 Allen (Mass.) 339; Sargent v. Bourne, 6 Met. (Mass.) 32.

1. Blatch v. Wilder, 1 Atk. 420; Pitt v. Pelham, 2 Freem. 134; Cook v. Fountain, 2 Swanst. 585; Walker v. Whiting, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 313; Fay v. Taft, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 448; Baker v. Red, 4 Dana (Ky.) 158; Watson v. Mayrant, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 449; Withers v. Yeadon, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 324; Hoxie v. Hoxie, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 187; Ward v. Ward, 105 N. Y. 68; Robert v. Corning, 89 N. Y. 225. See WILLS.

A testatrix made her husband, who was insolvent, her executor, and gave him the use, during his life, of what was left of her estate after paying certain bequests, the remainder on his death to go to others; the principal was to be kept invested, and not encroached upon except in cases of emergency. It was held that a valid trust for the benefit of the husband was created which his creditors could not reach. Cummings v. Corey, 58 Mich. 494.

A direction to continue the testator's business may create a trust. Ferry v. Laible, 31 N. J. Eq. 566. And, as a general rule, wherever the duties of the executor are active and cannot be performed unless he retains possession of the property, with its management and control, he will be deemed a trustee. Ward v. Ward, 105 N. Y. 68; Earle v. Earle, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 18. But merely calling an executor a trustee, in a will, does not make him such. Matter of Hawley, 104 N. Y. 250. See, to same effect, Rowe v. Rand, 111 Ind. 206; Allen v. Craft, 109 Ind. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 425. Where the person called a trustee has no power of control or disposition, there is no trust—the estate vests immediately in the beneficiary. Allen v. Craft, 109 Ind. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 425.

A trust is created in an executor by a will providing that he shall convert the real estate into personalty, and hold the real property for the payment of annuities, etc., until the grandchildren, who are made residuary devisees, become of age. Forsyth v. Rathbone, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 288.

A trust to receive the profits of real estate, within the purview of the New York statute regulating trusts to receive the profits of real estate, is created by devise and direction to the executor to operate mills belonging to the testator, propelled by water power also belonging to him. Downing v. Marshall, 23 N. Y. 366; 80 Am. Dec. 290.

But where the testator directs his executors, at the expiration of four years from the time of his death, to invest and hold $3,000 for the benefit of R., until she reach the age of 21, and to re-invest for her benefit the interest, after providing for her support, the whole to be paid to her when she attained the prescribed age, it was held to create no trust in the hands of the executors, distinct and separate from their duties as executors. Lansing v. Lansing, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 182.

So, in another case, where the testator devised real estate, subject to certain changes, to his three grandchildren who were minors, and expressed it to be his will that they were not to take it until they arrived at the age of 21, and gave directions that his son should manage and control the estate and receive and apply the avails thereof to their support during minority, and invest any surplus that there might be for their benefit; and also directed that his son should be guardian of the grandchildren, and as such have charge of their estate, and provided for his compensation for the management thereof, and that he should not be responsible for any losses unless incurred through gross neglect; it was held that the will should be construed as only conveying a trust power of management to the son, the estate vesting in the meantime in the grandchildren under the express devise to them, and not as creating a devise in trust to the will. It was said by Lord Langdale, in a leading case,¹ that "As a general rule, it has been laid down that when property is given absolutely to any person, and the same person is, by the giver, who has power to command, recommended, or entreated, or wished, to dispose of that property in favor of another, the recommendation, or entreaty, or wish, shall be held to create a trust: First, if the words are so used that, upon the whole, they ought to be construed as imperative; secondly, if the subject of the recommendation or wish be certain; and thirdly, if the objects or persons intended to have the benefit of the recommendation or wish, be also certain."² As will be seen, from the cases cited below,³ the earlier son, which would be void by statute. Post v. Hover, 33 N. Y. 593.

1. Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 172. See also Handley v. Wrightson, 60 Md. 198; Cockrill v. Armstrong, 31 Ark. 580; Bohon v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 378.

2. See Harrison v. Harrison, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 1; 44 Am. Dec. 365 and note, 372. As to expressions held imperative, see next note below, and cases there cited.

As to certainty of the subject-matter, see Pope v. Pope, 10 Sim. 1; Flint v. Hughes, 6 Beav. 342; Macnab v. Whitbread, 17 Beav. 299; Buggins v. Yates, 9 Mod. 122; Wynne v. Hawkins, 1 Bro. C. C. 179; Finden v. Stephens, 2 Ph. 142; Lechmere v. Lavie, 2 M. & K. 197; Parnall v. Parnall, 9 Ch. Div. 96; Mussoorie Bank v. Raynor, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 321; Lines v. Darden, 5 Fla. 51.

As to certainty in the objects or beneficiaries, see Harland v. Trigg, 1 Bro. C. C. 142; Moriarty v. Martin, 3 Ir. Ch. 31; Briggs v. Penny, 3 M. & G. 554; Reid v. Atkinson, 5 Ir. Eq. 373; Gregory v. Smith, 9 Hare 708; Shaw v. Lawless, 5 C. & F. 129; Sale v. Moore, 1 Sim. 534; First Presbyterian Soc. v. Bowen, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 389; McIntire Poor School v. Zanesville, etc., Canal Co., 9 Ohio 203. Compare Tolson v. Tolson, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 159; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.) 101; Loring v. Loring, 100 Mass. 340; Carson v. Carson, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 329.

Unless there is a certainty as to the parties who are to take, or what they are to take, no commendatory terms of a will, expressing a "wish," "will," "desire," or the like, are sufficient to create a trust. Lines v. Darden, 5 Fla. 51.

Where the objects of the trust, or the property which is to be the subject of the trust, are not certain and definite, or where a clear choice to act or not to act is given, or the prior dispositions import an absolute and uncontrollable ownership, a court of equity will not raise a trust from expressions importing recommendations, hope, confidence or desire. Harper v. Phelps, 21 Conn. 257.

Where a deed of trust provided that, upon the death of A, the trustees should hold one-half the premises granted to and for the use of B, his heirs and assigns forever, and the other one-half to and for the use of C, D and E, their heirs and assigns, subject to certain charges; and in case of the death of any of the persons named before that of the grantor, then such lapsed share to go to the lawful issue then living of such deceased person, or, if there was no such issue, to the right heirs of the grantor, it was held that the trust was void for uncertainty. Jarvis v. Babcock, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 139. See CHARITIES, vol. 3, p. 122.

3. The following expressions have been held sufficient to show an intention to create a trust: "Desire," Harding v. Glyn, 1 Atk. 469; Pushman v. Filliter, 3 Ves. 7; Vernon v. Vernon, Amb. 4; Cruwys v. Colman, 9 Ves. 319; Erickson v. Willard, 1 N. H. 217; Bonser v. Kirmear, 2 Giff. 195; Major v. Herndon, 78 Ky. 123; "wish and desire" or "wish and request," Liddard v. Liddard, 28 Beav. 266; Foley v. Parry, 5 Sim. 138; Godfrey v. Godfrey, 11 W. R. 554; Clowdsley v. Pelham, 1 Vern. 411; Cockrill v. Armstrong, 31 Ark. 580; Cook v. Ellington, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 371; McRee v. Means, 34 Ala. 349; Hooper v. Bradbury, 133 Mass. 303; "request," Eddy v. Harts-horne, 34 N. J. Eq. 419; "entreat," Prevost v. Clark, 2 Madd. 458; Taylor v. George, 2 Ves. & B. 378; Meredith v. Heneage, 1 Sim. 548; "hope," Harland v. Trigg, 1 Bro. C. C. 142; Paul v. Compton, 8 Ves. 375; "will," or "will and declare," Gray v. Gray, 11 Sr. Ch. 218; Eales v. England, Pr. Ch. 200; "in the belief," "in confidence,"

English and American cases carried the doctrine very far, and, as said by Vice Chancellor Hart, "The first case that construed words of recommendation into a command, made a will for the testator."¹ The tendency in recent years, both in England and the United States, has been to restrict the operation of the doctrine of precatory trusts, and the present rule is well stated in the following words:

"In order that a trust may arise from the use of precatory words, the court must be satisfied from the words themselves, taken in connection with all the other terms of the disposition, that the testator's intention to create an expressed trust was as full, complete, settled, and sure as though he had given the property to hold upon a trust declared in express terms in the ordinary manner."² or the like, Eade v. Eade, 5 Madd. 118; Cary v. Cary, 2 Sch. & Lef. 189; Wright v. Atkyns, 17 Ves. 225; Griffith v. Evans, 5 Beav. 241; Wood v. Cox, 1 Keen 317; Macnab v. Whitbread, 17 Beav. 299; Shovelton v. Shovelton, 32 Beav. 143; Irvine v. Sullivan, L. R., 8 Eq. 673; Barnes v. Grant, 26 L. J. Ch. 92; Bull v. Bull, 8 Conn. 47; 20 Am. Dec. 86; Reid v. Blackstone, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 363; Knox v. Knox 59 Wis. 172; 48 Am. Rep. 487; Dresser v. Dresser, 46 Me. 48; "recommend," Tibbits v. Tibbits, 19 Ves. 656; Malim v. Barker, 3 Ves. 150; Hart v. Tribe, 18 Beav. 215; and various other expressions of like import, Parsons v. Barker, 18 Ves. 476; Brown v. Higgs, 4 Ves. 708; Macey v. Shurmer, 1 Atk. 389; Hunter v. Stembridge, 12 Ga. 192; Lucas v. Lockhart, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 466; 48 Am. Dec. 766; Warner v. Bates, 98 Mass. 274; Negroes Chase v. Plummer, 17 Md. 165; Harrison v. Harrison, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 1; 44 Am. Dec. 365 and note, 373; Cockrill v. Armstrong, 31 Ark. 580; Bohon v. Barrett, 79 Ky. 378.

1. Sale v. Moore, 1 Sim. 540.

2. 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jur., § 1016; Stead v. Mellor, 5 Ch. Div. 225; Lambe v. Eames, L. R., 17 Eq. 320; In re Hutchinson, 8 Ch. Div. 540.

In Corby v. Corby, 85 Mo. 371, it was held that where full discretion is clearly given to the legatee, the use of precatory words in a will, will not create a trust. See also Wilde v. Smith, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 93.

In Knox v. Knox, 59 Wis. 172; 48 Am. Rep. 487, the court, by Taylor, J., quoted the rule stated by Jarman, as follows: "Precatory words used in a will—that is, words of recommendation, entreaty, request, wish or expectation—addressed to the devisee or legatee, may be sufficient to create a trust in favor of the person or persons in whose favor such expressions are used." And further quoted, with approval, the following from Redfield on Wills: "In order to determine whether precatory words in a will create a binding trust, 'the real question always is whether the wish, desire, or recommendation expressed by the testator is meant to govern the conduct of the party to whom it is addressed, or whether it is merely an indication of that which he thinks would be a reasonable exercise of the discretion of the party, leaving it, however, to the party to exercise his own discretion.'" Later in the opinion, the court quotes from Lord Loughborough: "When a person recommends to another who is independent of him, there is nothing imperative; but if he recommends that to be done by a person whom he has a right to order to do it, the mode is only civility." Adding: "While, on the one hand, we are inclined not to go to the extent of the older cases in England and in this country, in establishing trusts upon the strength of precatory words used by a testator in his will, on the other, we are not disposed to repudiate the whole doctrine of such trusts. We are disposed to apply the doctrine only in cases where it is clear that, on the whole, it was the intention of the testator to create such trust by the use of such words, and where the words used show with reasonable certainty that the testator intended to control the legatee or devisee in the use and control of the property devised or bequeathed."

As will be seen, however, from the authorities cited below,¹ each case must be determined according to its own peculiar features and circumstances. It is difficult, therefore, to formulate any general rule upon the subject. The intention of the testator is the main

1. Cases in Which Trusts Were Held to Have Been Created.—Where a testator gave all his real and personal estate to his wife, her heirs and assigns forever, "having full confidence in my said wife, and hereby request that at her death she will divide equally between my sons and daughters all the proceeds of my said property, real and personal, hereby bequeathed." Knox v. Knox, 59 Wis. 172; 48 Am. Rep. 487. Where a testator bequeathed all his property to his wife, with a desire that she should manage and control it for the benefit of herself and their children. Major v. Herndon, 78 Ky. 123. See also Walker v. Quigg, 6 Watts (Pa.) 87; 31 Am. Dec. 452.

In a case recently decided by the Supreme Court of the United States, a testator gave his wife all of his property, amounting to $1,000,000, saying, "I recommend to her the care and protection of my mother and sister, and request her to make such gift and provision for them as in her judgment will be best." He made his wife executrix, and died the day after making his will. The sister was dependent on the mother for support, and the mother, who was old and in feeble health, had only $15,000. It was held that the property was charged with a trust for a suitable provision, to be fixed and secured by the court. Colton v. Colton, 127 U. S. 300.

So, where a testatrix devised property to her husband absolutely, "in the full faith" that he would properly provide for the children of her deceased brother. Noe v. Kern, 93 Mo. 367; 3 Am. St. Rep. 544. Contra, Matter of Havens 6 Dem. (N. Y.) 456; Hopkins v. Glunt, 111 Pa. St. 287; In re Adams, 27 Ch. Div. 394.

So, where the testator provided that he wished his wife to pay certain sums to other persons, if she found it convenient, it was held that she could not arbitrarily refuse to do so. Phillips v. Phillips, 112 N. Y. 197; 8 Am. St. Rep. 737. See also Bliven v. Seymour, 88 N. Y. 469. Compare Warner v. Bates, 98 Mass. 277; Lawrence v. Cooke, 104 N. Y. 632.

So, where the decedent bequeathed to his brother one thousand dollars, and to the decedent's widow the bulk of the property, which was worth about seventy thousand dollars, and made the widow executrix, declaring in the will "and having and reposing implicit confidence in the goodness and kindness of my dear wife, I rely upon her to make all needful provision for the future wants of my brother," it was held that the estate was chargeable with a trust in the brother's favor to the extent of one thousand dollars per annum. Blanchard v. Chapman, 22 Ill. App. 341. See also Deibert's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 296. But compare Foose v. Whitmore, 82 N. Y. 405; 37 Am. Dec. 572; Wood v. Seward, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 271.

So, where a testator, by one clause in his will, gave the residue of his estate to A and her heirs, and by a succeeding clause left his granddaughter under A's guardianship, enjoining her to make such provisions for the child at such time and in such a manner as, in her judgment, might be expedient and conducive to the welfare of the grandchild, and as her sense of christian duty and justice might dictate, it was held that the estate devised was impressed with a trust in favor of the grandchild. Lawrence v. Cooke, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 126.

Cases in Which Trusts Were Held Not to Have Been Created.—Where the testator said, in his will, "I desire that the land and other property remaining shall continue in the possession of my beloved wife L. during her life, believing she will make use of it to the best advantage for the benefit of our children, as well as her own comfort." McCreary v. Burns, 17 S. Car. 45. Where the will provided: "I give and bequeath to my said wife, Ellen M. Colton, all my estate, real and personal, of which I shall die seised, or possessed, or entitled to. I recommend to her the care and protection of my mother and sister, and request her to make such gift and provision for them, as in her judgment will be best." Colton v. Colton, 21 Fed. Rep. 594. Where a testator gave to his widow the whole of his property, "feeling confident that she will act justly to our children when no longer required by her." Mussoorie Bank v. Raynor, L. R., 7 App. Cas. 321 (Privy Council). Where a testator thing; but how is that to be determined. In the first place, the entire will should be considered in determining the intention, and the precatory words should not only be of such a character as to indicate that the testator intended a trust to be created, but they must also be consistent with the other provisions of the will—that is, they must not be repugnant to positive provisions by which the same property is devised or bequeathed absolutely or without limitation.¹ Secondly, the words should be given their natural said: "I do give and bequeath all my property to my beloved wife, only requesting her at the close of her life to make such disposition of the same among my children and grandchildren, as shall seem to her good." Foose v. Whitmore, 82 N. Y. 405; 37 Am. Rep. 572.

So, where a testator devised property to his brother, "to be held, used, and enjoyed by him, his heirs, administrators, executors, and assigns forever, with the hope and trust, however, that he will not diminish the same to a greater extent than may be necessary for his comfortable support and maintenance, and that, at his death, the same, or so much thereof as he shall not have disposed of by device or sale," should descend to the testator's nieces, it was held that no trust was created, either executory or otherwise. Howard v. Carusi, 109 U. S. 725.

So, in a recent case in England, where the testator gave all his real and personal estate "unto the absolute use" of his wife, her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, "in full confidence" that she "would do what was right" as to the disposal thereof, between his children, either in her lifetime or by will after her decease, it was held that the widow took an absolute interest in the property, free from any trust in favor of the children. In re Adams, 27 Ch. Div. 394.

Where a testator, by a clause in his will, which, standing alone, gave to his wife the absolute and unrestrained ownership of the property, and, by a subsequent clause, requested that she should divide it among their daughters, at her death, share and share alike, it was held that no trust was created in favor of the daughters. Hopkins v. Grunt, 111 Pa. St. 287. So, where a will provided that the devisee "may leave the same to her children." McIntyre v. McIntyre, 123 Pa. St. 329; 10 Am. St. Rep. 529.

A testator made provision for a society, but provided that, if it should prove ineffective, the property was to go to certain persons "absolutely and in fee;" his bequest to such persons being "in the confident belief" that they would apply the property in accordance with his "wishes; but it is intended to be unconditional and free from any legal trust or obligation qualifying their absolute title." It was held that no trust was created. Matter of Havens, 6 Dem. (N. Y.) 456. See also Willets v. Willets, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 401.

In Rose v. Porter, 141 Mass. 309, a testator, by his will, gave to his two youngest sons all his estate, real or personal, in fee simple. The will then proceeded as follows: "In making this disposition of my property, I assume that my oldest son will understand and appreciate my reasons for giving whatever property I may have had at my disposal to his younger brothers; and that they, on their part, will not fail to do for him and his family all that, under the circumstances, the truest fraternal regard may require them to do." It was held that the will did not create a trust for the benefit of the testator's oldest son and his family, and that the estate passed to the devisees in fee simple.

After a bequest in trust to A and B, to be by them expended in securing the passage of laws granting women the right to vote, had been decreed void as not being a charity, a daughter of the testator bequeathed the residue of her estate (being about the same amount she had received from her father's estate) to A and B "as their absolute property," and added: "I request said A and B to use such fund thus given, to further what is called the Woman's Rights Cause, but neither of them is under any legal responsibility to anyone or any court to do so." It was held that this was a valid bequest, and that no trust was created. Bacon v. Ransom, 139 Mass. 117.

1. See Knott v. Cottee, 2 Ph. 192; and ordinary meaning, unless there is something to show that they were intended to be taken in a different sense.¹ In the third place, discretionary expressions which leave the application of the property devised or bequeathed to the caprice or unlimited discretion of the devisee, will not, ordinarily, be sufficient to create a trust;² but the mere fact that the method of its application, or the selection of the object out of a certain class, is left to his discretion, will not of itself be sufficient to defeat a trust clearly intended to be created.³ And, finally, it may be said that, while uncertainty in the subject or object of the devise is a matter to be considered adversely to the trust, such uncertainty will not necessarily be conclusive proof that no trust was intended to be created, and if there is sufficient to enable the courts to determine and carry out the intention of the testator they will do so.

6. Consideration.—The rule that the form of the instrument by which a trust is sought to be created, is immaterial, and that no technical words are necessary, applies with peculiar force where there is a valuable consideration for the trust. In such a case a court of equity will enforce it, even if it is not perfectly created or executed.⁴

In re Adams, 27 Ch. Div. 394; Green v. Marsden, 1 Drew. 646; Meredith v. Heneage, 1 Sim. 543; Bardswell v. Bardswell, 9 Sim. 319; Webb v. Wools, 2 Sim. N. S. 267; Second Reformed Presbyterian Church v. Disbrow, 52 Pa. St. 219; Brunson v. Hunter, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 490; Whipple v. Adams, 1 Met. (Mass.) 444; Barrett v. Marsh, 126 Mass. 213; Van Duyne v. Van Duyne, 14 N. J. Eq. 397; Harper v. Phelps, 21 Conn. 257; Negroes Chase v. Plummer, 17 Md. 165; Mills v. Newberry, 112 Ill. 135; 54 Am. Rep. 213.

1. Ellis v. Ellis, 15 Ala. 296; 50 Am. Dec. 132.

2. Brook v. Brook, 3 Sm. & Gif. 280; Bull v. Hardy, 1 Ves. Jr. 270; Paul v. Compton, 8 Ves. 380; Howorth v. Dewell, 29 Beav. 18; Meggison v. Moore, 2 Ves. Jr. 630; Hill v. Bishop, 1 Atk. 618; Lefroy v. Flood, 4 Ir. Ch. 1; Randall v. Randall, 135 Ill. 398; 25 Am. St. Rep. 373; Elliot v. Elliot, 117 Ind. 380; Lines v. Darden, 5 Fla. 51; Corby v. Corby, 85 Mo. 371; Colton v. Colton, 21 Fed. Rep. 595; Lawrence v. Cooke, 104 N. Y. 638; Harper v. Phelps, 21 Conn. 257. See also Olliffe v. Wells, 130 Mass. 221; Nichols v. Allen, 130 Mass. 211; 39 Am. Rep. 445.

3. See note to Hill on Trustees (4th Am. ed.) 73; Quinn v. Shields, 1 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 498; Walker v. Quigg, 6 Watts (Pa.) 87; 31 Am. Dec. 452; Erickson v. Willard, 1 N. H. 217.

"The Failure of the Tilden Trust," 5 Harv. L. Rev. 589. But see Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 29. The authorities for and against this proposition are collected in the note to Hesketh v. Murphy, 35 N. J. Eq. 23; and in 21 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 660-666. It is also supported by the following cases: Wells v. Doane, 3 Gray (Mass.) 201; First Universalist Soc. v. Fitch, 8 Gray (Mass.) 421; Garvey v. Garvey, 150 Mass. 185; Miller v. Teachout, 24 Ohio St. 525; American Tract Soc. v. Atwater, 30 Ohio St. 77; 27 Am. Rep. 422; De Bruler v. Ferguson, 54 Ind. 549; Lorings v. Marsh, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 337; Perin v. Carey, 24 How. (U. S.) 465; Pickering v. Shotwell, 10 Pa. St. 23; Witman v. Lex, 17 S. & R. (Pa.) 88; 17 Am. Dec. 644.

4. Baldwin v. Humphrey, 44 N. Y. 609; Wadsworth v. Wendell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 224; Livingston v. Livingston, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 537; Fellows v. Heermans, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 230; Pownal v. Taylor, 10 Leigh (Va.) 183; 34 Am. Dec. 725; Jones v. Obenchain, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 259; Benscotter v. Green, 60 Md. 327; Haskill v. Freeman, 1 Winst. Eq. (N. Car.) 34; Huntley v. Huntley, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 250; Garner v. Garner, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. Car.) 1. But compare Merrill v. Peaslee, 146 Mass. 460. See also Reilly v. Whipple, 2 S. Car. 277; Burnside v. Wayman, 49 Mo. 356. There must, how-

Where the trust is merely voluntary, not based on any valuable consideration, it may be enforced if perfectly created;¹ but if the ever, be sufficient to enable the court to determine the cestui que trust. Dillaye v. Greenough, 45 N. Y. 438; Read v. Williams (Supreme Ct.), 8 N. Y. Supp. 24; In re Foley's Will (Surr. Ct.), 10 N. Y. Supp. 12; Holland v. Alcock, 108 N. Y. 312; Owens v. Owens, 23 N. J. Eq. 60. Compare Sleeper v. Iselin, 62 Iowa 585; Boardman v. Willard, 73 Iowa 20.

What is Sufficient Consideration.—The personal convenience of the settlor is a good consideration for the execution of a deed of trust, both at common law and under New York Code Civil Proc., § 2463; Townsend v. Allen, 13 N. Y. Supp. 73; 59 Hun (N. Y.) 622.

By written agreement, plaintiff and his brother each conveyed $100,000, a portion of the trust fund in which each had an expectant interest, dependent upon the life estate of their mother therein, to the defendant company in trust, to be held on condition that, in case of the death of either brother, his survivor would be equally benefited by the conveyance. Afterwards their mother died, and according to its terms the original trust fund, upon her death, vested absolutely in the brothers. They drew up a ratification of their agreement, and, by the same instrument, expressly conveyed to the defendant company property worth $100,000 upon the trusts set forth in the agreement. It was held that the agreement, although not expressly worded in terms of mutuality, was mutual as between the brothers, the trust conveyed by one being the consideration for that which the other conveyed. Livingston v. New York Life Ins., etc., Co., 13 N. Y. Supp. 105; 59 Hun (N. Y.) 622. See also Teasdale v. Braithwaite, 4 Ch. Div. 87.

A having mortgage and judgment liens on B's land, agreed with the latter that, in case he purchased the property at a judicial sale about to take place, he would proceed to sell it and retain the proceeds until the amount of the judgment and costs, and all prior liens which he was to pay, had been received back by him, after which he would turn over to B the surplus and convey to him the land. It was held that the contract was founded on sufficient consideration, as A had exercised acts of ownership over the property before the sale, and because his promise was calculated to get B to relax his efforts to have the property sold at a high price, and thus prevent competition. Carter v. Gibson, 29 Neb. 324.

In a recent case, where A conveyed land to B, and, as part of the same transaction, the latter executed a writing declaring that he purchased the land for C, it was held that a valid express trust was created, though C gave no consideration, and that a sale by B to a stranger would be set aside as fraudulent. Titchenell v. Jackson, 26 W. Va. 460.

Marriage is a valuable consideration, and will support a trust. Lewis v. Madocks, 8 Ves. 150; Hale v. Lamb, 2 Eden 271; Simmons v. Edwards, 16 M. & W. 838; Wellesley v. Wellesley, 4 Myl. & C. 561; Lee v. Lee, 4 Ch. Div. 175; Gough v. Crane, 3 Md. Ch. 119; Clarke v. Lott, 11 Ill. 105. See also MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, vol. 14, p. 544.

A woman who had paid a consideration for land and received a deed, made a parol promise after the delivery of the deed, that she would carry out an agreement between her husband and the grantor, to the effect that she should convey or devise the land subject to a life estate in herself and her husband, to the wife and children of the grantor. This promise was held to be without consideration, and therefore no trust was created in favor of the grantor's wife and children. Blount v. Washington, 108 N. Car. 230.

1. Crawford's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 52; 100 Am. Dec. 609; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Tanner v. Skinner, 11 Bush (Ky.) 120; Massey v. Huntington, 118 Ill. 80; Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219; Neilson v. Blight, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 205; Cumberland v. Codrington, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 261; 8 Am. Dec. 492; Minturn v. Seymour, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 498; Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Van Cott v. Prentice, 104 N. Y. 45; Wright v. Miller, 8 N. Y. 10; 59 Am. Dec. 438; Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 300; 50 Am. Rep. 677; Penfield v. Thayer, 2 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 305; Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 261; Cox v. Sprigg, 6 Md. 274; Swan v. Frick, 34 Md. 141; Howard v. Wind- trust is not perfectly created, that is, if there is a mere voluntary agreement or expression of an intention to create a trust, it cannot be enforced under ordinary circumstances.¹

ham County Sav. Bank, 40 Vt. 597; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Lane v. Ewing, 31 Mo. 75; 77 Am. Dec. 632; Graham v. Lambert, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 595; Henson v. Kinnard, 3 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 371; Fogg v. Middleton, Riley Eq. (S. Car.) 193; Titchenell v. Jackson, 26 W. Va. 460; Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. St. 175; 47 Am. Dec. 505; Tolar v. Tolar, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 460; 18 Am. Dec. 598; Ex p. Pye, 18 Ves. 140; Thorpe v. Owens, 5 Beav. 224; Drosier v. Brereton, 15 Beav. 221; Steele v. Waller, 28 Beav. 466; Bridge v. Bridge, 16 Beav. 315; Stapleton v. Stapleton, 14 Sim. 186; Vanderberg v. Palmer, 4 Kay & J. 204; Searle v. Law, 15 Sim. 99; McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Hare 471; Paterson v. Murphy, 11 Hare 88; Gee v. Liddell, 35 Beav. 621; Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 656. Compare Borum v. King, 37 Ala. 606; Walker v. Crews, 73 Ala. 417; Lister v. Hodgson, L. R., 4 Eq. 30. If there are several trusts, some lawful and some not, the former will be upheld if they can be separated. Kennedy v. Hoy, 105 N. Y. 134; Culross v. Gibbons, 130 N. Y. 447. Whether a trust is perfectly created or not, is generally a question of fact. Brabrook v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 228; 6 Am. Rep. 222; Jones v. Lock, L. R., 1 Ch. 25; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 430; Robinson v. Robinson, 45 Ark. 481.

1. Lloyd v. Brooks, 34 Md. 33; Gardner v. Merritt, 32 Md. 78; 3 Am. Rep. 115; Swan v. Frick, 34 Md. 141; Banks v. Mays, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 435; Bibb v. Smith, 1 Dana (Ky.) 580; Reed v. Vannorsdale, 2 Leigh (Va.) 560; Pinckard v. Pinckard, 23 Ala. 649; Crompton v. Vasser, 19 Ala. 259; Forward v. Armstead, 12 Ala. 124; Minturn v. Seymour, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 498; Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258; Acker v. Phoenix, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 305; Caldwell v. Williams, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 175; Dawson v. Dawson, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 93; 18 Am. Dec. 573; Laury v. McGee, 3 Head (Tenn.) 269; Dillwyn v. Llewellyn, 4 De G. F. & J. 517; Disher v. Disher, 1 P. Wms. 204; Dillon v. Coffin, 4 Myl. & C. 647; Lister v. Hodgson, L. R., 4 Eq. 30; Jones v. Lock, L. R., 1 Ch. 25; Bayley v. Boulcott, 4 Russ. 345; Cotteen v. Missing, 1 Madd. 176; Lanterman v. Abernathy, 47 Ill. 437; Clarke v. Lott, 11 Ill. 105; Read v. Robinson, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 331. See also "The Formation and Validity of Voluntary Trusts," 18 Am. L. Rev. 379.

This subject is well treated by Mr. Underhill, an English author, and, as his book is not always found in American libraries, we quote his statement of the doctrine at full length: "If the settlor has transferred, or done all in his power to transfer, his entire interest in the trust property, legal or equitable, to a trustee, or has explicitly declared himself a trustee of it, or has, by his acts, afforded evidence that he considered himself to be a trustee of it—as distinguished from evidence that he contemplated the future creation of a trust, or that he erroneously considered that he had made an actual gift—it will be enforced at the suit of any person interested, even if purely voluntary. (Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 662; Milroy v. Lord, 4 De G. F. & J. 264; Richards v. Delbridge, L. R., 18 Eq. 11; Ex p. Pye, 18 Ves. 140; Dipple v. Corles, 11 Hare 184; Antrobus v. Smith, 12 Ves. 47; In re Angibau, 15 Ch. Div. 228; In re Anstis, 31 Ch. Div. 606; Green v. Paterson, 32 Ch. Div. 95; In re Richards, 36 Ch. Div. 541; Harding v. Harding, 34 W. R. 775.) But if the settlor has not done any of the aforesaid acts, and has merely undertaken, or even covenanted, to create a trust, or otherwise manifested an incomplete intention to do so, or to confer a benefit, the trust will only be enforced if valuable consideration was given to induce the settlor to create it, and if some person privy to that consideration seeks to have it enforced. (Gale v. Gale, 6 Ch. Div. 144; Colyear v. Mulgrave, 2 Keen 81; Davenport v. Bishopp, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 451; Tasker v. Small, 3 Myl. & C. 69.) In the latter case it will be enforced in favor of all the beneficiaries, and not merely of persons privy to the consideration; and the settlor, or his successors in title (other than purchasers for value without notice), will be regarded as passive trustees, charged with the duty of transferring the trust property to active trustees when ap-

7. Statute of Frauds.—By section seven of the Statute of Frauds, which is in force in most of the states,¹ it is provided that all declarations of trust in real estate "shall be manifested and proved by some writing signed by the party who is enabled by law to declare such trust, or by his last will in writing." It is also provided by the statute that all grants or assignments of any trust shall likewise be in writing.² This statute is construed as referring merely to the evidence and not to the creation or declaration of the trust itself.³ And the courts have held that statutes containing analogous, or even stronger, provisions should be construed in the same manner.⁴ The effect of this rule is that trusts in pointed. (Davenport v. Bishopp, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 451; Dodkin v. Brunt, L. R., 6 Eq. 580; Lee v. Lee, 4 Ch. Div. 175; In re Michell, 6 Ch. Div. 618; Robson v. Flight, 4 De G. J. & S. 608.) Beneficiaries, under a trust created by will, are in the same position as parties to the consideration under a trust based on valuable consideration. Persons privy to valuable consideration comprise: 1. The person by, or at, whose request it is given. (See per Wilde, C. J., Blandy v. Deburgh, 6 C. B. 634; 60 E. C. L. 663; Tweddle v. Atkinson, 1 B. & S. 393; 101 E. C. L. 392.) 2. The children of a marriage, where that marriage is itself the consideration. (Osgood v. Strode, 2 P. Wms. 245; Gale v. Gale, 6 Ch. Div. 144.) 3. The children of a widow who, on a second marriage, makes or procures a trust in their favor. (Gale v. Gale, 6 Ch. Div. 144; Price v. Jenkins, 5 Ch. Div. 619; Newstead v. Searles, 1 Atk. 265; Clarke v. Wright, 6 H. & N. 849; Mackie v. Herbertson, 9 App. Cas. 337.) 4. Trustees for any of the foregoing. (See per Lindley, L. J., In re Anstis, 31 Ch. Div. 606.) Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 43-45.

It has been held in New York by a divided court, that, under 2 Rev. St., p. 134, § 67, an undelivered, but recorded, instrument, by which the owner of land declares that it is to be charged with the maintenance of another, creates a valid trust, though there is no consideration for it. McArthur v. Gordon, 126 N. Y. 597.

1. 1 Stimson's Am. Statute Law, § 1710.

It is not in force in Ohio, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, and Virginia, and in those states trusts in land can be proved by parol evidence. Harvey v. Gardner, 41 Ohio St. 642; Fay v. Fay, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 296;

Link v. Link, 90 N. Car. 235; Wright v. Cain, 93 N. Car. 301; Thompson v. Thompson, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 100; Haywood v. Ensley, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 460; Wilburn v. Spofford, 4 Sneed (Tenn.) 705; Pierce v. Fort, 60 Tex. 464; Clark v. Haney, 62 Tex. 511; 50 Am. Rep. 536; Miller v. Thatcher, 9 Tex. 482; 40 Am. Dec. 172; Bank of U. S. v. Carrington, 7 Leigh (Va.) 576; Walraven v. Lock, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 549. See also Guest v. Reeves, 38 Cal. 457; Guest v. Guest, 74 Tex. 664; Cordova v. Lee (Tex. 1890), 14 S. W. Rep. 208; Holland v. Farthing, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 155.

2. 29 Car. II, ch. 3, §§ 7, 8, 9. See Appendix to Browne on Statute of Frauds; Tierney v. Wood, 19 Beav. 330; Donohoe v. Conrahy, 2 Jones & L. 688.

3. Smith v. Matthews, 3 De G. F. & J. 139; Gardner v. Rowe, 5 Russ. 258; Ambrose v. Ambrose, 1 P. Wms. 322; Randall v. Morgan, 12 Ves. 74; Moran v. Hays, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 339; Second Unitarian Soc. v. Woodbury, 14 Me. 281; Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; Reid v. Reid, 12 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 213; Safford v. Rantoul, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 233; Gibson v. Foote, 40 Miss. 788; Johnson v. Ronald, 4 Munf. (Va.) 77; Hutchinson v. Tindall, 3 N. J. Eq. 357; Cornelius v. Smith, 55 Mo. 528.

A trust in lands—other than a resulting trust—may be declared either before or after the conveyance to the trustee, but it must be manifested in writing. Jackson v. Moore, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 706.

4. "It is the settled doctrine, in interpreting this legislation," says Mr. Pomeroy, "that a trust of land need not be created nor declared by a writing; it need only be manifested and proved by some writing duly signed or land need not be created and declared in writing,¹ but they must be manifested or proved by some writing, and cannot, therefore, be established by parol evidence.² But the statute will not be subscribed by the proper party; and, as a consequence, this written evidence may be a separate instrument either simultaneous with, or subsequent to, the deed of conveyance, and may be very informal." 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1006. See also Perry on Trusts, § 81; Pinnock v. Clough, 16 Vt. 508; 42 Am. Dec. 521; Pratt v. Ayer, 2 Chand. (Wis.) 265; Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story (U. S.) 294; Sheet's Estate, 52 Pa. St. 257; Blodgett v. Hildreth, 103 Mass. 486; Cornelius v. Smith, 55 Mo. 528.

1. There are many cases in which it is said in general terms that a trust in land cannot be created by parol, but upon examination it will be found in most, if not all, of such cases, that no written evidence was offered to prove the trust, and what the court really meant was that it could not be established by parol evidence. Practically, this distinction would make no difference in many cases, but in others it might be of the greatest importance, because trusts may often be established under the rule above stated by written evidence, which would be insufficient as an express declaration and creation of the trust. The distinction is well established. Foster v. Hale, 3 Ves. 696; Denton v. Davies, 18 Ves. 503; Davies v. Otty, 33 Beav. 540; Lane v. Ewing, 31 Mo. 75; 77 Am. Dec. 636; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Sime v. Howard, 4 Nev. 473; Pinney v. Fellows, 15 Vt. 525; McVay v. McVay, 43 N. J. Eq. 47.

"It is a principle well settled in equity, that a trust need not be created in writing. It is sufficient if it is proved in writing, under the hand of the party to be charged." First Unitarian Soc. v. Woodbury, 14 Me. 281; Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; Hertle v. McDonald, 2 Md. Ch. 128; Wright v. King, Harr. (Mich.) 12; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Riggs v. Swann, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 118; Rutledge v. Smith, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 119; Brown v. Brown, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 363.

It does not follow because a trust is created by a parol contract that it may not be enforced in equity. If it is afterwards admitted, and if the statute is not relied on as a defense, a specific performance will be decreed. Flag v. Mann, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 486.

So, under the Maine statute, an express trust need not be created by a writing; if it be subsequently declared by a writing signed by the party charged with the trust, it is sufficient. McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500. And a distinct written statement of a trust in lands, its subject and nature, the parties and their relation to it and each other, subscribed by the party to be charged therewith, is sufficient under said statute, whether addressed to, or deposited with, the cestui que trust, or not, or whether intended, when made, to be evidence of the trust, or not. Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180. That statute provides that all express trusts concerning lands must be created or declared by some writing, signed by the party or his attorney, and it is held that the phrase "some writing" means any writing, however informal, from which the existence and terms of the trust can be understood, whether intended by the signer as such, or not; and that letters, memoranda, or other writing of a party, delivered or left by him, and found among his papers, are sufficient. McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500. It was also held in the case last cited that where one of the papers was signed, it was sufficient if the others were so referred to therein as to be deemed parts of one and the same transaction. See also Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67.

2. Columbus, etc., R. Co. v. Braden, 110 Ind. 558; Mescall v. Tully, 91 Ind. 96; Thomas v. Merry, 113 Ind. 83; Pearson v. Pearson, 125 Ind. 341; Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310; Todd v. Munson, 53 Conn. 579; Gerry v. Stimson, 60 Me. 186; Hall v. Congdon, 55 N. H. 104; Stevenson v. Crapnell, 114 Ill. 19; Phillips v. South Park Com'rs, 119 Ill. 626; Green v. Cates, 73 Mo. 115; Brock v. Brock, 90 Ala. 86; Bibb v. Hunter, 79 Ala. 351; White v. Farley, 81 Ala. 563; Patton v. Beecher, 62 Ala. 579; Parker v. Bodley, 4 Bibb (Ky.) 102; Hovey v. Holcomb, 11 Ill. 660; Withers v. Withers, Ambl. 152; Barr v. O'Donnell, 76 Cal. 469; 9 Am. St. Rep. 242; Feeney v. Howard, 79 Cal. 525; 12 Am. St. Rep. 162; Hain v. Robinson, 72 Iowa 735; Andrews v.

Concannore, 76 Iowa 251; Moore v. Jordan, 65 Miss. 229; 7 Am. St. Rep. 641; McVay v. McVay, 43 N. J. Eq. 47; Eaton v. Eaton, 35 N. J. L. 290; Salisbury v. Clark, 61 Vt. 453; Wolford v. Farnham, 44 Minn. 159; James v. Smith, 63 L. T. 524.

In an action to enforce a trust in land, the plaintiff who has parted with nothing, cannot show by parol that a grantor conveying land by a deed absolute, had an oral agreement with the grantee that the latter should have a life estate in the land, and hold the remainder in trust for the plaintiff. Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310. See also Wright v. Moody, 116 Ind. 175; Pearson v. Pearson, 125 Ind. 341.

An oral agreement between a husband and wife that land conveyed to the latter by her husband should be held in trust for their children, will not be enforced under the Massachusetts Pub. Stat., ch. 141, § 1, providing that no trust pertaining to lands, save such as result by implication of law, shall be created, except by instruments in writing signed by the party declaring the trust. Moran v. Somes, 154 Mass. 200.

Where a husband purchases land, paying for it with his own money, and takes the title in his wife's name, evidence is not admissible of a parol agreement between them by which an express trust in the land of which he is beneficiary is created. Montgomery v. Craig, 128 Ind. 48.

A trust is not created by parol agreement to reconvey land, especially where the consideration paid is its full value at the time of the conveyance. Harper v. Harper, 5 Bush (Ky.) 177. See also, to the same effect, Daily v. Kinsler, 31 Neb. 340; Gee v. Thraillkill, 45 Kan. 173; Collar v. Collar, 86 Mich. 507; Dover v. Rhea, 108 N. Car. 88.

One purchasing land at a sheriff's sale in his own name and with his own money, will not, in the absence of fraud, be decreed to hold it as a trustee, merely upon allegations of a verbal agreement by him to hold it for the benefit of the execution debtor. Minot v. Mitchell, 30 Ind. 228; 75 Am. Dec. 685. See also McCall's Appeal (Pa. 1887), 11 Atl. Rep. 206.

So, where one buying land at an execution sale made a verbal agreement with the owner that he should have a right to redeem within a certain period, no consideration being paid for the promise, it was held that the contract was within the Statute of Frauds and no trust resulted. Salisbury v. Black, 119 Pa. St. 200. See also Wood v. Mulock, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 70; Nesbitt v. Cavender, 30 S. Car. 33.

Land conveyed by a son to his mother under an oral agreement by which she is to hold it for life, and then divide it at her death between the son and his sisters, becomes the absolute property of the mother, such agreement being void under the Illinois Statute of Frauds. Champlin v. Champlin, 136 Ill. 309.

In Gee v. Thraillkill, 45 Kan. 173, where the owner of land conveyed it in fee simple by a warranty deed absolute upon its face, upon a consideration declared to be $1,500, but that no actual consideration except an understanding in parol between the parties with the grantee to sell or mortgage the land to obtain funds for the grantor, and reconvey to the grantor, at his pleasure, any part of the land remaining in the grantee's hands, it was held that the parol trust with respect to such land was invalid under the Kansas law, and the deed of conveyance absolute and valid.

A mere verbal agreement to purchase land for another, where the purchaser uses his own name and credit, cannot be enforced, and a trust does not result. Fowke v. Slaughter, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 56.

So, where a debtor, to prevent his estate from being attached by his creditors, conveyed it to his father without consideration, and immediately afterwards, at the verbal request of some of his brothers, and with his father's knowledge, but without his consent, agreed that it should be held in trust for one of the brothers, who was a creditor of his, it was held to create no trust which could be enforced against the father, or against his heirs after his death. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 14 Gray (Mass.) 277.

And where a testator directed that certain property should be sold by his executors before any distribution of his estate had been made, and the proceeds invested according to instructions given them, for the fulfillment of which they were to be accountable to God alone, and further declared that he had made a secret bequest to his son J., which the executors should give him to understand, according to instructions, when they deemed convenient, it was held that no trust was created in favor of J., so as to enable his permitted to so operate as to effectuate a fraud.¹ And the stat-

creditors to enforce any claim against it. Sparks v. De La Guerra, 18 Cal. 676.

So, it has been held that a promise made by heirs at law to convey property, in accordance with their declarations to a dying brother, was not sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Frauds, even though such promise was actually coupled with comforting assurances to him and remonstrances by which his desire to make a will might have been influenced, no evidence of fraud being adduced in the case. Bedillian v. Seaton, 3 Wall. Jr. (U. S.) 279. Compare McLellan v. McLean, 2 Head (Tenn.) 684.

Where a trust deed is once delivered, its effect cannot be impaired by evidence of oral reservations and conditions. Wallace v. Berdell, 97 N. Y. 13. And where a deed is placed in the hands of a grantee upon a verbal agreement that in certain contingencies it shall be returned to the grantor and be of no effect, an expressed trust arises, and not being in writing signed by the party declaring it, is void, under the Illinois Rev. Stat., ch. 59, § 9. Stevenson v. Crapnell, 114 Ill. 19.

On the other hand, where the owner of land and one intending to purchase it at a judicial sale, agrees that the title, when acquired by such purchase, shall be held in trust for the payment of the judgment and mortgaged liens thereon, and the remainder be reconveyed to the debtor, and in pursuance of such contract the purchaser acquires the title, it will be sufficient to create a trust under a statute providing that no trust in land shall be created except by the operation of law, or deed in writing subscribed by the party creating it. Carter v. Gibson, 29 Neb. 324.

So, where a vendee is put in possession and pays a portion of the purchase-money, but, being unable to pay the balance, procures the money from another, to whom the land is conveyed by the vendor on a verbal agreement that it shall be conveyed to the vendee, upon the payment of the sum advanced, the agreement can be enforced notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds. Spies v. Price, 91 Ala. 166.

And it has been held that, where an attorney, employed to enforce a judgment against certain property, creates an outstanding title under a parol agreement to hold it for his client, the trust will be enforced, and he must account for all the profits made, after deducting the amount he was to pay for the title and reasonable attorney's fees. Hughes v. Willson, 128 Ind. 491.

Where an attempt is made to enforce a trust in lands, although it must be manifested by writing duly signed, it is competent, after the trust has been terminated by the trustee conveying the property to the beneficiaries, to prove the trust by parol evidence as against creditors of the trustee alleging that such conveyance was fraudulent as to them. Silvers v. Potter, 48 N. J. Eq. 539.

So, where land held under a parol declaration of trust has been sold in execution of the trust, and the declaration is repeated after the sale, the Statute of Frauds has no application. Hess' Appeal, 112 Pa. St. 168.

An interesting case was recently decided in the supreme court of Connecticut. The plaintiff accumulated several thousand dollars by working out, and in 1882 wrote to her brother, who was in Ireland, in regard to purchasing a home there in which they should live together with their insane sister. A lot was purchased and a house built upon it, the entire expenses being borne by the plaintiff, the defendant, her brother, contributing nothing except to supervise the building of the house. The property was conveyed to them jointly. Afterward, differences having arisen between them, her brother threatened to sell or mortgage his interest, and in an action to declare the brother's holding to be in trust for the plaintiff, it was held that it was error for the court to refuse to admit testimony offered by the plaintiff, to show that it was expressly agreed between them that the title taken was to be in trust for her. Ward v. Ward, 59 Conn. 158. See also, for other instances of the admission of parol evidence, Hudson v. White, 17 R. I. 519; Bitely v. Bitely, 85 Mich. 227; Ragsdale v. Ragsdale, 68 Miss. 92; 28 Am. St. Rep. 256.

But even where parol evidence is admissible to establish a trust, it must be clear and satisfactory. Trout v. Trout, 44 Iowa 471; Barkley v. Lane, 6 Bush (Ky.) 587; Rogers v. Rogers, 87 Mo. 257; Lingenfelter v. Richey, 62 Pa. St. 128; Collier v. Collier, 30 Ind. 32; Mercer v. Stark, 1 Smed. & M. Ch. (Miss.) 479.

1. McCormick v. Grogan, L. R., 4 H.

ute has no application to resulting or constructive trusts arising by operation of law.¹ So, even where it might otherwise defeat the trust it may be waived by the failure to plead it.²

The written evidence required by the statute may come from the grantor or from the trustee, but not from the cestui que trust.³ "The grantor may declare the trust in the will or the deed by which the land is conveyed or devised, or in an instrument separate and distinct from the conveyance; or he may declare himself a trustee and that he holds the land in trust, without conveying the legal title."⁴ When the trust is not created by the grantor or testator in the instrument by which he conveys or devises the land, it does not necessarily follow that no trust can be established, for it may be evidenced by a writing executed by the person to whom the legal title is conveyed.⁵ Thus, letters,⁶ receipts,⁷ and

L. 82, per Lord Westbury; Strickland v. Aldridge, 9 Ves. 219; Haight v. Kaye, L. R., 7 Ch. 469; Booth v. Turle, L. R., 16 Eq. 182; Robbins v. Robbins, 89 N. Y. 256; Bork v. Martin, 132 N. Y. 280; Barrell v. Hanrick, 42 Ala. 60; Gilpatrick v. Glidden, 81 Me. 137; Catalani v. Catalani, 124 Ind. 54. See also Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, pp. 737, 738.

1. Kelly v. Mills, 41 Miss. 267; Cloud v. Ivie, 28 Mo. 578; Farrington v. Barr, 36 N. H. 86; Jackson v. Matsdorf, 11 Johns. (N. Y.) 91; 6 Am. Dec. 355; Malin v. Malin, 1 Wend. (N. Y.) 625; Slaymaker v. St. John, 5 Watts. (Pa.) 27; Gruhn v. Richardson, 128 Ill. 178.

The Statute of Frauds has no application to trusts created by operation of law alone, which may be established by parol. Caple v. McCollum, 27 Ala. 461; Cook v. Kennerly, 12 Ala. 42; McGuire v. Ramsey, 9 Ark. 518; Dean v. Dear, 6 Conn. 285; Peabody v. Tarbell, 2 Cush. (Mass.) 226; Hanff v. Howard, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 440; James v. Fulcrod, 5 Tex. 512; 55 Am. Dec. 743; Leakey v. Gunter, 25 Tex. 400. See IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 1.

2. Carpenter v. Davis, 72 Ill. 14; Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122.

3. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1007.

4. 2 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1007.

5. See cases cited above in which declarations of trust have been held sufficient, and authorities cited in the following notes.

6. Thus, where one acquires title to land in trust for another, and writes him a letter showing clearly that he holds the land in trust, it will be sufficient to manifest the trust as required by the statute. Moore v. Pickett, 62 Ill.

158. In this case it was also held that, where the letter fails to describe the land, it might be shown by the surrounding facts and circumstances that the land in dispute was referred to. Compare Taft v. Dimond, 16 R. I. 584.

So, where the plaintiffs in a suit in ejectment claimed as heirs of their father, who purchased the land at a foreclosure sale, taking the title in his own name, and the defendant alleged that the purchase was made for her benefit and with her funds, and introduced evidence of declarations by the plaintiffs' father to that effect, a letter in the defendant's possession, written by the father of the plaintiffs just before the sale, giving permission for his name to be used in making the purchase, was held admissible in connection with the declarations on the question whether or not the defendant had furnished the purchase-money. Behm v. Molly, 133 Pa. St. 614.

See also De Laurencel v. De Boom, 48 Cal. 581; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Union Mut. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 95 Ill. 267; 35 Am. Rep. 166; Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Hamer v. Sidway, 124 N. Y. 538; 21 Am. St. Rep. 693; Newkirk v. Place, 47 N. J. Eq. 477.

The trustee may incidentally recognize or declare it in the course of a correspondence, without any instrument expressly made for the purpose of acknowledging the trust. Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Johnson v. Deloney, 35 Tex. 42. Compare Phelps v. Seely, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 573.

7. Robert's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 407; Boykin v. Pace, 64 Ala. 68; Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180; Rogers Locomotive, etc., Works v. Kelly, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 399.

memoranda,¹ signed by the trustee, may be sufficient to establish the trust;² but the objects and nature of the trust must be shown by such documents with sufficient certainty, and so must their connection with the trust property appear.³ It seems that it is not necessary, however, where the terms of the trust are gathered from several papers, that all of them should be signed, provided they are part of the same transaction and are referred to and identified by the paper that is signed in such a manner as to become part thereof.⁴

1. Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 495; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67.

Thus, in a recent case, A, being indebted to B, conveyed his land to him by an absolute deed, and B, at the same time, promised orally to convey or pay to A any surplus that might remain of the estate or its proceeds, after the discharge of the debt. B afterward told A that he had made a memorandum to the same effect, but never delivered it to him. Upon B's death, there was found among his valuable papers, a writing signed by him and addressed to no person, by which he "agreed to bind" himself to pay the above mentioned surplus to A. Below this writing was the following, also signed by him: "This memorandum is made for the use of my executor or administrator only; A has no equal or equitable claim against me or my estate, but upon payment of my debt, any balance shall inure to A's benefit." It was held that there was a declaration of the trust in writing within the meaning of the Massachusetts statute. Urann v. Coates, 109 Mass. 581. But it was held by the same court that a mere memorandum upon a ledger was not a sufficient "writing" to create or declare a trust concerning land, within the meaning of the statute. Homer v. Homer, 107 Mass. 82.

So, in Rhode Island, it was held in a recent case that a memorandum made by the alleged trustee upon slips of paper, but not signed by him, was insufficient under the Statute of Frauds. Taft v. Dimond, 16 R. I. 584.

And, in California, it has been held that a verified answer in chancery by the trustee was sufficient to satisfy the California statute, which provides that no trust in relation to land shall be valid, unless created or declared by a written instrument signed by the trustee. Garnsey v. Gothard, 90 Cal. 603.

2. Packard v. Putnam, 57 N. H. 43.

In a South Carolina case, a trust in land was established upon the deposition in writing of a witness who was the original trustee under an absolute conveyance to him, the statements in the bill and answer, and parol evidence. Reid v. Reid, 12 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 213.

So, where real estate was purchased by A and B and conveyed to A, who furnished the purchase-money; and A wrote to an attorney the following letter: "The agreement between B and myself is simply this: We have purchased an estate" (describing it), "which has by mutual consent been conveyed to me, I having paid and secured the purchase-money. Whatever disposition is made of the property, the profit and loss are to be divided between us, deducting interest. You will please make such papers as are necessary to carry this agreement into effect," it was held that the letter of A, having been acted on by the parties, was evidence of a trust or a partnership, and sufficient to satisfy the Statute of Frauds. Montague v. Hayes, 10 Gray (Mass.) 609. See also Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148; Kingsbury v. Burnside, 58 Ill. 310; 11 Am. Rep. 67; Pinnock v. Clough, 16 Vt. 500; 42 Am. Dec. 521.

3. Foster v. Hale, 3 Ves. 708; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Abeel v. Radcliff, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 207; Arms v. Ashley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 71; Freeport v. Bartol, 3 Me. 340; Rutledge v. Smith, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 119; Hill on Trustees, §61. See also Whelan v. Whelan, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 537; Jackson v. Moore, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 706; Reid v. Fitch, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 399; Cook v. Barr, 44 N. Y. 156; Taylor v. Keep, 2 Ill. App. 368; Jones v. Wilson, 60 Ala. 332; Taft v. Dimond, 16 R. I. 589; Blodgett v. Hildreth, 103 Mass. 484.

4. Denton v. Davis, 18 Ves. 503; Brown on Statute of Frauds, §§ 105, 350; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 83. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, p. 712,

In the absence of fraud or mistake, parol evidence is not admissible to establish an express trust by contradicting a written instrument absolute on its face,¹ but it has been held that the trustee may execute a parol trust if he chooses to do so, and that the courts will protect him in so doing.² And if a trust is once effectually created by parol and fully executed, it cannot be revoked.³

There is a sharp conflict among the authorities as to what constitutes such fraud as will justify the admission of parol evidence to establish a trust in favor of the grantor. The earlier English cases were very liberal in admitting such evidence;⁴ but the current of modern authority is to the effect that parol evidence is not admissible to show an agreement to hold property in trust where it is conveyed by a deed absolute on its face, unless the instrument was obtained by fraud or was made absolute by mistake. In other words, while the refusal to execute or acknowledge such trust may constitute fraud in a certain sense, it is not such fraud as will render parol evidence admissible to establish the trust.⁵

and authorities in note, where the subject is more fully considered. See also Barber v. Thompson, 49 Vt. 213; Hannig v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235.

The signature of the party declaring the trust need not be by an actual subscription of his name; it is sufficient if the writing is authenticated by the party as his writing, for the purpose of declaring the trust. Smith v. Howell, 11 N. J. Eq. 349. In the case cited, the insertion, by the party, of his initials several times in the instrument by way of signature, the terms and intent of the instrument being perfectly clear, were held a sufficient signature.

1. Kelly v. Karsner, 72 Ala. 110; Patton v. Beecher, 62 Ala. 579; Green v. Cates, 73 Mo. 122; Lawson v. Lawson, 117 Ill. 98; Cain v. Cox, 23 W. Va. 594; Pavey v. American Ins. Co., 56 Wis. 221; Heiss v. Vosbury, 59 Wis. 532; Hansen v. Berthelson, 19 Neb. 433; Philbrook v. Delano, 29 Me. 410; Dean v. Dear, 6 Conn. 285; Clagett v. Hall, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 80; Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 198; Gainus v. Cannon, 42 Ark. 503; Leman v. Whitley, 4 Russ. 423; Childers v. Childers, 3 K. & J. 310; Lewis v. Lewis, L. R. 2 Ch. 77; Morrall v. Waterson, 7 Kan. 199; Traf-ton v. Hawes, 102 Mass. 541; 3 Am. Rep. 494; Beers v. Beers, 22 Mich. 42; Beach v. Cooke, 28 N. Y. 508; 86 Am. Dec. 260; Mescall v. Tully, 91 Ind. 96; Dunn v. Dunn, 82 Ind. 42; Pennington v. Flock, 93 Ind. 378; Brown v. Combs, 29 N. J. L. 36; Feeney v. Howard, 79 Cal. 525; 12 Am. St. Rep. 162.

2. Karr v. Washburn, 56 Wis. 303. And where he sells land in the execution of a parol trust invalid under the Statute of Frauds, he may be held liable for the proceeds as a trustee of personal property. Bork v. Martin, 132 N. Y. 280.

3. Kilpin v. Kilpin, 1 Myl. & K. 531; Addlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 151; Crabb v. Crabb, 1 Myl. & K. 511; Eaton v. Eaton, 35 N. J. L. 290; Greenfield's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 489; Kirkpatrick v. McDonald, 11 Pa. St. 387; Brown v. Brown, 12 Md. 87; Robbins v. Robbins, 89 N. Y. 258; Sayre v. Weil, 94 Ala. 466. So, where there is part performance, Wheeler v. Reynolds, 66 N. Y. 227; Ryan v. Dox, 34 N. Y. 307; 90 Am. Dec. 696; Moore v. Crawford, 130 U. S. 122; Church v. Sterling, 16 Conn. 388. See also Stringer v. Montgomery, 111 Ind. 489; Barber v. Milner, 43 Mich. 248; Frieze v. Glenn, 2 Md. Ch. 361. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, pp. 738-745.

4. Hutchins v. Lee, 1 Atk. 447; Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 98; Reech v. Kennegal, 1 Ves. 125; Montacute v. Maxwell, 1 P. Wms. 620; Shelborne v. Juchenquin, 1 Bro. C. C. 350; Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story (U. S.) 290.

5. Rasdall v. Rasdall, 9 Wis. 379; Feeney v. Howard, 79 Cal. 525; 12 Am. St. Rep. 162; Fouty v. Fouty, 34 Ind. 433; Levy v. Brush, 45 N. Y. 597; Wheeler v. Reynolds, 66 N. Y. 227; Bonham v. Craig, 80 N. Car. 224; Johnston v. La Motte, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 347; Patton v. Beecher, 62 Ala.

Any other rule would make the Statute of Frauds practically ineffective. But where there is fraud in obtaining the conveyance, or in the means used to secure its execution in the particular form in which it is drawn, or where, by accident or mistake, it fails to express the real intention of the parties, parol evidence may be admitted for the purpose of affording relief to the injured party.¹

8. Statute of Wills.—The Statute of Wills, as well as the Statute of Frauds, may have an important influence where a trust is claimed to have been created by will. It is provided in most of the states, as it is in England, that wills of either real or personal property must be in writing, signed by the testator and attested by a certain number of witnesses.² No trust in either real or 579; Mosely v. Mosely, 86 Ala. 289; note to Jackson v. Cleveland, 90 Am. Dec. 266; Dean v. Dear, 6 Conn. 285; Perry v. McHenry, 13 Ill. 236; Lantry v. Lantry, 51 Ill. 458; 2 Am. Rep. 310; Hoge v. Hoge, 1 Watts (Pa.) 213; 26 Am. Dec. 52. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, p. 737.

In a recent case, under the terms of a deed of trust, the trustee was required to convey the property to whomsoever the beneficiary might name, and if not disposed of at the time of her death to convey it to her heirs. After the settlor's death, and while the beneficiary still lived, their son conveyed all of his interest in his father's estate in trust for his wife, making no mention of the property in question, although it was afterwards alleged that he intended to include it in his conveyance. The evidence of this intention consisted of mere vague statements without proof that the property was mentioned between the parties to the deed. The son's wife collected no rents from the property, although she occupied a part of it and made some improvements. It was held that the evidence was not sufficient to establish a mistake in the deed, especially in view of the fact that the son had no vested remainder or other interest in the property which he could at that time convey. Ewing v. Buckner, 76 Iowa 467.

But in another recent case, in a proceeding brought to sell a decedent's real estate and pay his debts, a witness who had been on intimate terms with decedent, testified to conversations held with him just before his death, in which he admitted that he had no interest in the real estate, and requested the witness to prepare a deed to convey it to the defendant, but that no such deed was prepared, partly because of the neglect of the witness, and partly on account of his suggesting that the defendants were about to sell, and the deed could as well be made to their purchaser direct. It was held that the evidence sustained a finding that the decedent held the lands in trust for the defendants. Newell v. Montgomery, 129 Ill. 58.

1. Kennedy v. Kennedy, 2 Ala. 571; Johnston v. La Motte, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 347; Skrine v. Simmons, 11 Ga. 401; Robbins v. Robbins, 89 N. Y. 251; Wheeler v. Reynolds, 66 N. Y. 227; Brown v. Lynch, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 147; Cox v. Cox, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 365; Trapnall v. Brown, 19 Ark. 49; Anding v. Davis, 38 Miss. 574; 77 Am. Dec. 658; Newton v. Taylor, 32 Ohio St. 399; Gilpatrick v. Glidden, 81 Me. 137; Young v. Peachy, 2 Atk. 254; Thomson v. White, 1 Dall. (Pa.) 424; 1 Am. Dec. 252, and note; Hoge v. Hoge, 1 Watts (Pa.) 163; 26 Am. Dec. 52. See FRAUDS, STATUTE OF, vol. 8, pp. 737, 738.

The same rule applies to wills, and it has been held that a promise made to the testator by a legatee or devisee, to provide for another out of the property given to him, by reason of which he gets what would have otherwise been given to such other person, can be established by parol evidence. Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. 185; McCormick v. Grogan, L. R., 4 H. L. 97; Strickland v. Aldridge, 9 Ves. 516; Chamberlain v. Chamberlain, 2 Freem. 34; Thynn v. Thynn, 1 Vern. 296; Mestaer v. Gillespie, 11 Ves. 621; Norris v. Frazer, L. R., 15 Eq. 318; Barrell v. Hanrick, 42 Ala. 60; Richardson v. Adams, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 273; Owing's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 370; 17 Am. Dec. 311.

2. 1 Jarman on Wills (Perkins' ed.) 113-144, and the notes thereto support this proposition of the text.

personal property can, therefore, be created in a will, unless it is in writing and executed in due form as required by the statute.¹ There is also "an additional reason in the United States," says Mr. Perry, "why a will or testamentary paper informally executed cannot be used as an original declaration of trust. In nearly all the states, no will can be used to prove the transfer of any interest, legal or equitable, in property of the testator, unless such will has been duly proved, allowed, and recorded in a court of probate having jurisdiction over it, and if such will is to be used to affect the title to property in any state other than the one where it is originally proved, it must be recorded in such other state."² But, while this is true, it does not prevent a testator from referring to documents or papers already in existence, and making them part of the will.³

9. Personal Property—a. GENERALLY.—Trusts in personal property may be declared and proved by parol.⁴ The Statute of

1. Thayer v. Wellington, 9 Allen (Mass.) 283; 85 Am. Dec. 753; Wells v. Hawes, 122 Mass. 99; Lynch v. Clements, 24 N. J. Eq. 431; Langdon v. Astor, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 477; 16 N. Y. 9; Burlington University v. Barrett, 22 Iowa 60; 92 Am. Dec. 376; Addington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 141; Briggs v. Penny, 3 De G. & S. 547; In re Boyes, 26 Ch. Div. 531; Muckleston v. Brown, 6 Ves. 67. Compare Nab v. Nab, 10 Mod. 404.

A trust in lands is not created by a mere request in writing, but not in a duly executed will, to two of three heirs apparent, to give a certain person either a promissory note or a tract of land from the property of the ancestor. Preston v. Casner, 104 Ill. 262.

2. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 93, citing Wilson v. Tappan, 6 Ohio 172; Bailey v. Bailey, 8 Ohio 239; Ives v. Allyn, 12 Vt. 589; Campbell v. Sheldon, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 8; Campbell v. Wallace, 10 Gray (Mass.) 162; Rex v. Netherseal, 4 T. R. 258; Metham v. Devonshire, 1 P. Wms. 529; Inchiquin v. French, 1 Cox 1; Strong v. Perkins, 3 N. H. 517; Kiltredge v. Folsom, 8 N. H. 98. See also Lucas v. Tucker, 17 Ind. 41; Harris v. Harris, 61 Ind. 117; Thiebaud v. Sebastian, 10 Ind. 454.

3. Habergham v. Vincent, 2 Ves. Jr. 228; Smart v. Prujean, 6 Ves. 560; Thayer v. Wellington, 9 Allen (Mass.) 283; 85 Am. Dec. 758, and note; Newton v. Seaman's Friend Soc., 130 Mass. 91; 39 Am. Rep. 433; Johnson v. Clarkson, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 305; 1 Williams Ex'rs, 289, 290, and notes; Gerrish v. Gerrish, 8 Oregon 351; 1 Am. Probate Rep. 59; 34 Am. Rep.

585; Fickle v. Snepp, 97 Ind. 289; 49 Am. Rep. 499; Fosselman v. Elder, 98 Pa. St. 159.

4. "Trusts in Personal Property," 2 Alb. L. Jour. 261, 288; Pitney v. Bolton, 45 N. J. Eq. 639; Hooper v. Holmes, 11 N. J. Eq. 122; Kimball v. Morton, 5 N. J. Eq. 26; 53 Am. Dec. 621; Day v. Roth, 18 N. Y. 448; Gilman v. McArdle, 99 N. Y. 451; 52 Am. Rep. 41; Gadsden v. Whaley, 14 S. Car. 211; Higgenbottom v. Peyton, 3 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 398; Crissman v. Crissman, 23 Mich. 218; Bostwick v. Mahaffy, 48 Mich. 342; Chase v. Chapin, 130 Mass. 128; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377; Cobb v. Knight, 74 Me. 253; Dickerson's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 198; Hellman v. McWilliams, 70 Cal. 449; Saunders v. Harris, 1 Head (Tenn.) 185; Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 195; Gordon v. Green, 10 Ga. 534; Berry v. Norris, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 302; Hon v. Hon, 70 Ind. 135; Hunt v. Elliott, 80 Ind. 245; 41 Am. Rep. 794; Mohn v. Mohn, 112 Ind. 285; McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Ph. 153; 1 Hare 458; Thorpe v. Owens, 5 Beav. 224; Hawkins v. Gordon, 2 Sm. & Gif. 451; Jones v. Lock, L. R., 1 Ch. 25; Fordyce v. Willis, 3 Bro. C. C. 587; Middleton v. Pollock, 4 Ch. Div. 49. And the fact that the specific property is constantly changing, makes no difference. Leland v. Colliver, 34 Mich. 418.

But where the trust is declared in writing, although the Statute of Frauds will not prevent its being proved by parol evidence, the rule that such evidence is not admissible to vary the terms of a writing, may render parol

Frauds has no application to such cases, even though the subject-matter is money derived from the sale of land, or secured by mortgage thereon.¹ So, parol trusts may be created in the stock of a corporation, although the corporation owns real estate;² and it has been held that, while a parol agreement to hold land in trust cannot, ordinarily, be enforced, it constitutes a sufficient consideration for a parol promise, made after the sale of the land, to hold the proceeds in trust, and the latter agreement can be enforced as a parol trust in personal property.³

A mere promise to make a future donation not based on any consideration, is insufficient,⁴ and so are vague and indefinite evidence incompetent. Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 195. But such evidence has been admitted to prove a trust. Chace v. Chapin, 130 Mass. 128. See also Northrop v. Hale, 72 Me. 275; Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 365.

1. Benbow v. Townsend, 1 Myl. & K. 510; Bellasis v. Compton, 2 Vern. 294; Hackney v. Vrooman, 62 Barb. (N. Y.) 650; Childs v. Jordan, 106 Mass. 322; Coburn v. Anderson, 131 Mass. 513; Patterson v. Miller, 69 Iowa 755.

A trust of a mortgage debt may be created by parol; for although no interest in the land will be passed by a trust thus created, yet it is good as to the debt, and will entitle the beneficiary to payment out of the proceeds of the sale of the land. Danser v. Warwick, 33 N. J. Eq. 133.

But leasehold interests are within the statute. Riddle v. Emerson, 1 Vern. 108; Hutchins v. Lee, 1 Atk. 447; Gardner v. Rowe, 5 Russ. 258; Otis v. Sill, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 102.

2. Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410; Foster v. Hale, 3 Ves. 696; Ashton v. Langdale, 4 De G. & S. 402; 4 Eng. L. & Eq. 80; Hilton v. Girard, 1 De G. & S. 183; Wheatley v. Purr, 1 Keen 551; Kilpin v. Kilpin, 1 Myl. & K. 520; Myers v. Perigal, 16 Sim. 533.

In a late case the following facts appeared: Shares of stock in several corporations were transferred to A to hold in trust for B, a woman, the certificates running in the name of A personally. A treated these shares as his own, sold them all, and, for the purpose of protecting the trust, subsequently purchased other shares for the same amount in the same corporation. While he held the latter shares, B asked him for the names of her stocks, and he gave her a list. Subsequently, divorce proceedings were instituted against A and he sold some of the shares, purchasing the same number in the same corporation a few days later. These he afterwards transferred to C with the undisclosed intention of protecting the trust. On a bill in equity brought by the wife of A, against A, B, and C, to reach these shares and apply them in satisfaction of an execution in her favor for alimony which she had obtained against A, it was held that these facts would warrant a finding that the shares in the hands of C were embraced in the trust in favor of B, and that the bill could not be maintained. Perkins v. Perkins, 134 Mass. 441.

3. Mohn v. Mohn, 112 Ind. 285; Thomas v. Merry, 113 Ind. 83; Collar v. Collar, 75 Mich. 414; Calder v. Moran, 49 Mich. 14; Maffitt v. Rynd, 69 Pa. St. 380; Wiseman v. Baylor, 69 Tex. 63. Compare Wolford v. Farnham, 44 Minn. 159.

Two sisters caused it to be publicly announced that, by the sale of land belonging to the estate of their deceased father, they and their three brothers would be left homeless; that provision had been made for other heirs at law of the deceased, and that they wished to buy the land for the joint benefit of themselves and their three brothers. By such announcement, bidding at the sale was suppressed, and the sisters bought the land for much less than its value, and shortly after sold it at a large profit. It was held that a trust accrued whereby the brothers were entitled to maintain a bill in equity to compel the sisters thus purchasing to account to the brothers for a proportionate share in the profit. McRae v. Hough, 32 Ga. 681. See also Miller v. Antle, 2 Bush (Ky.) 401; 92 Am. Dec. 495.

4. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119. See also Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav.

expressions of an intention to create a trust.¹ But an intention to create a trust may, sometimes, be inferred from conduct and circumstances, without any express declaration.²

Where a parol trust in personal property is perfectly created, it is as effective as any other trust, and the trustee cannot vary its terms or declare a new trust, without the consent of the cestui que trust.³ It is not necessary, in such a case, that the benefi-

Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 367; Colman v. Sarrel, 1 Ves. Jr. 50; Antrobus v. Smith, 12 Ves. 47; Dillon v. Coppin, 4 Myl. & C. 647; Banks v. Mays, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 435.

1. Bailey v. Irwin, 72 Ala. 505; Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 422; 36 Am. Rep. 634; Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119; Childs v. Wesleyan Cemetery Assoc., 4 Mo. App. 74; Roddy v. Roddy, 3 Neb. 96; Snelling v. Utterback, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 609; 4 Am. Dec. 661. It is said in these cases that the evidence must be "clear and satisfactory." See also Hunter v. Bilyen, 30 Ill. 246; Harrison v. Howard, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 407; Bailey v. Bailey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 230; Lyman v. United Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 630; Harris v. Bratton, 34 S. Car. 259; Mannix v. Purcell, 46 Ohio St. 102; 15 Am. St. Rep. 562; Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 550.

A mere verbal direction to an agent to sell goods for a certain price, and apply the proceeds to his principal's debts, does not create a trust. Comley v. Dazian, 114 N. Y. 161. Nor does an assignment of personal property to a creditor as security, and a subsequent assignment of the surplus that may arise, to other creditors, make the first assignee a trustee for the others. Boessneck v. Cohn (Supreme Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 620.

And it has been held that an alleged trust in personal property, which the assignor was not bound to make, and resting only on an understanding which was quite indefinite as to the beneficiaries, and in what proportions they were to take, will not, as against a creditor of the assignor, sustain the payment of a part of the fund to an alleged beneficiary. Kramer v. McCaughey, 11 Mo. App. 426.

2. Day v. Roth, 18 N. Y. 448; Gadsden v. Whaley, 14 S. Car. 210; Kimball v. Morton, 5 N. J. Eq. 26; 53 Am. Dec. 621; Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447, and note; Snell's Equity, 80. See also Walden v. Karr, 88 Ill. 49; Clapp v. Emery, 98 Ill. 523;

Tyler v. Tyler, 25 Ill. App. 339; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; Martin v. Branch Bank, 31 Ala. 115; Pitney v. Bolton, 45 N. J. Eq. 639.

A voluntary transfer of property by the owner to another person, giving him complete control of it, and directing him to use it to pay the debts of the former, renders the latter liable to account as a trustee. Ahl's Appeal, 25 W. N. C. (Pa.) 113.

A conveyance of personal property absolute in form, may be shown by the subsequent declarations of the transferor, assented to, and acted upon by the transferee, to have been in trust. Chace v. Chapin, 130 Mass. 128.

In a recent Alabama case, where it appeared that a promissory note had been executed in aid of a railroad company, and certain bonds of the company had been deposited by the makers of the note with one of their number, under a verbal agreement that he should hold them as collateral security against their liability on the note, it was held that a valid trust was created in favor of the makers of the note. Reid v. Mobile Bank, 70 Ala. 199.

3. Hunnewell v. Lane, 11 Met. (Mass.) 163.

"A trust once effectually created by parol cannot be subsequently extinguished, revoked or altered, by the party creating it." Hill on Trustees *60, citing Kilpin v. Kilpin, 1 M. & K. 531, 539; Addlington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 151. See also Freeman v. Freeman, 2 Pars. Eq. (Pa.) 81; Greenfield's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 489; Kirkpatrick v. McDonald, 11 Pa. St. 387; Gulick v. Gulick, 39 N. J. Eq. 401.

And, in West Virginia, where a trust deed conveying personal property, contains a reservation to the grantor, which is inconsistent with the object of the trust and adequate to defeat it, the reservation is void as to his creditors. Kuhn v. Mack, 4 W. Va. 186.

A widow collected the insurance on her husband's life, under a policy payable to herself, and set apart a portion ciary should know of the declaration of trust at the time it is made, provided he afterwards accepts and ratifies it;¹ but "where the transaction is capable of two interpretations, and the settlement is nearly voluntary, it is plain that notice, given by the donor to the donee, of the existence of the trust would, in most cases, be decisive on the question of intention. It takes the place of that delivery which is necessary to perfect a gift of personal property. It is not only satisfactory evidence of an executed intention, but it is a declaration in the nature of an act necessary to complete the transaction and create the trust."²

Where the owner of "a legal estate, capable of legal transfer and delivery," attempts to make a third person trustee of the property, the legal interest must be actually transferred or vested in such trustee, in order to create a perfect trust. "It is not enough that the settlor executed a paper purporting to pass it, if in fact the paper does not have that effect. The intention of the thereof upon a parol trust, for an infant daughter. Afterward she purchased land in her own name with the portion so set aside, and repudiated the trust, and it was held that a valid trust had been created which could be enforced, and that the land should be deemed charged with the trust. Cobb v. Knight, 74 Me. 253.

1. Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 134; 31 Am. Rep. 446; Neilson v. Blight, 1 Johns. Cas. (N. Y.) 205; Millsbaugh v. Putnam, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 380; Blasdel v. Locke, 52 N. H. 238; Howard v. Windham County Sav. Bank, 40 Vt. 597; Pope v. Burlington Sav. Bank, 56 Vt. 284; 48 Am. Rep. 784; Barker v. Frye, 75 Me. 29; Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 369; Standing v. Bowring, 31 Ch. Div. 282. See also Otis v. Beckwith, 49 Ill. 121; Tate v. Leithead, Kay 658; Roberts v. Lloyd, 2 Beav. 376; Menx v. Bell, 1 Hare 73; Burn v. Carvalho, 4 Myl. & C. 690; Gilbert v. Overton, 2 Hem. & M. 110; Sloper v. Cottrell, 6 El. & B. 504; Lambe v. Orton, 1 D. & S. 125; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 176; Miller v. Billingsly, 41 Ind. 492.

The owner of bonds deposited them in a bank for safe keeping, with directions to hold them for himself for life, and thereafter for his wife for life, and after her death for his heirs. After the death of the husband, by agreement between the widow and one of the heirs, the heir recognized the trust. It was held that the trust was binding upon both of them. Comer v. Comer, 24 Ill. App. 526.

If a person, by a written instrument, or by parol, directs his debtor to hold the money due in trust for a third person, and such direction is communicated to the debtor, an effectual trust in favor of the donee is created, especially where the debtor has acted on the direction and consented to the arrangement. Eaton v. Cook, 25 N. J. Eq. 55.

But it has been held that where one deposited money with another for investment, the latter to pay interest until it is invested, the relation established is that of debtor and creditor and not of trustee and cestui que trust. Pittsburgh Nat. Bank v. McMurray, 98 Pa. St. 538.

A gave a sum of money to B, and years after, gave an additional sum with the understanding at the time the latter gift was made that both were to be held in trust for the donor's grandchildren. Subsequently, B made an assignment of all his property for the benefit of his creditors. It was held that a valid trust existed in both sums. Reiff v. Horst, 52 Md. 255.

2. Cole, J., in Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 365, 369. See also, as to the importance of notice in proving the trust, where it is not otherwise sufficiently proved, Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447, 450; Minor v. Rogers, 40 Conn. 512; 16 Am. Rep. 69; Brabrook v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 228; 6 Am. Rep. 222; Clark v. Clark, 108 Mass. 522; Cummings v. Bramhall, 120 Mass. 552; Powers v. Provident Sav. Inst., 124 Mass. 377; Marcy v. Amazeen, 61 N. H. 131; 60

settlor to divest himself of the legal title must be consummated and executed, or the court will not enforce the trust."¹ Thus, if the owner of stock or shares in a corporation attempts to create a trust therein, and they can be transferred only upon the books of the company, a mere voluntary deed to the trustee will be insufficient, unless they are actually transferred as required by law.² If the subject of the trust is a legal interest, incapable of being transferred or assigned at law, it is sufficient, according to the weight of authority, if the settlor does all that he can to perfect the transaction and create the trust,³ although there are some authorities which hold that a voluntary trust will not be enforced where the legal title remains in the settlor.⁴ Where the subject of the trust is a mere equitable interest, the cestui que trust may create a valid trust by assigning his interest to a new trustee,⁵ or, by a new declaration of trust, he can direct the old trustee to hold such interest upon new trusts.⁶

b. BANK DEPOSITS.—It often becomes a question of no little difficulty to determine the intention of one who deposits money

Am. Rep. 320; Bridge v. Bridge, 16 Beav. 315; Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238; Beatson v. Beatson, 12 Sim. 281; Meek v. Kettlewell, 1 Hare 476; Godsal v. Webb, 2 Keen 99; Cecil v. Butcher, 2 Jac. & W. 573; McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Ph. 153.

1. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 100.

2. Garrard v. Lauderdale, 2 R. & M. 451; Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 662; Antrobus v. Smith, 12 Ves. 47; Denning v. Ware, 22 Beav. 184; Kiddill v. Farnell, 3 Sm. & Gif. 428; Colman v. Sarell, 3 Bro. C. C. 12; 1 Ves. Jr. 50; Dillon v. Coppin, 4 Myl. & C. 647; 4 Jur. 427; Edwards v. Jones, 1 Myl. & C. 226; Bridge v. Bridge, 16 Beav. 315; Latham v. Vernon, 29 Beav. 604; Holloway v. Headington, 8 Sim. 324. See Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227.

But a deed reciting, "The following notes I leave in trust with E. C., to be divided among A, B and C, at my death," has been held sufficient to create a present trust. Egerton v. Carr, 94 N. Car. 648; 55 Am. Dec. 630. See also Ireland v. Geraghty, 11 Biss. (U. S.) 465; Forney v. Remey, 77 Iowa 549.

So, a receipt by W., acknowledging that a note had been indorsed and delivered to him, "to hold the same and the proceeds thereof, to secure, indemnify, and save harmless M. for being surety for the payee," was held to show a trust relation, which, however, was limited by the terms of the receipt and a resolution which had been passed by the payee's directors. Morris v. Webb, 45 N. Y. Super. Ct. 305. See also Rogers Locomotive, etc., Works v. Kelly, 19 Hun (N. Y.) 399.

And where mere delivery, or indorsement and delivery will convey the legal title, a valid trust may thus be created as between the parties. Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Wyble v. McPheters, 52 Ind. 393; Dresser v. Dresser, 46 Me. 48; Hill v. Stevenson, 63 Me. 364; 18 Am. Rep. 231; Vreeland v. Van Horn, 17 N. J. Eq. 137; Weston v. Barker, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 276; 7 Am. Dec. 319; Padfield v. Padfield, 68 Ill. 210; Minchin v. Merrill, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 332.

3. Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 187; Fortescue v. Barnett, 3 Myl. & K. 36; Roberts v. Lloyd, 2 Beav. 376; Pearson v. Amicable Office, 27 Beav. 229; Airey v. Hall, 3 Sm. & Gif. 315; Blakely v. Brady, 2 D. & W. 311; Lewin on Trusts *58. If part of the property is capable of legal transfer, and part is not, the former must be actually transferred. Woodford v. Charnley, 28 Beav. 96.

4. Edwards v. Jones, 1 Myl. & C. 226; Ward v. Audland, 8 Beav. 201; Meek v. Kettlewell, 1 Hare 464; Bridge v. Bridge, 16 Beav. 315; Beech v. Keep, 18 Beav. 285.

5. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 102; Gilbert v. Overton, 2 Hem. & M. 110; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 188; Voyle v. Hughes, 2 Sm. & Gif. 18; Lambe v. Orton, 1 D. & S. 125; Woodford v. Charnley, 28 Beav. 99; In re Way's Trust, 2 De G. J. & S. 365.

6. Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238; in the name of another, and even where he declares that he intends to give it to the latter or hold it in trust, it is sometimes equally difficult to determine whether the gift or trust is executed or not. Transactions not of such a nature as to constitute perfect gifts have been held to constitute trusts,¹ but an imperfect gift is not necessarily good as a trust.² That branch of the subject relating to gifts has been fully treated elsewhere,³ and in connection therewith the subject of trusts in bank deposits also received some consideration; but, as the matter is an important one, and, as the authorities are conflicting, it seems desirable to consider the subject further in this connection.

A mere deposit of money in the name of another, without any declaration of trust or notice to the latter, is not sufficient to create a trust.⁴ But a deposit in bank, accompanied by a

McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Hare 458; 1 Ph. 153.

1. See Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447; 15 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 701, and note; Richardson v. Richardson, L. R., 3 Eq. 686; Blasdell v. Locke, 52 N. H. 238; Minor v. Rogers, 40 Conn. 512; 16 Am. Rep. 69; Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 365; Morgan v. Malleeson, L. R., 10 Eq. 475; Badderley v. Badderley, 9 Ch. Div. 113. But these English cases have been severely criticised.

Where an instrument has been executed, which transfers personal property to one in trust, to pay the income and profits to the grantor for her life, and directs that money coming into the grantee's hands by virtue of the trust shall be invested in real estate under the grantee's direction, and that after the grantor's death the property shall be distributed by the grantee among the children of the grantor, such an instrument constitutes neither a gift inter vivos nor a testamentary disposition, and operates in presenti as a deed of trust. Forney v. Remey, 77 Iowa 549.

2. Pope v. Burlington Sav. Bank, 56 Vt. 284; 48 Am. Rep. 784; Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 422; 36 Am. Rep. 640; Gerry v. Howe, 130 Mass. 350; Heartley v. Nicholson, 44 L. J. Ch. App. N. S. 279; Richards v. Delbridge, L. R., 18 Eq. 11; Moore v. Moore, 43 L. J. Ch. 623; Milroy v. Lord, 4 De G. F. & J. 264; Jones v. Lock, L. R., 1 Ch. 25.

As said by Sir George Jessel in Richards v. Delbridge, L. R., 18 Eq. 11, "The making a man trustee involves an intention to become a trustee, whereas words of gift show an intention to give over property to another, and not to retain it in the donor's hands for any purpose, fiduciary or otherwise."

"I think it very important, indeed," says Hall, V. C., in Moore v. Moore, 43 L. J. Ch. 623, "to keep a clear and definite distinction between these cases of imperfect gifts, and cases of declarations of trust; and that we should not extend beyond what the authorities have already established, the doctrine of declarations of trust, so as to supplement what would otherwise be mere imperfect gifts." See also Ellis v. Secor, 31 Mich. 185; 18 Am. Rep. 178; Stone v. Bishop, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 593; Sheedy v. Roach, 124 Mass. 472; 26 Am. Rep. 680; Warriner v. Rogers, L. R., 16 Eq. 340; In re Breton's Estate, 19 Ch. Div. 416; Pethybridge v. Burrows, 53 L. T. 5; Kinnebrew v. Kinnebrew, 35 Ala. 628; Badgley v. Voltrain, 68 Ill. 25; 18 Am. Rep. 541; Banks v. Mays, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 435; Helfenstein's Estate, 77 Pa. St. 328; 18 Am. Rep. 449.

3. GIFTS, vol. 8, pp. 1323-1330.

4. Beaver v. Beaver, 117 N. Y. 421; 30 Cent. L. Jour. 108, and note; Mabie v. Bailey, 95 N. Y. 206; Marcy v. Amazeen, 61 N. H. 131; 60 Am. Rep. 320; and a pass book which designates the depositor as trustee for another, is not conclusive evidence of a trust. Parkman v. Suffolk Sav. Bank, 151 Mass. 218. Compare Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 134; 31 Am. Rep. 446. And see Robinson v. Ring, 72 Me. 140; 39 Am. Rep. 308; Case v. Dennison, 9 R. I. 88; 11 Am. Rep. 222; Grymes v. Hone, 49 N. Y. 17; 10 Am. Rep. 313; Boone v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 84 N. Y. 83; 38 Am. Rep. 498; Weber v. Weber, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 255; Kerrigan v. Rantigan, 43 declaration on the part of the depositor that it is in trust for another, and the opening of an account or the receipt of a pass book in the name of the depositor as trustee for such person, are sufficient to constitute a valid declaration of trust.¹ And the retention of the pass book by the depositor, or the reservation of the right to control the fund as trustee, is not inconsistent with the theory of a trust, and will not defeat it, especially where the beneficiary has notice of the trust.² If the pass book is delivered to the beneficiary and the interest paid to him, there would seem to be even stronger reasons for holding the deposit his.³ Evidence aliunde is

Conn. 17; Alger v. North End Sav. Bank, 146 Mass. 418; 4 Am. St. Rep. 331; Sherman v. New Bedford Five Cents Sav. Bank, 138 Mass. 381; Stone v. Bishop, 4 Cliff. (U. S.) 593.

So, where an insurance company deposited money with a banking firm, as a condition upon which the firm allowed the company to use its name in advertising its business in Europe, and the company advertised that credit would be maintained at the full amount, the language of a resolution of the company, and of a letter of the banking firm, showing an intention that the deposit should be for the protection of European policy holders, was held not to create a trust in favor of such policy holders, the company retaining control over the deposit. Pierson v. Drexel, 11 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 150. See also Suntle v. Spear, 34 N. J. Eq. 336.

1. Macy v. Williams, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 489. See also In re Gaffney's Estate, 146 Pa. St. 49; Matter of George's Estate, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 43; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590; 28 Am. Dec. 272.

Thus, where a man made deposits in a bank in the names of his children, and his own name as trustee, and told them that the deposits were for them and should be theirs at his death, but did not deliver the books to them, it was held that the deposits were held by the father as trustee, and that the children were entitled thereto without a reduction from their distributive shares of his estate, and it was also held that, though the deposit for the benefit of one child was withdrawn and reinvested in another bank in the depositor's own name, the child was entitled thereto. Atkinson's Petition, 16 R. I. 413.

So, where a husband deposited money in a savings bank in his own name, as trustee for his wife's granddaughter, and informed her and others of such fact, it was held that, although he afterwards withdrew the money, a trust was created by the deposit. Mable v. Bailey, 95 N. Y. 206; Willis v. Smith, 91 N. Y. 297; Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 134; 31 Am. Rep. 446.

So, where money is deposited in the hands of a third person in trust for the depositor's minor son, with an agreement that a trustee shall retain it for a specified time at a specified rate of interest, and in the meantime prepare a deed of trust, a complete trust is created and no title is left in the depositor to dispose of the money for his own benefit. Sherwood v. Andrews, 2 Allen (Mass.) 79.

So, a delivery of a bank book to a trustee, with the intention of creating a trust, but without any assignment, is sufficient. Hill v. Stevenson, 63 Me. 364; 18 Am. Rep. 231.

2. Barker v. Frye, 75 Me. 29; Martin v. Funk, 75 N. Y. 134; 31 Am. Rep. 446; Weaver v. Emigrant, etc., Sav. Bank, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 82; 31 Am. Rep. 446; Gardner v. Merritt, 32 Md. 78; 3 Am. Rep. 115; In re Smith's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 428; Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447. See also Walker v. Crews, 73 Ala. 412; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590; 28 Am. Dec. 272; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Blanchard v. Sheldon, 43 Vt. 512; Carson v. Phelps, 40 Md. 73; Exton v. Scott, 6 Sim. 31; Fletcher v. Fletcher, 4 Hare 67; Wheatley v. Purr, 1 Keen 551; Souverby v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 240; Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Crawford's Appeal, 61 Pa. St. 52; 100 Am. Dec. 609; Smith v. Ossipee Valley Sav. Bank, 64 N. H. 228; Kerrigan v. Rantigan, 43 Conn. 17; Minor v. Rogers, 40 Conn. 512; 16 Am. Rep. 69.

3. In a recent case a sum of money was deposited in a bank in the depositor's own name as trustee for M., as shown by the pass book and books of generally held to be admissible for the purpose of showing the intention of the depositor.¹

The question is one of fact, and if it appears from written or oral declarations, from the nature of the transaction, the relation of the parties, and the purpose of the deposit, that the fiduciary relation is completely established, the trust will be enforced, although it is a mere voluntary settlement.²

the company; the pass book was in the possession of M., at the time of the depositor's death. It was held sufficient, in the absence of rebutting evidence, to create a trust in favor of M. In re Gaffney's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 49. See also Hill v. Stevenson, 63 Me. 364; 18 Am. Rep. 231.

1. Northrop v. Hale, 72 Me. 275; Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 365; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590; 28 Am. Dec. 272. See also Brabrook v. Boston Five Cents Sav. Bank, 104 Mass. 228; 6 Am. Rep. 222; Scott v. Berkshire County Sav. Bank, 140 Mass. 157; Weber v. Weber, 9 Daly (N. Y.) 211.

2. Gerrish v. New Bedford Sav. Inst., 128 Mass. 159; 35 Am. Rep. 365; Sherwood v. Andrews, 2 Allen (Mass.) 79; Urann v. Coates, 109 Mass. 581; Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447; Pope v. Burlington Sav. Bank, 56 Vt. 284; 48 Am. Rep. 781; Webb's Estate, 49 Cal. 541; Young v. Young, 80 N. Y. 422; 36 Am. Rep. 634; Sayre v. Weil, 94 Ala. 466; Wyble v. McPheters, 52 Ind. 393; Ex p. Pye, 18 Ves. 140; Milroy v. Lord, 4 De G. F. & J. 264; Penfold v. Mould, L. R., 4 Eq. 562; Wheatley v. Purr, 1 Keen 551; McFadden v. Jenkyns, 1 Hare 458; Heartley v. Nicholson, L. R., 19 Eq. 233; Thorpe v. Owens, 5 Beav. 224. All the cases agree upon this general rule, but, as will be seen from an examination of the authorities above cited, they differ as to its application to particular facts.

The decedent had delivered his bank book before his death to the plaintiff, assigning the money verbally to him in trust for the decedent's children, reserving the right to draw upon the trustee for such sums as he should need, and this trust the plaintiff accepted. No assignment in writing was ever made to the plaintiff, but the decedent executed to the bank a power of attorney to collect the money and pay it over to the plaintiff, and this was done. It was held to be a valid trust. Hellman v. McWilliams, 70 Cal. 449.

If the owner of property conveys it to another in trust, or if the owner of chattels clearly declares, whether in parol or in writing, that he holds it in presenti in trust for another, the trust is created. Ray v. Simmons, 11 R. I. 266; 23 Am. Rep. 447.

Prior to her death, the testatrix, without the knowledge of her sons, opened an account at a savings bank in their names. She added to, and drew from, the funds at various times, sending most of the money drawn to one of her sons. Afterward on the refusal of the bank to honor her checks, the books were changed, without erasing the sons' names, so as to make the funds payable to her order, the testatrix saying that, at her death, she wished the money to go directly to her sons. Shortly before her death, she gave checks to her sister, who was named executrix of her will, on which the funds were drawn and given to the testatrix, who afterward redelivered them to her sister, who deposited them in their joint names, payable to the order of either. The executrix, after the testatrix's death, drew the funds in her individual name. The will gave all the money in the bank to one son, payable to him at the discretion of the executrix. The latter testified that the testatrix said, on giving her the checks, that the money was for her, and that the surviving son must not know it, as he was improvident. It was held that a complete and irrevocable trust had been created for the sons, with the testatrix as trustee. Matter of George's Estate (Supr. Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 246; 23 Abb. N. C. (N. Y.) 43.

So, where certain bonds were found in the box of a testator in the vaults of a trust company, in an envelope indorsed "held for K.," and signed with the decedent's initials, K. being a nephew who had lived with and been raised by him; and an entry in the decedent's private account book in his own handwriting recited, "$1,300 of these bonds I bought for, and are the property of,

IX. CONSTRUCTION OF TRUSTS—1. Generally.—It has been said, with reference to wills, that no arbitrary rule can be laid down for my 'nephew and godson, K., and belong to him," and on another page interest on the bonds was credited to K., it was held that there was sufficient to create a trust in favor of K., and that it was immaterial whether or not the testator in his lifetime actually declared to another his intention to create a trust. In re Smith's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 428. But see Markey v. Markey (Com. Pl.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 925; Jones v. Wilson, 60 Ala. 332.

Where money is deposited in a savings bank by one person for the use of another, so as to constitute a trust on the death of both the depositor and beneficiary, the money may be collected by the executor of the beneficiary. Fowler v. Bowery Savings Bank, 47 Hun (N. Y.) 399.

A deposited money in a savings bank in the name of "A, for his daughter B." It was held that this made him trustee for his daughter, even though he retained the bank book and died, leaving a will which could operate on nothing if not on this fund. Weaver v. Emigrant, etc., Industrial Sav. Bank, 17 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 82.

So, where a father owned bonds and deposited them with his son, taking a receipt therefor which recited that they were to be held by the son in trust for a third person, but that they were "for, and during, his life to be subject to the order" of the father. The father stated at the time, that it was his purpose to enable the son to swear, in a certain contingency, that he had none of his property in his hands. The proceeds of these bonds were paid to the father during his life. It was held that a valid trust was created, and that, on the father's death, the cestui que trust became entitled to such bonds as remained undisposed of at that time. Von Hesse v. MacKaye, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 458. See also Sayre v. Weil, 94 Ala. 466.

Mr. Crosswell, in a valuable article in the American Law Review, after a careful consideration of the leading authorities, decided at the time he wrote (1884), sums up the result of his investigation upon this subject in the following propositions: "First. If one deposits money in his own name 'as trustee' for another, or 'in trust' for another, the transaction is open to further evidence. If, on the whole evidence, it appears that a trust was intended by the depositor, it will be so held. If it appears to have been a device intended to gain some advantage for the depositor, no trust will be established. An important piece of evidence tending to establish the trust, is a notification to the supposed beneficiary that such a deposit has been made. This is not essential, however, as other evidence may establish equally clearly the donative disposition of the depositor. On the other hand, the non-delivery of the bank book to the beneficiary is not important, as the trustee, retaining the control legally of the fund, would naturally retain the bank book. The drawing of interest by the donor, for his own use, or withdrawing part of the principal, is evidence that he did not contemplate a trust. Second. If one deposits money in the name of another, it is generally held that this transfers the property to the donee, if done with the proper donative disposition. Some courts hold the donor a trustee, some the bank a trustee, some that the legal title vests immediately in the donee, but the result is generally the same, and the retention of the bank book by the donor does not generally make any difference in the result. Of course, in those cases where it is shown that such deposit was made merely to gain some advantage to the donor, as further deposits in the savings bank, security from attachment, etc., there being no proper donative disposition, there is no transfer of the property. Third. If one transfers money already standing in his name to another, as trustee for a third, the conveyance must be such as will transfer the legal interest in the deposit to the trustee. If a written assignment is required that must be made. If not, a delivery of the bank book, accompanied by proper words of gift, will establish the trust. Fourth. If one transfers money already standing in his name to another as a direct gift to him, the transfer must be accompanied by delivery of the bank book, the evidence of the deposit. And in all cases there must be no evidence that the donor intended to retain control of the deposit or the legal interest in the deposit." "The Formation and Validity of Voluntary Trusts," 18 Am. Law Rev. 379, 406.

determining whether or not a trust has been created,¹ and that each case must be determined according to the language and circumstances peculiar to it.² As will be seen, however, from an examination of the adjudged cases, the courts endeavor to ascertain and carry out the intention of the testator or settlor,³ and if there is sufficient to show an intention to create a present trust, the trust will be enforced, provided it is sufficiently definite, certain, and complete. In determining the intention of the testator or settlor, the entire instrument should be considered,⁴ and the

1. Warner v. Bates, 98 Mass. 274; Hess v. Singler, 114 Mass. 56; Spooner v. Lovejoy, 108 Mass. 529; Smith v. Bell, 6 Pet. (U. S.) 75; Wright v. Atkins, T. & R. 157; Knight v. Knight, 3 Beav. 148; Knight v. Boughton, 11 C. & F. 548.

2. Negroes Chase v. Plummer, 17 Md. 165.

3. In Warner v. Bates, 98 Mass. 274, the court, by Bigelow, C. J., goes into a discussion of this question at considerable length, saying, among other things: "We see no sufficient ground for calling in question the wisdom or policy of the rule of construction, uniformly applied to wills in the courts in England and in most of the United States, that words of entreaty, recommendation or wish, addressed by a testator to a devisee or legatee, will make him a trustee for the person or persons in whose favor such expressions are used, provided the testator has pointed out with clearness and certainty the objects of the trust, and the subject-matter on which it is to attach, or from which it is to arise and be administered. The criticisms, which have been sometimes applied to this rule by text writers and in judicial opinions, will be found to rest mainly on its applications in particular cases, and not to involve a doubt of the correctness of the rule itself as a sound principle of construction. Indeed, we cannot understand the force or validity of the objections urged against it, if care is taken to keep it in subordination to the primary and cardinal rule that the intent of the testator is to govern, and to apply it only where the creation of a trust will clearly subserve that intent. It may sometimes be difficult to gather that intent, and there is always a tendency to construe words as obligatory in furtherance of a result which accords with a plain moral duty on the part of a devisee or legatee, and with what it may be supposed the testator would do if he could control his action. But difficulties of this nature, which are inherent in the subject-matter, can always be readily overcome by bearing in mind and rigidly applying in all such cases the test, that to create a trust it must clearly appear that the testator intended to govern and control the conduct of the party to whom the language of the will is addressed, and did not design it as an expression or indication of that which the testator thought would be a reasonable exercise of a discretion which he intended to repose in the legatee or devisee. If the objects of the supposed trusts are certain and definite; if the property to which it is to attach is clearly pointed out; if the relations and situation of the testator and the supposed cestui que trust are such as to indicate a strong interest and motive on the part of the testator in making them partakers of his bounty; and, above all, if the recommendatory or precatory clause is so expressed as to warrant the inference that it was designed to be peremptory on the donee; the just and reasonable interpretation is, that a trust is created, which is obligatory and can be enforced in equity as against the trustee by those in whose behalf the beneficial use of the gift was intended." In another case, the same court applied the same rule, that the intent of the settlor must govern, with a different result, it being held that no trust was created, as none was intended, notwithstanding the use of the words "in trust." Carr v. Richardson, 157 Mass. 576.

4. Parker v. Murch, 64 Me. 54; Major v. Herndon, 78 Ky. 123; Brown v. Brown, 12 Md. 87; Mullany v. Mullany, 4 N. J. Eq. 16; 31 Am. Dec. 238; Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Indiana, etc., R. Co., 44 Ohio St. 287; Pensacola Gas Co. v. Lotze, 23 Fla. 368; Kelly v. Stinson, 8 Blackf. (Ind.) 387; Brumfield v. Drook, 101 Ind. 190. So, several instruments, part of the same transaction, should be construed to-language used will be given its natural and ordinary meaning,¹ unless there is something to show that it was intended to be taken in a different sense.

So, in determining the nature of the trust estate, the terms of the trust, and the manner in which it is to be carried out, the intention of its creator is usually an important factor, and will generally control;² but this rule does not always hold good, especially in cases of executed trusts, and the rules of construction are not precisely the same in all cases. Whether a trust is perfectly executed or merely executory, is a question of fact to be determined by the purposes and objects which the settlor had in view, as manifested in the writing and as shown by the situation and relation of the parties and property.³ If the language used is indefinite, ambiguous, and of doubtful construction, the practical interpretation or construction given to it by the parties is of great, if not gether. Hannig v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235; Brumfield v. Boutall, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 451; Hayes v. Kershow, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 258; Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148.

Where, from the language of a will, it is apparent that it was the intention of the testator to vest the estate in his daughters, such intention will control, and a trust will not be presumed from the mere expression of a wish that the husbands of the daughters should not control the inheritance. Ringe v. Kellner, 59 Pa. St. 450.

Where the whole purpose of a deed can be accomplished under the powers therein conferred, an intent to create a trust will not be presumed in the absence of an express declaration to that effect. Hermanns v. Robertson, 64 N. Y. 332.

1. Ellis v. Ellis, 15 Ala. 296; 50 Am. Dec. 132; State v. Joyce, 48 Ind. 310; Evans v. King, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 387; Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410.

The creation of a trust depends upon intention; and, where it is clearly expressed in a grant that the grantee is not to have the benefit, but to hold to the beneficial use of another, it will make him a trustee holding the title for the beneficial owner. Mory v. Michael, 18 Md. 227.

Where a testator gave property to trustees to hold one part for his widow, one part for a son, and one part for a daughter, it was held that but one, and not three separate and distinct trusts, was intended. Bell v. Towner, 55 Conn. 364.

2. Inglis v. Sailor's Snug Harbor, 3 Pet. (U. S.) 118; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 185; 35 Am. Dec. 277; Wright v. Jones, 105 Ind. 21; Chamberlain v. Thompson, 10 Conn. 243; 26 Am. Dec. 390.

Thus, where a conveyance of property in trust is equally susceptible of two interpretations, the one should be adopted which will carry out the main purpose of the donor, and best give effect to the general scheme had in view by him. Dexter v. Episcopal City Mission, 134 Mass. 394. See also Butler v. Moore, 94 Ind. 359.

But a construction which would confer upon the trustee absolute and uncontrollable powers will not be favored. Haydel v. Hurck, 5 Mo. App. 267.

3. Gaylord v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423. See also Kyle v. Ballenger, 79 Ala. 516; Haxton v. McClaren, 132 Ind. 235; Sturges v. Knapp, 31 Vt. 1.

In an interesting case decided by the supreme court of Illinois, the facts were as follows: A father transferred notes and other securities to his son, taking from him an agreement to contribute two thousand dollars per annum to his father's support for life, and to pay certain named persons two-thirds of the proceeds of the property transferred upon the father's death for the use of a brother and sister named, which amounts the trustees were to dispose of as directed by the father's will. At the same time, and as a part of the same transaction, the father executed his will and placed it with the agreement in the hands of one of the trustees for safe keeping. Oral evidence adduced showed that the father's intention at the time was to divide the notes and securities equally among his three children. The court held that the trust controlling influence.¹ Technical words are generally given their technical and accepted meaning, but if, from an examination of the entire instrument, it clearly appears that they were used in a different sense, they will be construed as actually intended by the person who used them,² unless some arbitrary rule of law, or the circumstances of the case, prevent such a construction. Thus, the words "legal representatives" have been construed as synonymous with "heirs at law," or "descendants,"³ and in a recent case, where there was no evidence outside of the deed itself throwing light upon the intention of the grantor, it was held that the conveyance of land in trust for the maintenance of the grantor out of the income, with a provision that the land should, upon his death, descend to his legal representatives, created an irrevocable trust, and that after his decease the property descended to his heirs.⁴

2. Executed Trusts.—Equitable estates, where the trust is executed, are governed by the same rules as legal estates,⁵ and the created by the agreement between the father and son was an executed trust, and that the two-thirds to be paid to the trustees named was to be disposed of by them as directed by the will which the father made at the time, and that he had no power afterward to alter this disposition of the property by a subsequent will. Padfield v. Padfield, 72 Ill. 322.

1. Chicago v. Sheldon, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 50; Topliff v. Topliff, 122 U. S. 121; Gaylor v. Lafayette, 115 Ind. 423; Reissner v. Oxley, 80 Ind. 580; Lyles v. Lescher, 108 Ind. 382; Johnson v. Gibson, 78 Ind. 284; Bishop on Contracts, § 598. See CONTRACT, vol. 3, pp. 867, 869, notes.

2. The context often changes the usual meaning of words. Merchant's Nat. Bank v. Abernathy, 32 Mo. App. 211; Davis v. Davis, 26 Cal. 23; 85 Am. Dec. 157; Phelps v. Smith, 15 Ill. 574; Barbour v. National Exch. Bank, 45 Ohio St. 133; Hammon v. Mason, etc., Organ Co., 92 U. S. 724; Cornelius v. Smith, 55 Mo. 528.

3. Ewing v. Warner, 47 Minn. 446; Warnecke v. Lembca, 71 Ill. 91; 22 Am. Rep. 85; Grand Gulf R., etc., Co. v. Bryan, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 234.

4. Ewing v. Jones, 130 Ind. 247. The same deed was given the same construction by the supreme court of Minnesota in the case of Ewing v. Warner, 47 Minn. 446, and by the Missouri supreme court in Ewing v. Shannahan, 113 Mo. 188. But in the later case of Ewing v. Wilson, 132 Ind. 223, parol evidence was admitted to show that the deed construed in the cases just cited was procured by fraud, and as it was revoked by a reconveyance, the heirs took nothing.

5. Mullany v. Mullany, 4 N. J. Eq. 16; 31 Am. Dec. 238; Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 689; Harrison v. Battle, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 213; Noble v. Andrews, 37 Conn. 346; Sprague v. Sprague, 13 R. I. 703; Frye v. Porter, 1 Mod. 300; Cowper v. Cowper, 2 P. Wms. 753; Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Ves. 646; Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 206; Roberts v. Dixwill, 1 Atk. 610; Spence v. Spence, 12 C. B. N. S. 199; 104 E. C. L. 198; Coape v. Arnold, 2 Sm. & Gif. 311; Choice v. Marshall, 1 Kelly, (Ga.) 97.

In a recent case, a married woman and her husband joined in the conveyance of her real estate to the trustees to manage, and, after paying the expenses of such management, to hold for her sole use and benefit and pay her such portion of the income as they, in their discretion, might think proper during her life, on her sole receipt, and on her death to convey the entire estate to her heirs. The object of the married woman appeared to be to protect herself and not to benefit her heirs, and the settlement was held subject to the rule in Shelley's case, and that, therefore, the settlor took an equitable fee simple in the estate conveyed to the trustees. Ex p. Angell, 13 R. I. 630.

The declaration of an executed trust of land is to be subject to the same construction as if it had been the conveyance of the legal estate, and, there-rule in Shelley's case, which often defeats the actual intention of the testator or grantor, is applied in equity to executed trusts,¹ as well as in ordinary cases at law, except where, as in many states, it has been abolished by statute; or, to state the rule generally, in the construction of executed trusts, technical terms are construed according to their legal and technical meaning.²

3. Executory Trusts—a. MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS.—In construing marriage articles, the courts are aided by the presumption that it was the intention of the parties to make provision for the issue of the marriage, and not to put it in the power of either party to defeat that purpose by giving more than a life estate to each.³ Thus, although the real estate is limited to the heirs of fore, if it does not contain words of inheritance will pass only an estate for life. Evans v. King, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 387.

1. Noble v. Andrews, 37 Conn. 346; Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden 119; Austen v. Taylor, 1 Eden 367; Jones v. Morgan, 1 Bro. C. C. 206; Carradine v. Carradine, 33 Miss. 698. But where the word "heir" is used as a mere descriptio personae, and not as a term of succession, as when the ultimate limitation is "to the person who may then be the heir of A," the rule does not apply. Greaves v. Simpson, 10 Jur. N. S. 609.

2. Wright v. Pearson, 1 Eden 125; Jervoise v. Northumberland, 1 Jac. & W. 571; Brydges v. Brydges, 3 Ves. 125; Austen v. Taylor, 1 Eden 367; McPherson v. Snowden, 19 Md. 197.

They are subject to the same construction as common-law conveyances, and the trust estate is governed by the same rules. Badgett v. Keating, 31 Ark. 400. Thus, the words, "heirs at law," when used in conveying a trust estate, are generally given their literal technical meaning. Merrill v. Preston, 135 Mass. 451.

3. Trevor v. Trevor, 1 P. Wms. 622; Streatfield v. Streatfield, 1 W. & T. L. C. 33; Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & B. 369; Griffith v. Buckle, 2 Vern. 13; Stonor v. Curwen, 5 Sim. 268; Davies v. Davies, 4 Beav. 54; Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 1; Lafitte v. Lawton, 25 Ga. 305; Ardis v. Printup, 39 Ga. 648; Wallace v. Wallace, 82 Ill. 530; Phelps v. Phelps, 72 Ill. 545; 22 Am. Rep. 149; Brown v. Brown, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 502.

In the case of Cushing v. Blake, 30 N. J. Eq. 689, the court, by Depue, J., after a thorough investigation of the subject, stated the following propositions as expressing the law by which courts should be governed in construing marriage settlements: "There is a difference in one respect between marriage articles and a devise by will. Under the artificial rule in Shelley's case, the gift to an ancestor for life, with a limitation over to heirs or heirs of the body, creates in him an estate in fee or in tail, and the limitation over is capable of destruction by him by conveyance or devise if the estate be a fee simple, or by fine and common recovery if it be a fee tail. When these technical terms are used in an agreement for a settlement in view of marriage, the court will infer from the nature of the agreement that the parties contemplated provision for the issue of the marriage, which should not be liable to immediate destruction by the act of the parties, and will direct the settlement to be made in such a manner as will prevent the destruction of the limitation over to the issue. But this doctrine of the court is applicable only so long as the agreement for the settlement remains a matter of contract. If the parties have themselves completed the settlement by a deed complete in itself and perfect so that it requires only to be obeyed and fulfilled by the trustees according to the provisions of the settlement, the trust will be construed in the same manner as similar trusts created for other purposes." See also Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & B. 367; Jervoise v. Northumberland, 1 Jac. & W. 559; Rochford v. Fitzmaurice, 2 Dr. & W. 18; Sackville West v. Holmesdale, L. R., 4 H. L. Cas. 543; Neves v. Scott, 9 How. (U. S.) 196; Carroll v. Renich, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 798; Tillinghast v. Coggeshall, 7 R. I. 383.

In a Massachusetts marriage settle-the body, or the issue of either or both of the parties,¹ or to the issue and their heirs,² equity, instead of construing the language strictly, according to its technical meaning, will construe it to mean that the estate is limited to one or both of the parents for life, and the children will take it after their death as purchasers.³ So, if it is shown that a settlement does not express the true intention of the parties, it may be corrected and reformed in equity so as to carry out such intention.⁴

b. WILLS.—In the construction of wills, the intention of the testator is the pole-star, by which the courts should steer,⁵ and the construction of such instruments has been more liberal with a view to carrying out such intention than in the case of deeds, but technical expressions often control even in the construction of wills.⁶ Other instruments may, by reference, be incorporated in the will, or become part thereof, in such a manner that they

ment, made before the abolition of the rule in Shelley's case, whereby the settlor conveyed all of her property to a trustee for the sole and separate use and benefit of the settlor and her heirs, the trustee covenanted that he would, upon her death, transfer the property to her children, if she should leave any, but made no express covenant as to her heirs at law. It was held that the settlor took an equitable estate from the time of her marriage for life, with a contingent remainder to her children, if she should leave any, and a reversion to herself in case she should die without issue, and that this reversionary interest she could lawfully dispose of by will. Loring v. Eliot, 16 Gray (Mass.) 568.

A testator gave land to R. in trust for M., to be sold if M. should die childless, and the proceeds to be divided among the testator's children, but if M. should leave children, the land to be theirs. It was held that R. took a fee, that the trust was not executed, that the interest of the testator's children was a contingent remainder, and that they were entitled, not to the land, but to its proceeds. Farr v. Gilreath, 23 S. Car. 502.

1. Dod v. Dod, Amb. 274. See also Trevor v. Trevor, 1 P. Wms. 622; Griffith v. Buckle, 2 Vern. 13; Davies v. Davies, 4 Beav. 54.

2. Phillips v. James, 2 D. & S. 404.

3. See Handick v. Wilkes, 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 393; Rochford v. Fitzmaurice, 2 Dr. & W. 18; Barnaby v. Griffin, 3 Ves. 206; Warrick v. Warrick, 3 Atk. 291; Horne v. Barton, 19 Ves. 398; West v. Errissey, 2 P. Wms. 349; Jones v.

Langton, 1 Eq. Cas. Ab. 392; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 361. See also MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, vol. 14, p. 538.

4. Honour v. Honour, 1 P. Wms. 123; Warrick v. Warrick, 3 Atk. 293; Roberts v. Kingsley, 1 Ves. 238; Briscoe v. Briscoe, 7 Ir. Eq. 129; Bold v. Hutchinson, 5 De G. M. & G. 568; Neves v. Scott, 9 How. (U. S.) 197; Gause v. Hale, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 241; Smith v. Maxwell, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 101; Allen v. Rumph, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 1. Innocent purchasers, whose rights intervene, will, of course, be protected. Warrick v. Warrick, 3 Atk. 291; West v. Errissey, 2 P. Wms. 349.

5. 4 Kent's Com. *537; Lutz v. Lutz, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 72; Baker v. Riley, 16 Ind. 479; Conger v. Lowe, 124 Ind. 368; Belslay v. Engel, 107 Ill. 182; Daniel v. Whartenby, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 639; Wollett v. Harris, 5 Madd. 452; Dillaye v. Greenough, 45 N. Y. 438; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 107; Wright v. Jones, 105 Ind. 21; Porter v. Rutland Bank, 19 Vt. 410.

Thus, the rule in Shelley's case does not ordinarily apply to executory trusts. Carrigan v. Drake, 36 S. Car. 354.

6. 4 Kent's Com. *537; Lambert v. Paine, 3 Cranch (U. S.) 134; Ide v. Ide, 5 Mass. 501; Doe v. Wright, 8 T. R. 66; Ridgeway v. Lanphear, 99 Ind. 251; Allen v. Craft, 109 Ind. 476; 58 Am. Rep. 525.

Where land was devised to A in trust for the testator's daughter and her children, and all the beneficiaries died, it was held that the trustee took the fee should be considered in determining the intention of the testator.¹ And, although a devise to one "for his use and benefit during his life, and then to his heirs and assigns," is within the rule in Shelley's case, an executory trust, with a discretionary power in the trustee, is not within that rule.² If it clearly appears from the entire will, where the trust is executory, that the testator did not mean to use the expressions therein contained in their strict of the land for the use of the beneficiaries, and that the estate was subject to the same rules as a legal estate, and did not revert on the death of the beneficiaries, but passed by descent. Gill v. Logan, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 231.

Where a testator left property to trustees in trust for the equal use and benefit of his four sisters—naming them—and their heirs forever, to be managed in such way as the trustees might think to the best interest of each, it was held that the sisters took a fee simple interest in the land, and an absolute property in the personalty, but that the legal title remained in the trustees for them to manage the property as they might think for the best interest of the devisees respectively. Bass v. Scott, 2 Leigh (Va.) 356.

1. Fesler v. Simpson, 58 Ind. 83; Fickle v. Snepp, 97 Ind. 289; 49 Am. Rep. 499; Cumming v. Reid Memorial Church, 64 Ga. 105. See also Hannig v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235; Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148.

In Fesler v. Simpson, 58 Ind. 83, A and his wife signed a deed of conveyance of certain real estate, and acknowledged its execution before a proper officer, conveying to his son W. and his children, to have and to hold said premises to the said W. during his natural life, and, at his death, to his children in fee simple. On the same day A executed his will, in a clause of which he gave to W. and his children "the tract of land described in the deed to him made by me and my wife," giving the date of said deed, being the same as the date of said will, "to be held as therein provided." And, by the said will, the testator gave to his two other sons each "a tract of land described in" deeds made to them in like manner; and he directed that, after his death, his executor should deliver said deeds "to my children to whom said land is conveyed, it being my intention to retain said deeds until my death." The deed to W. and his children was not delivered by the grantor, but was retained by him until his death, after which it was delivered by A's executor to W. The court held that, without regard to the question of whether there was a sufficient delivery of the said deed, W. took, under the will, only a life estate in the land. The court held further, that at least all parts of the deed to which reference was made in the will, if not the entire deed, must be regarded as incorporated in the will. See also, as bearing upon the proposition under discussion, Tonnele v. Hall, 4 N. Y. 140; Jackson v. Babcock, 12 Johns. (N. Y.) 389; Loring v. Sumner, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 98.

In Cumming v. Reid Memorial Church, 64 Ga. 105, the testator devised a tract of land to trustees and their successors in fee to sell and apply the proceeds to the erection of a church building, the style of the edifice to be left with them. By a codicil, he gave the trustees, "for the erection of a church in said will provided for," $8,000 more, should the residuum of the estate amount to so much. By another codicil, he directed that, if unnecessary to pay the specific legacies in full, the $8,000 should abate. There was no residuary clause. There was found among the testator's papers a memorandum bearing a later date than either the will or the codicils, which stated the testator's desire as to how the church should be built and used. The lot was sold by the trustees, and the proceeds invested in the erection of a church. The testator's executor paid them also the $8,000. This latter sum the next of kin sued for in equity. It was held that the testator's intention was to be gathered from the will, the codicils, and from the memorandum, to which it was proper to refer in aid of the ambiguity in the will and codicils; and that it was his intention to give the sum named absolutely to the trustees for the erection, and also the repair and improvement of a church building, and that no valid claim to the fund subsisted in the next of kin.

2. Siceloff v. Redman, 26 Ind. 251; Locke v. Barbour, 62 Ind. 577; Papillon technical sense, "the court, in decreeing such settlement as he has directed, will depart from his words to execute his intention."¹ But the presumption which is indulged in cases of marriage articles, and often controls their construction, even as against technical terms, namely, that the provision was intended for the issue of the marriage, has no influence upon the construction of wills.² Many cases involving the construction of wills as to the intention of the testator, the nature of the estate, and the duties of the trustee are reviewed in the notes below.³

v. Voice, 2 P. Wms. 471; Carrigan v. Drake, 36 S. Car. 354; 4 Kent's Com. 218, 220.

1 Sir William Grant, in Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & B. 369. See also Bastard v. Proby, 2 Cox 6; Papillon v. Voice, 2 P. Wms. 471; Leonard v. Lord Sussex, 2 Vern. 526; Thompson v. Fisher, L. R., 10 Eq. 207; Parker v. Bolton, 5 L. J. Ch. 58.

2 Blackburn v. Stables, 2 Ves. & B. 369; 1 Perry on Trusts, § 360.

3 See infra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

A man willed real and personal property to his wife for life, which at her death was to be equally divided between his son and his daughters, E. and M.; and further provided that the part given to E. he wished placed in trust, and at her decease, if she left no children, to be paid to M.; and it was held that E. took the real estate in fee with executory devise over to M., and that a trustee should be appointed for the personality. Hooper v. Bradbury, 133 Mass. 303.

Where a testator gave the residue of his estate to his children, with the direction that whatever should fall to the share of one child should be deposited in the hands of the others in trust for him, and power was also given to sell the real estate, the trust was held to extend to the realty as well as the personality. Braman v. Stiles, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 460; 13 Am. Dec. 445.

Where a sum of money was bequeathed in trust, the income to be paid to the testator's children during their natural lives, and, upon the death of either child without heirs of his body, his share to become vested in the surviving children equally, it was held that upon the death of one of the children without issue his share vested absolutely in the remaining children free from trust. Hutchinson's Appeal, 34 Conn. 300.

So, it was held in a Massachusetts case that after a devise in trust to S., "for the benefit of my daughter G., wife of R., to her sole and separate use, and her heirs and assigns forever," took effect, and G. died, leaving R. and two children surviving, G. took an equitable estate in fee during coverture, which descended to the children subject to R.'s tenancy by curtesy, and upon the death of one child under age and unmarried, his share was inherited by the other under the Massachusetts statute. Richardson v. Stodder, 100 Mass. 528.

Where real and personal property was given by will to a trustee, in trust for the testator's daughter and her children, the children were held to take equally with their mother on the death of the testator. Davis v. Cain, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 304.

A testator devised the residue of his estate to his executors in trust, "(1) that they sell, dispose, and convey the same, at public or private sale, at such times and on such terms as they, in their, his, or her discretion, may think proper; (2) that they divide such real and personal property, or the proceeds thereof, into four equal parts or shares, one of such shares for each of my daughters." The trustees were then directed "to convey, pay, and assign" three shares, and to "hold, retain, invest, and keep invested" the other share, and collect "the rents, interest, and income," arising therefrom, and to pay taxes, assessments, insurance, and repairs until the "division or sale." It was held that an active trust was created as to the whole of the residue of his estate, and that the trustees were to determine, according to their judgment exercised in good faith, whether the several parcels thereof should be sold or divided. Story v. Palmer, 46 N. J. Eq. 1.

In Hambleton v. Darrington, 36 Md. 434, property was devised upon certain trusts to L., the testator's son H. being one of the beneficiaries, with the proviso in the will that if H. died without children, before the occurrence of certain contingencies, the property held in trust for him should vest absolutely in L., his heirs and assigns. H. survived L., but died leaving no children, and before the occurrence of the contingencies named. It was held that L. received under the will a descendible and devisable estate in the property devised in trust for H.

Where property is devised in trust for the use and benefit of the children of M., children of W. and G. equally, as tenants in common, their heirs and representatives forever, the children of M. and W., born after the decease of the testator, are not included in the devise, but all born at that time, and G., take per capita. Benson v. Wright, 4 Md. Ch. 278.

Where, by will, the testator gave all his estate, real and personal, to his son A, for the support of him and his brother B, and provided that B should get no more than what would support him equal to A, should he not be extravagant, A was held to take the whole estate in trust as to one moiety for B. Carson v. Carson, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 329.

A will devised to each of the testator's children a fee, with a limitation over upon the death of anyone without issue before reaching his majority, and to this will was added a codicil: "It is my will and desire that the share of my estate, which is intended for my daughters, shall vest in executors in trust for their sole benefit, and if they should marry, free from the control of their husbands, and on the death of either 'leaving children,' her share to be equally divided among her children." It was held that the codicil operated to change the legal estate of a married daughter to an equitable one, but had no other effect upon her interest under the will, nor upon the interest of her surviving brothers and sisters on her death, without issue, after she came of age. Grumball v. Patton, 70 Ala. 626.

Property was conveyed in trust for a married woman during her life, and after her death, for the support of her husband, with remainder over in trust for the wife's son and any children that the wife might thereafter have "as tenants in common equally; the issue of any deceased child to have and take the part, share or portion to which the parent of said issue would, if living, be entitled." But in case any child of the wife should die during minority, and have left no issue surviving it, such child's share was to go to the survivor or survivors of said child absolutely. It was held that the son took an equitable estate in fee, and that, when the wife died, having had no other children, and the husband's estate was extinguished, the son, after reaching his majority, was entitled to have the trustee discharged. Thompson v. Ballard, 70 Md. 10.

A testator appointed his wife executrix, providing that all the real estate after the wife's death should pass to the trustees of a certain academy and their successors, "the annual product to be by them appropriated to the erection of a poorhouse in said county and for the support of its inhabitants forever." It was held that not until the death of the wife could the trustees of the academy take the trust, and that the trust thereafter devolved upon their successors in office forever. Augusta v. Walton, 77 Ga. 517.

So, where by a bequest to the State Insane Asylum, direction was given for the investment of money on a bond and real estate mortgage, the interest to be collected annually and expended under the direction of the superintendents of the asylum, for the purchase of books and papers for the benefit of the inmates, the court ordered the payment of the legacy to the treasurer of the institution, to be held and administered by its managers, on the trust declared in the will. Mason v. M. E. Church, 27 N. J. Eq. 47.

A, having leased his coal lands for a certain royalty, recited the lease in his will and directed his executors, after his death, to take charge of it, and, from the proceeds, first give his wife an ample support during her life, and then divide the remainder equally among his children, share and share alike, and it was held that the trust was active and continuing during the life of the wife only, and that the heirs could make a valid conveyance of their contingent interest to the assignee of the leasehold. Forcey's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 508.

Where a testator left a factory to be used by his son without rent, the son to pay taxes, make repairs and improvements, and keep the premises insured at his own expense, it was held that the property should be insured in the name of the trustee, but that upon the burning of the premises the son was entitled to have the interest money paid to him for the purpose of rebuilding. Wiley v. Morris, 39 N. J. Eq. 97.

A testator devised his real estate in trust, and directed his executors to convert the same into personality, and ultimately turn over the proceeds to a permanent trustee to invest and pay annuities. Until the executors should thus turn over the estate, they were directed to pay the annuities. It was held that the permanent trustee had no duty to perform touching the annuities until the executors had converted enough of the real estate to turn over all necessary proceeds to the trustee; until that time, the executors must pay the annuities. Barry's Appeal, 103 Pa. St. 130.

The will of C., after a statement that, being about to undertake a long and dangerous voyage, he deemed it his duty to make a will "for the benefit and protection" of his wife and his two children, contained this clause: "I do, therefore, make this my last will and testament, giving and bequeathing to my wife, Caroline, all of my property, real and personal, . . . and do appoint my wife, Caroline Maria, my true and lawful attorney and sole executrix of this my will, to take charge of my property after my death, and retain or dispose of the same for the benefit of herself and children above named." It was held that the widow took an absolute title to all of the testator's estate. Clarke v. Leupp, 88 N. Y. 228. See also Dillaye v. Greenough, 45 N. Y. 445; Lambe v. Eames, L. R., 10 Eq. 267; Howarth v. Dewell, 6 Jur. N. S. 1360; Webb v. Woods, 2 Sim. N. S. 267; in re Hutchinson, 8 Ch. Div. 540.

Where real estate is devised to a trustee, in trust, to sell and dispose of the proceeds, but with no authority to receive the rents and profits, he takes no estate in the land under the revised statutes of New York, but the devise is a mere power in trust. De Peyster v. Clendinning, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 295.

A power given in trust, by a will, to partition the trust estate, and, if the trustee thinks best, to sell it for the purpose of the partition, does not require the continuance of the legal estate in the trustee to sustain it. Irving v. De Kay, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 521.

The courts will favor a construction creating a trust rather than an arbitrary power, and in case of a bequest of certain shares of stock to the testator's brother, "in trust for the use and benefit of my two brothers, A and B, to be appropriated to each of their sole uses and benefits at his discretion," it was held that the trustee had a discretion over the appropriation but not an option to appropriate or not. Aldrich v. Aldrich, 12 R. I. 141.

A testator, by a codicil to his will, revoked the provision made in it for his son and gave the property to B., in trust, to keep until the son should prove himself worthy to receive it, and provided that if B. should not judge it best to deliver the property to the son, it should remain the property of B. and his heirs. It was held that B.'s discretion in the matter could not be controlled, in the absence of improper motives or a want of good faith. Bacon v. Bacon, 55 Vt. 243.

A testator gave his estate, real and personal, to trustees, directing the surplus income to be equally divided among his children, authorizing advancements to be made to them under certain circumstances, and providing, when the trust should end, "and the trustees convey the estate to said children, it being my will that said estate shall then be equally divided amongst my children, regard being had to the above mentioned provisions, and the prior advancements of any of said children being considered, said estate it is my will shall go to my children as above mentioned, their heirs and assigns forever." It was held that the trustees, at the termination of the trust, were not bound to make provision, but might convey to the children as tenants in common. How v. Waldron, 98 Mass. 281.

Decedent devised all of his property to trustees, directing them to collect rents and dispose of it so as to increase its value, and to pay to his daughter such sums of money, from time to time, as they should deem proper, and transfer to her the property when she should reach the age of thirty-five years, she being then unmarried. Instructions were also given as to the disposal of the estate in case she should marry or die without issue. It was held that upon the daughter's death, unmarried before reaching the age of thirty-five, the trustees held the legal title in fee to dispose of the property according to the bequests authorized, and that they could not be ejected by the daughter's heirs at law. Kirkland v. Cox, 94 Ill. 400.

In Goddard v. Brown, 12 R. I. 31, a testator bequeathed his interest in manufacturing property to trustees, directing them to pay the residue of his income of the estate, including said property, for the support and education of his children "in such proportions, in such sums, at such times, and in such manner as said trustees in their discretion may think best." It was held, in the absence of a showing of urgent necessity, that, therefore, the trustees could not exercise the power of selling the manufacturing property estate bequeathed.

Trusts in Rents, Income, etc.—Trusts in rents, profits, or income of property, are often created by will, and it is sometimes difficult to determine their nature and extent. The following cases will show the construction given to such trusts: Where land has been devised to trustees to pay the proceeds to the cestui que trust during life, and at his death convey the remainder, all rents which became payable after the testator's death, where the last preceding pay day occurred during his life, were held to be included with the income, no portion belonging to the capital of the fund. Sohier v. Eldredge, 103 Mass. 345. See also Sargent v. Sargent, 103 Mass. 297.

Where the executor was directed to pay all the income derived from the estate to A, after paying the necessary expenses accruing thereon, the estate consisting principally of realty, and A, being a non-resident alien, it was held, under the New York statute, to create an active trust in the executor to receive the rents and profits of the land and apply them to the use of A during his life. Marx v. McGlynn, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 455; 88 N. Y. 357. See also Haltum v. Corse, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 506.

A devise of real estate to the executor, in trust, among other things, to pay the income thereof to the testator's widow, only entitles her to the net income, after deducting taxes, repairs, and the ordinary current expenses attending the estate. Watts v. Howard, 7 Met. (Mass.) 478.

Where the testator gave a fund to his executors, in trust, for each of his four children and his or her issue, and provided that the executor was to safely invest the same and pay to each of the children the interest and income of it during his or her natural life, in such manner and in such amounts as the executors should deem most prudent, and a judgment had been rendered against one of the children, it was held that the executors should apply so much of the income of that child as would be sufficient to satisfy the judgment, a receiver having been appointed under supplemental proceeding on the execution, and it appearing, by the bill, that, of the income coming to the legatee, the executors had enough money in their hands, over and above the amount which they deemed it prudent to pay the legatee, to satisfy the judgment with costs and interest. Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 42.

A testator devised an estate to trustees, directing them to apply the residue of the rents and profits, after the payment of certain charges, to the support of his son for life in such a way that the same should never become liable to the payment of any of his debts, and so that no creditor should ever be able to take or seize it, or any part of it. It was held that the rents not received, whether due and payable, or only accruing at the son's death, did not pass to his executor or to trustees named by him in an ineffectual attempt to execute a power of disposition under his father's will. Horwitz v. Norris, 49 Pa. St. 213.

A testator made a devise to his two nephews, J. and T., and his two nieces, C. and D., share and share alike, providing that, "Whatever portion shall come to J. and my two nieces, shall be held in trust by my executors, for their use, and the net income from the same shall be paid to each respectively, and in case of the death of either, the heirs of such decedent shall receive the same, on arriving at the age of twenty-one years, that the parent would have taken. In the event of the death of either of my nephews or nieces without leaving lawful issue, a child or children to survive them and attain the age of twenty-one years, then the share of such nephew or niece I direct my executors to pay from the principal of said share." It was held that an active trust was created, continuing after J.'s life, and that J. took only the income for life. Livezey's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 201.

Decedent, in his will, directed that a portion of his estate be put at interest in the county treasury for a period of ten years, said interest to be applied annually to the support of the poor of a certain township; and that, at the expiration of that time, the interest should stop, and the principal remain in the treasury for the use of the county forever. This legacy was held to be void for uncertainty. The court further held that the testator's intent made the county the trustee, and that it, as such trustee, had full power to hold the property and administer the trust. Lawrence County v. Leonard, 83 Pa. St. 206.

In a recent Maryland case, there was a conveyance of property in trust for the separate use of a married woman during her life, and thereafter for her husband's support, with a remainder over upon his death. The trust in the husband's favor instructed the trustee to appropriate the net income to the husband's use and support during his natural life. This was held to be a personal trust, extinguished by a sale of the husband's interest in insolvency proceedings after the death of his wife, and that it was immaterial that the purchaser afterwards reconveyed it to him. Thompson v. Ballard, 70 Md. 10.

A testatrix gave to two trustees property, "to be disposed of for the benefit of the poor in the manner hereinafter provided;" and directed them to appoint a committee of three or more persons who should "determine how, by the payments to permanently established and incorporated charitable institutions, my wish to benefit the poor will be best carried into effect," and to dispose of the trust fund "in accordance with the determination of the said gentlemen certified by them to the trustees." The trustees chose the committee, who determined that certain sums should be paid to various corporations of the kind described, and that if the trust fund should exceed the aggregate of these sums, "the residue is to be subject of future disposal by us." The validity of the will being contested, some years elapsed before the trustees were able to reduce the fund to money and pay it over; the residue of the fund at the time of the determination of the committee was more than the aggregate sum apportioned; and during the interval the income accumulated at a greater rate than the legal rate of interest; and one of the committee died. It was held that the corporations designated were not entitled to take the income of any specific part of the fund, nor shares of the whole income proportioned to the sums designated to be paid to them; but to receive the amount of legal interest on such sums from the time of the report of the committee; and that any surplus of the income, after payment of such interest, should be added to the fund for further distribution; that the vacancy on the committee could be filled by appointment by the trustees; and that no further distribution of the fund could be made until after the filling of such vacancy; that in such further distribution the committee might designate that payments be made to institutions of the kind described in the will incorporated since the creation of the trust. Marsh v. Renton, 99 Mass. 132.

In Minot v. Tappin, 127 Mass. 333, a testator devised a portion of his estate to trustees, one of whom was his son, in trust to pay the net income, or so much thereof as the trustee should think proper, to another son, semi-annually, during his life, for his use and benefit, or to expend the whole or any part thereof in the maintenance and education of his children and family, with remainder to the wife for life, and on his death and that of his wife to transfer the trust estate, or so much thereof as might then remain undisposed of, to their children; or, in default of such children, to the testator's heirs at law; and, by another clause, authorized the trustees, in their discretion, to pay only such part of the income as they should deem expedient for the son's use and benefit. The son, for whose benefit the trust was created, died childless and unmarried. The trustees did not pay to him the whole of the income, but it accumulated in their hands. It was held that his administrator was not entitled to such income.

A devise of real estate to A, in trust for B, the regular profits to be paid to the beneficiary exclusively, with the intention of the testatrix being partly declared that the devise was not in any manner to inure for the use and benefit of the creditors of the beneficiary, confers no title to the land on the beneficiary, but vests a mere life estate in the lands and profits such as the creditors cannot reach. Easterly v. Keney, 36 Conn. 18.

In a recent Kentucky case, a devise was made to "A, in trust for the sole and separate use of my daughter M., and, in the event of her marriage, free from any control, interference, or liability of her husband, but giving her the separate control and use of the same, as though she was unmarried." The court held that the principal alone was devised in

c. DEEDS.—The courts are inclined to construe deeds rather more strictly than either marriage articles or wills,¹ but, with this exception, the rules of construction are substantially the same as those which govern the construction of wills.² The application trust for her separate use, and that the disability of infancy which prevented her from receiving the profits arising from the trust property, was not removed by her marriage during her minority, and that the profits accumulating during that period became no part of the principal of the trust estate, but that upon her majority it must pass to her, free from her husband's control. Clark v. Anderson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 99.

By her will, a testatrix gave "the improvement of my property in trust to" a certain named trustee, "the income to be paid equally to my brother and sister during their natural lives, and at their death, the principal I give to my nephews and nieces then surviving." After the death of the testatrix, the brother died, leaving the sister surviving him. The court held that the whole income of the property was payable thereafter to the sister until her death, the gift over in remainder to the nephews and nieces being deferred until that time. Loring v. Coolidge, 99 Mass. 191.

By her will, decedent provided that her debts should be paid out of the first money that might come to hand, and then devised real estate to a trustee to hold the land for fifteen years after her death, distributing the proceeds arising therefrom, and at the expiration of that period, dividing the land. It was held that the fact that the first three years' rentals after her death were applied to pay her debts, did not justify the trustee in holding the land for eighteen years after her death before dividing it. Goodwin v. Goodwin, 69 Mo. 617.

A testator bequeathed the residue of his estate to executors, in trust, to pay the net income to the testator's wife so long as she should remain his widow, to be expended by her in the support of his children, and directed that she be required to give no account of the manner in which she might apply it. The court held that this bequest created no special trust in her, but only rendered her liable to account in case of wrongdoing. Biddle's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 258.

But where a testator created a trust in his property for the benefit of his wife and children, and provided that the fund should not be impaired, unless absolutely necessary for their support, but that its income should be applied to the support and education of the children under the control of the wife, it was held that she became a special trustee for them, and that the trust for their maintenance did not necessarily terminate on the coming of age of one of the children, who continued to be a member of the family. Pilcher v. McHenry, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 77.

A testator made his executors trustees over all trusts created by his will, directing them to pay all incomes over to those who had been given money in trust. It was held that they were trustees over those devised lands where the words "in trust" were used, and that they might pay over all their legacies without seeing to the application of them. Wood v. Hammond, 16 R. I. 98. See generally, as to the validity and construction of such trusts, Kinsey v. Lardner, 15 S. & R. (Pa.) 192; Mason v. Jones, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 229; White v. Howard, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 294; Vail v. Vail, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 317; Tucker v. Tucker, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 99; Harrison v. Harrison, 36 N. Y. 543; Griffin v. Graham, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 96; Bowers v. Mathews, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 258; Bleight v. Manufacturers, etc., Bank, 10 Pa. St. 131; Coburn v. Anderson, 131 Mass. 513; Carr v. Branch, 85 Va. 597; Fay v. Fay, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 93; Putnam v. Story, 132 Mass. 205; Ware v. McCandlish, 11 Leigh (Va.) 623; Rhett v. Mason, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 541; Withers v. Yeardon, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 324.

1. See McPherson v. Snowden, 19 Md. 197, in which it was held that the use of the word "issue," in a declaration of trusts, both in reference to the disposition of the rents and profits, and the disposition of the corpus of the estate, justified the application to that term, thus used, of the rule that technical words are to be construed more strictly in a deed or grant than in a will.

2. A court is not justified in departing from the ordinary meaning of the terms used in a deed, by the mere fact that it is unusual for a man to make a trust in favor of a child of his wife by a former husband. Evans v. King, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 387.

of these rules to particular cases is shown in the authorities, of which a synopsis is given below.¹

If the intent of the deed is fairly ascertainable, parts inconsistent with, or repugnant thereto, may be rejected. State v. Traak, 6 Vt. 355; 27 Am. Dec. 554.

It has been held that a deed to a trustee expressed to be for certain uses, is, as between him and the beneficiaries, to be construed strongly against him. Jones v. Butler, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 641.

A provision, in a deed of trust to secure payment of a debt, for the time and terms of sale, upon the failure of the grantor to pay the debt, is of the obligation of the contract, and a law forbidding sales under such deeds for a limited time is unconstitutional. Taylor v. Stearns, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 244.

A deed to a trustee for a woman and the heirs of her deceased husband, there being but one child, conveys an estate in common for the benefit of the woman and child, and a purchaser from the trustee is charged only with the notice of such an estate, and not with notice of an estate for life in the woman with remainder to the child. Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 504.

1. A conveyed an estate to B, his heirs and assigns forever, to his and their proper use in trust, nevertheless, for the use of A for life and of his children after his death, and in default of such children to his appointees by will, and in default of such appointees then to the use of his right heirs. A was held to have acquired an equitable estate in fee, notwithstanding the intervening power of appointment. Brown v. Renshaw, 57 Md. 67. So where one conveys land and personally in trust for the payment of his debts, the income, afterward, to be paid to himself, and the corpus to his heirs, in case he shall die intestate, his estate is an equitable fee simple as to the land, and an analogous estate as to the personality. Taylor v. Lindsay, 14 R. I. 518.

Real estate was conveyed in trust for the grantor to occupy it, and receive the rents and profits, the trustee to join him in such conveyances as he should make, if the trustee deemed it expedient, and, if requested by the wife and children of the grantor then living, to convey to the grantor, or to such person as he should nominate, and, on the grantor's death, to convey to his heirs. It was held that the children of the grantor took vested equitable interests in the land during his life, which they could convey, subject to the contingency of their dying before their father, or of his exercising his right of appointment. Whipple v. Fairchild, 139 Mass. 262.

As trustee for his wife B, A was required by the court to purchase real estate with her funds, and take a conveyance of it in trust for her separate use in life, the remainder in fee to be his or her children's. Instead of doing this, he took a conveyance "to the only proper use and benefit of the said A, trustee of B, her heirs and assigns forever." It was held that the children became the equitable owners in fee of the remainder, and that the purchaser of the wife's interest at a judicial sale upon execution after the husband's death took her interest subject to the equitable rights of the children. McMillan v. Baker, 85 N. Car. 291.

So, where a fund is given to the trustee for the separate use of a married woman for life, with power of appointment by will, and in default of appointment to her child in fee, the use is not executed on the death of the woman if she fails to exercise the power of appointment, but the legal estate remains in the trustee, and his devisee, although a volunteer, takes it and the property is bound by the trust. Lee v. Simpson, 37 Fed. Rep. 12.

A man executed a deed of trust of property, real and personal, to his three sons, the deed reciting that he had purchased a certain farm, the title to which was in his daughter and her husband, and that they should receive nothing under the trust unless they conveyed it to the trustees. The will provided that the grantees should control the property as fully as if the conveyance had been made free from any trust, with full power to sell and dispose of the same, except that said farm should not be sold until after the death of the grantor, and that the grantor should have the net profits and the use and occupation of the real estate, and should pay all taxes and assessments and keep down all incumbrances; and it was further provided by the deed that the grantor should have a life interest in the benefits arising from the trust, and that at his death the property was to be divided among his children, and it was held that the legal title to the realty was vested in the grantor by the deed, and the trustees had no power to sell it until his death, and that the legal title of the personality was vested in the trustees. Byrne v. Gunning, 75 Md. 30.

Where the deed provided that it was "the intent of said grantors to convey and assign to said A, to be held by him and those who succeed him, in trust for the said grantors, respectively, as to their several estate and interest, they respectively controlling the investments," one grantor's interest to be held free from the control of her husband, another's free from liability for his debts, and the interest of two in a house to be sold "with the affirmative assent of the trustee," and the interest of a third to be sold, the trustee co-operating and uniting, it was held that the trustee held the same kind of interest in all the property conveyed. Warner v. Sprigg, 62 Md. 14.

Where land was conveyed to A in trust for B during B's natural life, and after her death to her heirs in fee simple "to have and hold the said premises unto them and their heirs and assigns forever," it was held that the deed created a trust estate during the beneficiary's life, and that the heirs received a contingent remainder. Zuver v. Lyons, 40 Iowa 510.

In McCoy v. Monte, 90 Ind. 441, where real estate was conveyed to A and B, husband and wife, in trust for C, his children and their descendants, if he should have any, or, in the absence of such children or their descendants, then in trust for the heirs of A and B, with power to sell, and convey such lands with C's consent and recommendation, the proceeds in other land to be held for the same purpose, it was held that such conveyance, under the Indiana statute, did not invest C with a legal title to the land, and that, therefore, he could not convey it to another.

So, where A executed a deed reciting that he did thereby "grant, bargain, and sell" to B, his wife, and her children, under specified limitations, the premises, to hold during A's life as trustee for B and children, for their use, with power to sell, rent, or dispose of the property for their benefit; and that the surviving parent should appoint a trustee to manage the trust after his or her death, until the youngest child should become fifteen years old, when a division was to be made, it was held by the same court that the title was in A, as trustee for B and children. Adams v. Barlow, 69 Ga. 302.

In a peculiar case in Pennsylvania, the following facts developed: In 1828, land was conveyed by A "in trust for the use and benefit of B, his wife and her heirs forever; that is, the children, if any, begotten by A; and her daughter C is to be made equal, to be for them and their heirs forever, after the decease of A, her present husband." The habendum clause stated that it should be held "for the use and benefit of the said wife and her daughter C, and the children begotten by A, if any, upon the body of said B." Five children were afterward born to A and B. A died in 1846. After his death, a special act of the legislature devised the estate of C and the children, and conferred it upon B, who then made a conveyance, and afterwards died. It was held that the word "children," in the deed, was a word of purchase, and not of limitation; that the life estate passed to B, with a vested remainder in C, which opened to let in the subsequently born children; that it was beyond the power of the legislature to devise the remainder, and that, until the death of B, C and the children had no right of possession. Wolford v. Morgenthal, 91 Pa. St. 30.

The grantor conveyed property in trust for his wife and daughters in fee, simply stipulating that the trustee should, upon their request, convey by proper deed to whomsoever they might designate. It was held that this stipulation was merely for a change of trustee, and not to be construed as a limitation of a fee after a fee, or the substitution of a fee for a fee. Clark v. Platt, 30 Conn. 282.

A deed of trust contained apt words of limitation and provided that, if the grantor's wife should leave no will, her share should be conveyed, after his death, to the person or persons legally entitled, and it was held that neither the grantor nor his son who died before him, had any interest in the estate which could be reached by creditors, and that the maxim nemo est haves viventis applied. Johnson v. Whiton, 118 Mass. 340.

A, in consideration of love and affection, executed a conveyance of land to his wife and their children for life, and at her death to the said children, and other children then living, by him, and their heirs, and in case of her death without children, to revert to A and his heirs, with power of said A to act as trustee for the wife and children; to control the property subject to the trust; to collect the rents, issues and profits, and expend the same in the support, maintenance, and education of said wife and children, and with power to the wife to change the trusteeship on application to the chancellor, and it was held that a charge was created in the nature of a trust on the wife's life estate, for the maintenance, support, and education of the children. Maxwell v. Hopple, 70 Ga. 152.

Where a wife conveyed land to herself as trustee, covenanting to hold the title to the use of her daughter F, and any children F might have, free from the control or contracts of any future husband, it was held that F took equally with any children that she might thereafter have born to her. Pearce v. Brooks, 52 Ga. 425.

So, where A executed a deed reciting that he did thereby "grant, bargain, and sell the premises to B, his wife, and her children, under specified limitations, to hold during A's life as trustee for B and children, for their use, with power to sell, rent, or dispose of the property for their benefit, a trustee to be appointed by the surviving parent, to manage the trust after his or her death until the youngest child should become fifteen years of age, when a division was to be made," it was held by the same court that the title was in A as trustee for B and children. Adams v. Barlow, 69 Ga. 302.

Where it is doubtful by the terms of a conveyance to trustees with power to sell, whether the trustees take as joint tenants or tenants in common, the courts will, if possible, hold that they take as joint tenants. So, where a conveyance was made to trustees with power to sell and use the proceeds to pay the expenses and the debts of the grantor, and the deed was silent as to whether the trustees should take as joint tenants or tenants in common, they were held to take as joint tenants. Saunders v. Schmaelzle, 49 Cal. 59.

"A trust deed and a confidential writing delivered at the same time, to be opened and read afterwards, may be construed together." Van Cott v. Prentice, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 317.

So, in another case, a trust in lands conveyed by a mother to her infant son, by a deed absolute and declaration of trust exchanged, was sustained under the circumstances of the case against the heirs of the son after his death, upon the ground that the declaration of trust should be construed with the deed as part of the same transaction, and that the acts and admissions of the son after he became of age indicated that he had confirmed the trust. Owens v. Owens, 23 N. J. Eq. 60.

A father, who was about to marry a second time, conveyed property in trust "for the equal benefit" of his six children, with a reservation of the right to control and manage the property, and order a sale or division at any time as the children should come of age, but stipulating that the funds were to be in no case diverted from the interest of the children. It was held that the children took vested interests, with which there was nothing in the reservation inconsistent, and that a son who left home at the time the deed was executed, could recover what his father had received as his share during his minority from his father's executrix. Baldwin v. Baldwin, 76 Va. 345.

Where the wife's land was conveyed by the husband of the wife, in trust as to one-third part, to pay the rents and profits during the lifetime of the latter to such person as she, whether sole or covert, should from time to time appoint by revocable instrument, or in the default of appointment, to herself, notwithstanding coverture, and in case of coverture to her separate use; and it was further provided that the rents and profits were not to be anticipated, or liable for her debts or for those of her then or any future husband, it was held that the trust was an active one and should be sustained, notwithstanding the devise. Fry's Estate, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 305.

But in another case, a conveyance under seal by A to B of certain lands, which authorized B to sell and convey them, and until sold, to rent them, making deeds for all real estate already contracted to be sold, "on payment of the debts owing on them respectively," and to dispose of the proceeds: First. To meet the expenses of the trust. Second. To pay over the residue to A during his life, or to appropriate it to his use under his direction. Third. After his death, and after his debts should be paid, to distribute the residue as thereafter to be directed in a supplementary writing; but should no such writing be executed, then distributed among the heirs of A. This was held not to create an expressed trust, such as the New York statute authorized, inasmuch as it did not create any trust for the benefit of creditors, nor any trust to receive the lands and profits and apply them to the use of the grantor for life. Heermann v. Burt, 78 N. Y. 259.

Where it is clear that a deed was expressly and exclusively intended to create a trust, the habendum and the covenants do not necessarily give any beneficial interest to the grantee. McElroy v. McElroy, 113 Mass. 509.

A conveyance granting an estate which vests at once, but reserving a life estate to the grantor, creates no trust for the benefit of the grantor in the estate granted. Craven v. Winter, 38 Iowa 472.

The entire instrument whereby the trust is created, must be considered in determining the nature and terms of the trust, and where the granting clause of the deed declares a trust unlimited in time, with a qualification at the close of the description of the premises, putting a limit upon the duration of the trust, this latter clause must be considered as a limitation of the general words first used. Parker v. Murch, 64 Me. 54.

A., for a valuable consideration, conveyed land to the selectmen of a town, and their successors in office, for the use of E., and, after his death, if any of the premises should remain, then to E.'s heirs forever, to hold for the use aforesaid, at the discretion of the grantees, E. being in possession of the premises before and after the conveyance until his death, and having devised the same to his wife in fee. It was held that the said selectmen took a legal estate in trust for E. and his heirs; that, as the legal estate was in trust, it must be commensurate with the trust, and therefore it was an estate in fee simple; and that E. had an equitable fee simple, which he might lawfully devise. Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 180; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 152; Heath v. Knapp, 4 Pa. St. 228.

A conveyed an estate to B, in trust for B's children, then alive and named in the deed, and such others as might be thereafter born of his then wife, to be divided among them equally, and until such division to be occupied and used for the support of the children; and he also conveyed another estate to trustees in trust for the benefit of the wife of B, and at her death to be divided among her children; it was held that the legal estate in the first estate vested, not in the father, but in his existing children named in the deed, subject to open and admit such other children as his wife might thereafter have; that the legal title to the second estate was in the wife, but that, as she had applied for a change of trustees, which had been made, and the sale ordered and made, and thus held herself out as having only an equitable title to the property, she could not disturb the title of the purchaser at the sale. McNish v. Guerard, 4 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 66.

Where a father, by a deed of trust, settles upon his daughter certain slaves for life, and if she marries, then in trust for the joint use of herself and husband, and in case of the death of either of them, then in trust for the survivor, and, upon the death of the survivor, then to the issue that may hereafter be born of the marriage absolutely, the daughter having married twice and having issue by both marriages, the issue of each marriage takes share and share alike. May v. May, 7 Fla. 207; 48 Am. Dec. 431.

Powers of Trustees.—A power to sell and reinvest, given to the trustee, his heirs and assigns, from time to time as he shall deem it expedient, to sell or mortgage, etc., at his discretion, is a special discretionary power, and does not devolve upon a new trustee appointed by the court, and a provision that in case the income of the trust estate shall prove insufficient for the maintenance of the grantor's wife, the trustee shall sell or mortgage a part of the whole and "apply the proceeds to the purposes aforesaid," confers no title of reinvestment, except as to such surplus proceeds as might from time to time be in his hands, for obtaining interest thereon, till needed for the wife's support. Bailey v. Burges, 10 R. I. 422. But a deed to secure a debt, giving the trustee power to "seize, sell, and dispose of" certain real estate, unless the debt be paid at a given time, and providing the manner of sale, and that the proceeds shall be first applied to the payment of the debt, then, if there be any balance, to the grantor, passes such a title to the trustee as will enable him to recover in ejectment to carry into effect the purposes of the trust. Cameron v. Phillips, 60 Ga. 434.

Certain land was conveyed by A for the use of B and others, with an absolute control of the property conveyed; and in the exercise of a "sound discretion to lease and release, incumber or convey, in mortgage or fee, or dispose of in any way the said A, in the exercise of a sound discretion, as aforesaid, may deem best for the interest of said beneficiaries, reinvesting the proceeds thereof for the best interest of the said beneficiary." It was held that this gave the trustee no power to mortgage the property to secure his own individual debt. Merriman v. Russell, 39 Tex. 278. See also Beatty v. Clark, 20 Cal. 11.

Where a deed provides that the trustees are to keep the principal safely invested according to their best judgment, and from the income thereof pay the grantor the sum of $5,000 each year, the annuity is to be derived from the income alone. Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172.

The courts will be mainly governed by the general scope and object of the trust and the nature of the duties which the trustee is required to discharge, in deciding the right of the trustee to retain the possession and management of the trust estate against the equitable tenant for life. Williamson v. Wilkins, 14 Ga. 416.

It does not necessarily follow, from a provision giving the trustees full power to retain the trust property in their hands, unsold and undivided, until after a specified time, that it should be divided after that time. Zabriskie v. Wetmore, 26 N. J. Eq. 18.

Where money is given to a village to erect a suitable building for a high school, without endowment or further direction as to its maintenance, the village may use its reasonable discretion on the subject, and put it on the basis of the public schools. Such building may be lawfully used in connection with preparatory grades, and a court of equity cannot control the construction of the local authorities in completing the scheme and raising money for its support at public expense, otherwise than may be provided for by law, when no private funds are given to the trust for that purpose. Hathaway v. New Baltimore, 48 Mich. 251. See also Kilpatrick v. Graves, 51 Miss. 432.

A made himself the trustee of real estate for the benefit of his wife and children, preserving a power of sale for their benefit according to his own discretion; afterwards, he, with his wife, mortgaged the property, which was sold under the mortgage and a surplus obtained; A being then dead, the surplus was held to belong to the trust and not to A's estate. McAleer's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 138.

Where B. conveyed property to L., by conveyance reciting his approaching marriage and his intention to make a settlement on his contemplated wife, and that the conveyance was made to L. that he might convey the estate to trustees for the benefit of the wife upon such trust as he should approve, the conveyance was held to authorize L., with B.'s approval, to insert a power of sale in the trust deed. Belmont v. O'Brien, 12 N. Y. 394.

After a deed of trust upon land had been recorded, the grantor conveyed the property to a third person, who conveyed it to another. The first grantor then moved from the land, and the last alienee moved in. While the last alienee was thus residing on the land, it was entered upon by the trustee, under the deed of trust, sold according to the provisions of the trust, and conveyed to the purchaser. In ejectment by the purchaser from the trustee against the purchaser from the grantor, it not being found that there was any adverse possession at the time of the conveyance by the trustee, the conveyance by the trustee was held valid. Pownall v. Taylor, 10 Leigh (Va.) 179; 34 Am. Dec. 725.

A husband conveyed, by post-nuptial settlement, all the property which he had acquired by his marriage to trustees, to hold and keep the principal and interest during the marriage exempt from his debts, contracts, and control; to be managed and disposed of on the separate orders and receipts of his wife, or by her deeds or will, so that she might enjoy and dispose of it as it came from her parents and sister, or might thereafter in any manner accrue to her, in all respects as if she was not married; and it was held that all the interest which her husband had acquired by the marriage passed to the trustees by the deed, which created a good and valid trust under the New York statute; that the deed did not pass the right to dispose of the real estate involved, nor the rents and profit thereof beyond the lifetime of the husband, as he had no power to convey, and that the fee in the realty, and the right to dispose of it, and the rents and profits after his decease, remained as if the deed had not been executed; and that the power of appointment by the deed to the wife extended to the absolute disposal by her of the principal and income, or any part thereof. Cruger v. Cruger, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 225.

The owner of land in fee executed declarations or certificates of trust to several persons, by which he acknowledged that each had an equal share therein, and agreed to hold the same in trust for them, to sell and dispose thereof for their benefit, and to divide the proceeds among them, and, if directed by them, to allot and set apart the land to and among the owners. It was held that the holders of the certificates had each an interest in the power and covenants of the declarant, and that he was bound to execute them personally and could not delegate them or substitute others to execute them, and that it was part of the consideration that the owner should exercise his skill and judgment in disposing of the estate. Suarez v. Pumpelly, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 336. The trustee of lands, in which he had a life estate, was authorized by the court of chancery to execute a mortgage on them for the money already advanced and debts due from him, as also for moneys to be advanced, and to apply the proceeds to the payment of his debts, and invest the surplus to yield an income for his support. It was held that he was not authorized by this to execute a mortgage for clothing to be thereafter furnished him or his children, nor upon a verbal promise or written agreement to advance him money. Williamson v. Field, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 533.

W. entered into a contract with D., by which he agreed to give the latter $200, in consideration that D. would give him the numbers of certain tracts of public land which he (W.) wished to enter; and after D. gave him the numbers, W. sent an agent to the proper office with directions to enter the land for him. D. went to the place of entry and in conversation with the agent offered to enter the land for W., but before the agent could enter the land for W., D. entered it for himself and refused to transfer it to W. It was held that the contract between W. and D. created a relation of private trust and confidence between them, and that D. was bound to do nothing adverse to W. in the matter, and upon the tender of $200 and the amount paid for the land, the court decreed that D. should hold the land in trust for W. Winn v. Dillon, 27 Miss. 494.

A trust authorized the trustee to receive certain money and invest a portion in an accumulating fund, and at the donor's decease to pay over so much of said fund to the trustee under the will of her late husband as might be necessary to make the value of the property in the hands of said trustee equal to the present value of $146,000; in fact, at the time the will was made the value of the property in the hands of the trustee under the will was less than that sum. It was held that the trustee under the deed should pay to the trustee under the will enough to make the value of the property in his hands equal to $146,000. Lowell v. Loring, 1 Allen (Mass.) 466.

A conveyed land to B by an absolute deed, and B gave a written contract to A, promising to sell the land at a certain time and pay two notes with the proceeds, and the balance to A. It was held that B took the land in trust, and that it was his duty to make a sale at the time specified and appropriate the proceeds in a manner settled in the contract; that C, who was a surety on one of the notes, though ignorant of the trust at the time it was undertaken, was yet entitled to enforce his execution when informed of it, if it had been previously valid, and if there was a mortgage on the estate not mentioned in the contract but known to B at the time of its execution, he might pay it off and take the amount from the proceeds of the sale. Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355; 48 Am. Dec. 492.

Real estate and slaves were conveyed in trust to pay a debt, with the stipulation that the slaves be first sold, and in the event they should fail to produce enough to pay the debt, then the real estate should be sold. By the request of the person in interest, sale was delayed, and before the sale was made the civil war emancipated the slaves. It was held that this emancipation did not preclude the sale of the land, as the proper construction of the trust required, not that a sale of all the slaves conveyed must take place before the land could be sold, but that in the administration of the trust, personal prop-

X. ACCEPTANCE OR DISCLAIMER BY TRUSTEE.—No one can be compelled to act as trustee of an express trust, if he refuses to accept the appointment.¹ Even where one has agreed in advance to accept the trust, he may afterwards refuse to do so.² And where a conveyance is made in trust to public officers and their successors in office, the successors are not bound unless they accept the trust.³

erty should first be used, and that such personal property as had existed at the time of the sale, must be taken as far as it would go, and after that the real estate. Thurmond v. Woods, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 727.

A deed of gift by a father, of certain property, including two negro women, to his daughter and her husband, and her children, born and to be born, for their support during her life, with remainder to the children, and appointing a trustee, makes the mother a joint tenant or tenant in common with her children, and the trustee is entitled to the possession, which he must take as soon as the proper execution of the deed requires. Davis v. Hunter, 23 Ga. 172.

A deed which conveyed land in trust for A and the heirs of her body upon a sufficient consideration, and provided that the trustee, at the request of A and her heirs, might sell the estate conveyed, and hold the proceeds of such sale in trust in like manner, was held not to exclude the power to mortgage for the benefit of the beneficiaries. Wood v. Kice, 103 Mo. 329.

Under the provisions of an instrument of trust, the trustee was directed when the beneficiary was twenty-two years old to invest the trust funds in a farm, and advance what implements and stock should be needed to operate it, the implements and stock to be given to the beneficiary absolutely, and the farm to stand in the name of the trustee. Authority was given to the trustee to sell the farm at any time, and invest the proceeds in real-estate securities. It was held that a court of equity had the power to authorize the trustee to make such investments at once, without first purchasing the farm. Milligan v. Pleasant, 74 Md. 8.

But where real estate was conveyed to a trustee in trust to receive the rents and profits and pay them to A for life; on her death to sell or partition the real estate, one-third to vest in B, and a further trust was declared as to the residue thereof; it was held that the trustee had no power to execute a lease which, as against B, would be binding after the death of A. In re McCaffrey's Estate, 50 Hun (N. Y.) 371.

See also the following additional cases involving the construction of peculiar deeds of trust: Thompson v. McDonald, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 463; Bowen v. Chase, 94 U. S. 812; Embury v. Sheldon, 50 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 324; Albee v. Holmes, 114 Mass. 470; Hobbs v. Chesley, 55 N. H. 31; Scott v. Rand, 118 Mass. 215; Harding v. St. Louis F. Ins. Co., 2 Tenn. Ch. 465; Guilmartin v. Stevens, 55 Ga. 203; Provost v. Provost, 7 Hun (N. Y.) 81; Jones v. Butler, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 413; Oxford Union, etc., Soc. v. West Congregational Soc., 55 N. H. 463; Tyson v. Latrobe, 42 Md. 325; Badgett v. Keating, 31 Ark. 400; Thomas v. Crawford, 57 Ga. 211; Ash's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 497; North American Land Co.'s Estate, 83 Pa. St. 493; Du Bose v. Carlisle, 51 Ala. 590; Tyler v. Granger, 48 Cal. 259.

1. Robinson v. Pitt, 3 P. Wms. 251; Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 123; Moyle v. Moyle, 2 R. & M. 715; Mahony v. Hunter, 30 Ind. 250; Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 298; 8 Am. Dec. 269; Burritt v. Silliman, 13 N. Y. 93; 64 Am. Dec. 530.

He may renounce such a trust, even if such renunciation would deprive the beneficiary of some benefit intended for him by the testator. Beekman v. Bonsor, 23 N. Y. 298; 80 Am. Dec. 269; Kennedy v. Winn, 80 Ala. 166.

2. Doyle v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 239; Evans v. John, 4 Beav. 35; Smith v. Knowles, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 413; Crook v. Ingoldsby, 2 Ir. Eq. 375.

Such refusal will not invalidate the trust, for the court will appoint another trustee. Nicoll v. Miller, 37 Ill. 387; Nicoll v. Ogden, 29 Ill. 323; 81 Am. Dec. 311; Cloud v. Calhoun, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 358; Eltner v. Fife, 32 Ohio St. 358; Johnson v. Roland, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 203; Thatcher v. St. Andrew's Church, 37 Mich. 264. See also infra, this title, Succession and Appointment of New Trustee.

3. Delaplaine v. Lewis, 19 Wis. 476. Under the Rhode Island Statute of

No title vests in the proposed trustee unless he expressly or impliedly accepts the trust, or in some manner assumes the duties and liabilities thereof.¹ In the absence of anything to the contrary, a trust, beneficial to the trustee, will be presumed to have been accepted, especially after a long period of time has elapsed without any disclaimer.²

The acceptance may be express,³ or it may be implied from acts of the proposed trustee, such as qualifying and proceeding to carry out the provisions of the trust deed or will,⁴ permitting an action concerning the trust property to be brought in his name,⁵

March 8th, 1861, ch. 367, authorizing gifts to the commissioners of burial grounds in Providence, in trust for the care of the cemetery, and directing the investment and application of the income of such fund, the commissioners have no vested right, as trustees, to funds accruing prior to the passage of the statute of April 25th, 1889, ch. 781, directing them to pay the same over to commissioners of the sinking fund of said city, to be by them administered under the trust, as the trustees are municipal officers, subject to removal by the legislature at any time. Smith v. Westcott, 17 R. I. 366.

1. Townson v. Tickell, 3 B. & Ald. 31; 5 E. C. L. 519; Trask v. Donaghue, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 370; Stacey v. Elph, 1 Myl. & K. 195; Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; Bethune v. Dougherty, 21 Ga. 257; Cooper v. McClun, 16 Ill. 435; King v. Donnelly, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 46; De Peyster v. Clendinning, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 295; Judson v. Gibbons, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 224; Bulkley v. Depeyster, 26 Wend. (N. Y.) 21; Mahony v. Hunter, 30 Ind. 246; Armstrong v. Morrill, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 138. Compare Christain v. Yancey, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 240; Bixler v. Taylor, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 362.

2. Read v. Robinson, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 331; Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 494; Penny v. Davis, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 313; Furman v. Fisher, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 626; 94 Am. Dec. 210; Roberts v. Moseley, 64 Mo. 507; In re Needham, 1 Jones & L. 34; Thompson v. Leach, Vent. 198; Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head (Tenn.) 67; Wise v. Wise, 2 Jones & L. 412. Compare Matter of Robinson, 37 N. Y. 261. See also Barclay v. Goodloe, 83 Ky. 493.

No formal acceptance is necessary on the part of the trustee where the legal title to a slave is conveyed to him in trust for the use of another; it will be presumed from the possession remaining with the beneficiary. Penny v. Davis, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 313.

3. Express acceptance is generally shown by the trustee signing the deed, or writing his acceptance. Patterson v. Johnson, 113 Ill. 559.

Declaration of Trust.—The trustee may also execute what is called a declaration of trust, stating that he holds certain property in trust for certain persons, etc. The owner of property may constitute himself a trustee in this way. The declaration may be in writing, or, in the case of personal property, it may be parol. See DECLARATIONS, vol. 5, p. 368. See also Doe v. Harris, 16 M. & W. 517; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 95 Ill. 267; 35 Am. Rep. 166; Tanner v. Skinner, 11 Bush (Ky.) 120; Urann v. Coates, 109 Mass. 581; Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180; McClellan v. McClellan, 65 Me. 500; supra, this title, Who May Create a Trust.

4. Earle v. Earle, 93 N. Y. 104; Harvey v. Gardner, 41 Ohio St. 642; Ridenour v. Wherritt, 30 Ind. 485; Flint v. Clinton Co., 12 N. H. 432; Lewis v. Baird, 3 McLean (U. S.) 56; Crocker v. Lowenthal, 83 Ill. 579.

Where a party is both executor and trustee under a will, it has been held that the fact that he takes out letters of administration as executor, amounts to an acceptance of the trust. Sangston v. Hack, 52 Md. 173. But see Daggett v. White, 128 Mass. 398; Anderson v. Earle, 9 S. Car. 460; Green v. Green, 4 Redf. (N. Y.) 357. Declining to act as executor is not necessarily a renunciation of the trust, where the same party is appointed both executor and trustee. Garner v. Dowling, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 48. But see Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Woods, 4 N. Y. Supp. 133; 51 Hun (N. Y.) 640.

5. Montford v. Cadogan, 17 Ves. 485; Taylor v. Atwood, 47 Conn. 498.

or otherwise dealing with the trust property as trustee.¹ Parol evidence of his acts and declarations is admissible to prove acceptance,² and if they are ambiguous they will be construed as an acceptance of the trust with all its responsibilities.³

As already stated, one named as a trustee may decline to accept the trust. This he may do by a disclaimer. The disclaimer generally reaches back and takes effect as of the time of the creation of the trust, provided there has been no acceptance, either express or implied, and provided further that no intervening rights have been acquired to prevent.⁴ It may be parol,⁵ and acts inconsis-

1. James v. Frearson, 1 Y. & C. C. 370; Bence v. Gilpin, L. R., 3 Exch. 76; Conyngham v. Conyngham, 1 Ves. 522; McBride v. McIntyre, 91 Mich. 406; Wadd v. Hazleton, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 602.

Where separate assignments of a judgment are made to two different parties for the benefit of infant children, and both assignees file petitions in a pending suit claiming to be entitled to the control of said judgment, the successful assignee will be regarded as having accepted the assignment and as holding the judgment in trust for the children. Feamster v. Feamster, 35 W. Va. 1.

Where an executor accepts securities intended by the testator for another, an obligation is created on his part, as trustee, to carry out the wishes of the deceased and deliver the trust property to such other person. Wadd v. Hazleton (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 410.

So, where a trustee named in a deed acts under it by advertising the property for sale, it will amount to an acceptance of the trust, though he may not have the deed in his possession. Crocker v. Lowenthal, 83 Ill. 579.

The institution of a suit to recover the property conveyed, and the execution of a power of attorney to an agent to execute the trust, are unequivocal acts of acceptances of the trust, and place the party in the same condition as if he had accepted it in the beginning. Christian v. Yancey, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 240.

One receiving money to hold in trust, and acknowledging the trust by declarations and the payment of interest to the beneficiary, cannot repudiate it. Crist v. Hovis, 12 N. J. Eq. 84.

Though the liabilities and duties of a trustee cannot be imposed upon a man without his assent, yet where one with a knowledge of his appointment as trustee, interferes with the trust property in such a manner and to such an extent as cannot be accounted for on any other ground than an acceptance of the trust, his interference will be sufficient proof of an acceptance, and will subject him to all the responsibilities of a trustee in the same manner as if the office had been expressly accepted. Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; Chaplin v. Givens, Rice Eq. (S. Car.) 132.

Where A conveys land to B, to be afterward reconveyed to him by B, an express trust is created which B accepts by accepting the deed. Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 230.

2. Doe v. Harris, 16 M. & W. 517; Urch v. Walker, 3 Myl. & C. 703; James v. Frearson, 1 Y. & C. C. 370.

3. Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 115; Read v. Truelove, Amb. 417; Montgomery v. Johnson, 11 Ir. Eq. 476; Chaplin v. Givens, Rice Eq. (S. Car.) 132; Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 494. This statement, of course, presupposes that the acts or declarations are such as reasonably admit of such a construction.

4. Stacey v. Elph, 1 Myl. & K. 195. Before final action has been taken by the register on a resignation tendered under the Alabama Code, § 3727, the trustee may withdraw such resignation and execute the power of sale conferred by the trust deed. Dillard v. Winn, 60 Ala. 285.

5. Nicolson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 369; Bray v. West, 9 Sim. 429; Peppercom v. Wayman, 5 De G. & S. 230; Thompsons v. Meek, 7 Leigh (Va.) 419; Roseboom v. Moshier, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 61; Com. v. Mateer, 16 S. & R. (Pa.) 416; Rex v. Wilson, 5 M. & R. 140; Small v. Marwood, 4 M. & R. 190; Begbie v. Crook, 2 Bing. N. Cas. 70; 29 E. C. L. 259; Adams v. Taunton, 5 Madd. 435; Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Woods, 4 N. Y. Supp. 133; 51 Hun (N. Y.) 640. But merely declining to act as executor is not necessarily a ent with an acceptance may be sufficient.¹ It ought properly, however, to be in writing.² The disclaimer may also be made in a pleading in a case in court.³

If the trustee named in a will is given a legacy or benefit, independent of the office, he may disclaim the trust without losing such legacy or benefit,⁴ but he cannot disclaim the trust and at the same time claim the benefit, if it is merely annexed to the office in the nature of a perquisite and not an independent gift to the individual.⁵

The effect of a disclaimer, so far as the trust is concerned, is to leave it in the same condition as if the disclaiming trustee had never been nominated.⁶ If, therefore, other trustees remain who have not disclaimed, the property will vest in them to carry out the trust,⁷ and if there is no trustee who has not disclaimed, the renunciation of a trust created by the will. Garner v. Dowling, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 48.

1. Wardwell v. McDowell, 31 Ill. 364; Thornton v. Winston, 4 Leigh (Va.) 152; Williams v. King, 43 Conn. 572; Ayres v. Weed, 16 Conn. 291; Judson v. Gibbons, 5 Wend. (N. Y.) 224.

2. Stacey v. Elph, 1 Myl. & K. 199.

3. Clemens v. Clemens, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Hickson v. Fitzgerald, 1 Moll. 14; Legg v. Mackrell, 1 Giff. 166; Ladbroke v. Bleaden, 16 Jur. 630; In re Ellison's Trust, 2 Jur. N. S. 62; Foster v. Dawber, 1 D. & S. 172; Norway v. Norway, 2 Myl. & K. 278.

4. Pollexfen v. Moore, 3 Atk. 272.

5. Calvert v. Sebbon, 4 Beav. 222; Lewis v. Mathews, L. R., 8 Eq. 277; Slaney v. Watney, L. R., 2 Eq. 418; Kirkland v. Narramore, 105 Mass. 31; 7 Am. Rep. 497.

In Kirkland v. Narramore, 105 Mass. 31, it was held that, under a clause in the will providing "I hereby appoint Franklin Narramore as trustee, to take and keep the above legacies, the income of which he shall appropriate to their comfort so long as they live. After their decease, what remains I bequeath to the above trustee," the trustee could not take such remainder, unless he accepted the trust, either expressly or by doing some act under his appointment.

If one accepts a trust and then dies, his heir cannot disclaim it. Humphrey v. Morse, 2 Atk. 408; Co. Litt. 9 a; King v. Phillips, 16 Jur. 1080. But see Creagh v. Blood, 2 Jones & L. 170; Hill on Trustees, 224.

6. Townson v. Tickell, 3 B. & Ald. 31; 5 E. C. L. 219; Hawkins v. Kemp,

3 East 410; Smith v. Wheeler, 1 Vent. 128; Leggett v. Hunter, 19 N. Y. 445; Clemens v. Clemens, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 366; Dunning v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 296; Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head (Tenn.) 67. See also Thatcher v. St. Andrew's Church, 37 Mich. 264; Johnson v. Roland, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 203; Martin v. Paxson, 66 Mo. 260.

A trustee who has surrendered his position cannot thereafter confer any of his original powers on his successor who is appointed subject to the control of the court touching the trust. Kendall v. Edwards, 134 U. S. 117.

7. Denne v. Judge, 11 East 288; Ellis v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 107 Mass. 13; Webster v. Vandeverter, 6 Gray (Mass.) 428; Ratcliffe v. Sangston, 18 Md. 383; Matter of Crossman, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 350; Trask v. Donoghue, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 370.

Upon the refusal of one of several trustees to accept the trust, it devolves upon the others, and the whole trust estate vests in them; but if all refuse, though the legal estate nominally vests in the trustees, the execution of the trust devolves upon the court, and new trustees may, if necessary, be appointed. King v. Donnelly, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 46; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318; McCooker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Burrill v. Shiel, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 457; Gamble v. Dabney, 20 Tex. 69; Lee v. Randolph, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 12.

So where there are joint trustees, and one dies, the others take by survivorship. Stewart v. Pettus, 10 Mo. 755; Mixon v. Rose, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 425; Gray v. Lynch, 8 Gill (Md.) 403. See also Jones v. Maffet, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 523.

estate will generally vest in the heirs or personal representatives, subject to the trust.¹

XI. RESIGNATION AND REMOVAL OF TRUSTEE.—A trustee, having once accepted the trust, is not entitled to resign or renounce the trust as of right without good cause.² There must be some provision in the declaration of trust giving him the right to resign, or he must get the consent of all the parties or a decree from the court.³

Courts of equity have jurisdiction to remove trustees and

1. Austin v. Marten, 25 Beav. 523; Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head (Tenn.) 67.

If, by reason of the disclaimer of trustees, the property descends to the heir at law, who is also the beneficiary, the legal estate is cast upon the beneficiary, and if, upon his application to a court of competent jurisdiction, a trustee is appointed, in whom the legal estate is vested, coupled with the trusts, the legal estate is by necessary implication divested out of the beneficiary. Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head (Tenn.) 67. Ordinarily, however, upon the decease of a trustee who has accepted, his interest passes to his executor, and if he has instituted suit as trustee, it should survive in the name of the executor. Mauldin v. Armistead, 14 Ala. 702; De Peyster v. Ferrers, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 13. See also Schenck v. Schenck, 16 N. J. Eq. 174; Nichols v. Campbell, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 561; Powell v. Knott, 16 Ala. 364; Tyler v. Mayre, 95 Cal. 160. But see McDougald v. Carey, 38 Ala. 340; Armstrong v. Park, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 195.

But where an executor is also appointed trustee under the will, an administrator de bonis non appointed on the death of such executor, is not, by virtue of such appointment, constituted trustee; and the cestui que trust cannot recover of such administrator interest on the trust fund, Knight v. Loomis, 30 Me. 204. And where a trust terminates at the death of the trustee, the trust property does not pass to his personal representative. Cook v. Dyer, 47 Mo. 214.

In a recent case, where an executor refused to act as testamentary trustee and filed his resignation as trustee in court, which was not acted on, the court, at the instance of the beneficiary, who could not get the income or find another trustee, treated both executors as trustees, and held them accountable to the beneficiary. Tucker v. Grundy, 83 Ky. 540. See infra, this title, Succession and Appointment of New Trustee.

2. Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland Ch. (Md.) 409; Sargent v. Howe, 21 Ill. 148; Perkins v. McGavock, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 265; Ross v. Barclay, 18 Pa. St. 179; 55 Am. Dec. 616; Cruger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314; Brennan v. Willson, 71 N. Y. 506; Craig v. Craig, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 76; Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 576. But see Bogle v. Bogle, 3 Allen (Mass.) 158; Eighmie v. Townsend (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 464.

As to what is good cause, see Howard v. Rhodes, 1 Keen 581; Hamilton v. Fry, 2 Moll. 458; Coventry v. Coventry, 1 Keen 758; Taylor v. Glanville, 3 Madd. 176. See also Ex p. Greenhouse, 1 Madd. 92; Curtis v. Chandler, 6 Madd. 123; Bowditch v. Bannelos, 1 Gray (Mass.) 220; Field v. Arrow-smith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185; Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. 27; Curtis v. Smith, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537; Green v. Blackwell, 31 N. J. Eq. 37.

Interference of the cestui que trust may be good cause for the resignation of the trustee. Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 576.

3. Shepherd v. M'Evers, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 136; 8 Am. Dec. 561; Thatcher v. Candee, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 387; Diefendorf v. Spraker, 10 N. Y. 246; Matter of Miller, 15 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 277; Switzer v. Skiles, 8 Ill. 529; 44 Am. Dec. 723; Toms v. Williams, 41 Mich. 552; Drane v. Gunter, 19 Ala. 731; Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 123. The consent of the parties will not be sufficient unless they are sui juris. Cruger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314; Matter of Jones, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 615; Courtenay v. Courtenay, 3 Jones & L. 529; Henderson v. Sherman, 47 Mich. 267.

The beneficiary is not a necessary party in a suit by a trustee for the purpose of resigning his trust and appointing a successor under the powers appoint others.¹ Thus, trustees who are incompetent or unfit,² who commit a breach of trust,³ leave the country and reside in the will. Barclay v. Goodloe, 83 Ky. 493.

In Vermont, under Revised Laws, § 2289, which provide that "a trustee may decline or resign his trust when the probate court sees proper to allow the same," the trusteeship does not become vacant upon the neglect of the trustee to give a bond under section 2288—, making such failure a declination of the trust, but the probate judge must first accept the declination or make an order removing him. Foss v. Sowles, 62 Vt. 221.

A party to a petition by a trustee to be discharged, cannot afterward raise questions that might have been decided in that proceeding. Culross v. Gibbons, 130 N. Y. 447.

1. Matter of Livingston, 34 N. Y. 555; People v. Norton, 9 N. Y. 176; Bowditch v. Bannelos, 1 Gray (Mass.) 220; Williamson v. Suydam, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 723; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404. See infra, this title, Succession and Appointment of New Trustees. And in a proceeding for the removal of the trustee of property of a corporation in another state, the property being mortgaged to secure bonds of the corporation, the court has jurisdiction to restrain the trustee from proceeding with an action, brought in a court of such other state, to foreclose the mortgage. Gibson v. American L. & T. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 443.

2. Backhaus v. Backhaus, 70 Wis. 518; In re Mayfield, 17 Mo. App. 684; Savage v. Gould, 60 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 234.

Bankruptcy may be sufficient cause for removal. Harris v. Harris, 29 Beav. 107; Bainbridge v. Blair, 1 Beav. 495; In re Bridgman, 1 D. & S. 164; Com'rs, etc. v. Archbold, 11 Ir. Eq. 187; In re Roche, 1 Conn. & L. 306. But see Williamson v. Nichol, 47 Ark. 254; Rankin v. Barcroft, 114 Ill. 441; Turner v. Maule, 5 Eng. L. & Eq. 222; Belknap v. Belknap, 5 Allen (Mass.) 468; Shryock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 430, showing that it does not necessarily disqualify.

Drunkenness may be sufficient cause. Bayles v. Staats, 5 N. J. Eq. 513; Everett v. Prythergch, 12 Sim. 367. See also Fisk v. Stubbs, 30 Ala. 335.

Lunacy may be sufficient cause. Piper's Appeal, 20 Pa. St. 67; Matter of Wadsworth, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 381; In re Holland, 16 Ch. Div. 672; In re Martyn, 26 Ch. Div. 745; In re Watson, 19 Ch. Div. 384.

Where the trustees who are to manage the affairs of a church corporation are required to be members of the church, one who withdraws himself from the church and joins another denomination, which latter prohibits a connection by its members with the former, will be considered as having abandoned his office, and as having no further interest in the property of the church he has left. Ross v. Crockett, 14 La. Ann. 823.

3. Atty. Gen'l v. Pearson, 7 Sim. 309; Thompson v. Thompson, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 161; Clemens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 171; Matter of Mechanics' Bank, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 446.

Neglecting to invest trust funds is a breach of trust for which a trustee may be removed, where the will creating the trust requires investment of the funds. Cavender v. Cavender, 114 U. S. 464; Deen v. Cozzens, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 178; Gartside v. Gartside, 113 Mo. 348.

So, speculating with the trust fund constitutes a breach of trust. Rankin v. Barcroft, 114 Ill. 441. So does receiving personal gain therefrom, Clemens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 171; Ex p. Phelps, 9 Mod. 357; or destroying the trust property, Ex p. Greenhouse, 1 Madd. 92; making improper loans, and the like, Johnson v. Simpson, 9 Pa. St. 416; Buckeridge v. Glassey, 1 Cr. & Phill. 126.

So, the refusal of a co-trustee to join in a conveyance of land, on the ground that its sale would interfere with his personal interest, is ground for his removal. Matter of Frisbie, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 22. But it has been held that a testamentary trustee who has not committed a breach of trust, will not be removed merely because certain transactions, not endangering the security of the estate, were probably entered into for his own personal advantage. Matter of Morgan, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 612.

A testator directed his property to be divided into equal parts at the death of his wife, one of which he gave to his son in trust for such child or children as he might have either at the time of division or thereafter, share and share alike. The trustee, with the assent of abroad,¹ or refuse to act after acceptance,² may be removed. But the mere refusal to exercise a discretionary power,³ or the mere disagreement between the trustee and the cestui que trust,⁴ is not sufficient cause for removal; nor is the mere failure to make the best possible investment necessarily cause for removal where the trustee acts in good faith.⁵

his children, used the income from the property for himself, making and changing investments at discretion. On the death of one of his children, leaving an infant daughter surviving, it was held that she was entitled to have the trust fund brought into court, and, on the trustee's failure to obey such order, to have him removed. Ehlen v. Ehlen, 63 Md. 267.

A trust company, to which a mortgage of the property of a corporation was executed to secure payment of bonds, sued to foreclose the mortgage. Its attorney, with the authority of the trust company, consented that the lien of the mortgage should be subordinated to expenditures incurred for improvements on the property, subsequent to the mortgage, by another corporation to which it had been conveyed by the mortgagor. This was held to be ground for an action to remove the trust company as trustee. Gibson v. American L. & T. Co., 58 Hun (N. Y.) 443.

So, where a person was appointed trustee of a sinking fund to pay a railroad company's debts, with power to invest the fund in such securities as the president or board of directors might recommend, without previous direction loaned a portion of the fund to a banking firm of which he was a member, and which soon after became insolvent, it was held that this was a breach of trust and could not be condoned by the board, although to secure the loan he had taken collaterals which he thought good at the time, and he should be removed and a receiver appointed. North Carolina R.Co. v. Wilson, 81 N.Car.223.

Where two trustees have committed a breach of trust, the court may determine the order in which they shall be answerable for the loss. McCartin v. Traphagen, 43 N. J. Eq. 323.

It has been held no defense to a petition for the removal of an insolvent trustee who has been guilty of misconduct, that he had settled with the cestui que trust, and that the fund is in the hands of a co-trustee, against whom no complaint is made. Matter of Wiggins, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 271.

1. Millard v. Eyre, 2 Ves. Jr. 94; In re Bignold's Trust, L. R., 17 Ch. 224; Lill v. Neafie, 31 Ill. 101; Lane v. Lewis, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 468; Farmers L. & T. Co. v. Hughes, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 130; Tilden v. Fiske, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 357; Maxwell v. Finnie, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 434; Dorsey v. Thompson, 37 Md. 25; State v. Hunt, 46 Mo. App. 616.
2. Wood v. Stane, 8 Price 613; Travell v. Danvers, Finch 380; Clark v. Wilson, 77 Ind. 176; Brower v. Callender, 105 U. S. 88.

One who denies that he is a trustee, should be removed. Irvine v. Dunham, 111 U. S. 327.

In a suit to remove the defendant as trustee under a deed providing that on resignation of the trustee named, the court should appoint a successor, it appeared that the defendant had been appointed to succeed the original trustee, who had resigned. It was held that the fact that the defendant held the plaintiff out as trustee, and himself neglected the trust, warranted his displacement as nominal trustee, and justified a decree requiring him to convey the legal title to the plaintiff. Lathrop v. Baubie, 106 Mo. 470.

3. Lee v. Young, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 532; Gibbes v. Smith, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 131.

4. Forster v. Davies, 4 De G. F. & J. 139; Atty. Gen'l v. Chapman, 3 Beav. 255; Nickles v. Philips, 18 Fla. 732; Clemens v. Caldwell, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 171; Naglee's Estate, 52 Pa. St. 154. But strong mutual hostility between the trustee and the beneficiary was held sufficient cause for removal in a recent case, where the trustee was invested by will with a wide discretion. Wilson v. Wilson, 145 Mass. 490; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404. So disagreement among co-trustees has been held sufficient cause for removal. Quackenboss v. Southwick, 41 N. Y. 117; Matter of Bernstein, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 20.

5. Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; In re Dufree, 4 R. I. 401; Berry v. Williamson, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 245; Atty. Gen'l v. Cooper's Co., 19

The state cannot remove the trustees of a private corporation and appoint others in their place.¹

A trustee cannot be removed by the court, ordinarily at least, without due notice and an opportunity to be heard.² The proper

Ves. 192; Matter of Seymour's Estate, 62 Hun (N. Y.) 531; Dow v. Dow, 63 Hun (N. Y.) 628.

A appointed B trustee of an estate which was given to C for life, and on his death to his appointees. C by his will appointed D trustee, giving the estate to B for life, and on his death to his appointees, or, failing such appointment, to B's lawful issue. On the death of C, D took possession of the trust estate, B himself having previously invested it in another state, and continued the investment for twenty years, when it was changed by enlarging the security. Such investment was greatly to B's advantage, and netted him a large, regular income free from taxation, and was amply secured. It was held that D should not be removed as trustee on application of B and his children because of his failure to reduce the estate to cash, and bring it into the state for investment, without a demand for the change of investment, it appearing that he acted in good faith for the benefit of the trust, that he was of good financial standing, and had taken steps on the filing of the petition to comply with the law. Matter of Seymour's Estate (Supreme Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 91. See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813.

To justify the removal of a trustee for a breach of duty, his act must ordinarily be such as to endanger the trust property, or show a want of honesty or capacity, and where the failure in duty has proceeded from a misunderstanding, the court will generally refuse to remove him. Matthews v. Murchison, 17 Fed. Rep. 760.

But where a trustee has settled his account as executor, and has had the balance found due from him transferred to his account as trustee under the will, and as such trustee he is required to invest the property and pay over the income, and he does neither, and admits his insolvency, he should be removed and a successor appointed to carry out the trust, and, if necessary, bring suit on the bond. Cavender v. Cavender, 3 McCrary (U.S.) 158.

The mere fact that a trustee threatens to call in safely invested trust funds to use the same in his own business is not cause for his removal, unless the circumstances show bad faith on his part. Massey v. Stout, 4 Del. Ch. 274.

Where a sum of money is bequeathed in trust, to be put at interest for the beneficiary, and the trustee lends it, at the legal rate of interest in the state in which the testator resided at the time of his death, and where the funds then were, he will not be removed, because he refuses to put it at interest in another state, where the legal rate of interest is higher. Lewis v. Cook, 18 Ala. 334.

See further, as to when trustees will be removed, Shea v. Dulin, 3 McArthur (D. C.) 339; Hille's Estate, 14 Fed. Rep. 141; Ferris v. Ferris, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 336; Matter of Clute, 80 N. Y. 651; Klein v. Glass, 53 Tex. 37; Preston v. Wilcox, 38 Mich. 578; Suit v. Creswell, 45 Md. 529; Stevenson's Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 101; William's Appeal, 73 Pa. St. 249.

1. State v. Bryce, 7 Ohio 82; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 518.

2. Ex p. Kilgore, 120 Ind. 94; McPherson v. Cox, 96 U. S. 404; Matter of Livingston, 34 N. Y. 555; Foss v. Sowles, 62 Vt. 221. But where the removal is sought upon the ground that the trustee has left the state, notice would seem to be unnecessary, as it would be unavailing. State v. Hunt, 46 Mo. App. 616.

In Pennsylvania, the orphans' court has power to remove a testamentary trustee, but only for good reasons, and where the trustee is the grandson of the testator, chosen by him in view of his knowledge of the trustee's capacity and qualifications, the fact that he is but twenty-five years old, has engrossing business duties, and has little or no property beyond that belonging to him under the will, is not sufficient cause for removal. Theis' Estate, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 257.

Nor will a trustee be removed at the instance of his co-trustee, where it does not clearly appear that the interests of the estate are likely to be jeopardized, and where a majority of the beneficiaries prefer that he should serve. Morgan's Estate, 8 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 260.

mode of proceeding by one who seeks the removal of a trustee is to file a bill in chancery or petition the court for such removal;¹ but where a suit is already pending for the administration of the estate, the application for removal may be made by motion.² Any person interested in the trust may institute the proceedings,³ but notice should be given to all parties in interest.⁴ The proceedings ought to be instituted in the court having jurisdiction of the original trust,⁵ and if any of the parties are minors, a guardian ad litem should be appointed.⁶

In England, the Conveyancing and Law Property Act of 1881,⁷ which applies to settlements executed before as well as after its passage, has made some important changes in the law governing the resignation and removal of trustees. A synopsis of the English law upon the subject will be found in the note below.⁸

XII. SUCCESSION AND APPOINTMENT OF NEW TRUSTEE.—As already shown, equity will not permit a trust to fail for want of a trustee,

1. In re Ballou, 11 R. I. 360; Matter of Foster's Will, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 387; Matter of Van Wyck, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 565; Barker v. Piele, 2 D. & S. 340; Ex p. Rees, 3 Ves. & B. 11; Mitchell v. Pitner, 15 Ga. 319; Ex p. Knust, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 489; Ex p. Greenville Academy, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 470; Ex p. Hussey, 2 Whart. (Pa.) 330; Zehnbar v. Spillman, 25 Fla. 591; Ex p. Kilgore, 120 Ind. 94.

2. Webb v. Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 487; In re Potts, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 340.

3. Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722; Bainbrigg v. Blair, 1 Beav. 495; Portsmouth v. Fellows, 5 Madd. 450; Howard v. Rhodes, 1 Keen 581; In re Smith, 2 De G. & S. 781; Finlay v. Howard, 2 D. & W. 490; Lake v. De Lambert, 4 Ves. 592; Ex p. Tunno, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 395; Cooper v. Day, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 26; Joyce v. Gunnels, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 260; In re Mayfield, 17 Mo. App. 684; Matter of Livingston, 34 N. Y. 567.

In case of a public charity, the attorney general may institute the proceedings, Atty. Gen'l v. Stephens, 3 M. & K. 347; Atty. Gen'l v. London, 3 Bro. C. C. 171; In re Bedford Charity, 2 Swanst. 538.

4. Guion v. Melvin, 69 N. Car. 242; In re Abbott's Petition, 55 Me. 580; Keene's Appeal, 60 Pa. St. 506; Bradstreet v. Butterfield, 129 Mass. 339; Henry v. Doctor, 9 Ohio 49; Williamson v. Wickersham, 2 Coll. 52; Wardle v. Hargreaves, 11 L. J. 7 N. S. Ch. 126. But see Hartman's Appeal, 90 Pa. St. 206. See also Matter of Robinson, 37

N. Y. 261; Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Alexandria, etc., R. Co., 19 Gratt. (Va.) 592; 100 Am. Dec. 710.

So, in New York, it has been held that a suit by some of the holders of bonds secured by securities deposited with a trustee, to remove the trustee for misconduct, and appoint another to administer the trust, without making the holders of the rest of the bonds parties, cannot be maintained, although they are named defendants, as "the unknown persons, owners and holders of the debenture bonds mentioned in the complaint." Farrington v. American L. & T. Co. (Super. Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 433. See also Bear v. American Rapid Tel. Co., 36 Hun (N. Y.) 400; Gartside v. Gartside, 113 Mo. 348.

5. Howard v. Gilbert, 39 Ala. 726.

6. Hunter v. Gibson, 16 Sim. 158.

As to when a receiver will be appointed on removal of a trustee, see infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary.

7. 44 and 45 Vict., ch. 41.

8. Prior to the first day of January, 1882, when the Conveyancing and Law Property Act of 1881 took effect, a trustee could only resign or be removed as follows: 1. Under an express power; 2. Under Lord Cranworth's Act (23 and 24 Vict., ch. 145, § 37); 3. By the consent of the trustee and all the beneficiaries, which could only be obtained where all were sui juris (Wilkinson v. Parry, 4 Russ. 276); 4. By order of court (In re Gregson's Trust, 34 Ch. Div. 209.) A beneficiary might obtain an order of

and if no trustee is nominated by the settlor, or if the person named is incompetent, refuses to accept, dies, resigns, or is removed, the court may, and will, in a proper case, appoint a new trustee.¹

the court for the removal of a trustee where the trustee had behaved improperly, Millard v. Eyre, 2 Ves. Jr. 94; Palairret v. Carew, 32 Beav. 567; or was incapable of acting properly, Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722; In re Lemann's Trust, 22 Ch. Div. 633; In re Phelps, 31 Ch. Div. 351; or was a felon or dishonest misdemeanant, 15 and 16 Vict., ch. 55, § 32; or a recent bankrupt, In re Adams' Trust, 12 Ch. Div. 634; In re Barker's Trusts, 1 Ch. Div. 43; or was residing permanently, or for a long or indefinite period, abroad, Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722; In re Bignold's Trusts, L. R., 7 Ch. 223; and In re Moravian Soc., 26 Beav. 101; or could not be heard of, In re Harrison, 22 L. J. Ch. 69. And the court can discharge an old trustee without necessarily appointing a new one in his place, if it be difficult or impossible to do so. In re Stokes' Trusts, L. R., 13 Eq. 333. The costs of the application will come out of the estate if the trustee is justified in retiring, Coventry v. Coventry, 1 Keen 758; Greenwood v. Wakeford, 1 Beav. 581; Forshaw v. Higginson, 20 Beav. 485; In re Stokes' Trusts, L. R., 13 Eq. 333; Barker v. Piele, 2 D. & S. 340; or where the removal is not caused by impropriety on his part.

Under the said conveyancing and law property act, trustees may be removed in any of the ways above specified except in the mode provided by Lord Cranworth's act. And, in addition, where there are more than two trustees, one of them may retire by executing a deed declaring that he is desirous of being discharged from the trust, provided that his co-trustees, and such other person—if any—as may be empowered to appoint trustees, by deed consent to his retirement.

1. See supra, this title, Who May be a Trustee. Thus, the court may appoint a successor to a deceased trustee to sell property to pay a mortgaged debt. Buchanan v. Hart, 31 Tex. 647.

So, where a fund is bequeathed to a city in trust, to be administered in aid of its poor, and it refuses the trust, a trustee will be appointed on application of the state's attorney; and, on his failure to act, application may be made by any beneficiary. Dailey v. New Haven, 60 Conn. 314.

A will bequeathed to certain persons a sum of money in trust for the benefit of a church, and directed that the trustees, or their successors, invest the same for the benefit of the church. It was held that they took the money as legatees, but were trustees as to the performance of the duties imposed, to the extent that upon refusing to act, a court of equity might appoint successors rather than permit the trust to fail for want of a trustee. In re Petranek's Estate, 79 Iowa 410.

In California, where land situated elsewhere was conveyed by a trust deed of certain persons resident there, the deed providing that in case of the trustees failing to act, a court of competent jurisdiction might appoint a new trustee, it was held that the California court having jurisdiction of the parties, might name a new trustee and direct him to execute the trust. Smith v. Davis, 90 Cal. 25.

And, in a recent case, it was held that a provision in a mortgage that, in case of the resignation of the trustee, the parties might appoint another, would not prevent the appointment of a new trustee by the court where the original trustee, being a corporation, had become insolvent, and gone into the hands of a receiver. People v. American L. & T. Co., 17 N. Y. Supp. 76; 62 Hun (N. Y.) 622.

So, in a proper case, where it is for the best interest of the parties, the court may even transfer the trust fund to heirs and substitute them as trustees. Chapman v. Kimball, 83 Me. 389.

The matter is largely within the discretion of the court. City of Augusta v. Walton, 77 Ga. 517. And, while a court of equity will see that trustees are appointed to manage trust property when required for its safety or proper administration, it will not appoint them when no good will be accomplished thereby. Schlessinger v. Mallard, 70 Cal. 326; Ward v. Dortch, 69 N. Car. 279.

But the general rule is that equity never permits a trust to fail for want of a trustee, and the assent of one named as trustee, in a deed of gift, is immaterial to the validity of the instrument. Cloud v. Calhoun, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 358; Dawson v. Dawson, Rice Eq. (S. Car.) 243; Field v. Arrow-smith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185; Saunders v. Harris, 1 Head (Tenn.) 185; Furman v. Fisher, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 626; 94 Am. Dec. 210. See also Harris v. Rucker, 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 564; Treat's Appeal, 30 Conn. 113; White v. Hampton, 13 Iowa 259; De Peyster v. Clendinning, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 295; Bundy v. Bundy, 38 N. Y. 410; Goodrum v. Goodrum, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 313; Martin v. Paxson, 66 Mo. 260; Johnson v. Roland, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 203; Braswell v. Downs, 11 Fla. 62.

The matter of the appointment of new trustees is often regulated by statute. Thus in New Jersey, the orphans' court act provides that where a trustee dies, that court may appoint a new trustee, and it is held that a trustee so appointed can convey a good title to land devised in trust to sell. Yard v. Larison, 39 N. J. Eq. 386.

So in Massachusetts, it has been held that where a will creates separate trusts in respect to a testator's real and personal property, his trustee can accept the trust as to the personal property and decline it as to the realty, and under the Massachusetts statute, it is provided that when a trustee refuses to serve, and the will makes no adequate provision for the selection of his successor, a new trustee may be appointed by the probate court, and that that court has power to appoint a trustee to carry out the testator's provisions as to the realty. Carruth v. Carruth, 148 Mass. 431.

It has also been held under the same statute, which provides that the probate court "shall after notice to all persons interested appoint a new trustee" in case a vacancy occurs, but notice "may be dispensed with when all the parties entitled thereto signify in writing their assent to such proceeding or waive notice," that it is sufficient that the assent required is given by all persons in being who have a vested interest. Dexter v. Cotting, 149 Mass. 92. See also as to notice in California, Dyer v. Leach, 91 Cal. 191.

Under § 3732 of the Alabama Code, the register in chancery is given authority upon the death of the trustees of an express trust, to appoint their successors upon application made by persons in interest. See Allison v.

Little, 85 Ala. 512. The circuit court had authority in that state under the statute of 1829. State Bank v. Smith, 6 Ala. 75.

In Tennessee, upon the death of a trustee while suit was pending in which the trust property had been previously attached, the chancery court, and not the county court, has jurisdiction over the application for the appointment of his successor. Mask v. Miller, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 527.

In Pennsylvania, under the act of April 26, 1855 (P. L. 331), which provides that no disposition of property for any religious or charitable use shall fail for want of a trustee, and authorizes courts of equity jurisdiction to appoint a trustee, it was held in Frazier v. St. Luke's Church, 147 Pa. St. 256, that a common pleas court might appoint a trustee of ground rents devised to a religious society, and may sue for and recover the same.

The orphans' court also has power to appoint a trustee where the trustee under a will has been removed, but notice must be given to all parties in interest. Lancaster's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 524.

Under the Wisconsin statute (Revised Statutes, section 2098), notice to all parties interested is not required, and the appointment may be made without formal hearing, where a vacancy is caused by the death of a trustee. Reigart v. Ross, 63 Wis. 449. But such is not the rule where a new trustee is appointed in place of one who declines to act. Reigart v. Ross, 63 Wis. 449.

Notice to the beneficiary is required in Kentucky. Clay v. Edwards, 84 Ky. 548.

In Michigan and in New York, it has been held that the statutes authorizing the chancery court to name some person to complete the execution of a trust when the original trustee has died, resigned or been removed, apply only to trusts in real estate. Ledyard's Appeal, 51 Mich. 623; Bucklin v. Bucklin, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 242.

In Maryland, where a trustee has failed to give a bond, or has furnished one which is not sufficient, the circuit court may, on the application of a party in interest, compel him to execute an adequate bond, and upon failure to comply with such order remove him and appoint another in his place. Act of 1870, ch. 370; Suit v. Creswell, 45 Md. 529.

In New York, the successor of a

Upon the death of a trustee, the legal estate generally passes to his heirs or personal representatives, to be administered or accounted for by them; but if it would be beneficial to the estate to have a new trustee appointed, the court may make such appointment.¹ But a new trustee will not be appointed in place of one who has died where it clearly appears that the trust is void.²

In the absence of a statutory provision to the contrary, trusts of real estate, upon the death of the trustee, devolve upon the heir, and trusts of personalty vest in the executor or administrator.³ Unless the trust is a personal one, intended to cease at the death of the trustee,⁴ it may be devised by the trustee;⁵ and trustee under a will may, upon the death of the trustee, be appointed by the surrogate court, under section 2818 of the New York Code of Civil Procedure. Matter of Morian's Estate, 1 Conn. (N. Y.) 503. And the executors of a deceased testamentary trustee cannot question the power of the surrogate court to appoint a successor in accordance with such statute, as they are not interested therein. Elsworth v. Hinton, 4 N. Y. Supp. 573; 51 Hun (N. Y.) 641. So, although the section referred to provides that when a "sole" testamentary trustee dies, becomes a lunatic, resigns, or is removed, leaving the trust not fully executed, the surrogate court may appoint a successor, it has been held that the same power exists in said court, under said statute, to appoint a successor or successors where there are several trustees and all resign. Royce v. Adams, 123 N. Y. 402. But the supreme court also has authority to appoint successors in such a case, as, under 1 R. S. (N. Y.) 730, § 71; and 734, § 72, upon the death of an original trustee the trust devolves upon the supreme court, and it has jurisdiction to appoint new trustees to execute the trust. Royce v. Adams, 123 N. Y. 405; Delaney v. McCormack, 88 N. Y. 174; Matter of Hawley, 104 N. Y. 250; Greenland v. Waddell, 116 N. Y. 243; 15 Am. St. Rep. 400.

1. Tiedeman on Real Prop., § 509; 1 Perry on Trusts, §§ 341, 344; Mauldin v. Armistead, 14 Ala. 702; Schenck v. Schenck, 16 N. J. Eq. 174; Tyler v. Mayre, 95 Cal. 160; Nichols v. Campbell, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 561; De Peyster v. Ferrers, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 13; Keister v. Howe, 3 Ind. 268; Gray v. Lynch, 8 Gill (Md.) 404; Duffy v. Calvert, 6 Gill (Md.) 487; Watkins v. Specht, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 585; Stewart v. Pettus, 10 Mo. 755; Macdonald v. Walker, 14 Beav. 556; Jenks v. Back- house, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 91; Gray v. Henderson, 71 Pa. St. 368; Evans v. Chew, 71 Pa. St. 47; King v. Lawrence, 14 Wis. 238; Mitchell v. Adams, 1 Ired. (N. Car.) 298; Boone v. Chiles, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 213; Russell v. Peyton, 4 Ill. App. 473; Clark v. Tainter, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 567; Warden v. Richards, 11 Gray (Mass.) 277. In New York, Missouri, Alabama and some other states the property is, by statute, left to the court to administer by the appointment of a new trustee. See Royce v. Adams, 123 N. Y. 402; Clark v. Crego, 51 N. Y. 647; Hook v. Dyer, 47 Mo. 214; McDougald v. Carey, 38 Ala. 320; and note to Hill on Trustees, *190 et seq., where a synopsis of the different statutes is given.

2. Matter of Butterfield's Will, 133 N. Y. 473. See also Howards v. Davis, 6 Tex. 174; Schlessinger v. Mallard, 70 Cal. 326.

3. Schenck v. Schenck, 16 N. J. Eq. 174; Tyler v. Mayre, 95 Cal. 160 (trust in personal property held to devolve on administrator). The New Jersey case cites Hill on Trustees, 175; Willis on Trustees, 53; and Lewin on Trustees, 205. See also Underhill on Trusts and Trustees, 215; Ewing v. Shannahan, 113 Mo. 188; Anderson v. Northrop, 30 Fla. 612.

4. Hinckley v. Hinckley, 79 Me. 320.
5. Titely v. Wostenholme, 7 Beav. 435; Osborne v. Rowlett, 13 Ch. Div. 774; Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 270; Jackson v. Delancy, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 537; 7 Am. Dec. 403; Ballard v. Carter, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 112; 16 Am. Dec. 377; Drane v. Gunter, 19 Ala. 731; Richardson v. Woodbury, 43 Me. 206; 1 Perry on Trusts, §§ 335, 339. Compare Cooke v. Crawford, 13 Sim. 91; In re Morton, 15 Ch. Div. 143. And see for change in England by recent acts, Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 350.

his heirs or devisees to whom it goes may execute it,¹ except where it was held by the trustee upon a personal confidence.²

If all the parties are sui juris and agree upon the new trustee, the court will at once appoint him and direct a conveyance to be made.³ So, if expressly authorized by the settlor in the instrument creating the trust, a trustee may appoint his successor;⁴ but he cannot do so unless authority is given him to that effect.⁵

1. Hall v. May, 3 Kay & J. 585; Osborne v. Rowlett, 13 Ch. Div. 774; Titley v. Wostenholme, 7 Beav. 425. See Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 350, where this is stated as the law prior to the recent acts in England which cast the office upon the personal representative of the trustee.

2. Robson v. Flight, 4 De G. J. & S. 608; 34 L. J. Ch. 226; 2 Perry on Trusts, § 496; In re Abbott's Petition, 55 Me. 580; Mortimer v. Ireland, 11 Jur. 721.

3. Young v. Young, 4 Cranch (C. C.) 499; O'Keefe v. Calthorpe, 1 Atk. 18. See also Mitchell v. Pitner, 15 Ga. 319.

In Cates v. Mayes (Tex. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 51, where a trust deed authorized the beneficiaries to appoint a substitute in case the trustee refused to make a sale of the trust property, and all the beneficiaries united in a formal appointment of such a substitute except one, and that one indorsed upon a written appointment a statement to the effect that he acquiesced in it, and that all of his interest in the debt secured by the trust had been settled, it was held that the appointment of a substitute was effective.

Where, by the terms of a will, a testator directs that the probate judge shall approve of the appointment of the trustee to be made by persons designated in the will, the individual who occupies the office of judge of probate acts under authority conferred upon him by the will, and not as a mere judicial officer, and notice to the parties in interest is not required. National Webster Bank v. Eldridge, 115 Mass. 424. See also Shaw v. Paine, 12 Allen (Mass.) 293.

4. In re Roche, 1 Conn. & L. 306; Lonsdale v. Beckett, 4 De G. & S. 73; Lord Camoys v. Best, 19 Beav. 414; In re Coates, 34 Ch. Div. 370; In re Norris, 27 Ch. Div. 333; In re Glenny, 25 Ch. Div. 611; Walsh v. Gladstone, 14 Sim. 5; Crook v. Ingoldsby, 2 Ir. Eq. 375; Tweedy v. Urquhart, 30 Ga. 446; Leggett v. Grimmett, 36 Ark. 498; Morri- son v. Kelly, 22 Ill. 610; 74 Am. Dec. 169; Bowditch v. Bannelos, 1 Gray (Mass.) 220; Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597. So, it seems, a cestui que trust may name a new trustee if the deed so provides. Clark v. Wilson, 53 Miss. 119. See also Schott's Estate, 11 Phila. (Pa.) 120; Drusadow v. Wilde, 63 Pa. St. 170.

Although a deed of trust or will gives an individual the power to appoint new trustees, yet a court of chancery may control his exercise of the power, at least to the extent of preventing an abuse of discretion; and may require an appointee named, who is of doubtful financial responsibility, to give security. Bailey v. Bailey, 2 Del. Ch. 95.

Where a trust deed of personal property authorized the substitution of another trustee by the beneficiaries in place of the one mentioned, upon the latter declining to act, but did not prescribe a mode of appointment, it was held that the appointment might be by parol, and the new trustee would succeed to all rights and powers of the original trustee. Leggett v. Grimmett, 36 Ark. 496.

It is too late after suit has been instituted for administration of the trust, for a trustee to appoint a successor, unless the court consents. Peatfield v. Benn, 17 Beav. 522; Kennedy v. Turnley, 6 Ir. Eq. 399; Webb v. Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 480; Millard v. Eyre, 2 Ves. Jr. 94. See also Kenaday v. Edwards, 134 U. S. 117.

5. In re Abbott's Petition, 55 Me. 580; Whelan v. Reilly, 3 W. Va. 597; Oglander v. Oglander, 2 De G. & S. 381; Bowles v. Weeks, 14 Sim. 291; Bayley v. Mansell, 4 Madd. 226; Winthrop v. Atty. Gen'l, 128 Mass. 258; Wilson v. Towle, 36 N. H. 129; Pierce v. Weaver, 65 Tex. 44. And there is no inherent right in a creditor secured by a trust deed to appoint a new trustee. Clark v. Wilson, 53 Miss. 119.

Powers given to trustees, in the trust instrument, to appoint their successors, are strictly construed. Turner v. Maule,

Under the statutes in most of the states, the title vests in the new trustee without a conveyance;¹ but in the absence of such a statute a conveyance to him seems to be necessary,² unless the instrument creating the trust provides that the property shall vest in the new trustee.³

As a general rule, any person interested in the trust may institute proceedings for the appointment of a new trustee.⁴ If the trust instrument provides that notice shall be given to certain persons, the appointment will be irregular unless such notice is given,⁵ and it is the safest plan in any case to make all persons

15 Jur. 761; Withington v. Withington, 16 Sim. 104; Sharp v. Sharp, 2 B. & Ad. 404; Lord Camoys v. Best, 19 Beav. 414; In re Coates, 34 Ch. Div. 370; Guion v. Pickett, 42 Miss. 77; Mastin v. Barnard, 33 Ga. 520. See POWERS, vol. 18, p. 877.

So, where a deed of trust authorizes the appointment of a substitute trustee upon the failure or refusal of the original trustee to act, the appointment of a substitute trustee while the original trustee is advertising the property for sale under the deed, confers no title on the trustee so substituted. Chestnut v. Gann, 76 Tex. 150.

And one who has resigned, cannot thereafter transfer his original powers to a new trustee appointed by the court to act under its direction. Kenaday v. Edwards, 134 U. S. 117. But generally the new trustee has the same powers as the original trustee had, Chase v. Davis, 65 Me. 102; Stearly's Appeal, 3 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 270, except in cases in which discretionary powers were given the original trustee on account of personal trust and confidence. See POWERS, vol. 18, p. 970.

Where real estate was conveyed in trust for a corporation, to be conveyed by the trustee on the order of the directors, with a provision that in case of his failure to act, the company might "by deed duly executed appoint other trustees who should by such deed be vested with power to execute the trust," it was held that a deed signed by the president and persons purporting to be the successors in the trust, was ineffectual to convey a title, unless the new trustees were appointed to carry out the trust by deed duly executed. Bumgarner v. Cogswell, 49 Mo. 259.

But where a will appointed a trustee to hold the share of one of the devisees, with power of sale, and upon the trustee named failing to take, the court appointed a trustee to execute the trust, who afterwards resigned, and the court appointed another trustee, it was held that the power of sale was but an incident of the trusteeship, and accompanied it, though not referred to in the order appointing the last trustee. Lahey v. Kortright, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 527.

1. Stearly's Appeal, 3 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 270; Gibbs v. Marsh, 2 Met. (Mass.) 253; Parker v. Converse, 5 Gray (Mass.) 336; Golder v. Bressler, 105 Ill. 419; Wooldridge v. Planters' Bank, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 297; Duffy v. Calvert, 6 Gill (Md.) 487; Burdick v. Goddard, 11 R. I. 516; Smith v. Smith, 3 Dr. 72; In re Fisher's Will, 1 W. R. 505; Indiana Rev. St. (1881), § 2978; Conveyancing and Law Property Act of 1881 (44 and 45 Vict., ch. 41), § 34.

2. O'Keefe v. Calthorpe, 1 Atk. 18; Foley v. Wontner, 2 Jac. & W. 245; Owen v. Owen, 1 Atk. 496; Miller v. Priddon, 1 De G. M. & G. 339; Crosby v. Huston, 1 Tex. 203; Foster v. Goree, 4 Ala. 440.

A devise to one in trust does not of itself vest the estate in the successor of the trustee where the devise is silent on the point, and the court appointing the successor makes no provision for vesting the title in him. West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425.

3. National Webster Bank v. Eldridge, 115 Mass. 424; Ellis v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 107 Mass. 113.

4. Bainbrigg v. Blair, 1 Beav. 495; Findlay v. Howard, 2 Dr. & W. 490; Buchanan v. Hamilton, 5 Ves. 722; Coventry v. Coventry, 1 Keen 758; Lake v. DeLambert, 4 Ves. 592; Joyce v. Gunnels, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 260. See supra, this title, Resignation and Removal of Trustee.

5. Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Alexandria, etc., R. Co., 19 Gratt. (Va.) 592; 100 Am. Dec. 710.

who are interested in the trust, parties, and to give them notice,¹ unless the statute provides that notice is unnecessary.² But it has been held that where a cestui que trust gave an order on the trustees in favor of her children, the latter had no such interest as entitled them to be made parties to a proceeding for the appointment of new trustees.³ And if the old trustee transfers the trust property to the new trustee appointed by the court, he will be bound by the proceedings, although notice was not given him of their institution.⁴ So, a beneficiary, by recognizing the competency of a substituted trustee to act, may estop himself from questioning the validity of the trustee's appointment.⁵ But mere

1. In re Abbott's Petition, 55 Me. 580; Henry v. Doctor, 9 Ohio 49; Williamson v. Wickersham, 2 Coll. 52; Wardle v. Hargreaves, 11 L. J., N. S. Ch. 126; Tompkins v. Morsman, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 402; Clay v. Edwards, 84 Ky. 548; Lancaster's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 524; Bass v. Fontleroy, 11 Tex. 608.

Thus, it has been held that the court will not appoint a trustee on an ex parte motion or petition in cases where the former trustee has died, removed from the county, or become incompetent. All persons interested must be made parties, and have full time and opportunity to set up their respective claims. Guion v. Melvin, 69 N. Car. 242.

So, it has been held that an appointment, on motion merely, of a trustee to sell land in place of one who has died, is void. Williams v. Nell, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 279. Compare Dyer v. Leach, 91 Cal. 191.

2. See Reigart v. Ross, 63 Wis. 449; Dyer v. Leach, 91 Cal. 191; National Webster Bank v. Eldridge, 115 Mass. 424; Milbank v. Crane, 25 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 193; Matter of Robinson, 37 N. Y. 261, holding notice unnecessary.

And, where a trustee is appointed by deed, providing that in case of his decease or legal incapacity, the chancellor shall be vested with all the trusts and confidences reposed in the trustee named, the chancellor may appoint a trustee, by virtue of his office, to execute the desire of the grantor, and the right of the chancellor does not depend upon his acquiring jurisdiction over the heirs and personal representatives of the cestui que trust. Morrison v. Kelly, 22 Ill. 610; 14 Am. Dec. 169.

So the instrument of trust may by its own terms dispense with notice to the settlor, and where a mortgage executed in favor of trustees provided that a vacancy in the trust might be filled by the nomination of one of the beneficiaries with the approval of the judge of the superior court, it was held that the mortgagor was entitled to no notice of an appointment made in that manner. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Georgia R. Co., 63 Ga. 103.

3. Hawley v. Ross, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 103. See also Marshall v. Sladden, 7 Hare 427.

So it has been held that where a trustee under a will has died, his executors cannot question the power of the surrogate under the New York Code of Civil Procedure, § 2818, to appoint his successor, as they have no interest therein. Elsworth v. Hinton, 4 N. Y. Supp. 573; 51 Hun (N. Y.) 641.

And where railroad property has been mortgaged to a trustee, his heirs and assigns, in trust for bondholders, the court may upon his death appoint his successors, upon the application of the interested parties, and in such case the heir at law of the former trustee is not entitled to be made a party to a suit to foreclose the mortgage. Gibbes v. Greenville, etc., R. Co., 13 S. Car. 228.

It has, however, been held that the children of a life tenant who are entitled to the remainder, are, equally with the tenant for life, necessary parties to a suit by the executrix of the deceased trustee for the appointment of a successor in the trust to whom she might account as executrix. Bolling v. Stokes, 7 S. Car. 364. See also Bradstreet v. Butterfield, 129 Mass. 399.

4. Thomas v. Higham, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 222. See also State v. Vincennes University, 5 Ind. 77.

5. Thus in a recent case, where, upon the trustee's death, the court appointed his successor, and one of the two beneficiaries joined in an affidavit to the effect that the trustee so substituted was a fit person for the position, it was held lapse of time will not validate an illegal appointment where the trustee has never had possession of the trust property.¹

In some of the states a new trustee is required by statute to give a bond,² but, in the absence of such a statute, the matter seems to rest largely in the discretion of the court.³

that by this affidavit she was estopped from questioning the validity of the trustee's appointment. The court also held that as a consequence, a joint action by the two beneficiaries to set aside a subsequent conveyance by the substituted trustee, on the ground that his appointment was invalid, would not lie, although such appointment may not have been valid as to the other beneficiaries. Lowe v. Suggs, 87 Ga. 577.

1. Augusta v. Walton, 77 Ga. 517. See also Carskadon v. Torreyson, 17 W. Va. 43.

A mere irregularity in the appointment of a trustee will not, where the court has jurisdiction of the subject-matter, make the appointment void in a collateral proceeding, until it is set aside. Budd v. Hiler, 27 N. J. L. 43. See also Loveman v. Taylor, 85 Tenn. 1.

So, where the supreme court appointed a testamentary trustee in a county, other than the one in which the will had been probated, but in which a portion of the trust estate was situated, no objection having been made to the appointment, it was held that the appointment could not be collaterally impeached, and that it was immaterial that the petition for the appointment was addressed to the court in another county. Bradstreet v. Butterfield, 129 Mass. 339. See also Bassett v. Crafts, 129 Mass. 513.

But it was held in Alabama, that the appointment of a trustee by a register in chancery in that state, on a petition simply alleging that the property of the trust was in the possession of the trustee in Georgia, and that he was desirous of delivering it to a trustee appointed here, was void for want of jurisdiction. Howard v. Gilbert, 39 Ala. 726.

And a court of another state cannot appoint a trustee of lands lying in Pennsylvania, in the place of one already appointed by the Pennsylvania court. Williams v. Maus, 6 Watts (Pa.) 278; 31 Am. Dec. 465. See Butler v. State Mut. L. Assurance Co., 55 Hun (N. Y.) 296.

2. A bond of an executor to faithfully discharge his duties as executor, does not cover and secure the faithful discharge of his duties as trustee of a trust created by the will. Hinds v. Hinds, 85 Ind. 312.

A bond executed by a trustee under a void appointment, although not good as a statutory bond, may be enforced as a common-law bond against both principal and surety, where the former has received the trust estate and failed to account for it. Clay v. Edwards, 84 Ky. 548.

A and B were co-sureties for C, a testamentary trustee, who converted the trust money to his own use and died insolvent. A was appointed trustee, and gave a bond, with B as surety, to well and truly execute the trust. A then presented a claim for the trust money against the estate of C, and received a dividend thereon. It was held that as both A and B were liable as sureties for the balance of the trust money, A was to be regarded as having received the money, and that both were liable on the new bond for A's neglect to make certain payments from the trust fund, as required by the trust. Prindle v. Holcomb, 45 Conn. 111.

When a trustee dies before his trust has been completed and his accounts settled, a court of equity has jurisdiction to entertain a bill filed by his successor against the sureties on his bond, and may decree the payment by such sureties of the amount found to be due the trust estate. Thurston v. Blackiston, 36 Md. 501.

3. Rigler v. Cloud, 14 Pa. St. 361; Strayhorn v. Green, 92 N. Car. 119; Berry v. Williamson, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 245; Holcomb v. Coryell, 12 N. J. Eq. 289; State v. Rondebush, 114 Ind. 347; Lane v. Lewis, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 468; Bradstreet v. Butterfield, 129 Mass. 339; Clarke v. Saxon, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 69.

Trustees are generally, however, required to give security. Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257; Matter of Whitehead, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 227; Bates v. State, 75 Ind. 463; Hinds v. Hinds, 85 Ind. 312.

A trustee whose powers are derived solely from the instrument creating the trust, cannot be required to give a bond against the direction of the instrument, unless the statute so requires. Ex p. Kilgore, 120 Ind. 94.

Appointment of New Trustees Under English Conveyancing and Law of Property Act of 1881.—Under the said act, where a trustee dies, or remains out of the kingdom for more than twelve months, or desires to be discharged, or refuses, or is unfit to act, or is incapable of acting, then—unless a contrary intention is shown in the settlement—the person or persons nominated for that purpose by the settlement, or if there be no such person, or none such able and willing to act, then the surviving or continuing trustees or trustee for the time being (including a retiring trustee, if willing to act under this power), or the personal representative of the last surviving or continuing trustee, may, by writing, appoint a new trustee in the place of the one so dead—even where he died before the trust was created—remaining out of the kingdom, desiring to be changed, or refusing, or being unfit or incapable to act. On any such appointment (but not otherwise) the number of trustees may be increased or diminished, provided that (except where only one trustee was originally appointed) a retiring trustee will not be discharged, unless, on his retirement, there will be at least two trustees to perform the trust. Every new trustee so appointed, both before and after the trust property is vested in him, has the same powers, authorities and discretions, and may in all respects act as if he had been an original trustee. Where an administration decree has been made, a new trustee can only be appointed under the supervision of the court. On the appointment of a new trustee, everything requisite should be done for vesting the trust property jointly in the persons who are for the future to be the trustees. This may be done as follows:—1. It may be effected by the ordinary modes of conveying or transferring property. 2. The deed by which he is appointed may contain a declaration by the appointor, to the effect that any estate or interest in any land, or in any chattels, or the right to recover and receive any chose in action, subject to the trust, shall vest in the persons who, by virtue of the deed, became and are the trustees. Such a declaration, without a conveyance or assignment, operates to vest such estate, interest or right, in those persons as joint tenants, with the exception of the legal estate in copyholds or customary lands, lands held by way of mortgage for securing money subject to the trust, and shares, stock, annuities or property only transferable in the books kept by a company or other body, or in manner prescribed by or under act of Parliament. Where a trustee retires, by executing a deed, a similar declaration, made by the retiring and continuing trustees, and by the other persons (if any) empowered to appoint new trustees, will vest the trust property (save as aforesaid) in the continuing trustees alone, as joint tenants. Where none of the foregoing means are feasible, application may be made, by petition, to the chancery division of the high court of justice (or, in case of lunacy or unsoundness of mind, to the lord chancellors or lord justices), for a vesting order under the provisions of the Trustee Acts of 1850 and 1852, in any of the following cases, viz.: (a) Where land, stock, or a chose in action is vested in a lunatic or person of unsound mind, or an infant, or person out of the jurisdiction, or a person who cannot be found, or about whom it is uncertain whether he be living or dead; (b) Where it is not known which of several trustees of land was the survivor, or where a trustee of land has died intestate, and without leaving an heir (or, since 1881, with regard to freeholds, a personal representative), or where such heir or a devisee of trust estates is not known, or where stock is standing in the name of a deceased person whose personal representative is a lunatic or person of unsound mind, or where a chose in action is vested in such personal representative; (c) Where lands are subject to a contingent right in any unborn person or class of persons, who, upon coming into existence, would become seised or possessed thereof upon any trust; (d) Where trustees of lands or stock refuse to convey such lands, or transfer such stock, for twenty-eight days after demand made by a person entitled to require the same. In any case not covered by the foregoing, the property, of whatever kind it may consist, may be vested by an application to the court to appoint new trustees, and vest the trust property in them. But the court has no jurisdiction to reappoint trustees, already validly appointed, merely for the purpose of making a vesting order. Whenever it is expedient to appoint a trustee or trustees,

New trustees appointed by the court, acting under its discretion, generally have all powers necessary to carry out the provisions of the trust instrument,¹ but discretionary powers given the original trustees on account of personal trust or confidence in them cannot ordinarily be exercised by their successors.²

XIII. STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS — LACHES — LAPSE OF TIME — 1. Generally.—The Statute of Limitations, as applicable to trusts of certain kinds, has been treated under other titles in this work,³ and all that is necessary or proper in this connection is to complete the subject and cite such cases upon the questions already considered as have been decided since the former articles were written. Different rules apply where the controversy is between the trustee or cestui que trust and a third person, from those applicable where the controversy is between the trustee and cestui whether of a settlement of which no trustees were originally appointed, or the original trustees of which have died, retired or been removed, and it is found inexpedient, difficult, or impracticable to do so without the assistance of the court (but not otherwise), the court may, on petition, appoint a trustee or trustees, and may, by order, vest in such new trustee or trustees any lands subject to the trust, and the right to call for the transfer of any stock, or to receive the dividends thereof, and the right to sue for and recover any chose in action, or any interest in respect thereof. When the court appoints new trustees, it fills up all vacancies, unless there are exceptional circumstances. A separate set of trustees may be appointed for any part of the trust property which is held on trusts distinct from those relating to the other parts of the trust property, or if only one trustee was originally appointed, then one separate trustee may be appointed for such part. Underhill on Trusts and Trustees 363-377. See also In re Gregson's Trusts, 34 Ch. Div. 209; Eastwood v. Clarke, 23 Ch. Div. 134; In re East, L. R., 8 Ch. 735; In re Williams, 56 L. T. 884; In re Vicat, 33 Ch. Div. 103; Dodkin v. Brunt, L. R., 6 Eq. 580; In re Colyer, 50 L. J. Ch. 79.

1. Chase v. Davis, 65 Me. 102; Doe v. Ladd, 77 Ala. 223; Druid Park, etc., Co. v. Oeltinger, 53 Md. 46; Schouler, Petitioner, 134 Mass. 426; Lahey v. Kortright, 56 N. Y. Super. Ct. 527; Sullivan v. Latimer, 35 S. Car. 422.

A trustee by will was given extensive discretionary powers, and there was no provision for succession in case of his failure to act. It was held upon his death, that the court would exercise the trust through a successor appointed by it, and by the substitution of equitable rules in the place of arbitrary power. Weiland v. Townsend, 33 N. J. Eq. 393.

2. See POWERS, vol. 18, p. 970.

Trustees appointed as successors cannot claim commissions on the trust fund received from the original trustees, but if litigation is necessary to secure it, they will be entitled to legitimate expenses. Jenkins v. Whyte, 62 Md. 427.

A substituted trustee is not entitled to an order upon the administrator of his predecessor for the amount due the trust estate, upon the confirmation of the account of the deceased trustee, filed by his administrator. The new trustee is a creditor of the estate of the deceased trustee, not of the administrator. Gaw's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 88.

Where the surplus funds of an association pass into the hands of new trustees, between whom and the original contributors there is no privity, such new trustees are not accountable to the original contributors for the funds. Abels v. McKeen, 18 N. J. Eq. 462.

So where a trustee lent funds belonging to the trust to one who held a contingent interest in the fund in remainder, taking as security a pledge of his interest and that of the life tenant, the borrower being insolvent, it was held on the removal of the trustee from office that he must account for this loan, and that he could not throw the burden of trying to collect it upon his successor. In re Craven, 43 N. J. Eq. 416.

3. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 667; IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 1.

que trust, and it is therefore advisable to treat the subject under these two main divisions.

2. As Between Trustee or Beneficiary and Stranger.—The general rule is well settled that courts of equity, acting by way of analogy or in obedience to the Statute of Limitations, will usually adjudge the lapse of time a bar in cases in which it would have constituted a bar under the Statute of Limitations if the action had been at law,¹ and there are also cases where the lapse of time under such circumstances as to constitute laches, will prevent relief at equity, although it has not been for the full statutory period.² These rules are generally applicable in controversies between the trustee or beneficiary and a stranger.³ As said by Lord Hardwicke, in a leading case: "The rule that the Statute of Limitations does not bar a trust estate, holds only between cestui que trust and trustee, not as between cestui que trust and trustee on one side and strangers on the other; for that would make the statute of no force at all, because there is hardly any estate of consequence without such trust, and so the act would never take place. Therefore, where the cestui que trust and his trustee are both out of possession for the time limited, the party in possession has a good bar against them both."⁴ If the trustee is barred, so also is the

1. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, pp. 667, 675 et seq.; EQUITY, vol. 6, pp. 683, 705, 711; notes to France v. Kenney, 12 Am. Dec. 368, and Smith v. Thompson, 54 Am. Dec. 130.

"The legal limitation cannot be avoided by changing the tribunal." 2 Perry on Trusts, § 859; Hammond v. Messenger, 9 Sim. 327; Bolton v. Powell, 14 Beav. 275; Wych v. East India Co., 3 P. Wms. 309; Mason v. Mason, 33 Ga. 435; 83 Am. Dec. 172.

2. See LACHES, vol. 12, p. 533, where the subject is fully treated. See also the following recent cases: St. Paul, etc., R. Co. v. Sage, 49 Fed. Rep. 315; Calverly v. Harper, 40 Ill. App. 96; Goree v. Clements, 94 Ala. 337; Daniell v. East Boston Ferry Co. (Mass. 1892), 31 N. E. Rep. 711; Cooke v. Barrett, 155 Mass. 413; Gatzner v. St. Vincent School Soc., 147 Pa. St. 313; Naddo v. Bardon, 47 Fed. Rep. 782; Goode v. Gaines, 145 U. S. 141; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317; Kelly v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 80 Wis. 328; Ferguson v. Soden, 111 Mo. 208; Bacon v. Chase, 83 Iowa 521; and note to Smith v. Thompson, 54 Am. Dec. 130.

3. Turner v. Smith, 11 Tex. 620; Watkins v. Specht, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 585; Williams v. Otey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 563; 47 Am. Dec. 632; Merriam v. Hassam, 14 Allen (Mass.) 516; 92 Am. Dec. 795; Clark v. Miller, 89 Pa. St. 242; Collins

v. McCarty, 68 Tex. 150; 2 Am. St. Rep. 475, and note; Elmendorf v. Taylor, 10 Wheat. (U. S.) 152; Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224; Potter v. Smith, 36 Ind. 231; Martin v. Martin, 118 Ind. 227. But it has been held that where a debtor borrows money, knowing it to be trust money and in breach of the trust, he will be deemed to hold it as trustee, and cannot set up the statute of limitations in bar of the cestui que trust. Spickernell v. Hotnam, Kay 669; Ernest v. Croysdill, 6 Jur. N. S. 740; Bridgman v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302; Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 Ir. Eq. 115; Upham v. Wyman, 7 Allen (Mass.) 499.

Yet as even between trustee and beneficiary, courts of equity, "acting on their own inherent doctrine of discouraging, for the peace of society, antiquated demands, refuse to interfere in attempts to establish a stale trust, except where the trust is clearly established, and the facts have been fraudulently and successfully concealed by the trustee from the knowledge of the cestui que trust." Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 87.

4. Llewellyn v. Mackworth, 3 Eq. Cas. Ab. 579; Barn. 446; Melling v. Leak, 32 Eng. L. & Eq. 442; Atty. Gen'l v. Federal St. Meeting-House Soc., 3 Gray (Mass.) 1. See also beneficiary.¹ And it has been held that part payment by a trustee who simply has authority to sell property and apply the proceeds upon debts, without any power to make a new promise for the debtor, will not take the entire debt out of the statute as to the trustee.²

The effect of fraudulent concealment, ignorance or mistake, and the rules of pleading, practice, and evidence, are stated and fully considered elsewhere in this work.³

3. As Between Trustee and Beneficiary.—It is a general rule that in case of an express continuing trust the Statute of Limitations has Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 629; Pentland v. Stokes, 2 Ball & B. 75; Allen v. Sayer, 2 Vern. 368; Crowther v. Crowther, 23 Beav. 305; Wych v. East India Co., 3 P. Wms. 309; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 K. & J. 79; Maddox v. Allen, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 495; Mason v. Mason, 33 Ga. 435; 83 Am. Dec. 172; Goss v. Singleton, 2 Head (Tenn.) 67; Watkins v. Specht, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 585; Fleming v. Gilmer, 35 Ala. 62; Love v. Love, 65 Ala. 555; Crook v. Glenn, 30 Md. 55; Herndon v. Pratt, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 327; Smilie v. Biffle, 2 Pa. St. 52.

Where a trustee of land sells it to a purchaser for value, by warranty deed and without any intimation in the deed of a subsisting trust, and the purchaser enters and occupies the land, doing no act which recognizes the existence of the trust, and there is no fraud or concealment, and the beneficiary is not under disability, the vendee's possession must be regarded as adverse, both to the trustee and the beneficiary, and the time which would bar the legal right will also bar the equitable right. Merriam v. Haassam, 14 Allen (Mass.) 516; 92 Am. Dec. 795.

1. Chase v. Cartright, 53 Ark. 358; 22 Am. St. Rep. 207; Barclay v. Goodloe, 83 Ky. 493; Coleman v. Walker, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 65; 77 Am. Dec. 163; Varner v. Gunn, 61 Ga. 54; Crawley v. Richardson, 78 Ga. 213; Ford v. Cook, 73 Ga. 215; Know v. Raymond, 73 Ga. 749; Weaver v. Leiman, 52 Md. 708; Smith v. Gillam, 80 Ala. 296; Bryan v. Weems, 29 Ala. 423; 65 Am. Dec. 407; Waring v. Cheraw, etc., R. Co., 16 S. Car. 417; Clayton v. Cagle, 97 N. Car. 300; Watkins v. Specht, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 585; Williams v. Otey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 563; 47 Am. Dec. 632. But see Parker v. Hall, 2 Head (Tenn.) 641; Anding v. Davis, 38 Miss. 574; 77 Am. Dec. 658; Spickernell v.

Holtham, Kay 669; Lechmere v. Carlisle, 3 P. Wms. 215; Wingfield v. Virgin, 51 Ga. 139; Fisk v. Wilson, 15 Tex. 430; Ernest v. Croysdill, 6 Jur. N.S. 740; Bridgman v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302; Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 Ir. Eq. 115; Upham v. Wyman, 7 Allen (Mass.) 499. The question is considered at length in the notes to Herron v. Marshall, 42 Am. Dec. 447; Collins v. Loftus, 34 Am. Dec. 725, and Miles v. Thorne, 99 Am. Dec. 398.

But if the cestui que trust is under disability, it has been held that the statute will not begin to run until the disability is removed. Thompson v. Simpson, 1 D. & W. 489; Life Assoc. v. Siddall, 3 De G. F. & J. 58; Atty. Gen'l v. Magdalen College, 18 Beav. 239; Price's Appeal, 54 Pa. St. 472. See, however, authorities above cited: McLeran v. Benton, 73 Cal. 329; 2 Am. St. Rep. 814; and Wilmerding v. Russ, 33 Conn. 68. And if he holds only in remainder or reversion, it seems that the statute will not begin to run until he has the right to possession upon the determination of the particular estate. Parker v. Hall, 2 Head (Tenn.) 641; McCoy v. Poor, 56 Md. 197; Lamar v. Pearre, 82 Ga. 354; 14 Am. St. Rep. 168; Allen v. De Groodt, 98 Mo. 159; 14 Am. St. Rep. 626, and note. But see Chase v. Cartright, 53 Ark. 358; 22 Am. St. Rep. 207; Meeks v. Olpherts, 100 U. S. 564; Waring v. Cheraw, etc., R. Co., 16 S. Car. 416; Edwards v. Woolfolk, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 376.

2. Leach v. Asher, 20 Mo. App. 659. But see St. John v. Boughton, 9 Sim. 219. Where a cestui que trust has received the benefit of a debt due him, but paid to his trustee, who had no authority to receive it, he will not be allowed to collect it. Mayer v. Bills, 16 Iowa 586.

3. LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 667.

no application,¹ unless the trust has been repudiated or the trustee has held adverse possession with the knowledge of the beneficiary.² But this rule applies only in cases of express or direct trusts.³ And while the relation of trustee and cestui que trust continues unbroken, the possession of the trustee is regarded as

1. Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U. S. 621; Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377; Prevost v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. (U. S.) 497; Lewis v. Hawkins, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 126; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Durant, 95 U. S. 576; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Hay, 119 Ill. 493; Ellis v. Ward, 137 Ill. 509; Fishwick v. Sewell, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 393; Gordon v. Small, 53 Md. 550; Bostwick v. Dickson, 65 Wis. 593; Haynie v. Hall, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 200; Armstrong v. Campbell, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 201; 24 Am. Dec. 556; Andrews v. Smithwick, 20 Tex. 111; Payne v. Hathaway, 3 Vt. 212; Decouche v. Savetier, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 190; Robertson v. Dunn, 87 N. Car. 191; Lyon v. Marclay, 1 Watts (Pa.) 271; Kutz's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 90; Clay v. Clay, 7 Bush (Ky.) 95; Thomas v. White, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 177; Cunningham v. McKindley, 22 Ind. 149; Hileman v. Hileman, 85 Ind. 1; Gutch v. Fosdick, 48 N. J. Eq. 353; Shibla v. Ely, 6 N. J. Eq. 181; West v. Sloan, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 102; Bonner v. Young, 68 Ala. 35; McCarthy v. McCarthy, 74 Ala. 546; Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 195; Wilson v. Green, 49 Iowa 251; Redwood v. Reddick, 4 Munf. (Va.) 222; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & W. 1.; Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 607; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & C. 41; Boteler v. Allington, 3 Atk. 459; Bridgeman v. Gill, 24 Beav. 302; Miles v. Thorne, 38 Cal. 335; 99 Am. Dec. 384, and note. Other cases might be cited, but the general rule is so well established and so many authorities are cited above, that others are unnecessary.

The trusts which are not affected in equity by the Statute of Limitations are technical and continuing trusts, not cognizable at common law. Lawson v. Badgett, 20 Ark. 195; Young v. Mackall, 3 Md. Ch. 398.

Where there is no doubt either as to the origin or the existence of a trust, and proceedings are instituted within a reasonable time, an express trust created by deed or will, will not be barred by lapse of time. McDonald v. Sims, 3 Ga. 383. In another Georgia case, it was said that as between the trustee and cestui que trust, the Statute of Limitations begins to run from the settlement and receipt given; but if at the time of the settlement, the trustee exercises undue influence over the beneficiary, suspicion is thrown upon the transaction, and the beneficiary may have the settlement looked into at any time within the statutory bar. In case of fraud, the statute begins to run from the discovery, if the party labors under no difficulty, and is not guilty of laches. Wellborn v. Rogers, 24 Ga. 558.

A son was absent and his whereabouts unknown, and his mother became his guardian, received his estate, and afterwards died. It was distributed among her representatives, who had knowledge of the manner in which she held it, and who supposed that the ward was dead, and it was held that they took the estate subject to the same trust in favor of the son; that the property never became theirs, and their holding not being adverse, the Statute of Limitations did not apply; and that they were liable for the profits, but not for deterioration resulting from their neglect. Moore v. Shepherd, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 125.

2. Boteler v. Allington, 3 Atk. 459; Wood v. Wood, 3 Ala. 756; Lucas v. Daniels, 34 Ala. 188; Hastie v. Aiken, 67 Ala. 313; Smith v. Records, 52 Mo. 581; Scott v. Haddock, 11 Ga. 258; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 212; Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 386; Robertson v. Dunn, 87 N. Car. 191; Roberts v. Berdell, 61 Barb. (N. Y.) 37; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 90; 11 Am. Dec. 417; Murdock v. Hughes, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 219; White v. Leavitt, 20 Tex. 703; Cooper v. Lee, 75 Tex. 114; Sheldon v. Sheldon, 3 Wis. 699; Pipher v. Lodge, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 310; Cunningham v. McKindley, 22 Ind. 149; Dyer v. Waters, 46 N. J. Eq. 484; Hearst v. Pujol, 44 Cal. 235; McClure v. Colyear, 80 Cal. 378; Wren v. Followell, 52 Ark. 76; Reynolds v. Sumner, 126 Ill. 78.

3. Newsom v. Bartholomew County, 103 Ind. 526; Churchman v. Indianapolis, 110 Ind. 259; Carter v. Bennett, 6 Fla. 214; Hayward v. Gunn, 82 Ill. 385; Patridge v. Wells, 30 N. J. Eq. 176; Kennedy v. Baker, 59 Tex. 150; Tinnen v. Mebane, 10 Tex. 246; 60 Am. Dec. 205; Clay v. Clay, 7 Bush (Ky.) 95; Thomas v. Brinsfield, 7 Ga. 154; Johnson v. Smith, 27 Mo. 591; Landis v. Saxton, 105 Mo. 486; 24 Am. St. Rep. 403; Cooper v. Cooper, 61 Miss. 676; Robertson v. Dunn, 87 N. Car. 191; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 90; 11 Am. Dec. 417; Price v. Mulford, 107 N. Y. 303; Zacharias v. Zacharias, 23 Pa. St. 452; Harlow v. Dehon, 111 Mass. 195; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 25 Kan. 151; Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377.

Implied trusts are barred by the statute. Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377; Logan County v. Lincoln, 81 Ill. 156. See IMPLIED TRUSTS, vol. 10, p. 1; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, pp. 667, 684.

The exceptions to the general rule, and the limitations upon its application, are thus stated by Stevens, J., in Raymond v. Smonson, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 77: "The general rule, however, that the Statute of Limitations is a bar to suits in equity, as well as actions at law, has its limits. It is opposed by another general rule that, in cases of frauds and trusts, the Statute of Limitations does not run. The trusts coming within this rule are direct trusts, technical and continuing trusts, which are not cognizable at law, but which are mere creatures of a court of equity, and fall within the proper and exclusive jurisdiction of chancery. There are numerous eventual and possible trusts that are raised by law and otherwise, and that fall within the control of the statute. Every deposit is a trust; every person who holds money to be paid to another, or to be applied to a particular and specific purpose, is a trustee, and may be sued either at law or in equity."

It is often difficult, however, to determine whether or not the trust is an express continuing trust, cognizable only by courts of equity. The subject was carefully considered in a recent case by the supreme court of Indiana, and we quote at length from the opinion of Elliott, J., in the case referred to. The plaintiff's father, Joseph Parks, had collected a bounty for him, and had admitted to several persons that he was keeping it for the plaintiff, who did not bring suit until after the expiration of fifteen years. Upon appeal by the plaintiff, the court said: "If the trust imposed upon Joseph Parks must be regarded as an ordinary trust imposed by law, then it is within the statute, inasmuch as the trust is not one of exclusive equity cognizance, and such a trust is not a continuing one. If the trust was completed when the money was received, then a cause of action enforceable at law arose, for the appellant might have sued upon an implied contract or for money had and received. It is well settled that in such case the statute prevails. Smith v. Calloway, 7 Blackf. (Ind.) 88; Newsom v. Bartholomew County, 103 Ind. 526, and authorities cited; Stone v. Brown, 116 Ind. 80; Godden v. Kimmell, 99 U. S. 201; Johnson v. Smith, 27 Mo. 591. Where, however, there is a continuing trust or obligation, the rule does not, as we shall presently show, operate in full force or vigor. . . . The difficult question in the case is as to whether the facts stated, excluding mere evidence, show that the deceased agreed with his son to keep the money for him. If he did so agree, then we think it quite clear that it must be adjudged that the right of action is not shown to be barred. Where one receives the money of another to keep for him—takes it, in other words, as a continuing trust—the statute does not run until there is a disavowal of the trust or a refusal to perform upon proper demand. If, for illustration, a son is about to enter the army, and the father receives or collects money under an agreement to keep it for him, the statute does not begin to run until there has been a breach or a disavowal of the trust. This is the doctrine of many closely analogous cases. Sawyer v. Tappan, 14 N. H. 352; Rusling v. Rusling, 42 N. J. Eq. 594; Zuck v. Culp, 59 Cal. 142; Cross v. Eureka Lake, etc., Canal Co., 73 Cal. 302. The doctrine is substantially the same at law as in equity. Morse Banking, § 322; Payne v. Gardiner, 29 N. Y. 146; Smiley v. Fry, 100 N. Y. 262; Finkbone's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 368. The statute does not begin to run until the cause of action accrues, and where there is a continuing trust, or where the contract is a continuing one, and of such a character as to make a demand necessary to a complete cause of action, the statute does not begin to run until demand has been made. Presley v. Davis, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 105; 62 Am. Dec. 396. It is true that there are cases where the demand must be made within the period fixed by statute. Newsom v. Bartholomew County, 103 Ind. 526, and cases cited. But it is also true that there are cases that of the cestui que trust.¹ The general rule also holds good as

where a very different rule applies. Such a case, for instance, is that of a continuing trust, or of a contract to keep for another, money of which he makes a deposit. Girard Bank v. Bank of Penn. Tp., 39 Pa. St. 92; 80 Am. Dec. 507; Wilson v. Brookshire, 126 Ind. 497. No general rule can be laid down that will fit all cases, since there are cases where justice requires that a demand should be made within the statutory period, while in others the nature of the contract and the situation of the parties require that it be adjudged that the trust or obligation is a continuing one, which is not violated or broken until there is a refusal to honor a demand, and that until then the statute does not begin to run. Daugherty v. Wheeler, 125 Ind. 426. But while we believe the law would be with the appellant if the assumption of counsel that there was a direct and continuous trust could be made good, we are compelled to hold that, upon the facts stated in the special finding, the assumption is unsupported, and that there is no express or direct continuing trust or obligation shown. The utmost that can be said is that there was a trust cast upon the appellee's intestate, and that by subsequent acts and declarations he acknowledged the trust." Parks v. Satterthwaite, 132 Ind. 411. See also Zuck v. Culp, 59 Cal. 142; Kutz's Appeal, 40 Pa. St. 90; Gutch v. Fosdick, 48 N. J. Eq. 353; Dickinson v. Leominster Sav. Bank, 152 Mass. 54. But ordinary bailments, it is said, are subject to the operation of the statute of limitations. Wood on Limitations, 418, § 200. Compare Reizenstein v. Marquardt, 75 Iowa 294; 9 Am. St. Rep. 477.

An order by a cestui que trust to pay a certain sum out of his estate, accepted by the trustee and assigned by the payee, constitutes a direct trust between the trustee and such assignee, and is not within the operation of the statute of limitations. Bigelow v. Catlin, 50 Vt. 408.

Money paid to a town to equalize bounties for soldiers, is held in trust for them, and the statute of limitations does not run against them in an action to recover the same. McGuire v. Linneus, 74 Me. 344.

As between vendor and vendee, after sale and before a conveyance, the vendor in possession is deemed a trustee for the vendee, and the statute of limitations will not run against the latter's right to specific performance unless the vendor gives notice, or does some act showing that his holding is adverse. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624; Graham v. Nelson, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 605; Harris v. King, 16 Ark. 122; Scarlett v. Hunter, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 84.

So, if the vendee is in possession under the contract, the statute will not run against his right to a conveyance. Love v. Watkins, 40 Cal. 547; 6 Am. Rep. 624; Bodley v. Ferguson, 30 Cal. 511; Richardson v. Kuhn, 6 Watts (Pa.) 299; Marlin v. Willink, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 207; Hemming v. Zimmer-schitte, 4 Tex. 159; Holman v. Criswell, 15 Tex. 395; Coulson v. Walton, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 62.

As a rule, a mere power to sell property does not create an express continuing trust of such a nature as to prevent the operation of the statute. Dickenson v. Teasdale, 1 De G., J. & S. 52. But compare Cook v. Williams, 2 N. J. Eq. 209, as to when a direct trust may be created with reference to such a matter. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, pp. 667, 686, 687; PARTNERSHIP, vol. 17, p. 1282; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS, vol. 7, p. 165; GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 9, p. 85.

1. Russell v. Peyton, 4 Ill. App. 473; Edwards v. University, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 325; 30 Am. Dec. 170; McKethan v. Murchison, 73 N. Car. 435; Colvin v. Menefee, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 92; Whiting v. Whiting, 4 Gray (Mass.) 237; Melling v. Leak, 16 C. B. 652; 81 E. C. L. 652; Doe v. Phillips, 10 Q. B. 130; 59 E. C. L. 130; Harwood v. Oglander, 6 Ves. 199; Young v. Waterpark, 13 Sim. 204; Garrard v. Tuck, 8 C. B. 248; 65 E. C. L. 247; Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 607.

And the statute does not run in favor of the trustee as against the beneficiary, while the latter is in possession. Clark v. Clark, 21 Neb. 402; Gilbert v. Sleeper, 71 Cal. 294.

So, where a trust is created by agreement of the parties, the possession of the cestui que trust is not adverse to that of the trustee, and no matter how long it has been continued, cannot divest him of the title. Taylor v. Gooch, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 436.

Where a person in possession is trustee for two persons claiming adversely against the cestui que trust, and he cannot set up the Statute of Limitations in bar of the trustee or a co-beneficiary.¹

Under the rule that the statute will run where the trustee has repudiated the trust and taken adverse possession with the knowledge of the beneficiary, it frequently becomes important to determine what is sufficient to constitute a disavowal of the trust or an adverse possession. The mere fact that money due the beneficiary is permitted to remain in the trustee's hands does not change the nature of the debt or bar the beneficiary, unless the circumstances are such that he is guilty of laches.² The repudiation of the trust, in order to start the statute, must be by clear and unequivocal acts or words.³ But where adverse possession has been taken, or the trust has been clearly repudiated, and knowledge thereof and of the adverse claim of the trustee is brought home to the beneficiary, who is sui juris and has been, during all the time, capable of maintaining an action to enforce his rights, he will be completely barred at the end of twenty years,⁴ and equity to each other, neither can take advantage of such possession to bar the other. Foscue v. Foscue, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 321.

1. Knight v. Bowyer, 4 De G. & J. 619; Spickernell v. Hotham, Kay 669; Foscue v. Foscue, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 321; Hastie v. Aiken, 67 Ala. 317. See also Webster v. Newbold, 41 Pa. St. 482; 82 Am. Dec. 487; Manby v. Bewicke, 3 K. & J. 342; Watson v. Saul, 1 Giff. 188; Dickenson v. Teasdale, 1 De G. J. & S. 52; Sturgis v. Morse, 3 De G. & J. 1.

The mere possession of the cestui que trust is not, in the absence of other circumstances, adverse to the trustee. Buswell on Limitations, § 343; Taylor v. Gooch, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 436; Keene v. Deardorn, 8 East 248; Pomfret v. Windsor, 2 Ves. 472. But see Scott v. Gallagher, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 333; 16 Am. Dec. 508; Moore v. Jackson, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 58.

2. Crisfield v. State, 55 Md. 192.

The beneficiary cannot be said to have slept upon his right to relief against a trustee in a court of equity, until a position of antagonism or defiance of his rights has, with his knowledge, been assumed by the trustee, and a mere retention of a portion of the income of the trust fund by the latter, with the consent of the beneficiary, and without any claim of right, does not produce such hostile attitude. Dyer v. Waters, 46 N. J. Eq. 484.

3. Speidel v. Henrici, 120 U. S. 377; Chicago R. Co. v. Hay, 119 Ill. 493; Hubbard v. U. S. Mortgage Co., 14 Ill.

App. 40; Thomas v. Merry, 113 Ind. 83; Zeller v. Eckert, 4 How. (U. S.) 295; Lewis v. Castleman, 27 Tex. 407; Whitehead v. Lord, 11 Eng. L. & Eq. 587; Lister v. Pickford, 34 L. J. Ch. 582. See also Scott v. Haddock, 11 Ga. 258; Moffatt v. Buchanan, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 369; 54 Am. Dec. 41; Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U. S. 621; Causler v. Wharton, 62 Ala. 358; Hendy v. March, 75 Cal. 566; Boggs v. Johnson, 26 W. Va. 821; Adams v. Taylor, 14 Ark. 62. But compare Gray v. Kerr, 46 Ohio St. 652; Douglas v. Corry, 46 Ohio St. 349.

Where one took money of certain children who lived with him, and promised to invest it in land in their names, but took title in his own name and used it as a home for himself and the children, it was held that he had committed a breach of trust, but that the trust was a continuing one and the possession was not adverse, and that the lapse of less than twenty-one years raised no presumption that the trust had been discharged or extinguished. Paschall v. Hinderer, 28 Ohio St. 568. See also Tyler v. Daniel, 65 Ill. 316.

4. Ward v. Harvey, 111 Ind. 471; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377; Merriam v. Hassam, 14 Allen (Mass.) 522; 92 Am. Dec. 795; Otto v. Schlappkahl, 57 Iowa 226; Baker v. Whiting, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 486; Wickliffe v. Lexington, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 161; Turner v. Smith, 11 Tex. 629; Hunter v. Hubbard, 26 Tex. 537; Neel v. McElhenny, 69 Pa. St. 300; Harrison v. Brolaskey, 20 Pa. St. 299; Curtis may refuse relief where he is guilty of laches, even though the full statutory period has not elapsed.¹

Presumptions often arise from lapse of time that payments have been made, releases and conveyances executed, or rights abandoned, and where there is positive evidence to support such presumptions, they will be indulged in, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, although the statutory period has not elapsed.² But where the trustee recognizes the trust as still continuing, the presumption of payment that would otherwise arise after twenty years, is rebutted.³ And no conveyance by the trustee will be presumed where he is under no obligation to convey.⁴ One who is ignorant of his rights will not be presumed to have abandoned them,⁵ and a person under disability will not be presumed to have released a right.⁶

v. Daniel, 23 Ark. 363; Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y. 98; Kane v. Bloodgood, 7 John. Ch. (N. Y.) 90; 11 Am. Dec. 430; Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J. 606; Portlock v. Gardner, 1 Hare 594; Wedderburn v. Wedderburn, 4 Myl. & C. 52; Brawner v. Staup, 21 Md. 328; White v. White, 1 Md. Ch. 56; Syester v. Brewer, 27 Md. 288; Williams v. First Presbyterian Soc., 1 Ohio St. 478; Sollie v. Croft, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 34.

A trustee, by denying the right of the beneficiary and asserting an adversary claim in himself, abandons his fiduciary character, and the Statute of Limitations then begins to run against the claim of the cestui que trust. Murdock v. Hughes, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 219.

The liability of a trustee purchasing at his own sale begins as soon as he takes possession of the property in pursuance of such sale, and openly and notoriously occupies it as his own, asserting an individual right thereto, and the Statute of Limitations then begins to run. Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y. 98.

1. Helm v. Rogers, 81 Ky. 568. See also infra, this title, Account.

2. 2 Perry on Trusts, § 866; Pattison v. Hawkesworth, 10 Beav. 375; England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682; Jones v. Turberville, 2 Ves. Jr. 13; Atty. Gen'l v. Moor, 20 Beav. 119; Scott v. Knox, 4 Ir. Eq. 411; Maddox v. Dent, 4 Md. Ch. 543; Perkins v. Cartmel, 4 Harr. (Del.) 270; 96 Am. Dec. 689; Clemenson v. Williams, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 72; Baker v. Whiting, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 466; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224; Phillipi v. Phillipi, 115 U. S. 159; Jackson v. Sackett, 7 Wend. (N. Y.)

94; Drysdale's Appeal, 14 Pa. St. 531; Ashurst's Appeal, 60 Pa. St. 290; Bass v. Bass, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 187; Phillips v. State, 5 Ohio St. 122; Syester v. Brewer, 27 Md. 288; note to Alston v. Hawkins, 18 Am. St. Rep. 879. See EVIDENCE, vol. 7, p. 43; PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 207; LIMITATION OF ACTIONS, vol. 13, p. 669; PRESUMPTIONS, vol. 19, p. 55.

3. Werborn v. Austin, 82 Ala. 498. See also Eby v. Eby, 5 Pa. St. 435; Reed v. Reed, 46 Pa. St. 239; White v. Beaman, 96 N. Car. 122; Murphy v. Coates, 33 N. J. Eq. 424; Pinson v. Ivey, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 296.

No mere delay on the part of the cestui que trust in bringing suit, can defeat his right to recovery so long as both parties treat the trust as subsisting and continuing. Reihl v. Likowski, 33 Kan. 515; Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 292.

4. Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204.

Nor will such a presumption arise while the trustee controls the cestui que trust, and has duties to perform relative to the trust. Keaton v. McGuier, 24 Ga. 217; Wellborn v. Rogers, 24 Ga. 558; Doe v. Staple, 2 T. R. 684; Keene v. Deardorn, 8 East 248; Flournoy v. Johnson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 694.

5. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Mer. 362; Stackpoole v. Daveron, 1 Bro. P. C. 1; Randall v. Errington, 10 Ves. 427; Pickering v. Stamford, 2 Ves. Jr. 285; Roche v. O'Brien, 1 B. & B. 330; Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 J. & W. 65; Bennett v. Colley, 2 Myl. & K. 232; Stone v. Godfrey, 5 De G., M. & G. 76; Blennerhassett v. Day, 2 B. & B. 118; Massie v. Heiskell, 80 Va. 805; Jackson v. Lynch, 129 Ill. 72.

6. March v. Russell, 3 Myl. & C. 31;

Where a party relies upon the lapse of time or upon presumptions arising therefrom, and not upon the statute, to defeat a suit, he should plead the facts, as a demurrer may be insufficient.¹

Acquiescence in a transaction under such circumstances as to constitute an estoppel, will also amount to a bar, notwithstanding it may be for a very short period.² Thus, the remedy of a cestui que trust for a breach of trust by the trustee, will be barred in the absence of any excuse, by his acquiescence after knowledge of the facts and of his rights in the premises.³

4. Accounts.—The jurisdiction of courts of equity to compel an accounting in all cases involving a trust or fiduciary relationship, is well established.⁴ But the circumstances of a case may be such that the court will refuse to order an accounting, notwithstanding it has jurisdiction over the subject, and even where an accounting is decreed, the comprehensiveness of the decree as to the period for which the defendant is required to account, will depend largely upon the relationship of the parties, and the circumstances of the particular case.⁵

Thompson v. Simpson, 1 D. & W. 489; Bennett v. Colley, 5 Sim. 181; McLellan v. Crofton, 6 Me. 334.

But it has been held that, after possession held by the cestui que trust for more than twenty-five years, delivery and acceptance of a conveyance in trust will be presumed, although the trustee is a lunatic at the time of the conveyance, and continues so. Eyrick v. Hetrick, 13 Pa. St. 488.

1. Deloraine v. Browne, 3 Bro. C. C. 633; Mitf. Pl. 212. See also, as to when and how excuse for delay should be alleged by the complainant who brings suit after a long period of time has elapsed, Stearns v. Page, 7 How. (U. S.) 829; Badger v. Badger, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 95; Lonsdale v. Smith, 106 U. S. 391.

2. Kent v. Jackson, 14 Beav. 384; Graham v. Birkenhead R. Co., 2 M. & G. 146; Styles v. Guy, 1 H. & T. 523; Rennie v. Young, 2 De G. & J. 142; Leeds v. Amherst, 2 Ph. 123; Jorden v. Money, 5 H. L. Cas. 185; Phillipson v. Gatly, 7 Hare 523; McGivney v. McGivney, 142 Mass. 160; Godwin v. Whitehead, 88 Va. 600.

3. 2 Pom. Eq., § 1083; Broadhurst v. Balgny, 1 Y. & C. C. 28; Wiswall v. Stewart, 32 Ala. 433; 70 Am. Dec. 549; Kennedy v. Winn, 80 Ala. 165; Hoffman Steam Coal Co. v. Cumberland, etc., Coal Co., 16 Md. 508; 77 Am. Dec. 311; Davis v. Simpson, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 147; 9 Am. Dec. 500; Jennison v. Hapgood, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 1; 19 Am. Dec. 258; Van Dyke v. Johns, 1

Del. Ch. 93; 12 Am. Dec. 76; Harrison v. McHenry, 9 Ga. 164; 52 Am. Dec. 435; Mulford v. Murch, 11 N. J. Eq. 16; 64 Am. Dec. 472; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224; Ames Iron Works v. West, 24 Fed. Rep. 313. But see Ames v. Brooks, 143 Mass. 344; Jones v. Lloyd, 117 Ill. 597, and Rowe v. Bentley, 29 Gratt. (Va.) 756, in which last case war and ignorance of the beneficiaries were held to constitute a sufficient reason for not sooner bringing suit.

4. Marvin v. Brooks, 94 N. Y. 80; Uhlman v. New York L. Ins. Co., 109 N. Y. 421; Cochrane v. Adams, 50 Mich. 17; Barnes v. Dow, 59 Vt. 531; Colonial, etc., Mortgage Co. v. Hutchinson, 44 Fed. Rep. 223; Foley v. Hill, 2 H. L. Cas. 28; Moxon v. Bright, L. R., 4 Ch. App. 292; Smith's Princ. Eq. § 470; 3 Pom. Eq. Jur., § 1421. See EQUITY, vol. 6, pp. 683, 720, 721.

5. Thus, in a Massachusetts case, it is said: "The length of time during which a court of chancery will require the trustees of a charity to account for the income, which has not been applied according to the intentions of the donors, is much affected by the particular circumstances of each case, and the Statute of Limitations affords no absolute bar or limit." Atty. Gen'l v. Old South Soc., 13 Allen (Mass.) 474. In this case it was held that where, in good faith, rent had been received instead of interest at the ordinary rate, which would have amounted to more than the rent, for a period of thirty

Where a trustee is called upon for an accounting as to rents and mesne profits, it often becomes important to determine what effect, if any, the Statute of Limitations will have, and just how far back the court will order the account to be made. If the trust is an express one, the Statute of Limitations will have no application as against the beneficiary.¹ But if the claim to rents and profits is based upon a legal, and not an equitable, title, the legal limitation will govern.² And if the beneficiary is guilty of laches, the court will not carry the account further back than the decree,³ or, at most, to the filing of the bill.⁴ Where the plaintiff is not a beneficiary, and there is no trust, infancy, fraud, or concealment, the account will not be carried back beyond the filing of the bill,⁵ unless there has been a demand, in which case an accounting may be had from the time of the demand.⁶ And even in case of a trust, a court of equity may refuse to order any accounting at all where the claim is stale and the original transaction has become obscure, so that it is difficult for the court to do entire justice as between the parties.⁷

XIV. NATURE OF THE TRUSTEE'S ESTATE.—In order that the trustee may acquire any estate or interest in the property conveyed, some power must be reposed in him or some duty imposed years, ending more than twenty years before the suit was brought, the rent was to be deemed a substitution of and satisfaction for such interest during the same period. See also Oehler v. Walker, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 323.

1. Atty. Gen'l v. Brewer's Co., 1 Mer. 408; Matthew v. Brise, 14 Beav. 341; Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U.S. 621.

In such a case the beneficiary will, ordinarily, be entitled to an accounting from the time his title first arose, or from the time his rights were first withheld by the defendant. Barnewall v. Barnewall, 3 Ridgw. P. C. 66; Sturgis v. Morse, 24 Beav. 541; Kidney v. Coussmaker, 12 Ves. 158.

2. Jesus College v. Bloom, 3 Atk. 262; Landsdowne v. Landsdowne, 1 Madd. 137; Carlisle Corp. v. Wilson, 13 Ves. 276; Dinwiddie v. Bailey, 6 Ves. 136; O'Connor v. Spaight, 1 Sch. & Lef. 309; Moneypenny v. Bristow, 2 Russ. & M. 125; Winchester v. Knight, 1 P. Wms. 406; Parrott v. Palmer, 3 Myl. & K. 632; Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 89; Universities v. Richardson, 6 Ves. 701; Lee v. Alston, 1 Bro. C. C. 194; Grierson v. Eyre, 9 Ves. 346; Garth v. Cotton, 1 Dick. 211; Riddle v. Whitehill, 135 U.S. 621. See Boone v. Miller, 73 Tex. 557; Montgomery v. Noyes, 73 Tex. 203.

3. Acherley v. Roe, 5 Ves. 565.

4. Dormer v. Fortescue, 3 Atk. 130;

Pettward v. Prescott, 7 Ves. 541; Pickett v. Loggon, 14 Ves. 215; Kidney v. Coussmaker, 12 Ves. 158; Bowes v. East London Water Co., 3 Madd. 375; Cook v. Arnham, 2 Eq. Cas. Ab. 245; Schroder v. Schroder, 1 Kay 591.

5. Pulteney v. Warren, 6 Ves. 93; Hicks v. Sallitt, 3 De G., M. & G. 813; Thomas v. Thomas, 2 K. & J. 79; Edwards v. Morgan, McClel. 554.

6. Penny v. Allen, 7 De G., M. & G. 409. And see Edwards v. Morgan, McClel. 554.

7. Buswell on Limitations, § 333; 2 Beach Modern Eq., § 843. See also Groenendyke v. Coffeen, 109 Ill. 325; Codman v. Rodgers, 10 Pick. (Mass.) 119; Bell v. Hudson, 73 Cal. 285; Sheldon v. Rockwell, 9 Wis. 181; 76 Am. Dec. 265; Harrison v. Gibson, 23 Gratt. (Va.) 212; Stout v. Seabrook, 30 N. J. Eq. 189; Matter of Neilley, 95 N. Y. 390; Sullivan v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 94 U. S. 811; Godden v. Kimball, 99 U. S. 201; Halsey v. Tate, 52 Pa. St. 311; Gregg v. Gregg, 15 N. H. 190; Taylor v. Blair, 14 Mo. 437; Whedbee v. Whedbee, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 392.

"There must be conscience, good faith, and reasonable diligence, to call into action the powers of the court. In matters of account, where they are not barred by the Statute of Limitations, courts of equity refuse to interfere upon him, that will constitute him more than a mere repository of the title; or he must hold title for the purpose of sustaining some contingent estate or remainder; otherwise, the Statute of Uses will execute the trust at once and vest in the beneficiary the legal title as well as the equitable.¹ But the Statute of Uses applies after a considerable lapse of time, from considerations of public policy, and from the difficulty of doing entire justice when the original transactions have become obscure by time, and the evidence may be lost." Per Taney, C. J., in McKnight v. Taylor, 1 How. (U. S.) 168. See also Piatt v. Vattier, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 416; Wissler v. Craig, 80 Va. 30; Lyons v. Chase, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 17; Osbone v. O'Reilly, 43 N. J. Eq. 647.

1. See REAL PROPERTY, vol. 19, p. 1057; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees (1st Am. ed.), p. 209; Perry on Trusts, §§ 298, 305. See also supra, this title, Origin and History; Society, etc. v. Hartland, 2 Paine (U. S.) 536; Henderson v. Griffin, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 151; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 488; Adams v. Law, 17 How. (U. S.) 417; Chapman v. Glassell, 13 Ala. 50; 48 Am. Dec. 41; Tindal v. Drake, 51 Ala. 574; Wilkinson v. May, 69 Ala. 33; Witham v. Brooner, 63 Ill. 344; Adams v. La Rose, 75 Ind. 471; McCoy v. Monte, 90 Ind. 441; Adkins v. Hudson, 11 Ind. 372; Bayer v. Cockrill, 3 Kan. 282; Ware v. Richardson, 3 Md. 505; 56 Am. Dec. 762; Thatcher v. Omans, 3 Pick. (Mass.) 521; Bullard v. Goffe, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 252; Richardson v. Stodder, 100 Mass. 528; Chamberlain v. Crane, 1 N. H. 64; Upham v. Varney, 15 N. H. 466; Hutchins v. Heywood, 50 N. H. 495; Melick v. Pidcock, 44 N. J. Eq. 525; 6 Am. St. Rep. 901; Jackson v. Fish, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 456; Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 107; McCartee v. Orphan Asylum Soc., 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 437; 13 Am. Dec. 516; Battle v. Petway, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 576; 44 Am. Dec. 59; Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480; Moore v. Shultz, 13 Pa. St. 98; 53 Am. Dec. 446; Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399; Rush v. Lewis, 21 Pa. St. 72; Ramsay v. Marsh, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 252; 13 Am. Dec. 717; Faber v. Police, 10 S. Car. 376; Snelling v. Lamar, 32 S. Car. 72; 17 Am. St. Rep. 835; Bristow v. McCall, 16 S. Car. 545; Howard v. Henderson, 18 S. Car. 184; Ayer v. Ritter, 29 S. Car. 135; Reeves v. Brayton, 36 S. Car. 384;

Chapman v. Blissett, Forrest 145; Boughton v. Langley, 1 Salk. 678.

The statute of uses has been enacted substantially in the following states: Alabama (2185); Dakota (Civil Code 274-278); Delaware (83, 1); Georgia (2314); Illinois (30, 3); Indiana (2981); Kansas (114, 13); Michigan (5566-5567); Minnesota (43, 1 to 5); Missouri (3938); New Jersey (Conveyances, 66); New York (2, 1, 2, 45 to 49); South Carolina (1958-1960); Wisconsin (2071 to 2075). See also Perry on Trusts, § 299, and note to Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399.

And adjudged cases show the adoption of the statute as a part of the common law in Connecticut. Barrett v. French, 1 Conn. 354; 6 Am. Dec. 241; Bryan v. Bradley, 16 Conn. 474.

In New Hampshire. French v. French, 3 N. H. 234.

In Indiana. Adkins v. Hudson, 11 Ind. 372.

In Iowa. Pierson v. Armstrong, 1 Iowa 282; 63 Am. Dec. 440.

In Maine. Emery v. Chase, 5 Me. 232; Marden v. Chase, 32 Me. 329.

In Massachusetts. Chapin v. First Universalist Soc., 8 Gray (Mass.) 580; Brewer v. Hardy, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 376; 33 Am. Dec. 747; Johnson v. Johnson, 7 Allen (Mass.) 197; 83 Am. Dec. 676; First Baptist Soc. v. Hazen, 100 Mass. 322.

In Pennsylvania. Earp's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 119; Deibert's Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 296; Rush v. Lewis, 21 Pa. St. 72.

In Texas. Flint on Trusts, § 121.

In Virginia. Rowletts v. Daniel, 4 Munf. (Va.) 473.

It is partially in force in Florida. Flint on Trusts, § 121.

In Illinois. Witham v. Brooner, 63 Ill. 344.

In Kentucky. Flint on Trusts, § 121.

In North Carolina. Smith v. Lookabill, 76 N. Car. 465.

In Rhode Island. Nightingale v. Hidden, 7 R. I. 132.

But not in Ohio. Helfenstine v. Garrard, 7 Ohio 275; Foster v. Dennison, 9 Ohio 124; Williams v. First Presbyterian Soc., 1 Ohio St. 497; nor in California, Flint on Trusts, § 121; nor in Tennessee, Flint, § 121; nor in Vermont, Gorham v. Daniels, 23 Vt. 600; Sherman v. Dodge, 28 Vt. 26; nor in Virginia, Bass v. Scott, 2 Leigh (Va.) 359.

If land is devised to B, his heirs and assigns forever, upon the uses, trusts, and conditions that B shall permit Jane and James to use, occupy, and enjoy the same during their lives and the life of the survivor, and at the death of both Jane and James, that one-half of the same shall be to the use of Sarah forever, and the other half to the use of Lydia for life, and after the death of Lydia to the use of Lydia's children forever, this devise vests in A no estate in trusts, but an estate to the use merely. Hayes v. Tabor, 41 N. H. 521.

In Alabama, it has been held that under the statute of uses no estate of interest whatever vests in a trustee, who by a deed of appointment is made merely the repository of the legal title, with no well-defined duties to perform, and no responsibility to rest upon him (Revised Code, § 1576); but that the whole estate, legal as well as equitable, passes to the beneficiary under the deed. Tindal v. Drake, 51 Ala. 574.

Where a trust of lands is wholly nominal, the trust becomes executed by the statute in the beneficiary, who may bring an action of ejectment to recover lands in his own name, without a previous conveyance from the trustee. Welch v. Allen, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 147.

If the trustee's only duty is to convey, at some future day, the legal estate which he holds, his services are useless, and the transfer will be made by the statute of uses, and chancery ends the office. Adams v. Guerard, 29 Ga. 651; 76 Am. Dec. 624.

A deed to X, Y and Z, their heirs, etc., in trust for the only proper use of the grantors during life, and afterward for the use of their grandchildren, conveys the legal estate as an executed use, and does not vest a trust estate in the grantees. Jones v. Bush, 4 Harr. (Del.) 1.

As to persons in esse, the legal estate is vested immediately, and, as to persons not in esse, it vests immediately upon their coming into being, if they come in good time, otherwise it passes over to the next remainder-man. Roy v. Garnet, 2 Wash. (Va.) 9.

A devise in trust to allow the widow of the testator to enjoy the rents and income of his estate during her widowhood, conveys legal estate to the widow under the statutes for the time prescribed. Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 107.

Where there was a conveyance to A and his heirs, upon a naked trust for the state, it was held that the legal title vested in the state. Lamar v. Simpson, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 71; 42 Am. Dec. 345.

Land was conveyed to A in trust for the use and benefit of B, her heirs and assigns, and A executed, at the time, a mortgage to the grantor to secure a part of the purchase-money. It was held that A acquired no estate, legal or equitable, in the land, but the entire estate vested in B, subject to the same conditions as the legal estate would have been subject had it vested in A; that the deed and mortgage are to be construed as one instrument, and that B took the legal and equitable estate subject to the mortgage. Rawson v. Lampman, 5 N. Y. 456.

Where property was conveyed to a trustee to hold to the use of X for life, her husband also to have possession for life, and upon the death of either to the survivor for life, the remainder going to the children in fee, it was held that as no use was declared for the children, the trust ended with the life estate and the legal estate vested in them. Park v. Check, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 20.

A clause, "I appoint H. trustee for M.," without more, gives the trustee no duty, and hence the trust is executed. Therefore the legal title passes to the beneficiary by the statute of uses, if it be real estate; by common law, if personal estate. Bowman v. Long, 26 Ga. 142.

The estate which the statute of uses executes in the cestui que trust is identical with that conferred on the trustee. Perry on Trusts, § 312; Vanhorn v. Harrison, 1 Dall. (U. S.) 137; Nelson v. Davis, 35 Ind. 474; Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189; First Baptist Soc. v. Hazen, 100 Mass. 322; Jackson v. Fish, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 456.

In Wainwright v. Low, 132 N. Y. 313, a woman, shortly before her marriage, conveyed land to the trustee to collect and pay the rents to her, or at her election, to permit her to hold and use the land for her benefit. It was held, upon her election to retain possession and control of the land, that no title vested in the trustee.

M. and his wife, together with their son John and his wife, being the owners of a legal title to the property in controversy, quit-claimed to K., who immediately reconveyed to the son, who also on the same day executed a bond to his father and mother to the effect that the rents and profits should be paid to them, and that he held the title "in trust for the benefit of the children" of said M. and his wife, "excepting Charles G., A., J., Eliza, J., P., R., R.," this property to be divided equally among the children, upon the death of M. and his wife. The court held that as this trust was passive in all its terms, the estate did not vest in a trustee, and passed directly to the seven children as beneficiaries under the revised statutes of Wisconsin. Hannig v. Mueller, 82 Wis. 235; citing White v. Fitzgerald, 19 Wis. 480; Goodrich v. Milwaukee, 24 Wis. 430; Ruth v. Oberbrunner, 40 Wis. 238; Smith v. Ford, 48 Wis. 133; Skinner v. James, 69 Wis. 610.

In Everts v. Everts, 80 Mich. 222, the deed in controversy had been executed without consideration by the plaintiff's husband. It conveyed land to the defendant and his assigns, the word "heirs" being stricken out, and stipulated that the lands were conveyed in trust for the benefit of the plaintiff and her husband, and to be held by the defendant for their use and benefit, and contained also the following provisions: "And it is fully understood that the said first parties are to have the use and benefit of said land, being the income thereof, during the natural lives of both of said first parties."

It appeared from the evidence, that the purpose of the deed was to prevent the grantor from wasting the property, and that up to the time of the grantor's death the defendant had nothing further to do with the land than to merely hold the title. The control, possession, and benefit remained altogether in the hands of the plaintiff and her husband. The court held that this deed created a passive trust, whereby the legal title, under the Michigan Statute of Uses, passed to the cestui que trust.

The existence of a duty to be performed by the trustee prevents the statute of uses from operating so as to execute the trust, and continues the legal title in the trustee. Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 488; Meacham v. Steele, 93 Ill. 135; Kellogg v. Hale, 108 Ill. 164; Morton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 261; 39 Am. Dec. 575; Norton v. Leonard, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 152; Leggett v. Perkins, 2 N. Y. 297; Wood v. Ma- ther, 38 Barb. (N. Y.) 473; Adams v. Perry, 43 N. Y. 487; Blount v. Walker, 31 S. Car. 13; Nickell v. Handly, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 336.

A trust for a married woman and her infant children will stand, although no active duties are to be performed by the trustee. Dean v. Long, 122 Ill. 447.

A trust to receive and pay the income of real estate and personal estate to a feme covert for life, does not come to an end on discovery, but continues until the death of the beneficiary. Bacon's Estate, 6 Phila. (Pa.) 335.

An agreement in the marriage articles by the father of the intended wife, to stand seised to her use, after marriage, of a piece of real estate, does not operate after the marriage to convey the legal estate by the statute of uses. But the use continues executory in the trustee and his heir at law. Magniac v. Thompson, 1 Baldw. (U. S.) 344.

A devise for the trustee of real and personal estate to hold in trust for, and to collect, and receive the income from said estate, and pay over the same to the son of the testatrix, during his natural life, without being subject to his debts and liabilities, is an active, operative trust, and the whole estate passes to the trustee. Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113.

Where an estate is conveyed to a trustee for certain purposes, and it is intended to protect the estate until the time fixed for the division, and this can only be done by the legal title continuing in the trustee, the use will not be executed in the beneficiary. Poser v. Cook, 1 Hill (S. Car.) 413.

A conveyance or devise of an estate to trustees for the sole and separate use of a married woman, does not come under the operation of the statute of uses. Williman v. Holmes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 475.

A devise to trustees of real and personal property, in trust to rent and let the real estate and to invest the personal estate, to collect and receive the rents, interest and profits thereof, and to pay over to the testator's children the net income, is an active, operative trust, and the estate vests in the trustees; the use is not executed, even though all the beneficiaries are sui juris. Barnett's Appeal, 46 Pa. St. 392.

The statute of uses did not operate to execute limitations in trusts to preserve contingent remainders when such trusts were legal. Vanderheyden v. Crandall, 2 Den. (N. Y.) 9.

only to trusts in real property, and not to trusts in chattels or in personal property.¹

It becomes, then, a vital question in measuring the scope of the trustee's estate, to ascertain whether these essential powers and duties have been created. The estate of the trustee is commensurate with the powers conferred by the trust and the purposes to be achieved by it.² Whatever estate is needed to

Where a grant is made to individuals for the use of a church, unincorporated at the time, the grantees stand ceded to the use; and when the church acquires a legal capacity to hold real estate, the possession to the use is executed by the statute and the estate vests. Reformed Dutch Church v. Veeder, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 494.

The trustee of a deed of trust will be protected by equity, so far as consistent with law, and equity will not order the transfer of the legal title to the beneficiary while there are ulterior trusts which he might destroy. Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480.

Where land is given in trust to a husband for the use and benefit of his wife, and upon her death in trust for the heirs of her body, and "at any time should the said husband deem it best for the interest of his said wife and children, to sell said property, and reinvest the proceeds, he is hereby empowered so to do," the legal title remains in the husband as trustee, and the statute of uses does not control. Carrigan v. Drake, 36 S. Car. 354.

If the duties imposed upon the trustees require that they invest the funds, pay over the income, etc., and the trust runs for the use of a feme covert for life, and then to her children, the courts will consider the trust an active one and maintain it. Keene's Estate, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 339.

1. The statute of uses does not apply to trusts of personal property. Schley v. Lyon, 6 Ga. 530; Denton v. Denton, 17 Md. 403; Slevin v. Brown, 32 Mo. 176; Kane v. Gott, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 641; 35 Am. Dec. 641; Artcher v. Zeh, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 203; Savage v. Burnham, 17 N. Y. 571; Day v. Roth, 18 N. Y. 448; Gilman v. McArdle, 99 N. Y. 451; Matter of Carpenter, 131 N. Y. 86; Bunn v. Vaughn, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 271; Brown v. Harris, 25 Barb. (N. Y.) 136; Forsyth v. Rathbone, 34 Barb. (N. Y.) 408; Cutting v. Cutting, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 371; Rice v. Burnett, Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 579; 42

Am. Dec. 336; Joor v. Hodges, Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 593; Harley v. Platts, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 310.

As regards personal estates in trust, the legal title remains in the trustee, and does not pass to the cestui que trust upon the accomplishment of the purposes of the trust. Denton v. Denton, 17 Md. 403.

Where there is a gift of personal estate to a trustee without words of limitation, it vests in him the whole estate subject to the trust. Hanson v. Worthington, 12 Md. 418.

2. Hill on Trustees 229-252, 269-277; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, ch. 12; Perry on Trusts, § 312; Ward v. Amory, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 419; King v. Ackerman, 2 Black (U. S.) 408; Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. (U. S.) 98; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 499; Comby v. McMichael, 19 Ala. 751; Powell v. Glenn, 21 Ala. 468; Schaffer v. Lavretta, 57 Ala. 14; Jones v. Reese, 65 Ala. 134; Chamberlain v. Thompson, 10 Conn. 243; 26 Am. Dec. 390; Nelson v. Davis, 35 Ind. 474; Gill v. Logan, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 233; Deering v. Adams, 37 Me. 265; Leonard v. Diamond, 31 Md. 541; Sears v. Russell, 8 Gray (Mass.) 86; Gould v. Lamb, 11 Met. (Mass.) 84; 45 Am. Dec. 187; Cleveland v. Hallett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 407; Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189; King v. Parker, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 71; Hall v. Cushing, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 395; Longley v. Hall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 124; Stearns v. Palmer, 10 Met. (Mass.) 32; Coulter v. Robertson, 24 Miss. 278; 57 Am. Dec. 168; Upham v. Varney, 15 N. H. 462; Norton v. Norton, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 296; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 504; Nicoll v. Walworth, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 385; Bennett v. Garlock, 79 N. Y. 302; 35 Am. Rep. 517; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318; Crooke v. Kings County, 97 N. Y. 421; Matter of Tienken, 131 N. Y. 391; Payne v. Sale, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 455; Williams v. First Presbyterian Soc., 1 Ohio St. 478; Stacey v. Rice, 27 Pa. St. 75; 67 Am. Dec. 447; Meeting St. Baptist Soc. v. Hall, 8 R. I. 240; Smith effectuate the settlor's intention in creating the trust, even to a fee simple, the trustee acquires; but the exigencies of the trust

v. Metcalf, 1 Head (Tenn.) 64; Turley v. Massengill, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 359; Henderson v. Hill, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 32; Hooberry v. Harding, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 397; Harding v. St. Louis L. Ins. Co., 2 Tenn. Ch. 468; Murdock v. Johnson, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 611; Williamson v. Wickersham, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 55; Scott v. West, 63 Wis. 529; Collier v. Walters, L. R., 17 Eq. 252; White v. Baylor, 10 Ir. Eq. 54.

An estate co-extensive with the duties to be performed, will vest the trustee, and he will take exactly that quantity of interest which is required by the purposes of the trust, which being accomplished, the trust estate terminates. Smith v. Metcalf, 1 Head (Tenn.) 64.

In Ellis v. Fisher, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 231; 65 Am. Dec. 52, the court, by McKinney, J., said: "The established doctrine is, that trustees take exactly that quantity of interest which the purposes of the trust require. The question is not whether the testator has used words of limitation, or expressions adequate to carry an estate of inheritance; but whether the exigencies of the trust demand the fee simple, or can be satisfied by any, and what, less estate? And, therefore, a devise to trustees may be either restricted or extended, as the nature and purpose of the trust require. Although the devise be expressly to the trustees and their heirs, it is well settled that if the duties imposed on them, or the purposes of the trust require only an estate pur autre vie to be vested in them, their legal interest will be cut down to that extent, notwithstanding the express limitation to them in fee. This construction has been held to prevail even in the case of a deed by necessary implication, arising from the object of the trust in connection with the nature of the subsequent limitations; and much more readily will it prevail in the case of a will. And on the other hand, in the absence of any express limitation sufficient to carry the legal inheritance, the estate of the trustees may be enlarged and extended into such an estate as the nature and purposes of the trust require. The construction in this respect is governed mainly by the intention of the testator, as gathered from the general scope of the will."

A surviving partner is trustee for the firm with powers commensurate with the trust. Offut v. Scott, 47 Ala. 104.

In Sears v. Russell, 8 Gray (Mass.) 86, the court, by Bigelow, J., said: "The rule is well settled that trustees will be held to take that quantity of interest in estates devised to them which the exigencies of the trust may demand; and where lands are devised to trustees to convey to the objects of the testator's bounty, the legal estate necessarily vests in the trustees till they have conveyed it, and it must be commensurate with the estate which they are bound to convey; if they are to grant a fee it is necessary they should have a fee."

Trust with power to sell confers a fee simple. Hawker v. Hawker, 3 B. & Ald. 537; 5 E. C. L. 368; Bagshaw v. Spencer, 1 Ves. 144; Shaw v. Weigh, 2 Str. 798; Villiers v. Villiers, 2 Atk. 72; Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Ves. 645; Mott v. Buxton, 7 Ves. 201; Doe v. Edlin, 4 Ad. & El. 582; 31 E. C. L. 143; Preacher's Aid Soc. v. England, 106 Ill. 125; Glover v. Monckton, 3 Bing. 13; 11 E. C. L. 9; Gibson v. Montfort, 1 Ves. 485; Warter v. Hutchinson, 5 Moore 143; 1 B. & C. 121; Watson v. Pearson, 2 Exch. 594; Kirkland v. Cox, 94 Ill. 402; Spessard v. Rohrer, 9 Gill (Md.) 262; Jackson v. Robins, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 537.

In Stockbridge v. Stockbridge, 99 Mass. 244, the deed of trust conferred unlimited discretion as to the time and method of exercising the power of sale, and provided that the proceeds of all sales were "to be reinvested and held on the same trusts and way as the property so sold." The court held that such a trust required and implied a fee simple in the grantee. The conveyance was made to Caroline, wife of W. R. Stockbridge "for and during her natural life, and from after her decease to the persons who would then be the heirs at law of Stockbridge if he had then died intestate; but upon the trusts and with the powers following: That Caroline, at any time during the life of Stockbridge, and with his concurrence testified in writing under his hand and seal, may sell and convey the granted premises, or any part or parts thereof, in fee simple or for any less estate at public or private sale, at such a time or times, to such person or persons, put a strict limit upon his estate, and beyond this the courts will not suffer it to be enlarged. It matters little what form of words has been employed to create the trust, particularly in instruments of a testamentary character, the doctrine just stated being and for such consideration as may seem to her judicious, without the necessity of applying to any court for leave so to do; the net proceeds of all such sales to be reinvested and held on the same trusts and way as the property so sold," and that her deed with the written consent of Stockbridge should "cut off the rights of such remaindermen in the granted premises as fully and effectually as if such remainder had not been hereby created and the absolute estate in fee-simple had been hereby granted to the said Caroline." The court held that deed of Caroline Stockbridge, executed with her husband's concurrence, would be effectual to pass the entire title; that no part of the title remained in the settlor to convey; that Caroline acquired as her beneficial interest the use during her life, and that the estate in remainder could not be sold and the proceeds reinvested separately from the estate in possession.

In Zabriskie v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 22, it was held that a trust to sell or improve lands and invest and reinvest the proceeds, to collect rents and income, to pay taxes, assessments, commissions and other annual expenses and charges, to pay over the net income and divide the estate, vests a fee-simple title in the designated trustee. The court, by Runyon, Chancellor, said: "The trust is to sell, to improve, invest and reinvest, to collect rents and incomes, to pay taxes and commissions and other annual expenses and charges, to pay the net income over, and to divide the estate. The authority given is not a mere power of disposition which may be executed without any legal title, but a trust of such a character as renders it necessary that the legal estate, the title in fee to the property, should be in the trustees. . . . The trustees have power to lease, and to sell and convey, and where a devise to trustees upon trusts which, standing alone, would not vest in them the whole legal estate, is followed or accompanied by a power to sell, lease or mortgage, not limited to the period of the continuance of the active trusts, the trustees are held to take the whole legal fee, and not a mere limited estate with a superadded power of sale, mortgage or leasing." Citing Hawk. on Wills 153; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 421; 2 Jarman on Wills 201; Hill on Trustees 231, 232; Perry on Trusts, § 213.

A and his wife conveyed all their property, both real and personal, to B, in trust to immediately sell so much as would be sufficient to pay all the then existing debts of A, and to hold the residue in trust for his wife and children. It was held that the trustee had an absolute legal estate, and that a sale made by him was valid, although, contrary to the terms of the trust, the proceeds were applied to the payment of new debts of the husband, after the old ones had been paid in full. Stokes v. Middleton, 28 N. J. L. 32.

In Ryan v. McGehee, 83 N. Car. 500, real estate was conveyed by deed to A (who had been named as one of the parties entitled to the equitable estate) "in trust for B and others as aforesaid and their heirs." It was held that by this deed a fee-simple would be vested in the trustee.

An estate was devised in trust to executors for the children of the testator until the youngest should attain his majority, the directors being directed, in the meantime, to manage the estate and receive the income. It was held that a fee-simple estate in trust was vested in the executors, defeasible when the youngest child should attain the age of twenty-one years. Pearce v. Savage, 45 Me. 90.

Where an estate is devised to a trustee in fee for the sole use of a feme covert for life, and after her death for the sole use of a person or a class of persons, who are in esse and are sui juris, the legal estate in fee given to the trustee is cut down to an estate commensurate with the separate estate for life of the feme covert—an estate pur autre vie—which it is his duty to preserve, and the use as to the residue is immediately executed by statute in the remaindermen, concerning whose interest the trustee has no special duty to perform. So, where the legal estate given to the trustee is not sufficiently large to enable him to perform the duties of his trust, his legal estate will be enlarged by implication to an extent commensurate with the objects and duties of the trust. Williman v. Holmes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 475.

And it was held in Cleveland v. Hallett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 403, that if the purposes for which a trust is created by deed or devise of land, are of such a nature that they do, or by any possibility may, require a legal estate in the trustee for a period beyond his own life, the trustee will take a fee without words of limitation. See also West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425; Atty. Gen'l v. Federal St. Meeting House, 3 Gray (Mass.) 1.

The omission of words of limitation will not prevent the trustee's taking a legal estate in fee, if such estate be needed to carry out the trust. Bagshaw v. Spencer, 2 Atk. 577; Chamberlain v. Thompson, 10 Conn. 243; 26 Am. Dec. 390; Kirkland v. Cox, 94 Ill. 402; Nelson v. Davis, 35 Ind. 476; North v. Philbrook, 34 Me. 537; Hawkins v. Chapman, 36 Md. 94; Cleveland v. Hallett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 407; Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 123 N. Y. 37; Melick v. Pidcock, 44 N. J. Eq. 525; 6 Am. St. Rep. 901; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 499; Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. (U. S.) 98; Neilson v. Lagow, 4 Ind. 607; North v. Philbrook, 34 Me. 532; Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189; Stearns v. Palmer, 10 Met. (Mass.) 32; Adams v. Ross, 30 N. J. L. 505; 82 Am. Dec. 237; Welch v. Allen, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 147; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 495; Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 123 N. Y. 37.

The case of Brewster v. Striker, 2 N. Y. 19, was one in which a testator had devised certain real estate to his three grandchildren and their heirs forever. He directed that the real estate be disposed of by his executor as follows: "The said real estate shall not, at any time hereafter, be sold or alienated, but my said executors or the survivors of them, or the executors or administrators of such survivors, shall, from time to time, lease or rent the same on such terms as they shall deem most advantageous to my said heirs (grandchildren), and the rents, issues and profits of the same shall be annually paid to my said heirs in equal proportions; and if either of my said heirs or their children shall choose to occupy any part of my said real estate, he, she, or they, shall have a preference over any other applicant on paying a reasonable rent for the same." It was held that under the provisions of this will the executors took a legal estate by implication of law as trustees, the grandchildren taking an equitable estate as beneficiaries. The court said: "Independently, therefore, of other reasons, the necessity of vesting in the executors the legal title to the estate, in order to enable them to carry that intention into effect, would be a powerful consideration in support of the devise of the premises to them by implication of law.

. . . Mere powers, the amplest recognized and allowed by the revised statutes, without the legal estate, might not be adequate to all the exigencies of the trust. The testator has done more than confer an authority or power on the executors; he has enjoined upon them duties and active trusts which were to continue for several lives, and would require the exercise of judgment and discretion, and might, moreover, bring them into conflict with the devisees and heirs at law, and often render necessary or expedient the application of high coercive acts of ownership, and the recourse to remedies confessedly incident to the legal estate, but which an agent acting under powers only, could not adapt or apply."

In Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 603; 28 Am. Dec. 451, Walworth, Chancellor, says: "It is because a seisin of the legal estate is necessary to enable the trustee to collect the rents and profits that a devise of the legal estate in the rents and profits to a trustee for a term of years or for any other limited period, carries with it the legal estate in the land for the same term or time by necessary implication at the common law."

Where a legal title in the trustee is essential to the performance of the duties imposed, the trustee will be considered as taking the legal title by implication. Wilson v. Russ, 17 Fla. 696; West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425; Gill v. Logan, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 233; Merton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 257; 39 Am. Dec. 575; North v. Philbrook, 34 Me. 537; Warner v. Sprigg, 62 Md. 14; Cleveland v. Hallett, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 403; Packard v. Marshall, 138 Mass. 301; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 505; Welch v. Allen, 21 Wend. (N. Y.) 147; McCosker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Killam v. Allen, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 605; Toronto General Trust Co. v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 123 N. Y. 37; Williams v. First Presbyterian Soc., 1 Ohio St. 478; Freedley's Appeal, 60

Pa. St. 349; Barkley v. Dosser, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 529.

When a deed names the grantee as trustee of A, and the covenants are with him in that capacity, the title passes to A, as far as the grantee is concerned, under the Kansas Act. Bayer v. Cockrill, 3 Kan. 276.

A more liberal construction of deeds and wills is favored by the modern decisions in order to arrive at the real intent of the makers, and in all cases of devises or conveyances to trustees for the separate use of married women, the court will, if possible, so construe them as to vest the legal estate in the trustees, because this will best carry out the intentions of the donor. Ware v. Richardson, 3 Md. 505; 56 Am. Dec. 672.

Where land is devised to trustees, they will take the legal estate, wherever the purposes of the trust require it; but if they be not required to do an act, or exercise any control over the land or the income, the legal estate will vest in the beneficiary. Upham v. Varney, 15 N. H. 462. Compare Brewster v. Striker, 1 E. D. Smith (N. Y.) 321; Porter v. Doley, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 49.

In all cases where it is doubtful what estate the trustee has, he is presumed to take an estate sufficient to enable him to accomplish the purposes of the trust, but no more. Coulter v. Robertson, 24 Miss. 278; 57 Am. Dec. 168.

If lands are conveyed to a trustee to hold for the benefit of a cestuique trust named, for life, and collect the rents and pay them to the cestui que trust, the trustee takes the legal estate. Locke v. Barbour, 62 Ind. 577.

In Neilson v. Lagow, 12 How. (U. S.) 98, 110, the deed granted the realty to the trustees "and their successors in trust to sell and convey in fee simple absolute," and it was held that the legal estate, being in trust, must be commensurate with the trust, and will be deemed to be an estate in fee simple without the usual words of limitation.

The trustee's estate is commensurate in extent and duration with the object and extent of the trust. Doe v. Ladd, 77 Ala. 223. See also Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189; Sears v. Russell, 8 Gray (Mass.) 86; Stearns v. Palmer, 10 Met. (Mass.) 32; Gould v. Lamb, 11 Met. (Mass.) 84; 45 Am. Dec. 187; Brooks v. Jones, 11 Met. (Mass.) 191; King v. Parker, 9 Cush. (Mass.) 71; Cleveland v. Hallett, 6 Cush. (Mass.)

407; Goodrich v. Proctor, 1 Gray (Mass.) 570; Deering v. Adams, 37 Me. 265; Fisher v. Fields, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 505; Brown v. Brown, 12 Md. 87; Farquharson v. Eichelberger, 15 Md. 72; Hawkins v. Chapman, 36 Md. 94; Spessard v. Rohrer, 9 Gill (Md.) 262; Schaffer v. Laveetta, 57 Ala. 14; Chamberlain v. Thompson, 10 Conn. 243; 26 Am. Dec. 390; Lamar v. Pearre, 82 Ga. 354; 14 Am. St. Rep. 168; Zabriskie v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 33 N. J. Eq. 22; Melick v. Pidcock, 44 N. J. Eq. 525; 6 Am. St. Rep. 901; Ellis v. Fisher, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 231; 65 Am. Dec. 52; Brailsford v. Heyward, 2 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 290; Newman v. Dotson, 57 Tex. 117; Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 499; Doe v. Howland, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 277; 18 Am. Dec. 445; Jackson v. Robins, 16 Johns. (N. Y.) 537; Trent v. Hanning, 7 East 97.

Instances.—In Ames v. Ames, 15 R. I. 12, a trust created by a will empowered the trustee to manage the estate for a life tenant, to apply the corpus for his use and benefit, if necessary, and upon his death to convey absolutely to the remainder-men. This trust was held by the court to vest in the trustee a fee simple title, with power to sell and convey in fee simple.

The decedent, by his will, left to A, trustee, "and his heirs, all the estate, real and personal, of which I may die seised, possessed and entitled to," to hold for the use and benefit of B, with power to sell, etc. The will contained no residuary clause disclosing any of the estate remaining undisposed of. It was held that A, as trustee, took all the testator's estate, and that the fee simple did not descend to the decedent's heirs as a qualified or determinable fee, subject to be divested by the exercise of the power of sale and becoming absolute if such power was not exercised. By the same will, the estate was to be held in trust for the sole and separate use of B for her life, so that it could not be reached by her creditors or disposed of by her; but the trustee was given authority, on her written request, to sell the same, or any part, if he should deem it expedient, and either reinvest the proceeds, or "turn the same over to B for her sole, separate, and absolute use, freed and discharged of all trust." It was held that a fee in the trustee was essential in order to carry out the purposes of the trust, and the fact that he was never actually called on to exercise the power of sale does not affect the question. Blount v. Walker, 31 S. Car. 13.

A trust with authority to manage the estate for the life tenant, to apply the corpus for his benefit, if necessary, and convey to the remainder-man upon the death of the life tenant, vests a fee in the trustee with power to sell and convey in fee. Ames v. Ames, 15 R. I. 12.

Where there is a devise and bequest in trust to pay the net income to a daughter of the testator for life, and upon her death, to choose out of the property a sufficient sum to pay a certain amount to her surviving husband, and to appraise and divide the residue, and convey it in equal portions to her children or their issue in fees, the trustees take an estate in fee; and at the daughter's death, the sum having been paid to her husband, are bound to appraise, divide, and convey the residue to her issue. Sears v. Russell, 8 Gray (Mass.) 86.

In Devries v. Hiss, 72 Ind. 560, the decedent left a will by which all his residuary estate was given to trustees, their heirs and successors, in trust; that one-sixth part should "go to and become the property of" H, absolutely and forever; and the remaining five-sixths should be held by the trustees for the use and benefit of certain beneficiaries. Authority was given to the trustees to sell and convey the whole or any part of the estate for the purpose of making a partition, or for any other necessary purpose. The court decided, that under this will, a legal estate in the entire property vested in the trustees, and that the trust in the one-sixth part did not come to an end until that share of H should be ascertained by a partition.

Where the conveyance was made to the trustee "in trust to take, hold, and convey the remainder, on the death of the life beneficiary" to certain persons named, an active trust is created which prevents the merger of the legal and the equitable estates. Henson v. Wright, 88 Tenn. 501.

In Holl's Appeal, 133 Pa. St. 351, property was bequeathed to be invested by the executor "in good and reliable securities for the use of" the legatee, the interest to be paid to him semi-annually during his life, and thereafter, the principal to go to his children; or, should he die without issue, to revert to the estate of the testator. By this bequest, an active trust was held to be created, entitling the trustee to possession.

A husband conveyed his property to D and his heirs in trust for the use of the grantor's wife during her life, and thereafter, in trust for the grantor during his life, and finally, after the death of the survivor of them, in trust for the use and benefit of the right heirs of the wife in fee. This conveyance was held to invest D with the entire legal estate, and the beneficiaries with a mere equitable interest. Leonard v. Diamond, 31 Md. 536.

A conveyance to trustees to receive the yearly income, rents, profits and produce, and apply the same yearly to the use of the grantor, free from the control or influence of her husband, is, by New York statutes, recognized as a valid express trust, and vests in the trustees the entire legal and equitable estate, subject only to the execution of the trust imposed; and every interest and estate not embraced in the trust, and not otherwise disposed of by force of the statute, remains in and reverts to the grantor and her heirs as a legal estate. Townshend v. Frommer, 125 N. Y. 446.

In Packard v. Marshall, 138 Mass. 301, a testator devised a portion of his estate to certain trustees, "for the use and benefit of my son C, to be applied and appropriated to the use and benefit of said C, at the discretion of my said trustees," and authorized the trustees "to sell and pass deeds to convey any and all of my real estate at their discretion." It was held to vest in the trustees an estate in fee.

In Preachers' Aid Soc. v. England, 106 Ill. 125, a conveyance was made to A, and held in trust for the Preachers' Aid Society to be by it disbursed for the benefit of superannuated preachers and their widows and orphans, "and when the Preachers' Society shall have been organized and put upon a working footing, then the said A is to convey said premises to said society to be held by it in the same manner." The court held that the legal title under this conveyance vested in A in fee simple.

A testator devised real estate to his sons for the use of his daughters and their families respectively, the titles thereof to be held by the sons in trust, and the income of the respective portions to be paid over to the daughters, "for their sole and separate use to each daughter during life," and then to her husband, in case her husband shall survive; and after the death of the daughters and their husbands the said shares to be conveyed to the right heirs of the daughters respectively in fee simple; and it was held that the active duties of the trustees did not depend upon the coverture of the daughters; that under the will the daughters were possessed of equitable interests and the use limited to them was never executed; that to enable the trustees to perform their duties the legal estate must continue in the trustees, and the duty of receiving and paying the income involved the necessity of the management and preservation of the real estate for those in remainder; and that the heirs of each daughter were entitled to a legal estate at her death and that there was no union of her estate with theirs. Bacon's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 504.

universal, that is to say, that despite the language of the instrument, whatever estate is necessary for the full execution of the trust, vests in the trustee, and no more.¹

In Locke v. Barbour, 62 Ind. 577, the court, by Perkins, J., said: "It seems to be pretty well established that a devise to trustees to hold real property for the sole use and benefit of a named beneficiary, and for and during the life of such beneficiary, and to pay him or her the rents annually, taking receipts therefor, is such a power of management as vests the legal estate in the trustee." See also Barnett's Appeal, 46 Pa. St. 392; Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113; Dobson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 586; Killam v. Allen, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 605; Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596; 28 Am. Dec. 451; Vail v. Vail, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 317; Brewster v. Striker, 2 N. Y. 19; West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425; Sympton v. Turner, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 383; Garth v. Baldwin, 2 Ves. 645; Robinson v. Grey, 9 East 1; Doe v. Briggs, 2 Taunt. 109; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 421.

Where the instrument of trust creates a valid trust, with a power in the trustee to sell at the request and for the benefit of the beneficiary under the deed, no power of revocation being reserved, no estate in the premises remains in the grantor, which is capable of being transferred. Marvin v. Smith, 46 N. Y. 571.

In Matter of Tienken, 131 N. Y. 391, the testator devised his residuary real estate in trust to his executors during his wife's life, directing them to pay her $2000 each year, and after paying out of the remaining income all taxes, necessary repairs, etc., "to apply the balance or remainder once a year between my children, share and share alike, for their use, benefit, and maintenance." This provision was held not to vest the entire estate in the trustees, but only for the life of the widow; so that outside of the trust there was a remainder in fee which, in the absence of any testamentary disposition otherwise, went, upon his death, to the heirs of the testator.

1. The estate of the trustee will not be enlarged beyond the actual demands of the trust, even though the language employed might justify it. The purpose is to give no greater powers than it was the evident intent of the settlor to create. Bryan v. Weems, 29 Ala. 423; 65 Am. Dec. 407; Greenwood v. Coleman, 34 Ala. 150; West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425; McElroy v. McElroy, 113 Mass. 509; Ware v. Richardson, 3 Md. 505; 56 Am. Dec. 762; Coulter v. Robertson, 24 Miss. 278; 57 Am. Dec. 168; Slevin v. Brown, 32 Mo. 176; Wilcox v. Wheeler, 47 N. H. 488; Norton v. Norton, 2 Sandf. (N. Y.) 296; Ivory v. Burns, 56 Pa. St. 300; Koenig's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 352; McBride v. Smyth, 54 Pa. St. 245; William v. Holmes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 475; Ellis v. Fisher, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 231; 65 Am. Dec. 52; Gardenhire v. Hinds, 1 Head (Tenn.) 402; Smith v. Metcalf, 1 Head (Tenn.) 64.

In Walton v. Follansbee, 131 Ill. 147, land had been conveyed by a deed to trustees "and to the survivor of them, and to the heirs and assigns of such survivors," that they should "execute such leases, conveyances, contracts and agreements," attaching the land conveyed as the cestui que trust might request. The deed stipulated that in the event the cestui que trust died before the grantor, the land should descend to her surviving children; and in case the grantor died first, the trust should terminate. It was held that the trustees had no power to convey the fee, even with the consent of the cestui que trust, their estate being only for the joint lives of the cestui que trust and the grantor.

Where the purposes of a trust can be

"The court is always reluctant," says a standard author, "to enlarge an estate in trustees beyond the terms of the gift; and it will not be done unless it is necessary for the execution of the trust."¹ An estate "in trust to suffer and permit" the beneficiary to collect rents, for example, imposes no duty on the trustee, and under the Statute of Uses no such estate can stand.²

In point of duration, likewise, the trustee's estate is measured by the terms of his trust. It will stand so long as any legitimate answered by a less estate than a fee-simple, a greater estate than is sufficient to answer such purposes shall not be permitted to pass to the trustee; but the uses in remainder, limited on such lesser estate so given to them, shall be executed by the statute of uses. Doe v. Simpson, 5 East 162; Doe v. Hicks, 7 T. R. 433; Curtis v. Price, 12 Ves. 89; Coulter v. Robertson, 24 Miss. 278; 57 Am. Dec. 168.

"Courts will abridge the estate where words of inheritance are used, if the execution of the trust does not require a fee; and so they will enlarge the estate if no words of inheritance are used in a deed." Perry on Trusts, § 320; Watson v. Pearson, 2 Exch. 593; Bagshaw v. Spencer, 1 Ves. 142.

On the contrary, it was held in Watkins v. Specht, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 585, that the courts will not by implication merely cut down an estate in fee conferred on the trustee by the terms of the instrument to an estate for life, upon the ground that the purposes of the trust do not require a fee simple estate.

The settlor will not be deprived of his control over the property from the mere fact that the title to the same resides in the trustees, if the deed does not limit his rights over the trust estate. Sayre v. Sayre, 17 N. J. Eq. 349.

Where the trust was for A during her natural life and at her death to descend to her children, it was held that A took a life estate only, the remainder vesting directly in the children. Greenwood v. Coleman, 34 Ala. 150.

And a trustee appointed to hold during the coverture of a life tenant, a married woman, and for her only, takes no fee as against the remaindermen. Bagley v. Kennedy, 81 Ga. 721.

An estate conveyed in trust without words of limitation, is ordinarily deemed an estate in the trustee for the life of the settlor. Perry on Trusts, § 314.

But if the estate is held by the trustee, in trust to pay certain annuities to certain persons named for their lives, the trustee's estate is for the lives of the several annuitants. Perry on Trusts, § 314.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 317. See also Lewin on Trusts and Trustees 216.

2. Lewin on Trusts and Trustees 210; Perry on Trusts, § 306; Witham v. Brooner, 63 Ill. 344; Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 107; Ramsay v. Marsh, 2 McCord (S. Car.) 252; 13 Am. Dec. 717; Boughton v. Langley, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 383; 2 Salk. 679; Right v. Smith, 12 East 455; Wagstaff v. Smith, 9 Ves. 524; Gregory v. Henderson, 4 Taunt. 773; Warter v. Hutchinson, 5 Moore 143; 1 B. & C. 721; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 429; Doe v. Bolton, 11 Ad. & El. 188; 39 E. C. L. 43; Adams v. Adams, 6 Q. B. 860; 51 E. C. L. 860.

Where two tracts of land are devised to trustees in the same words, it does not follow necessarily that, because they take the legal estate in one, and are required to do certain things in relation to it which can only be done by one who holds the legal estate, they take that estate in the other, concerning which such acts are not required. Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 488.

A devise to trustees and their heirs to certain uses named, passes the legal estate to the beneficiary, unless the will imposes upon the trustees some duty requiring the legal estate in them. Webster v. Cooper, 14 How. (U. S.) 488. Thus, in Williams v. Waters, 14 M. & W. 166, where by a marriage settlement lands were conveyed for the wife, to trustees and their heirs, to the use of the wife and her assigns until the marriage, and thereafter in trust for the wife and her assigns during her life for her sole and separate use, independent of the debts, control, or engagements of the husband, and after her death to the use of the husband, his heirs and assigns, it was held, that the trustees did not take the legal estate during the life of the wife, but purpose contemplated by the settlor remains unfulfilled. But so soon as the objects for which the trust was created shall have been accomplished, or the need for their attainment shall have failed, the trust estate ceases,¹ and the estate vests in the benethat the use was executed in her, notwithstanding the words "to her own sole and separate use."

Where land is devised to the testator's minor daughter to have and hold for her sole use forever, subject to the following condition of the trust: "The trustee hereinafter named is hereby appointed by me to receive, hold, and manage said estate until said daughter shall reach the age of twenty-one years or shall marry," the legal estate in the land is vested in the trustee, but not an interest in fee; he cannot, therefore, maintain a writ of entry for the premises, but may maintain a suit of forcible entry and detainer. Fay v. Taft, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 448.

Where the property is conveyed by a debtor to a creditor in trust, by whom the deed of trust is accepted and executed for the purposes of the trust, the overplus of money in his hands may be attached. Hearn v. Crutcher, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 461.

1. Doe v. Considine, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 458; Young v. Bradley, 101 U. S. 782; Comby v. McMichael, 19 Ala. 747; Powell v. Glenn, 21 Ala. 458; Fox v. Storrs, 75 Ala. 265; Doe v. Ladd, 77 Ala. 223; Hill v. Jones, 65 Ala. 214; Wilson v. Russ, 17 Fla. 696; Harden v. Osborne, 60 Ill. 93; Locke v. Barbour, 62 Ind. 585; Montgomery v. Merrill, 18 Mich. 338; Lyle v. Burke, 40 Mich. 499; Bellinger v. Shafer, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 293; Bennett v. Garlock, 10 Hun (N. Y.) 340; Quin v. Skinner, 49 Barb. (N. Y.) 133; Peck v. Brown, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 119; Sterricker v. Dickinson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 520; McCosker v. Brady, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Parks v. Parks, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 107; Morris Canal Co. v. Emmett, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 168; 37 Am. Dec. 388; Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 521; Miller v. Wright, 109 N. Y. 194; Stacey v. Rice, 27 Pa. St. 75; 67 Am. Dec. 447; Culbertson's Appeal, 76 Pa. St. 145; Westcott v. Edmunds, 68 Pa. St. 36; Williams' Appeals, 83 Pa. St. 388; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 586; Henderson v. Hunter, 59 Pa. St. 335; Rice v. Burnett, 1 Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 579; 42 Am. Dec. 336; Bowers v. Bowers, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 302; Turner v. Ivie, 5 Heisk.

(Tenn.) 234; Belote v. White, 2 Head (Tenn.) 708; Beecher v. Hicks, 7 Lea (Tenn.) 213; Smith v. Metcalf, 1 Head (Tenn.) 68; Adams v. Adams, 9 Lond. Jur. 300; Barker v. Greenwood, 4 M. & W. 421-429. See also Andrews v. Huckabee, 30 Ala. 152; Jenkins v. McConico, 26 Ala. 213; Knight v. Bell, 22 Ala. 198.

Where the title to slaves and personal property was devised to the executors in trust to be given to other persons, whom the will partially designated, leaving it to the trustees to elect, the trustees hold such title until that provision of the will is executed; and such property is liable to be sold under execution against the trustees, nor will the surrender of the slaves to the testator's widow as dower, although the character of the property may be changed to the extent of her interest in it, affect its character in their hands, as they still continue assets as far as the title resided in them. Meyers v. Daviess, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 394.

Where land is devised to trustees in trust to sell the same and apply the proceeds to certain specified objects, there being no limitation as to the continuance of the trust, the title will remain in the trustees until the sale of the land, or until the court of equity, upon the application of the cestui que trust, or some person having the right to call the trustees to an account, shall remove them. Duke of Cumberland v. Graves, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 595.

The testator bequeathed a certain sum of money to a trustee, in trust for the sole and separate use of a mother during her life, and after her death to her children. The children filed a petition to have the amount paid over to them, and the petition was accompanied by the written consent of the mother. The prayer of the petition was refused. Walker v. Sharpe, 68 N. Car. 363.

Under a devise to trustees of the income and dividends of $8,000, old United States stock, by a testator, for the support of his niece, they to receive the dividends and apply them to the support of his niece and the maintenance and education of her children, etc., it was held that the trust did not cease when the niece died and her children became of age; but the trustees were to pay to the children the entire dividends, including the annual installments of principal, till the whole should be redeemed by the United States. Bringhurst v. Cuthbert, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 397.

A conveyance of land to B, the wife of C, for her sole and separate use, and for the use of her children, born and to be born, by the said C, to have and to hold the same for the uses aforesaid, creates a trust estate in B, for her sole and separate use, and for the use of her children, as above described. The trust will continue until all probability of the birth of any more children from B by C has become extinct. Brady v. Walters, 55 Ga. 25.

In Henderson v. Hunter, 59 Pa. St. 335, land was conveyed to trustees, named in the deed, "and their successors," in trust to build thereon a house of worship, "for the use of members of the Methodist Episcopal church in the United States (so long as they use it for that purpose and no longer and then to return back to the original owner), according to the rules and discipline" of the church at their general conference. It was held that the legal estate of the trustee could not survive the use, to protect which it was created. As the trustees were unincorporated, they had no legal succession, and the employment of the word "successors," in the deed, could not continue the estate beyond the use designated. It was also held that the equitable estate was in the members of the church, for so long as they continued to use the property as a place of worship, according to the ways of the Methodist Episcopal church. When they ceased their use, the estate must revert. But the abandonment must be by church authority and according to the rules of discipline then existing; and that a mere temporary or unauthorized suspension of services would not necessarily terminate the use.

It has been held that where the trust fund has been allowed by the beneficiary to remain in the trustee's hands, the fund retains its trust character, and the trustee in charge owes it as a trust debt. Crisfield v. State, 55 Md. 192.

When a trustee sells the property held in trust and receives the money for it, though he may have promised the beneficiary to pay it, a court of equity will nevertheless retain jurisdiction to enforce the payment. Nease v. Capehart, 8 W. Va. 95.

The deed of A conveyed certain property to a trustee, his heirs, executors and administrators, in trust for the use of A during her life, and after her death, for the use, benefit, and behoof of her children by her present husband, and their heirs forever. It was held that the estate of the trustee continued after the death of the first taker. Bryan v. Weems, 29 Ala. 423; 65 Am. Dec. 407.

Partition will not be decreed where it is urged by one cestui que trust and resisted by another, where its effect will be to override and put an end to an active trust, created by a will, and thus defeat the testator's intention, so long as the trustees stand ready to execute the trust in good faith. Story v. Palmer, 46 N. J. Eq. 1.

In Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351, land had been devised to a trustee in trust for the testator's son, the trustee simply to hold the title, while the beneficiary was to collect the income and use the same. The purpose of the trust was to prevent the son's estate becoming subject to execution for his debts. It was held that, though there was no duty imposed upon the trustee, it was necessary that his nominal ownership continue, in order to effectuate the testator's purpose, and a conveyance of the legal title could not be decreed.

In Morant v. Gough, 1 M. & R. 41; 7 B. & C. 206, it was held that, where decedent devised to trustees upon certain trusts, until his son should attain the age of twenty-one, the trust determined upon the son's death during minority.

A naked trust for a married woman, intended only to protect the property from her husband, fails upon his death; and the legal estate thereupon vests in her. Rea v. Cassel, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 159.

Until the trusts of a deed are executed, the legal title continues in the trustee, and at law he may recover the property from the cestui que trust, unless the deed contains a stipulation that the possession shall remain with the latter. Gunn v. Barrow, 17 Ala. 743. Compare Wilson v. Cheshire, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 233.

A trust for a married woman will stand during coverture, but will fail as soon as the husband dies. Roberts v. Mosely, 51 Mo. 282; Baker v. Wall, 59

Mo. 265; Siptrot v. Holmes, 1 Ga. 381; Freyvogel v. Hughes, 56 Pa. St. 230; Megargee v. Naglee, 64 Pa. St. 216; Warland v. Colwell, 10 R. I. 369; Kuntzman's Estate, 136 Pa. St. 142; 20 Am. St. Rep. 909.

In Hastings v. Orde, 11 Sim. 205, an infant made an ante-nuptial settlement of her estate upon her husband for life, after his death in trust for her for life, and after the survivor's death in trust for the children of the marriage, and in case of no child, then in trust for such persons as she should appoint by will, and ultimately in trust for her next of kin. The marriage having terminated without children, the trust failed for want of motive.

Where, by the terms of a will, the legal estate is vested in the defendant, who is the sole cestui que trust, and the trusts being fully discharged, there remains a surplus, such surplus follows the legal title and is not charged with any trust. Atty. Gen'l v. Minister, 36 N. Y. 452.

In Cagwin v. Buerkle, 55 Ark. 5, land was conveyed to a trustee for a building company, upon condition that the trustee should, upon the time named, erect a station, plat and subdivide the land, and put up suitable buildings thereon. One-half of the proceeds for the sale of the land, except such as the company should put buildings upon, were to go to the grantor, and if the conditions were not performed, the conveyance was to be void. The object of the trust having failed, it was held that the land conveyed by the trustee to the company was to be held in trust for the original grantor; but that the company, having made a bona fide effort to perform the trust, was entitled to be reimbursed for the money expended in improvements and taxes, less what it had received from the rents and profits.

A surrender of his estate by the trustee will be presumed, if the purposes of the trust have been satisfied. Doggett v. Hart, 5 Fla. 215; 58 Am. Dec. 464.

Where an estate in remainder is conveyed in trust and there is a failure in the objects of the trust before the decease of the tenant for life, so that the property never comes into the hands of the trustee, if he then makes no claim to it, the same may be properly given to the beneficiaries. Gladden v. Blodgett, 38 N. H. 74.

H. devised lands to E. in trust to pay rents, etc., to H.'s wife for life, and on her death to convey it to Mrs. G., a married woman, and M. in fee. It was held that on the death of H.'s wife the trust ceased. Edmunds' Appeal, 68 Pa. St. 24.

A testator bequeathed one-third of his personal estate to his wife absolutely, and the residue of his real and personal property to a trustee to pay debts, etc., and then to receive and pay over one-third of the net income of the real estate to his wife during her natural life, for her separate use; to pay the residue of the net income of his real and personal estate to his said wife, for the support, education and maintenance of his children until the youngest should arrive at the age of twenty-one years, when there should be a division of the personal estate among them; and he afterwards provided that upon the death of his wife, the trusts and limitations created by the will should cease. It was held, upon the death of the widow during the minority of the children, that the trust had terminated, and that the residue in the hands of the trustee must be paid to their guardian. Fitzpatrick's Appeal, 49 Pa. St. 241.

A conveyance to a trustee in trust "for the sole and separate use of M., wife of J. M., and her heirs," was construed as creating in M. an equitable estate in fee with an absolute fee simple on the husband's death. Chadwick's Appeal (Pa. 1886), 7 Atl. Rep. 178. See Carswell v. Lovett, 80 Ga. 36.

By the provisions of the trust deed, land was conveyed in trust for the benefit of a married woman during the joint life of herself and her husband, and in the event she should survive him, then for her use and that of such children as she might then have living by her said husband, during her life, or so long as she should remain his widow; but on her remarriage or death, to be divided equally among the said children, and the issue of such children as might then be dead. The court held that the duties of the trustees terminated upon the husband's death, and that, thereupon, the legal estate vested absolutely in the wife and the children then living, and their deed operated to defeat the contingent remainders to the issue of a daughter, who afterwards died during the lifetime of the mother. Snelling v. Lamar, 32 S. Car. 72.

A testator bequeathed to his son M.

the income of certain stocks during life, "the principal of said stocks to be held by my executor during his life, and at his decease I give the same to his child or children who shall survive him; provided that, if my son shall leave his wife surviving him, then his said wife shall be entitled to her support out of the same so long as she remains his widow." M. survived the testator and left a widow and an infant child. It was held that the trust terminated at M.'s death. Hyde v. Watson, 131 Mass. 450.

The established doctrine with regard to trustees is that they take exactly that estate, or quantity of interest, which is required by the purposes of the trust, without regard to the terms of the will; therefore, where certain real estate was conveyed to trustees, "their heirs and assigns forever," in trust for the use of a married woman during her life, and "at her death to the use of the heirs of her body, the obvious intention of the trust being merely to protect the property from the marital rights of the husband, it was held that the legal estate of the trustee came to an end on the death of the beneficiary, and the absolute estate then passed to her heirs under the limitations in the will. Ellis v. Fisher, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 231; 65 Am. Dec. 52.

In Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 493; 100 Am. Dec. 586, the settlor, an unmarried woman, conveyed her estate to B in trust to allow her to occupy it, etc., and receive the rents, etc., without any let or hindrance from any husband she might have, to be conveyed on her death to the persons to whom she should will it, and in default of appointment, to the persons who would inherit if she had died, seised in fee simple; with power to the trustee to charge the investments to be held on the same trusts, the trusts not to be changed without the consent of B; any vacancy in the trust to be filled by the settlor by writing under seal. Afterward she married and her husband died, leaving her surviving. It was held that upon the husband's death the trust was at an end, and she was entitled to a conveyance of the legal estate in the trust property.

A will executed in 1849, devised lands in trust for emancipated slaves, and provided expressly that said lands should never be sold, unless it be unlawful for free persons of color to remain in the state. It was held that under the existing laws, giving the rights of citizenship to negroes, the necessity for the trust had ceased, and it was proper to order a sale, where all the parties interested were before the court, and it appeared that a sale would be beneficial. Browning v. Ficklin (Ky. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 714.

X conveyed certain slaves by deed to his son and Z, in trust, to apply the profits to the support and education of the son's daughter, and such other children as he might have, and on the decease of the son the slaves to be equally divided between such of the son's children as might then be living. It was held that the legal estate of B came to an end on the death of the son, and passed absolutely to the children discharged of the trust. Ferguson v. Stephens, 5 Mo. 211.

Lands were conveyed to X, his heirs and assigns, in trust for Z during her life, and after her death, in trust for her children. It was held, after the death of X, that the whole estate was vested absolutely in her children, and they had the right of possession. Bacon v. Taylor, Kirby (Conn.) 368.

Under the Pennsylvania rule, a trust for coverture falls if there is no marriage in fact or in contemplation. Kuntzleman's Estate, 136 Pa. St. 142; 20 Am. St. Rep. 909.

And an express trust for the use of a feme covert, even where the trust imposes active duties, cannot be created unless the woman is already married, or unless made in actual contemplation of marriage. Lancaster v. Dolan, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 231; 18 Am. Dec. 625; Smith v. Starr, 3 Whart. (Pa.) 63; 31 Am. Dec. 498; Hammersley v. Smith, 4 Whart. (Pa.) 129; McBride v. Smyth, 54 Pa. St. 250; Yarnall's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 339; Ogden's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 501; Wells v. McCall, 64 Pa. St. 207; Springer v. Arundel, 64 Pa. St. 218; Cridland's Estate, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 58; Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399.

It was ordered by a testator in his will that the proceeds of his estate should be equally divided among his children and their heirs and assigns, and there was given to a trustee, for the use of the married daughter and her children, a house, etc., which property was to be put unto her for the same sum as it cost the testator, and the balance of her legacy was to be put on interest payable to her every year during her life, and after her death, her legacy was to go to her children; but should she survive her husband, her trustee was directed to overturn and assign all and everything coming to her as legacy to her and her heirs and assigns forever. It was held that the trust was simply to protect her property against her husband, and terminated on the daughter's divorce from him. Koenig's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 352.

A parent, whose daughter had a dissipated husband, devised property in trust for the daughter for life, the remainder to her children, with the provision that if she became a widow, the trust should end and the property be turned over to her absolutely. It was held to become a widow will be construed to mean husbandless, in view of the testator's probable intent, and the daughter having procured a divorce, she is entitled to have the trust ended. Rittenhouse v. Hicks, 23 Wkly. L. Bull. (Ohio Com. Pl.) 269.

A reconveyance to a beneficiary is to be decreed after determination of her coverture, when it appears that the evident intention of the settlement was to protect her from her husband. Fox v. Scott, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 151.

A testator, after giving the residue of his estate to his trustee, in trust to hold, invest, and manage the same, and a sum of money to his only son and heir, to be paid to him at the age of twenty-one years, provided by his will that "all such parts of the income of my estate, which may be necessary for the support and education of my son, I order to be used for that purpose, and when he shall be twenty-one years old I direct that $4,000 shall be paid to him yearly; when he shall be twenty-six years old, $5,000 yearly, and $10,000 a year when he shall be thirty years old." On a bill in equity brought by the son after reaching the age of thirty years, it was held that the trustees held so much of the residue of the estate as was needed to produce the net income upon a simple trust to pay the son the annuity; that he was the absolute equitable owner of the trust fund and the income, both of which he might alienate, and his creditors might reach; and that he was entitled to have the trust terminated. Sears v. Choate, 146 Mass. 395; 4 Am. St. Rep. 320.

A conveyance of real estate to a man for the use, benefit, advantage, and in trust for his wife, and the child she now has, and those she may hereafter have, to be held by him in trust for the said wife and child during his natural life, and upon his decease, the same to go to them or the survivor or survivors of them, in fee simple, or, should he survive his said wife and children, to him in fee simple, discharged of the trust; but so long as any of the beneficiaries survive, to be held by him as their trustee, free from his debts, liabilities and contracts, gives to him, as trustee, the legal estate for the term of his life and no longer; the alternative remainder in his family and himself being a legal remainder, independent of the trust. East Rome Town Co. v. Cochran, 81 Ga. 359.

In McBrayer v. Cariker, 64 Ala. 50, real estate was conveyed to a person in trust for his mother and her children, then living and after-born. It was held that whether this conveyance creates in the trustee a naked or actual trust under the Alabama Code, his estate terminates upon the mother's death, and the entire estate, legal and equitable, is then united in the children.

Under his deed of trust, the trustee was empowered to convey at any time at the request of the beneficiary. The beneficiary died not having authorized any conveyance, but in her will made her husband residuary devisee. After her death, the trustee conveyed to the husband. This conveyance was held to be void, as the relation of trust ended with her death, but the husband was held to take under the devise. Bradstreet v. Kinsella, 76 Mo. 63.

A trust for the joint use of husband and wife, during their joint lives, and for the use of the survivor for life, and then, after the death of the survivor, in trust, to deliver up the property to the issue of the marriage, remains in force until delivery of the property after the death of the survivor. Bacot v. Heyward, 5 S. Car. 441.

Where the estate was not merely given in trust for the use and benefit of the wife, but for her separate use, thereby giving title to a separate estate in the wife, it was held that upon the determination of the power by the limitation contained in the trust itself, the trustee could no longer hold the trust property in his hands, and if without transferring it to the beneficiary, or disposing of it for her benefit or use, the court should decree her immediate possession. Waring v. Waring, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 331.

A testamentary trust to pay certain income to a cestui, the corpus immedificiary without the formality of a conveyance, the Statute of Uses conveying the title by an arbitrary presumption of a conveyance,¹ ately after her death to go to certain remainder-men, terminates with her death, and the trustee then has no active duties to perform to the remainder-men. The trustee having died before the cestui que trust died, his successor after her death could not receive the corpus of the trust. Stokes' Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 337.

The settlor conveyed to a trustee and his heirs certain property in trust for the use and benefit of the settlor's daughter, giving her unlimited control over the property, and power to sell the same with the consent of the trustee. It was held that on the death of the trustee, the legal title passed to his heirs at law, and a conveyance from them to the daughter passed the legal title. Bloom v. Ray (Ky. 1889), 16 S. W. Rep. 714.

A trust to a man for the sole use of his wife ceases when the husband dies. The wife then becomes ipso facto the legal owner, and a judgment against her binds the estate, so that the purchaser of the property at the sheriff's sale under such judgment gets a legal title. Coughlin v. Seago, 53 Ga. 250.

A son conveyed certain property to his mother as security for his debt to her. There was no evidence of any indebtedness outside the recital in the agreement made in connection with this conveyance. The mother kept a strict account of her dealings with the property conveyed, and regularly turned over the net income to her son, and repeatedly spoke of the property as his. The court held that a trust was created, which terminated with the mother's death, and that her devise of it to another in trust for her son was invalid. Hinckley v. Hinckley, 79 Me. 320.

A testator devised his factory property in trust for his three sons, who were to occupy it free of rent so long as they could agree and make it profitable; the property otherwise to be sold, and one-third of the invested proceeds paid to each son upon his attaining the age of fifty years, or if he died earlier, "to his legal heirs." Moreover, upon the written request at any time of either son, the property was to be appraised and conveyed to any two of them wishing to take it at its appraised value; and if no two desired to take it, it was to be sold as the trustees should consider advantageous. Before either son reached the age of fifty, an appraisal was duly had and a sale made to two of the sons, and the trustees requested instructions as to the disposition of the proceeds. It was held that the trust was not terminated by the sale, but would continue as to the share of each son until he became fifty years of age, or until his previous death, and that the share of any one so dying was to be paid to those entitled thereto. Kendall v. Gleason, 152 Mass. 457.

Where there is a devise in trust for the testator's grandchildren, revoking a previous bequest to their mother, and intended expressly for the protection of the property from the marital rights of their father, an estate coextensive only with the purpose of the trust is vested in the trustee, which expires on the death of the mother. Smith v. Metcalf, 1 Head (Tenn.) 64.

Reversion to Donor.—Property granted in trust does not revert to the grantor until the cestui que trust or beneficial object of the grant ceases to exist in contemplation of law. Regents v. Board of Education, 4 Mich. 213.

A husband conveyed to a trustee upon the following trust: "In trust, nevertheless, for the use and benefit of said (the grantor's) wife, as a separate estate and property for her support." This deed was held to clearly indicate the settlor's object to be the support and maintenance of the wife during her life; and the fact that the conveyance was to the trustee in fee, makes no difference. The trust terminates when the purpose for which it was created is accomplished, the estate thereupon reverting to the grantor. Pillow v. Wade, 31 Ark. 678.

1. Schaffer v. Lavretta, 57 Ala. 14; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 35 Miss. 108; Matter of Livingston, 34 N. Y. 567; Watkins v. Reynolds, 123 N. Y. 211; Herman v. Kelley, 14 Ohio 502; 45 Am. Dec. 552; Westcott v. Edmunds, 68 Pa. St. 34; Aikin v. Smith, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 304; Marr v. Gilliam, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 488; Bragg v. French, 5 Sneed (Tenn.) 246; Harding v. St. Louis L. Ins. Co., 2 Tenn. Ch. 468. See also French v. Edwards, 21 Wall. (U. S.) 147; Bercy v. Lavretta, 63 Ala. 374; Steevens v. Earles, 25 Mich. 40; or by a deed formally executed.¹ Where the cestui que trust has been a long time in possession of lands which the trustee ought to have conveyed to him, the presumption of a conveyance by the trustee will be indulged in favor of the cestui que trust.²

For the perfecting of the record title, however, the trustee should, perhaps, be required to execute a conveyance, upon satisfactory proof that the material purposes of the trust have all been accomplished.³ Indeed, it has been held in a recent Rhode Island

Roberts v. Mosely, 51 Mo. 282; Doggett v. Hart, 5 Fla. 215; 58 Am. Dec. 464; Nicoll v. Walworth, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 385; England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682; Hillary v. Wallen, 12 Ves. 239; Doe v. Sybourn, 7 T. R. 2; Cooke v. Soltan, 2 Sim. & Stu. 154; Doe v. Wrighte, 2 B. & Ald. 710; Bartlett v. Downes, 3 B. & C. 616; 10 E. C. L. 201; Emery v. Grocock, 6 Madd. 54. But compare Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 40; 78 Am. Dec. 399. Compare also Taylor v. Taylor, 9 R. I. 119, where it was held that the cestui que trust might compel a conveyance to him of an estate held by the trustee under a naked trust.

Where the legal title has been vested in the trustee for life, and then to be conveyed to another, a conveyance or surrender of the legal estate by the trustee, may, in some cases, be presumed, where there is sufficient reason for the presumption, and where the object and effect of the presumption are to support a just title. Aiken v. Smith, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 304.

The right where the objects of the trust have failed, but the legal title still resides in the trustee, to recover the trust estate from him, belongs only to the beneficiaries, and to those claiming under him. Gully v. Hull, 31 Miss. 20.

The mere operation of the law does not execute trusts in personal property, as in cases coming within the statute of uses, the trustee must perform some act, as delivering possession, and where the beneficiary is an infant, incapable of joining in the act, the trust will remain unexecuted. Harley v. Platts, 6 Rich. (S. Car.) 310. But compare Davis v. Rose, 39 Miss. 152.

Where it was held that a conveyance in trust for the sole and separate use of a feme covert for life, and upon her decease that the trustee shall restore the chattel to the plaintiff, passed a legal estate to the plaintiff immediately upon the decease of the tenant for life, without any return or delivery of the chattel by the trustee. Davis v. Rose, 39 Miss. 152.

A bargainor has a complete seisin in deed, without actual entry or livery of seisin under a conveyance taking effect under the statute of uses. Green v. Lighter, 8 Cranch (U. S.) 229.

1. A trust created by deed for the benefit of a feme covert and her heirs may be determined, after the decease of her husband, by deeds from her and her children. Parker v. Converse, 5 Gray (Mass.) 336.

2. Kinsman v. Loomis, 11 Ohio 475; Harman v. Kelley, 14 Ohio 502; 45 Am. Dec. 552; Moore v. Jackson, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 58; Noel v. Brewley, 3 Sim. 103; England v. Slade, 4 T. R. 682.

But mere length of time creates no such presumption unless there is an obligation on the trustee to convey. Keene v. Deardon, 8 East 248; Goodson v. Ellison, 4 Russ. 583; Doe v. Langdon, 12 Q. B. 719; 64 E. C. L. 717.

If with this lapse of time are coupled other circumstances which make it morally certain that the trust has been fulfilled, the court will presume that a conveyance has been made by the trustee to his cestui que trust, or to the one entitled to a conveyance. Hillary v. Wallen, 12 Ves. 239; Emery v. Grocock, 6 Madd. 54. See also Doe v. Langdon, 12 Q. B. 719; 64 E. C. L. 717; Keene v. Deardon, 8 East 248; Goodson v. Ellison, 3 Russ. 583.

According to Hill, "Circumstances must exist from which the conveyance may be reasonably presumed." Hill on Trustees 256.

After the expiration of thirty-two years, a release to a cestui que trust will be presumed against the heirs at law of a trustee. Moore v. Jackson, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 58.

3. Where the legal title is vested in the trustee, it has been held in Illinois that nothing short of a reconveyance can revest it in the grantor; it does not revest by operation of law upon case that where the land is held in naked trust for certain beneficiaries, and no duty remains for the trustee to perform but to convey the legal title to them, the title of the cestuis que trustent is not such that in the absence of a conveyance by the trustee, the purchaser can be compelled to take it in a suit for specific performance of an agreement to purchase.¹

Should the trustee by any means also become the equitable owner of the property, a merger of the two estates is at once effected, the legal absorbing the equitable.²

"At law," says a standard author, "the trustee is regarded as the real owner of the estate vested in him, whether it be real or personal; and the nature and quality of that estate will, in general, depend upon the limitations contained in the instrument under which he takes."³

The legal estate in the trustee is distinct and independent. It is under his control, and is held by him subject to the same duties⁴ and liabilities which would devolve upon him if he were the absolute owner in fee simple.⁴ He sues and is sued as the legal owner,⁵ and his dominion over the estate at law is ordinarily complete, unless he be a merely nominal holder of the title, and charged with no duties or interests whatever.⁶

accomplishment of the purposes of the trust. Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632; Kirkland v. Cox, 94 Ill. 400; Hardin v. Osborne, 60 Ill. 93. Compare Harris v. Cornell, 80 Ill. 54; McNab v. Young, 81 Ill. 11.

A trustee of a married woman after she has become sui juris, and holds the entire equitable estate, may properly be required to convey to her the legal estate free from the trust; no other person being interested in the trust property. Rogers v. Rogers, 10 R. I. 556.

1. Read v. Power, 12 R. I. 16.

2. See MERGER, vol. 15, p. 319; Bolles v. State Trust Co., 27 N. J. Eq. 308.

The trust estate of a sole executor, who is also sole devisee and legatee, is solely for the benefit of the testator's creditors, and when they are paid, the equitable estate is merged into the legal title. Blood v. Kane, 130 N. Y. 517.

Where a trustee is also one of the beneficiaries of the trust, he takes a legal estate to the extent of his interest. Mason v. Mason, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 432.

When lands are devised to a trustee, for the use and benefit of the testator's son and of his wife and children, if he should marry and have children, and active duties are imposed on the trustee, although the son may take a beneficial interest susceptible of alienation and liable to be subjected to the payment of his debts, the legal and equitable estates are not merged under the statute (Code, § 2185), but the legal estate continues in the trustee commensurate with the nature and exigencies of the trust. Jones v. Reese, 65 Ala. 134.

A trust once created attaches to the legal estate, and can be detached from it and extinguished only by the union of the two estates in one person: then the equitable will merge into the legal estate. Badgett v. Keating, 31 Ark. 400.

Purchase of Outstanding Title.—

Where a grantee accepts a conveyance of lands, the title to which is defective, by a deed in which certain trusts are created, and he afterward acquires an outstanding title, which he takes in his own name, so that the title in him is complete, and continues to hold without renouncing the trust, it will be presumed that the latter purchase was made in aid of the former trust. McCormick v. Ocean City Assoc., 45 N. J. Eq. 561.

3. Hill on Trustees, p. 229.

4. See infra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities; Devin v. Hendershott, 32 Iowa 192.

5. See infra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities—Scope and Limitations; Procedure.

6. Huckabee v. Billingsly, 16 Ala.

The trustee's estate cannot be affected by any act of the cestui que trust, nor can the cestui create any lien or charge upon it,¹ unless the trustee be a mere repository of the title, and the entire beneficial interest be in the cestui que trust.²

The legal estate which the trustee holds, however, cannot be reached upon an execution against the cestui que trust.³

No act of the trustee in his individual capacity can charge the estate which he holds in trust,⁴ nor will his acts done outside the 414; 50 Am. Dec. 183; Sinking Fund Comrs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433; Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204.

1. See infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary; Barnett v. Montgomery, 79 Ga. 726; Weaver v. Van Akin, 77 Mich. 588; L'Amoureux v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 34; Noyes v. Blakeman, 6 N. Y. 567.

Where there was a conveyance of land in trust, among other things, to sell the premises, and pay off the mortgage thereon, it was held that no conveyance by the cestui qui trust could prevent the trustee from selling, for the purposes and according to the directions of the trust. Leggett v. Dubois, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 114; 28 Am. Dec. 413.

A trustee, to whom there has been made a conveyance of land to receive the rents and profits and pay them over to a feme covert during her life, has, under the revised statutes, the legal and equitable title, subject only to the execution of the trust; and the cestui que trust has no interest in the lands or income which she can in any way pledge or bind. Noyes v. Blakeman, 6 N. Y. 567.

In Beckwith v. McBride, 70 Ga. 642, it was held that a church lot, which constituted the entire trust estate, could not be held liable for gas fixtures placed in the church by order of the vestry, but without any authority from the trustee, it not appearing to have been received by the parish or by the congregation.

A married woman had induced a party to purchase lands held in trust for her and the heirs of her body, and had taken his notes for the purchase-money, payable to the creditors of her husband. The notes not being paid, her trustee brought suit to enforce the vendor's lien, and it was held that the proceeds arising from the sale of the land could not be applied to the payment of the notes. Williams v. Baldridge, 66 Ala. 338.

2. Johnson v. Connecticut Bank, 21 Conn. 148; Jackson v. Bateman, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 570; Jackson v. Walker, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 462; Foot v. Colvin, 3 Johns. (N. Y.) 216.

3. Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480; Battle v. Petway, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 576; 44 Am. Dec. 59.

As to the right to reach the beneficial estate, see infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Nature of the Beneficiary's Estate.

4. A judgment taken against a trustee in his individual capacity is no lien upon the trust estate, even though the deed of trust names no beneficiary, if the trust has been acknowledged by the trustee. Boardman v. Willard, 73 Iowa 20.

Trust property is not subject to an execution which has been issued on a judgment recovered against the trustee on a note which the trustee executed, as an individual. Bostick v. Keiser, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 597; 20 Am. Dec. 337; Manley v. Hunt, 1 Ohio 257; Robinson v. Chapline, 9 Iowa 91; Hollingsworth v. Trueblood, 59 Ind. 542; Cox v. Arnsmann, 76 Ind. 210.

Property held openly by a man in trust for his wife and children, is not liable for debts contracted by him on his own credit, even for goods bought for their support and maintenance. Townslay v. Barber, 27 Vt. 417.

A trustee's bankruptcy does not affect his deed as trustee. Rankin v. Bancroft, 114 Ill. 441.

Trust property is not liable for the debt of the trustee, and the rule holds as to property in the hands of an executor, both real and personal, whether coming from the testator or from the collection of debts or other assets belonging to the estate. Williams v. Fullerton, 20 Vt. 346.

Money paid in case of loss under an insurance policy procured for the benefit of a beneficiary, by a person, upon real estate held by him in trust for the life of the beneficiary, with remainder to himself, in his capacity as trustee, scope of the authority vested in him by the deed, will, or other instrument creating the trust, bind the estate.¹

It has been held that the trustee can create no charge upon the estate, and that the creditor must look to him personally for payment, and cannot resort to the trust property to enforce his demands. And such is, perhaps, the better rule, the reason being that the trustee is protected from loss by his lien for reimbursement.² The doctrine is not without exceptions, however, for the belongs to the beneficiary as against the creditors of the trustee, in the absence of any evidence to show that the sum so paid exceeded the life interest in the property. Lerow v. Wilmarth, 9 Allen (Mass.) 382.

Thus, where land was conveyed to one in trust to reconvey to the grantor's wife, the court refused to permit the land to be taken in satisfaction of the trustee's personal debts. Cox v. Arnsman, 76 Ind. 210.

It has even been held that no charge is created upon the trust estate by the execution of individual notes of the trustee and of one of the beneficiaries, even though such notes were for supplies furnished for the benefit of the trust, and though the creditor looked to the trust estate alone for payment. If the suit be founded on the notes, and not directly upon the account in lieu of which the notes were executed, no decree will lie which will bind the trust estate. Frost v. Shackleford, 57 Ga. 260.

A testator gave to his wife the use of real estate, for the purpose of educating and rearing his children, and to be divided between her and them when the youngest should become twenty-one. It was held that she held the rents and profits as trustee for the children, and that they were not to be taken on execution against her. Anderson v. Crist, 113 Ind. 65.

1. One making with a trustee a contract outside of his powers, which is beneficial to the trust estate, can charge the estate only when the trustee is shown to be insolvent and the estate indebted to him. Blackshear v. Burke, 74 Ala. 239.

2. Hewitt v. Phelps, 105 U. S. 393, per Matthews, J. See also Bloom v. Wolfe, 50 Iowa 286; Mason v. Pomeroy, 151 Mass. 164; Mayo v. Moritz, 151 Mass. 481; Odd Fellows' Hall Assoc. v. McAllister, 153 Mass. 292; Clopton v. Gholson, 53 Miss. 466; Norton v. Phelps, 54 Miss. 471.

Where a trustee is authorized by the terms of an instrument creating the trust, to make an expenditure which is necessary for the protection or reparation of the trust estate, and has no trust funds in his hands for the purpose, he may, by express agreement with another, exempt himself from liability, and make the expenditure a charge upon the estate. To create such a lien or charge, however, there must be some agreement to that effect; it is not sufficient that the one doing the work or making the expenditure, did it on the faith and credit of the estate. Where there has been no such agreement, and in consequence, the trustee is chargeable individually for the expenditure, the trustee cannot, by a subsequent promise to pay out of the estate, confer a lien thereon; to transfer the property from the trustee to the estate, there must either be an agreement based upon some new consideration, or an assignment of the lien or claim which the trustee has upon the estate for the expenditure. [Miller, J., dissenting.] New v. Nicoll, 73 N. Y. 127; 29 Am. Rep. 111; Flournoy v. Johnson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 694.

As a general rule, the contracts of a guardian, or any kind of trustee, bind himself personally, but do not bind the estate, or subject it to an action. Hines v. Potts, 56 Miss. 346.

One who, at the trustee's request, has rendered valuable services to the estate, must look to the trustee for his compensation. He has no recourse against the trust except to subject an equitable demand of the trustee to the payment of the debt. Wade v. Pope, 44 Ala. 690. See also Steele v. Steele, 64 Ala. 438; 38 Am. Rep. 15; Blackshear v. Burke, 74 Ala. 239; Mosely v. Norman, 74 Ala. 422.

One holding the legal title to property as testamentary trustee, who contracts debts in the management thereof, is personally liable to a creditor, irrespective of whether he acts as an indi-trust instrument often confers powers broad enough to give the trustee free control of the property held in trust.¹

Where the interest of the beneficiary in the income of the trust estate is inalienable, the trustee has no authority to dispose of the trust fund absolutely, even with the assent of the beneficiary.² Ordinarily, however, the use of the income may, in this way, be alienated before coming due, unless some restriction has been put thereon.³

It has been held, however, that no personal judgment can be rendered against the trustee in a suit against him as trustee for certain named cestuis que trustent.⁴ Property purchased in the name of the trustee, but held for the use of his cestui que trust, is not liable for the personal debts of the trustee, merely because vidual or in his fiduciary capacity in creating the debt. Hackman v. Maguire, 20 Mo. App. 286.

The trustees, including executors, administrators, and guardians, assume a personal liability when making purchases in obedience to the duties of the trust, and the seller must look to them, and they to the trust estate for reimbursement. Sanford v. Howard, 29 Ala. 684.

One who advances money or renders services to a trust estate, must ordinarily look to the trustee personally for payment; but if the trustee would be entitled to reimbursement from the estate if he should pay, and is insolvent, equity, in order to prevent a failure of justice, will entertain a bill against the estate directly. 53 Miss. 466. And like jurisdiction may be exercised where the trustee cannot be personally sued because of his non-residence. Norton v. Phelps, 54 Miss. 467.

Mortgage trustees of a railroad company, as such, have no property within the state subject to sequestration; and the rights of the beneficiaries would not be affected by a sequestration as against the trustees. Bank of Bellows Falls v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 28 Vt. 470.

1. See infra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Trustees—Contracts of Trustees. It has been held in Maryland that, as a general rule, a trustee is personally liable on an account made by him as trustee; but that where the deed of trust authorizes the trustee to borrow money, and he executes a mortgage in pursuance of such authority, a covenant by him in the mortgage to pay the mortgage debt does not bind him personally. Glenn v. Allison, 58 Md. 527.

A trustee is not liable, personally, on a note made and negotiated, as the taker knew, for the benefit of the estate, and signed "A, trustee for B." Prin-tup v. Trammel, 25 Ga. 240.

One who contracts with executors and trustees concerning property, they acting within the limits of their power, may enforce the contract against the trust estate, and under proper circumstances, may maintain a lien thereupon. Fowler v. Mutual L. Ins. Co., 28 Hun (N. Y.) 195.

Where trustees, under a power in the trust deed, and with the assent of the cestuis que trust, purchased a manufacturing establishment on behalf of the trust, it was held that the whole trust estate was liable for debts incurred on account of the manufactory. North American Coal Co. v. Dyett, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 9.

In Kupferman v. McGehee, 63 Ga. 250, one who held a trustee's note in payment for supplies furnished to the trust estate, had been fraudulently induced to surrender it and take instead the individual note of the trustee, with another note payable to the trustee individually as collateral security. The maker of the collateral note, who was indebted to the trust estate only, paid it and became insolvent. It was held that the original creditor, upon the trustee's insolvency, might proceed against the trust estate to enforce his claim, even though its entire income would be absorbed.

2. Hone v. Van Schaick, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 221.

3. Martin v. Davis, 82 Ind. 38.

4. Vason v. Gardner, 70 Ga. 517.

Where there has been no misconduct on the part of the trustee of a feme covert, it is error to make a personal decree against him for the debt of his held in his name, unless the creditor can show that he considered the property to belong to the trustee, and dealt with him on the faith of it.¹

The trust property may become subject to a mechanic's lien.²

The validity of a mechanic's lien upon trust property, depends upon the power of the trustee to make repairs and improvements. In the absence of authority to build or contract, the trustee can create no lien upon the estate.³ And it has been held that no lien may be established upon a new and large building erected by the trustee in place of an old one.⁴ But one who has furnished material for the improvement of the estate, in ignorance of the trust, has been held to possess an equitable interest in the increased rents arising out of the improvements.⁵

The deed of trust terminates the settlor's absolute ownership in the land conveyed,⁶ and subsequent creditors of the settlor cannot pursue the trust property to enforce against it their claims upon the settlor, who has parted with his title in good faith.⁷

beneficiary. Woodson v. Perkins, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 345.

1. Hancock v. Titus, 39 Miss. 224.

The devise of land to one person for the benefit of others, creates a trust in favor of the latter, and upon an execution against the trustee a levy and sale of the land so held passes no title to the purchaser as against the cestuis que trust; if, however, the trustees have acquired any interest in the land by descent from either of the cestuis que trust, that interest may be reached by the purchaser at the execution sale. Booker v. Carille, 14 Bush (Ky.) 154.

Where a husband, trustee for his wife, takes a deed of land, purchased with the trust property, in his own name, the land will be protected by equity against the judgment creditors of the trustee. Lathrop v. Gilbert, 10 N. J. Eq. 344.

See infra, this title, Rights of Third Parties—Notice.

2. See MECHANICS' LIENS, vol. 15, pp. 1, 11, 64, 167; Columbia Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Taylor, 25 Ill. App. 429; Cheatham v. Rowland, 92 N. Car. 340. Compare Franklin Sav. Bank v. Taylor, 131 Ill. 376, wherein a trust deed provided that the trustee might sell or improve the land conveyed, "provided there shall be no lien, incumbrance or charge created thereby on said premises." The record of the deed was afterwards destroyed by fire. It was held that the operation of the record as notice was not thereby altered, and that the land could not be charged with a mechanic's lien by virtue of any contract made by the trustee, and the fact that after the execution of such contract the burnt record was restored by a decree which falsely recited that the trustee had power to incumber, cannot make valid such lien, since the contract could not have been made on the faith of the decree. To same effect, Taylor v. Franklin Sav. Bank, 50 Fed. Rep. 289.

3. Phillips on Mechanics' Liens, § 80; Meyers v. Bennett, 7 Daly (N. Y.) 476.

4. Herbert v. Herbert, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 333.

5. See Malone v. Buice, 60 Ga. 152.

6. See infra, this title, Termination of the Trust.

When a deed of trust shows that the grantor conveyed property absolutely to the trustees for certain purposes, and that he is not further interested in the property or in the execution of the trust, a valid transfer may be made of the property by the trustees without the consent of the grantor. Butler v. Miller, 15 B. Mon. (Ky.) 617.

7. See Brown v. Doe, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 268.

The right of a cestui que trust, holding under a deed of trust executed before an execution has been levied against the grantor on the land, cannot, if unaffected by fraud, be affected by the execution. Major v. Deer, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 585.

Where a husband purchases land with his own money, but directs that the title shall be vested in a third per-

Nor can the settlor subsequently convey any greater title than the equity remaining in him after the execution of the trust deed and such interest as may have vested in him thereafter.¹

The purpose of the trust having been fully accomplished, there being no other person in interest, the settlor may demand of the trustee a reconveyance to himself, discharged of the trust.² No title vests in the trustee upon the failure or termination of the trust.³

The same relation exists between the trustee and his beneficiary that exists between landlord and tenant, so far as the title is concerned.⁴ The beneficiary may not dispute his trustee's title, after the trust relationship has been once established.⁵ Nor will he be permitted to acquire any rights or interests hostile to the continuance of the trust or to the title of the trustee.⁶ If the duties imposed require that the trustee have possession of the land intrusted to him, he is entitled to possession; and he takes immediate possession of personal property as a matter of course.⁷ The application of these general rules is not limited to trusts in lands.⁸

son in trust for his wife, he has no such estate as can be sold under execution. Williams v. Council, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 206.

A contracted for land and stipulated that the title should be vested in B, in trust for A's wife, upon the payment of the purchase-money. A entered and held as tenant for the vendor. It was held that A had no legal right that he could convey or which could be sold on execution, and the only effect that his or the sheriff's deed could have, would be to put the vendee into possession so as to make him capable of receiving the release. Williams v. Council, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 206. But the execution of a deed of trust will not affect the rights of any creditors the grantor already has.

A purchase of trust property by the beneficiary at a sale by the trustee, is voidable by the grantor's creditors in a deed of trust. Chester v. Greer, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 26.

J., insolvent and desirous of providing for his wife and two daughters, requested L., a wealthy friend, to take stock in a company then being organized, and hold the same as trustee for J.'s family, assuring L. that the operations of the company would be so profitable that the dividends would soon reimburse him (L.) for the advance. L., as a matter of friendship, took the stock, in his own name, as trustee for J.'s wife and daughters. The value of the stock greatly increased. When J.'s daughters married, L. transferred two-fifths of the stock to each of them, and when J. died, transferred the remaining fifth to the widow. It was held that these stocks could not be subjected to the payment of J.'s debts. Waddingham v. Loker, 44 Mo. 132; 100 Am. Dec. 260.

1. Brown v. Doe, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 268. See infra, this title, Termination of the Trust.

2. Eaton v. Tillinghast, 4 R. I. 276.

Where a trustee in a deed, executed for the benefit of his creditors, quitclaims to the grantor all his right, title, and interest in the trust estate, the latter is thereby reinvested with the legal title, and no such title is conveyed to the purchaser, by a subsequent sale under the deed, as will sustain an action of trespass to try titles. Huckabee v. Billingsly, 16 Ala. 414; 50 Am. Dec. 183.

3. Fox v. Horah, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 358; 36 Am. Dec. 48.

4. Walden v. Bodley, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 156.

5. A cestui que trust who obtained possession in that character, cannot, at law, deny the title of the trustee. Den v. Albertson, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 241; 22 Am. Dec. 719.

6. The beneficiary who permits the land to be sold for taxes, acquires no title under the sale. Frierson v. Branch, 30 Ark. 453.

7. See infra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Possession and Safe Keeping.

8. Prather v. Weissiger, 10 Bush

The trust remains in force until the personal property so held is delivered,¹ the act of delivery of itself constituting an execution of the trust.²

Executed estates in trust are governed by the rule in Shelley's case, in the same manner as legal estates are.³ As to equitable estates of this nature, the rules applicable to legal estates control. Equity has no more place for imaginary distinctions and artificial estates than law has.

Covenants which run with the land pass by a trust deed, and the trustee taking the legal title takes it subject to them.⁴ The limitations and conditions of the trust follow the property into which the estate is converted by sale and reinvestment. In other words, the trust follows the fund and may not be divested by changing the character of the property.⁵

(Ky.) 117; Hanson v. Worthington, 12 Md. 418.

1. Joor v. Hodges, 2 Spear (S. Car.) 593.

2. Schaffer v. Lavretta, 57 Ala. 14; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Davis v. Ney, 125 Mass. 590; 28 Am. Dec. 272; Day v. Roth, 18 N. Y. 448; Gilman v. McArdle, 99 N. Y. 451; 52 Am. Rep. 41; Stettheimer v. Tone, 114 N. Y. 501; Bringhurst v. Cuthbert, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 398; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 395; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 586; Delbert's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 462.

3. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 359; Imlay v. Huntington, 20 Conn. 162; Siceloff v. Redman, 26 Ind. 251; Locke v. Barbour, 62 Ind. 577; Berry v. Williamson, 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 251; Wood v. Burnham, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 518; Armstrong v. Zane, 12 Ohio 387; Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. St. 177; 47 Am. Dec. 505; Findlay v. Riddle, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 152; 5 Am. Dec. 355; Garner v. Garner, 1 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 444; Porter v. Doby, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 49; Lincoln v. Newcastle, 12 Ves. 227; Jervoise v. Northumberland, 1 Jac. & W. 570; Deerhurst v. St. Albans, 5 Madd. 233; Blackburn v. Stables, 2 V. & B. 369; Douglas v. Congreve, 1 Beav. 59; 4 Bing. N. Cas. 1; Neves v. Scott, 9 How. (U. S.) 211. See also Green v. Green, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 486. Compare Nelson v. Davis, 35 Ind. 474. And see SHELLEY'S CASE (RULE IN), vol. 22, p. 509.

So in Cooper v. Kynoch, 41 L. J. Ch. 296; L. R., 7 Ch. 398, land was conveyed to a trustee, his heirs and assigns, for a married woman for life, to her separate use, and from and after the determination of that estate to stand seised to such uses and upon such trusts as she should by will appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of her heirs and assigns. It was held that the legal fee was vested in the trustee, that all subsequent limitations were merely equitable, and that, therefore, under the rule in Shelley's case, the wife took an equitable estate in fee, and could, with the concurrence of the trustee after her husband's death make a good title in fee to the property, and one which the court would compel an unwilling purchaser to accept.

4. Devin v. Hendershott, 32 Iowa 192.

5. Spicer v. Spicer, 21 Ga. 200; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 444; Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 61; Belmont v. O'Brien, 12 N. Y. 402; Nearpass v. Newman, 106 N. Y. 47; Creighton v. Pringle, 3 S. Car. 77.

A trustee cannot divest himself of his fiduciary character by converting the trust fund into money and the money into land. Pierce v. McKeehan, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 280.

When real estate held in trust has been legally and regularly sold under the direction of the court, upon a petition to sell and reinvest the proceeds, the equitable title of the beneficiary is transferred from the land to its proceeds. Cowman v. Colquhoun, 60 Md. 127.

As to the right of the cestui que trust to follow the property after the trustee has confused it with his own, see infra, this title, Possession and Safe Keeping—Confusion of Funds—Conversion.

As to the cestui's right to follow the

XV. POWERS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES OF THE TRUSTEE—1. Scope and Limitations—a. IN GENERAL.—The duties and powers of the trustee are, of course, limited and outlined by the instrument creating the trust. He assumes control of the property, subject to all of the conditions and limitations of the trust, and he may not alter nor dispense with any of them, nor impose new ones. If he violates his instructions or exceeds his authority, he does so at his peril.¹ fund, see infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 475; Courcier v. Ritter, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 549; Wormley v. Wormley, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 421; Beatty v. Clark, 20 Cal. 11; Nicoll v. Ogden, 29 Ill. 323; 81 Am. Dec. 311; Cassell v. Ross, 33 Ill. 245; 85 Am. Dec. 270; Equitable Trust Co. v. Fisher, 106 Ill. 189; Floyd v. Johnson, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 109; 13 Am. Dec. 255; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; Hunt v. Townshend, 31 Md. 336; 100 Am. Dec. 63; Hammond v. Putnam, 110 Mass. 235; Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194; 97 Am. Dec. 449; Williams v. Campbell, 46 Miss. 61; Vernon v. Board of Police, 47 Miss. 181; Clark v. Maguire, 16 Mo. 302; Powers v. Kueckhoff, 41 Mo. 425; 97 Am. Dec. 281; Eitelgeorge v. Mutual, etc., Bldg. Assoc., 69 Mo. 55; Crevelling v. Fritts, 34 N. J. Eq. 134; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 394; Bell v. Palmer, 6 Cow. (N. Y.) 128; Evans v. Root, 7 N. Y. 189; 57 Am. Dec. 512; Haack v. Weicken, 118 N. Y. 67; Booth v. Purser, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 37; Price v. M. E. Church, 4 Ohio 515; Methodist Church v. Wood, 5 Ohio 283; Coonrod v. Coonrod, 6 Ohio 114; Anewalt's Appeal, 42 Pa. St. 416; Swift's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 502; Peterson's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 397; Jones v. Caldwell, 97 Pa. St. 42; Richardson v. Cole, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 100; Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333; Bradshaw v. Cruise, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 260; Brown v. Lambert, 33 Gratt. (Va.) 256. Compare Clark v. Manning, 4 Ill. App. 649.

The intention of the instrument must guide his conduct and protect him in the performance of his duty. Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215; 44 Am. Dec. 303; Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333.

Where a trustee is appointed, under the statute of Maryland, to sell property directed by will to be sold for the payment of debts, etc., his proceedings may be controlled and limited by the court; but his powers will not be extended beyond the authority given by the will. Deakin's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 398.

A trustee can only charge the trust fund in the manner authorized by the instrument creating the trust. Heth v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 4 Gratt. (Va.) 482; 50 Am. Dec. 88.

Instances.—Property given in trust to receive the rents and profits during the life of a person, must not be disposed of while the cestui que trust is living, and a provision authorizing a sale of the whole estate without providing for the preservation or reinvestment of the proceeds, is in conflict with the statute, and repugnant to all idea of a trust to receive the rents and profits, etc. Heermans v. Roberston, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 596; 3 Hun 464.

A feme covert empowered, by deed of trust, to dispose of property by deed of gift or will, can dispose of it in no other way; and a disposition of it by bill of sale is void. Marshall v. Stephens, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 159; 47 Am. Dec. 601.

Where the trust deed minutely prescribes the circumstances under which the trustee may dispose of the trust property, and the manner in which he is to do it, the trustee may not dispose of it in any other manner. Any act in contravention of the authority of the deed of trust will bind the trustee's individual estate, but will not affect the property held in trust. Hunt v. Townshend, 31 Md. 336; 100 Am. Dec. 63.

Where property is given for life with general power of disposition and appointment to be exercised in a particular way, that way must be followed. Marshall v. Stephens, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 159; 47 Am. Dec. 601.

If the trustee has, by the terms of the trust, authority only to pay the income to his beneficiary as it accrues, and not by way of anticipation, he has no right to sell the trust property to reimburse himself for advances made to the bene-fiary. Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138.

It is a breach of trust to apply property conveyed in trust, to support the preaching of a particular religious doctrine, to the support of the preaching of any other doctrine, though the difference between such doctrines is very slight. Combe v. Brazier, 2 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 431. See Feizel v. First German Soc., 9 Kan. 593.

In Busby v. Mitchell, 23 S. Car. 476, it was held that land originally conveyed in trust for a church or academy for Lutherans could not thereafter be conveyed to a town council, or to persons not Lutherans, for a school.

If the instrument creating the trust authorizes a sale only upon the written consent of the beneficiary, he must obtain this consent before the exercise of the power; and the disposition of one purchasing from the trustee without such consent will not be enjoined in order to decree specific performance of the contract. Berrien v. Thomas, 65 Ga. 61.

If a trustee has authority to sell personal property only with the consent of the cestui que trust, a married woman, and pledges a portion of the property without such consent, for his own debt, the invalidity of the transaction is not affected by the direction of the cestui que trust (not shown to have been acted on by the trustee), to pledge such portion for her benefit, or by the assent of the cestui que trust to a sale by the trustee of another portion of the trust property. Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138.

When the powers of a trustee are defined and limited by the terms of the trust, he can make no other disposition of the trust fund than such as is directed; and hence, if a debt which is intended to be secured by the creation of a trust fund for its payment, be extinguished without the use of the fund, the trustee holds the fund subject to the order of the bargainor in the trust deed, and cannot otherwise divest himself of the title with which he is clothed, than by a surrender to the bargainor, or, in case of his death, to his personal representative. If no administrator has been appointed, the title to the trust fund is in abeyance, and cannot be levied on by virtue of an execution, issued against the bargainor before his death, until the appointment of an administrator. Richardson v. Cole, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 100.

A trustee has no authority to purchase lands for, or to bind, the trust estate; and where such purchase has been made, the court ordered the land to be sold, and an estimate to be made of the relative proportion of the sales, which may have arisen from improvements made thereon by the cestui que trust, the proceeds of the land to be applied first, to discharge the amount due for the purchase, with interest; the proceeds of the improvements to be applied first, to the extinguishment of the demand of the trustee on the trust estate, and the surplus to any demand against the cestui que trust for which he had no claim on the trust estate. Morton v. Adams, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 72.

Where a trustee, under a will, applies rents and profits, which should have been paid over to the cestui que trust, to the payment of the debts of the testator, the remedy of the beneficiary is against the trustee, and he cannot be substituted to the rights of the creditors whose debts were paid by the trustee, in the final distribution of the estate. Winder v. Diffenderffer, 2 Bland (Md.) 166.

Where, under a will, a trustee was named to take charge of, manage, and lease out real estate devised to the testator's daughter until she should come of age, and two others were selected to receive and collect the income, it was held that the first trustee was to collect and pay over to the others the net rents and profits of the estate. Devecmon v. Shaw, 70 Md. 219.

Where land is devised to a trustee to be held during the life of a third person, with power to sell, a lease executed by the trustee, with power of renewal at the end of the term, cannot be renewed by the lessee after the death of such third person, as such an agreement in the lease cannot bind the remainder-men. Bergengren v. Aldrich, 139 Mass. 259.

A husband, who is trustee of his wife's separate estate, "to manage it for her sole use and benefit," cannot, against her consent, grant a license to cut and haul timber on the land, or submit the claim of a third party to cut timber, to arbitration. Thomas v. James, 82 Ala. 723.

A trustee, to whom property is devised in trust to pay so much of the net income to the testator's daughter as she "shall desire for her use," is held to the exercise of good faith and reasonable care in ascertaining that the amounts paid over to the daughter are

Nor may he in any way divert the property which he holds in trust from the use or purpose for which it was conveyed.¹

If he sells in violation of the terms of the trust, his act is voidable and the sale may be set aside,² unless the rights of innocent third parties have intervened.³

A substantial execution of the powers conferred will be accepted, unless the mode of its performance is in plain conflict with the settlor's purpose.⁴

Any neglect to pursue the plain duties of the trust, or any variation from such duties, may be justified by proof that it is chargeable to the advice of one authorized to direct the trustee.

for her own use. Greene v. Smith, 17 R. I. 28.

Trustees directed "to pay from time to time such other and further sums from said income as may be required to give a good and sufficient education to the child or children of my said daughter," must make payments directly, when necessary, and not to the testator's daughter. Greene v. Smith, 17 R. I. 28.

A trustee who sells in violation of the conditions of his power, though with the best intention, must answer for any deficiency of the proceeds below the highest value the property can be shown to have had. Melick v. Voorhees, 24 N. J. Eq. 305. And see Voorhees v. Melick, 25 N. J. Eq. 523.

A trustee, appointed by the court to sell property and bring the proceeds into court for disposition, who disburses money without competent authority, will be chargeable as if he had the money still in hand. Green v. Putney, 1 Md. Ch. 262.

A trustee is liable to be surcharged who expends more money in the erection of a building than is authorized by order of the court; but if the increased expenditure is subsequently approved by the court, he will escape liability. Patterson's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 369.

If the trustee fails to follow the directions given him by the instrument of trust, or disobeys the order of the court, he must answer for all loss resulting therefrom. Tucker v. State, 72 Ind. 242; Gilbert v. Welsch, 75 Ind. 557.

A guardian or executor lending trust money in violation of the requirements of the statute, does so at his own risk, and must make it good in case of loss. Wadsworth v. Connell, 104 Ill. 369.

Trustees to whom property is devised, with directions to receive and hold for a limited period, and then pay it to persons named in the will, to be held by them during life, cannot require such persons to give bond for the preservation of the property for those in remainder, if no such requirement is in the will. Waldo v. Cummings, 45 Ill. 421.

1. McBride v. Porter, 17 Iowa 203.

He has no right to take any unusual risks in the care of trust property; he cannot use his trust to accommodate other parties, nor enter into a banking business with the funds thereof. Loud v. Winchester, 64 Mich. 23.

One appointed to sell slaves to pay debts, who puts them out as apprentices to learn trades, transcends his authority, and may be made responsible for their hire while apprentices. Sparkes v. Kearney, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 481.

By the terms of a will, a part of the testator's estate was to be placed in the hands of a trustee, to be held for the use of the testator's son, who was to receive the interest yearly, the principal being bequeathed after the death of such son to his heirs. In such a case it was held that the trustee must answer for the part of the principal which he had paid to the testator's son, although such payment was made with the consent of the son, as well as that of the remainder-men in esse, such payment being in violation of the terms of the trust, inasmuch as there may be different remainder-men upon the termination of the trust. Grothe's Appeal, 135 Pa. St. 585; 26 W. N. C. (Pa.) 265.

2. See infra, this title, Sales by the Trustee; Hazeltine v. Fourney, 120 Ill. 493.

3. See infra, this title, Rights of Third Parties.

4. Thus, a trust to receive rents and profits, and apply them to the payment of debts, may be satisfied by a sale of the premises for a term of years, taking

Thus, a neglect to sue, or a delay in the collection of a debt, which may have resulted in disaster, if properly chargeable to the parties beneficially interested, must not be imputed to the trustee. If the trustee is acting under instructions, the loss is not his.¹

His duties, unlike those of an executor or administrator, are personal rather than official; and this is the essential distinction between the two, so that when discretionary powers are conferred upon an executor which cannot be delegated or transferred, he becomes in effect a trustee, and his duties are those of a trustee.²

b. SPECIAL POWERS.—In simple trusts, the authority of the trustee is very limited. Having no control over the property, and being no more than the nominal holder of the title, he has virtually no powers to exercise in reference thereto, and no duties to discharge. It is with special trusts that the courts have chiefly to deal, and it is to these that the powers and duties considered in this subdivision relate.³

The trustee's powers are such as are ordinarily incident to the proper execution of the trust and the care of property.⁴ He is not limited to those expressly conferred; any acts done in good faith for the manifest good of the trust will be sustained; thus, he

the whole rent in advance and discharging the debts. Rogers v. Tilley, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 639.

1. Upon the question of imputed negligence in not collecting a note, a trustee may show that before the plaintiff acquired an interest, the others beneficially interested directed him to pursue the course of delay which was attributed as negligence. Johnson v. Kendall, 20 N. H. 304.

There is no peremptory obligation imposed upon a trustee to sue upon a bond passed to him in that character the month or year it becomes due, especially when the larger portion of those interested in the trust approve of delay. Waring v. Darnall, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 126.

2. See infra, this title, Discretionary Powers; Greenland v. Waddell, 116 N. Y. 234; 15 Am. St. Rep. 400.

3. See supra, this title, Kinds of Trusts—Simple and Special; Lewin on Trusts, p. 572; Perry on Trusts, § 475; Lincoln v. Purcell, 2 Head (Tenn.) 143; 73 Am. Dec. 196.

Repairs.—See infra, this title, Protection and Preservation.

To Erect Improvements.—See infra, this title, Accounting.

Power to Sell.—See infra, this title, Sales by the Trustee.

To Dedicate to Public Uses.—Trustees who are legal owners of land in fee, may dedicate the land to public uses not inconsistent with the trust. Prudden v. Lindsley, 29 N. J. Eq. 615.

To Confess Judgment.—A trustee cannot incur the trust estate by confession of judgment, as such, even for the purchase-money of the land, although the judgment note was given at the time of sale, and with the agreement that it should be a lien on the land. Wilhelm v. Folmer, 6 Pa. St. 206. But see Dickerson's Appeal, 7 Pa. St. 255; Huntt v. Townshend, 31 Md. 336; 100 Am. Dec. 63.

The general power given to the trustee to sell and reinvest, does not carry with it the power to settle various ejectment suits pending against him, by agreeing to allow judgments to be taken for the plaintiff in some and against him in others. Lemon v. Jennings, 52 Ga. 452.

4. The trustees of a fund appointed for the support of a school, and, among other things, for hiring a teacher, may, when there is occasion for dismissing such teacher and retaining a new one to succeed him, agree with the incumbent, for an increased rate of compensation, to retain his office at the will of the trustee, and until such successor shall be appointed. Hildreth v. Pinkerton Academy, 29 N. H. 227.

One holding in trust a note and mortgage, may receive and receipt for interest either before or after it is due, and his receipt, although signed only may compromise claims by or against the trust estate,¹ or submit a controversy to arbitration;² and may, in certain cases, borrow in his own name, without mentioning the trust, will bind the beneficiaries, if the money was in fact received by him as trustee. Thomassen v. Van Wyngaarden, 65 Iowa 687.

Power to Vote Stock.—A trustee holding stock in an insurance company for the benefit of others, is entitled to vote in the choice of directors. Matter of Barker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 509. See Hoppin v. Buffum, 9 R. I. 513; 11 Am. Rep. 291; Hoppin v. Tobey, 9 R. I. 42, and Wilson v. Central Bridge, 9 R. I. 590.

Power to Manage Property.—A farm and dwelling house were conveyed in trust for the wife of the grantor. Under the general powers necessarily incident to the trust, it was held that the trustee might purchase furniture, stock and farming utensils, and cultivate instead of renting the farm. Mayfield v. Kilgour, 31 Md. 241.

A court of chancery will give trustees appointed to sell under a decree, the same power to collect and account for rents due on the property, when sales are effected, as is given trustees to rent the property and receive the profits when it cannot be sold to advantage. Clark v. Abbott, 1 Md. Ch. 474.

1. Power to Compromise.—A compromise made by the trustee on his own responsibility will be sustained, if made for the best interest of the trust estate. Mills County v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 47 Iowa 66; Pool v. Dial, 10 S. Car. 440; Clarke v. Cordis, 4 Allen (Mass.) 466; Mayer v. Foulkrod, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 349. See also Blue v. Marshall, 3 P. Wms. 381; Ratcliff v. Winch, 17 Beav. 216; Forshaw v. Higginson, 8 De G. M. & G. 827; Jevon v. Bush, 1 Vern. 342; Georges v. Chancie, 1 Ch. Cas. 125; Wiles v. Gresham, 5 De G. M. & G. 770; In re Alexander, 13 Ir. Ch. 137.

Where a creditor assigns the debt to trustees, in trust to pay debts due the trustees, and for other purposes, and to pay the surplus to the assignor, the trustee has power to compromise the debt, and execute a release. Allen v. Randolph, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 693.

An assignee for the payment of debts, discharged a disputed debt, receiving thereon the amount admitted by the debtor to be due. It was held that, in the absence of proof to the contrary, the trustee must be presumed to have acted properly in settling the debt. Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 398.

A trustee may compromise a debt due to the trust estate, if he acts in good faith. And the question of good faith is for the jury. Maynard v. Cleveland, 76 Ga. 52.

Although, as a general rule, a trustee has no power to compromise a debt, yet, where he does so under such circumstances as would have obtained for it the sanction of the court, had a previous application been made, it will be sustained if afterward questioned. Bacot v. Heyward, 5 S. Car. 441.

And in many cases the power has been conferred by statute. See Clarke v. Cordis, 4 Allen (Mass.) 466; Zambaco v. Cassavetti, L. R., 11 Eq. 439.

"But if he releases or compromises a debt without sufficient reason or justification, or if he sells a debt for a grossly inadequate consideration, when by proper diligence more could have been realized, he will be answerable for it in his accounts." Perry on Trusts, § 482; Jevon v. Bush, 1 Vern. 342; Gorges v. Chancie, 1 Ch. Cas. 125; Wiles v. Gresham, 5 De G. M. & G. 770; In re Alexander, 13 Ir. Ch. 137.

If the deed confers no authority on the trustee to compromise the debts, he cannot compromise them without the consent of the beneficiaries. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363.

2. To Arbitrate.—See ARBITRATION, vol. 1, p. 646. It has been held that a trustee has power to submit controversies to arbitration and bind his trust thereby. Davies v. Ridge, 3 Esp. 101. See Hutchins v. Johnson, 12 Conn. 376; 30 Am. Dec. 622 and note.

But not against the will of the cestui. And the cestui is not bound. Yard v. Eland, 1 Ld. Raym. 369; Crum v. Moore, 14 N. J. Eq. 436; 82 Am. Dec. 262.

Nor to the manifest injury of the cestui que trust. Thus, where a deed conveyed to trustees for the use of a daughter an undivided half in real and personal estate, the grantor and trustee were not allowed to consent to a partition of it by arbitrators so as to prevent the creditors of the former from selling under execution his undivided money for the use of the estate,¹ and execute a mortgage on the property.²

half of any part of the property. Thomas v. Davis, 6 Ala. 113.

An administrator or executor may bind his estate by a submission to arbitration. Jones v. Deyer, 16 Ala. 221; Alling v. Munson, 2 Conn. 691; Logsdon v. Roberts, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 255; Overly v. Overly, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 117; Bean v. Farnam, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 269; Coffin v. Cottle, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 454; Kendall v. Bates, 35 Me. 357; Chadbourn v. Chadbourn, 9 Allen (Mass.) 173. See Yarborough v. Leggett, 14 Tex. 677. And so may a guardian. Roberts v. Newbold, Comb. 318; Hutchins v. Johnson, 12 Conn. 376; 30 Am. Dec. 622. And see Strong v. Beronjon, 18 Ala. 168; Weston v. Stuart, 11 Me. 326; Goleman v. Turner, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 118; McComb v. Turner, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 119.

1. Power to Borrow.—The power to borrow depends altogether upon the necessities of the trust. If the trust is involved in debts, or the estate is depreciated by neglect or waste, it may become necessary, in order to preserve it, that the trustee borrow money for that purpose. See Perry on Trusts, § 486; Tramp's Case, 29 Beav. 353; Hoare's Case, 30 Beav. 225. The rule as stated by Perry is that, "If the trustees"—of a trading company or partnership—"incur expenses and debts within the scope of their authority and in the ordinary business of the company, or borrow money to pay for such expenses or debts, the company are in equity liable to pay or contribute to the payment of such debts." Perry on Trusts, § 486.

He may borrow money to pay off tax liens upon the estate and execute a mortgage to secure such loan. U. S. Trust Co. v. Roche, 116 N. Y. 120.

It is permissible to borrow money to carry out the purposes of the trust. Burroughs v. Bunnell, 70 Md. 18.

When Trustee May Not Borrow.—By the terms of a trust, the duties of the trustee were limited to the application of moneys coming into his hands from the sale of goods to the payment, first, of the cost of conducting the business, then, to the payment of A and B, who had advanced money to the settlor. It was held that the execution of any notes by the trustee, and particularly the execution of notes on which to borrow money to pay the settlor's debts, were acts altogether beyond the authority conferred upon him by the trust. Storrs v. Flint, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 498.

Power to Borrow and Execute Notes.—See Gandy v. Babbitt, 56 Ga. 640.

2. Power to Mortgage.—The power to mortgage is ordinarily incident to the execution of the trust by a trustee who possesses general authority, and it may be exercised by him unless forbidden by the instrument creating the trust or clearly foreign to the purposes of the trust. McBrayer v. Cariker, 64 Ala. 50; Miller v. Redwine, 75 Ga. 130; Pike v. Baldwin, 68 Iowa 263; Dibrell v. Carlisle, 51 Miss. 785; Hamilton v. Mound City Mut. L. Ins. Co., 3 Tenn. Ch. 124. See Taylor v. Franklin Sav. Bank, 50 Fed. Rep. 289; Weeks v. Cornwell, 104 N. Y. 325; Rogers v. Rogers, 111 N. Y. 228.

The power to "sell and dispose of" trust property was held, in Waterman v. Baldwin, 68 Iowa 255, to be broad enough to authorize a mortgage.

Power may properly be granted at chambers to a trustee to mortgage the trust estate, on a proceeding instituted for that purpose. (Overruling Iverson v. Saulsbury, 68 Ga. 790.) Weems v. Coker, 70 Ga. 746.

One who holds lands in trust for a feme covert and the heirs of her body, with remainder in fee to her husband, contingent on the husband's survivorship and her death without issue, may mortgage such lands, if the beneficiary and husband join, and by such mortgage bind her life estate and the husband's contingent remainder, although such mortgage cannot affect the interests of the heirs of the feme covert's body. Wood v. Kice, 103 Mo. 329.

And a trustee for a married woman may mortgage the trust property to secure the unpaid balance of purchase-money, where the deed and mortgage are executed simultaneously and as part of the same transaction. Mavrich v. Grier, 3 Nev. 52; 93 Am. Dec. 373.

He may execute a mortgage to pay the debts of the trust. Gilbert v. Gilbert, 39 Iowa 657.

If he has authority to repair and improve and to borrow money, he has power to mortgage for that purpose.

Wetmore v. Holzman, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 311; 23 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 202.

But a mortgage, by the trustees, of an estate held in trust to receive the rents and profits and pay them over to the cestui que trust, is void under the New York statute, and no sanction of the court prior to its execution can give it validity. Cruger v. Jones, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 467.

Where a trustee has neglected to pay taxes and water-rates on the trust estate, and the court, on petition, grants leave to borrow sufficient money on mortgage to pay the same, in order to prevent the threatened sale of the property, a loan made by the trustee, secured by his mortgage on the trust properly, is permissible, and not void, under the New York Rev. St., p. 730, § 65, which provides that where the trust is expressed in the instrument creating the estate, every conveyance in contravention of the trust is void. U. S. Trust Co. v. Roche, 116 N. Y. 120.

Certain realty, on which were old buildings, was devised to the executors in trust for the testator's widow for life, with remainder to her children. The executors were given a discretionary power to sell. The cost of keeping the buildings in repair was very great; it was not advisable to sell, and it was desirable that the old buildings should be replaced by new ones. The remaindermen were infants. Under the circumstances, it was held that the court would permit the estate to be mortgaged to raise money to erect new buildings. Schulting v. Schulting, 41 N. J. Eq. 130.

A trustee of real estate, at law, has a right to execute a mortgage of such estate, which mortgage derives its force from his interest, and not from a mere power; but if the mortgage is improperly executed, the trustee will be liable in equity to his cestuis que trust; and their equity may, under certain circumstances, follow the legal estate into the hands of the mortgagee, or the purchaser, under proceedings to foreclose it. Magraw v. Pennock, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 89.

Where a trustee and the cestui que trust mortgage the trust property in breach of the trust, they cannot set up such breach in defense of an action by the mortgagee on the mortgage. Ryder v. Sisson, 7 R. I. 341.

When Trustee May Not Mortgage.—Compare Hewitt v. Phelps, 105 U. S. 393; Norton v. Phelps, 54 Miss. 471; Clopton v. Gholson, 53 Miss. 466; Seborn v. Beckwith, 30 W. Va. 774.

In the absence of authority, the trustee cannot incur land conveyed to him for the benefit of a married woman. Seborn v. Beckwith, 30 W. Va. 774.

The trustee of a naked trust cannot bind the trust estate by mortgage. Griffin v. Blanchar, 17 Cal. 70.

A trustee with authority to mortgage an estate, for the purpose of raising money to discharge a debt against it, cannot render the estate liable by executing a mortgage in his individual capacity; and such a mortgage cannot be enforced against the principal or his devisees. Gilbert v. Gilbert, 39 Iowa 657.

A trustee cannot mortgage the trust estate for a debt not reduced to a judgment, and the validity of which is denied by the beneficiaries. Reilly's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 201.

The rights of the cestui que trust are not affected by the execution of a mortgage on the premises by the holder of the legal title, without his consent. Harris v. McIntyre, 118 Ill. 275.

Where property is left in trust to the testator's daughter for life, with remainder to her children, the property cannot be mortgaged by order of the court to raise funds to improve the estate, unless the children are made parties. Horspool v. Davis, 6 Bosw. (N. Y.) 581.

In Taylor v. Clark, 56 Ga. 309, the court denied the trustee's authority to create a lien upon the property of the trust estate, or the crops to be made thereon, for supplies furnished with which to make such crops.

Under the New York Statute of 1886, which empowers the supreme court to authorize a trustee to sell the mortgaged lands, when it appears "that it is for the best interest of said estate so to do, and that it is necessary, and for the benefit of the estate to raise, by mortgage thereon, or by sales thereof, funds for the purpose of preserving or improving such estate;" no authority is thereby conferred to execute a mortgage for the purpose of paying an annuity given by a will by which the lands were devised, even if, under the will, the annuity is a charge on such lands; nor to execute a mortgage to obtain money to pay taxes or assessments, which are not liens on the property when the proceedings are commenced. Matter of Clarke (Su-

The power to lease may sometimes be implied.¹ When necessary for the protection and preservation of the trust estate, the trustee may sue in his own name,² and may also remove incumbrances from it.³

c. DISCRETIONARY POWERS.—The better opinion seems to be that the courts will refuse to control the exercise of discretionary powers by trustees, and that it is only when the confidence of the settlor is violated by a wanton disregard of the rights of the bene-preme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 43; aff'd without opinion, 128 N. Y. 658. In the same case, a will which bequeathed to the widow certain property in lieu of a dower, also gave her the use of the testator's house and household goods for life, and provided an annuity for her. It was held that no such trust was created as could, under this same statute, authorize the mortgaging or selling of the real estate. Matter of Clarke (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 43; aff'd 128 N. Y. 658.

Where a trustee has the authority to make an expenditure, and has no trust funds, and such expenditure is required to protect the trust estate, he cannot make the expenditure a charge on the trust estate except by express agreement. Johnson v. Leman, 30 Ill. App. 370.

As to the power under a will to mortgage the estate, see Weeks v. Cornwell, 104 N. Y. 325; Rogers v. Rogers, 111 N. Y. 228.

To Assign Mortgage.—Where a trustee clothed with full power to manage and control the trust estate, assigns a mortgage impressed with the trust, to a bona fide purchaser or pledgee, the assignment cannot be impeached by the cestui que trust. Dillaye v. Commercial Bank, 51 N. Y. 345.

1. Power to lease is an implied power. See Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 595; Perry on Trusts, § 484; Naylor v. Arnitt, 1 Russ. & M. 501; Fitzpatrick v. Waring, L. R., 11 Ir. Rep. 35; Bowes v. East London Water Works Co., Jac. 324; Drohan v. Drohan, 1 B. & B. 185; Middleton v. Dodswell, 13 Ves. 268; Atty. Gen'l v. Owen, 10 Ves. 560.

Trustees with power to pay debts, etc., out of an estate, but not to sell, take by implication the power to lease the real estate on terms usual in the locality. Matter of Odell's Estate, 1 Conn. (N. Y.) 94. A trustee with power to lease for the best improved rent obtainable, must use reasonable diligence as well as good faith, and if it is shown that due diligence would have secured a much higher rent at the time the lease was made, the lease will be held void. Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123.

A trustee cannot divest the title of the cestui que trust, or subject the trust property to the payment of his own debts or those of a third person, by permitting the property to be hired out by another, the donees being infants. Easley v. Dye, 14 Ala. 158.

Where the lease by the trustee contained a covenant to renew the lease or pay for certain erections which the lessee was to make, on the refusal of the trustee to renew at the termination of the lease, the trust estate is liable to pay for the erections. Robinson v. Kettle-tas, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 67.

Where a will empowers a trustee to make a lease for "twenty-one years from the making thereof," he must lease in possession, and if there is a valid outstanding term at the time a new lease is made "for twenty-one years from date," the lessee can enter only at the expiration of the existing term, and the new lease, being the grant of a reversion, is void. Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123. In this case it was held that a lease for twenty-one years, with the right of renewal for two similar terms, made under a power to lease for twenty-one years only, was not void, but that equity would sustain it for twenty-one years and cut off the right of renewal.

2. Power to sue.—As to the power to sue, see infra, this title, Procedure—Parties. But compare Nelson v. Eaton, 7 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 305, where it was held that a trustee holding a chose in action in trust, with power to sell it, had no implied power to sue upon it.

3. To Remove Incumbrances.—He may pay off liens on the trust estate. Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355; 48 Am. Dec. 492; Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185; Crutchfield v. Haynes, 14 Ala. 49.

ficiary, or of the interests of the trust, that they will reject what the trustee has done. Some authorities, however, maintain a contrary view.¹

In this last case it being said: "If this were not the law, a trustee could not protect the trust property for the benefit of the cestui que trust."

1. See POWERS, vol. 18, pp. 987-994. See also article on "Trustees' Discretion" from London Law Times, 17 Chic. L. Jour. 410; Markey v. Langley, 92 U. S. 142; Smith v. Wildman, 37 Conn. 384; Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172; Morse v. Morrell, 82 Me. 80; National Exchange Bank v. Sutton, 147 Mass. 131; Ames v. Scudder, 11 Mo. App. 168; Adams Female Academy v. Adams, 65 N. H. 225; Read v. Patterson, 44 N. J. Eq. 211; 6 Am. St. Rep. 877 and note; Banning v. Gunn, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 337; Naglee's Estate, 52 Pa. St. 154; Blaisdell v. Stevens, 16 Vt. 179; Cochran v. Paris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 356; Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. 47; Walker v. Walker, 5 Madd. 424; French v. Davidson, 3 Madd. 396; Breton v. Brereton, 2 Ves. 87 n.; Clarke v. Parker, 19 Ves. 11; Weller v. Ker, L. R., 1 Macq. H. L. Sc. Cas. 11; Tempest v. Camoys, 21 Ch. Div. 571; Gisborne v. Gisborne, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 300; 36 L. T. N. S. 564; Tabor v. Brooks, 10 Ch. Div. 273; In re Eastwood v. Clark, 48 L. T. 395; 23 Ch. Div. 134.

In Nichols v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 146, an instrument had been executed conferring upon Rogers "the sole, absolute and untrammelled control" of the grantors' respective interests, authorizing him to distribute them as he from time to time might think best, the several sums paid to him to be used as his best judgment might approve, he to employ his best energy, skill and judgment, and obtain for the grantors substantial and positive benefits from his labors in the premises. The property under his charge consisted of a mine located in Arizona. Less than six months after Rogers' trustee undertook the management of the trust, suit was brought in equity by one of the parties in interest to terminate the trust. It was held that this proceeding was premature, sufficient time not having elapsed for the proper closing up of the business.

Unless prohibited by statute, a trustee may execute the power as conferred, and in the manner designated in the deed of trust, without the interposition of the chancellor. O'Bannon v. Muselman, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 523.

Where a testator, in giving land and negroes to the separate use of his married daughter, expressed a want of confidence in her husband, and forbade the trustee from letting him have possession of the slaves, but left it optional with him whether he would rent the land or permit the family to occupy it, it was held that the husband and wife had no equity to compel the trustee to give them possession of the property for a home. Cox v. Williams, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 150.

Where testamentary trustees have power to sell and invest the proceeds of the trust estate, and after the payment of debts, etc., to pay the income to the beneficiary for life, and at her death to divide it between the testator's children, the court will not restrain a sale by the trustees, although made before the time fixed for distribution, unless they were proceeding from improper motives. Champlin v. Champlin, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 571.

Where certain real and personal property was devised to a trustee, to collect the rents and pay them to the testator's daughter until she should be twenty-five years of age, at which time it was to pass to her absolutely, with a proviso that the trustee, in his discretion, might transfer all of such property to her before attaining that age, with a remainder over to the testator's brother in case of her death without issue before the conveyance of the property to her, and the trustee transferred a portion thereof to her before she reached the specified age, it was held to be a lawful exercise of the discretion given him. Sellow's Appeal, 36 Conn. 196.

A testator bequeathed property to a trustee to be applied to the benefit of the cestui que trust as should, in the judgment of a judge of probate, be found necessary, and it was held that the trustee was accountable in a chancery court for the property received and not in the court of probate; that in the exercise of the "discretion" and "judgment" confided to him, the judge of probate acted personally and officially, and that no appeal lay from his proceedings and doings. Downer v. Downer, 9 Vt. 231.

Where a trustee was authorized by a will to transfer the trust property to the cestui que trust absolutely, whenever he should become perfectly satisfied that it would be for his best interest, and by statute the jurisdiction of the supreme court in the case of testamentary trusts was made "subject to any provisions contained in the will," and the court was forbidden to "restrain the exercise of any powers given by the terms of the will," it was held that even if the court had power to overrule the discretion of the trustee and order him to transfer the property to the beneficiary, it should be exercised only upon the fullest and clearest proof. Martin v. Southgate, 28 Me. 41.

It is said, however, by Simonton, J., in Bound v. South Carolina R. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 854: "There can be no doubt that, however large the discretion of trustees may be in the exercise and execution of their trusts, the court never loses its power to review the use of this discretion, and, if need be, to correct any abuse in its exercise," citing Perry on Trusts, § 511. See also Cromie v. Bull, 81 Ky. 646; Ireland v. Ireland, 84 N. Y. 321; Bacon v. Bacon, 55 Vt. 243; Albright v. Albright, 91 N. Car. 220; In re Roper's Trusts, 40 L. T. 97; 11 Ch. Div. 272; In re Weaver, 21 Ch. Div. 615; Allen v. Harris, 27 Ch. Div. 333.

The court will control the discretion of the trustee to the extent, and only to the extent, of compelling an honest and bona fide exercise thereof for the purposes designed in the creation of the trust. Bacon v. Bacon, 55 Vt. 243.

In Tabor v. Brookes, 10 Ch. Div. 273; 39 L. T. N. S. 528, where the trustees were to apply the income of a fund as they should in their uncontrolled and irresponsible discretion think proper, Vice Chancellor Malins held that, although in his opinion the trustees were not acting judiciously, yet he ought not to interfere as there was no proof of mala fides. See also Camden v. Murray, 16 Ch. Div. 161; 43 L. T. N. S. 661; Tempest v. Camoys, 21 Ch. Div. 571.

Of the nature of this discretion, Mr. Freeman, in his note to Read v. Patterson, 44 N. J. Eq. 211; 6 Am. St. Rep. 885, says: "Formerly courts of equity supervised and controlled an exercise of discretionary powers by trustees. At the present time this authority is universally denied. But the discretion of trustees may, without impropriety, be likened to that of judges. It is not an arbitrary discretion. It does not include the unrestrained power to do what the trustee pleases. To extend it that far is to make it a means of destroying the trust which it was intended to aid and maintain. The trustee, instead of doing merely what, in his present circumstances, he chooses to do, in deference to his interests or inclinations, is to do that which his honest, disinterested judgment approves, or ought to approve." And this language is quoted with approval by Simonton, J., in Bound v. South Carolina R. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 854.

Although a trustee has discretion as to the time and amount of payments to be made to a married woman out of a trust fund for her benefit, yet if he refuses to make any payment, he is guilty of a breach of trust against which a court of equity will relieve. Collins v. Severson, 2 Del. Ch. 324.

Where a deed of trust authorized a trustee of land to sell the same when "in his opinion the same could be sold and the proceeds invested in other lands advantageously to those concerned," it was held that this power, though great, was not unlimited; that he was to exercise his judgment, not his will, and could only sell and reinvest the proceeds when both of these acts would, in his opinion, be advantageous to the beneficiary. Wormeley v. Wormeley, 1 Brock. (U. S.) 230. A trustee with such power must exercise that opinion fairly and honestly, and if he appears to have been swayed by private interest and selfish ends, and that the price was utterly disproportionate to the real value of the estate, a court of equity will not sanction the act. Wormely v. Wormely, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 421.

If trustees have discretionary power to execute a deed of the trust property, a court of equity may, in a proper case, compel them to execute a conveyance. Saunders v. Schmaelzle, 49 Conn. 59.

A testatrix left her property to her husband, in trust to hold and manage for his support during life and for the support and education of their children, with full power and authority to collect and dispose of the rents and profits "in such manner as he might think best" for the purposes of such trust, and to improve the real estate, and invest or reinvest the same at discretion,

It is not permissible to confer upon the trustee such broad powers and unlimited discretion that the purposes of the trust cannot be clearly determined, nor the identity of the cestui que trust established. Thus, in one instance, a power reposed in the discretion of the trustees to select the beneficiary was held to be invalid.¹

2. Delegation of Powers and Duties.—Where the trustee's duties are personal and involve the exercise of discretion, they are not to be delegated.² It is only ministerial acts which he may intrust to an agent, and over these he must exercise a close supervision.³

and it was held that he was not vested with arbitrary power over the income and assets of the estate, but that he could be controlled by a court of equity in his disposition thereof. McDonald v. McDonald, 92 Ala. 537. Where the trust is for the common support of a father and his family, and the father grossly fails to discharge his duty in dispensing the income for the purposes for which it was given, although he is made sole judge of the necessities of his family by the instrument creating the trust, the court will assume the distribution of the income so as to secure a just and equitable participation therein by the beneficiaries. Babbitt v. Babbitt, 26 N. J. Eq. 44. See also Oliver v. Oliver, 3 N. J. Eq. 368; Jacobus v. Jacobus, 20 N. J. Eq. 49; Hamley v. Gilbert, 1 Jac. 354; Foley v. Parry, 5 Sim. 138; Hadow v. Hadow, 9 Sim. 438; Jubber v. Jubber, 9 Sim. 503; Wardle v. Claxton, 9 Sim. 524; Wetherell v. Wilson, 1 Keen 80; Longmore v. Eleum, 2 Y. & C. C. 363; Raikes v. Ward, 1 Hare 445; Jodrell v. Jodrell, 14 Beav. 413; Castle v. Castle, 1 De G. & J. 352; Sparhawk v. Sparhawk, 114 Mass. 356.

1. Tilden v. Green, 130 N. Y. 45.

2. See article by Arthur Biddle on "Delegation of Discretionary Powers by a Trustee," 12 Cent. L. Jour. 266, 290; Lewin on Trusts (1st Am. ed.) 252; Perry on Trusts, §§ 287, 401, 408, 775, 806; In re Quong Woo, 13 Fed. Rep. 229. See Pearson v. Jamison, 1 McLean (U. S.) 199; Coquard v. Chariton County, 14 Fed. Rep. 203; Saunders v. Webber, 39 Cal. 290; Vose v. International Imp. Fund, 2 Woods (U. S.) 647; Winthrop v. Atty. Gen'l, 128 Mass. 258; Whittlesey v. Hughes, 39 Mo. 13; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; 11 Am. Rep. 401; Howard v. Thornton, 50 Mo. 291; St. Louis v. Priest, 88

Mo. 612; Heyer v. Deaves, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 154; Berger v. Duff, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 368; Niles v. Stevens, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 399; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 543; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587; 67 Am. Dec. 89; Suarez v. Pumpelly, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 336; Andrew v. New York Bible, etc., Soc., 4 Sandf. (N. Y.) 156; Wilson v. Towle, 36 N. H. 129; McMurtrie v. Pennsylvania L. Ins. Co., 9 Phila. (Pa.) 529; Fuller v. O'Neil, 69 Tex. 349; 5 Am. St. Rep. 59; Seely v. Hills, 49 Wis. 473; Trutch v. Samprell, 20 Beav. 116; Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661; Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 106; Turner v. Corney, 5 Beav. 517; Wilkinson v. Parry, 4 Russ. 272; Bayley v. Mansell, 4 Madd. 226; Crewe v. Dicken, 4 Ves. 97. If the trust is one of discretion, a delegation of it will be absolutely void. Lewin on Trusts 257; Perry, § 408; Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. 643; Bradford v. Belfield, 2 Sim. 264; Hitch v. Leworthy, 2 Hare 200; Atty. Gen'l v. Scott, 1 Ves. 413; Wilson v. Dennison, Amb. 82; Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589; Doe v. Robinson, 24 Miss. 688.

A trustee cannot give a general authority to an agent to exercise a delegated discretionary power unless given special authority to do so by the instrument creating the trust. Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318. See also infra, this title, Co-Trustees.

3. As to the fact that ministerial duties may be delegated, see Gillespie v. Smith, 29 Ill. 473; 81 Am. Dec. 328; Jones v. Sergeant, 45 Miss. 332; Tyler v. Herring, 67 Miss. 169; 19 Am. St. Rep. 263.

This means that a trustee may employ agents, attorneys, brokers or servants with the same freedom that would be exercised by any ordinarily prudent man under the same circum-

If he acts through agents, or imposes upon anyone else the execution of the trust reposed in him, he does so at his peril,¹ unless stances; and he is, of course, protected if the necessities of the case require the delegation of purely ministerial duties. Any losses resulting from the conduct of such agents fall upon the estate, unless the trustee can be shown to have been negligent in relation thereto, for the employment of agents or attorneys to perform such duties is not counted a delegation of the trust. See Barings v. Willing, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 251; Connolly v. Belt, 5 Cranch (C. C.) 405; Kennedy v. Dunn, 58 Cal. 339; Mason v. Wait, 5 Ill. 132; Gillespie v. Smith, 29 Ill. 473; 81 Am. Dec. 328; Lewis v. Reed, 11 Ind. 239; Telford v. Barney, 1 Greene (Iowa) 575; Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257; McCready v. Lansdale, 58 Miss. 877; Johns v. Sergeant, 45 Miss. 332; Rayner v. Pearsall, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 578; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396; Calhoun's Estate, 6 Watts (Pa.) 185; Blight v. Schenck, 10 Pa. St. 285; 51 Am. Dec. 478; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544; 34 Am. Rep. 716. Thomas v. Scruggs, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 401; Alexander v. Alexander, 2 Ves. 643; Crewe v. Dicken, 4 Ves. 97; Edmonds v. Peake, 7 Beav. 239; Belchier v. Parsons, Ambl. 219; Bacon v. Bacon, 5 Ves. 334; Clough v. Bond, 3 Myl. & C. 496; In re Speight, 22 Ch. Div. 727; Stroud v. Gwyer, 6 Jur. N. S. 719. See also Cairns v. Chaubert, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 164; Van Buren v. Chenango County Mut. Ins. Co., 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 672; Wilcox v. Smith, 26 Barb. (N. Y.) 330.

A trustee in a deed of trust given to secure a debt, may employ a stranger to post the notices and conduct the sale provided for in the deed, provided he afterward ratifies these acts. And in such case it is sufficient, to make the sale valid, that the trustee retains a supervision and control over the person so employed. Johns v. Sergeant, 45 Miss. 332.

It has been held that a trustee's agents may sell, if the trustee afterward ratifies their act. Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589; Tyler v. Herring, 67 Miss. 169; 19 Am. St. Rep. 263. See Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 487.

But this would seem to be an unsafe doctrine and is not sustained by the current of authority. See infra, this title, Sales by the Trustee—Power of Sale.

If the instrument of trust specifies the mode of sale in such detail as to leave no discretion in the trustee, he may act through agents as freely as he might individually. Pearson v. Jamison, 1 McLean (U. S.) 197; Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589.

Power to Appoint and Act Through Agents.—An agent of a trustee, employed by him in the execution of the trust, and having thereby full knowledge of it, will be affected by the trust to the same extent as the trustee would, and his acts will be considered the acts of the trustee, and affected by the same considerations as if done by the trustee himself. Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333.

A trustee may employ whatever assistants are necessary, and pay them out of the trust money. Parker v. Johnson, 37 N. J. Eq. 366.

1. Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 542; Niles v. Stevens, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 399; Heyer v. Deaves, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 154; Rayner v. Pearsall, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 578; Berger v. Duff, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 368; Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587; 67 Am. Dec. 89; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 487; Taylor v. Hopkins, 40 Ill. 442; Whittlesey v. Hughes, 39 Mo. 13; Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; 11 Am. Rep. 401; Howard v. Thornton, 50 Mo. 291; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Floyd v. Johnson, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 109; 13 Am. Dec. 255; Neal v. Patten, 47 Ga. 73; Williams v. Mattocks, 3 Vt. 189; Adams v. Clifton, 1 Russ. 297; Hardwick v. Mynd, 1 Anstr. 109; Charitable Corp. v. Sutton, 2 Atk. 405; Turner v. Carney, 5 Beav. 515. Ordinary care will not protect him. Bosstock v. Floyer, L. R., 1 Eq. 26; Comb's Case, 9 Coke 75; Ingham v. Ingram, 2 Atk. 88; Atty. Gen'l v. Scott, 1 Ves. 417; Hawkins v. Kemp, 3 East 410.

The trustee for the mortgage bondholders of a railroad owes them a personal duty where he has accepted the trust, and is liable for all damages which may ensue, if he permits a majority of the bondholders to institute and carry on foreclosure proceedings without his personal supervision or control. Merrill v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 297.

this delegation of authority has received the sanction of the settlor,¹ or unless the duties delegated are purely ministerial, and due care is exercised in the employment of agents. For whatever loss ensues from this improper delegation of the trust, the trustee must answer in person. This rule, which is rigid, extends also to the acts of co-trustees. "For," says Chancellor Kent, "the testator intended that his representatives should have the benefit of the judgment of each of the executors applied to the given case."²

3. The Duty of Diligence—a. IN GENERAL.—The same diligence is exacted of a trustee in the performance of his duties which a

It has been held that a sale made by a deputy will be set aside, although no objection to its regularity or fairness be raised. Sebastian v. Johnson, 72 Ill. 283; 22 Am. Rep. 144.

In Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318, the court, by Walworth, Chancellor, said: "A trustee who has only a delegated discretionary power cannot give general authority to another to execute the same, unless he is specially authorized so to do by the deed or will creating such power. A general authority to an agent to sell and convey lands belonging to the estate, or to contract absolutely for the sale of such lands, cannot, therefore, be given by the trustees. . . . The better course, in a case of this kind, therefore, is to intrust the agent with a discretionary power to contract, subject to the ratification of the trustees upon his report of the facts; and that they should themselves execute the conveyance, when the terms of the sale have been complied with, and transmit it, properly acknowledged, to the agent to be delivered to the purchaser." See Newton v. Bronson, 13 N. Y. 587; 67 Am. Dec. 89.

There must be some good reason for the employment of agents to perform the duties imposed upon the trustee. He may not put the property out of his own control nor delegate powers needlessly, or he will be held answerable for losses ensuing. Pistor v. Dunbar, 1 Anstr. 107; Clough v. Bond, 3 Myl. & C. 406; Salway v. Salway, 2 Russ. & M. 218; Rayner v. Pearsall, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 578; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Madd. 290; Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 186; Green v. Hanberry, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 403; Mathews v. Brice, 6 Beav. 239.

Instances.—Where trustees in charge of certain corporate stock sold it and charged another with the investment of the proceeds, and the investor lost it, the trustees were held responsible. Rowland v. Witherden, 3 M. & G. 568; Hopgood v. Parkin, L. R., 11 Eq. 74.

Loss by Defalcation of Agents Employed.—If he employs others to look after the investment of his trust funds in the ordinary and customary course of business, or from the necessities of the case, and is free from neglect or imprudence, he will not be compelled to make good any loss occurring through embezzlement of the funds by the agent so chosen. Christy v. McBride, 2 Ill. 75; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544; 34 Am. Rep. 716; Marshall v. Moore, 2 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 69; In re Speight, 22 Ch. Div. 727; Rayner v. Pearsall, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 578; Stroud v. Gwyer, 6 Jur. N. S. 719; Clough v. Bond, 3 Myl. & C. 406; Belchier v. Parsons, Amb. 219; Bacon v. Bacon, 5 Ves. 334.

But the contrary rule is announced in In re Litchfield, 1 Atk. 87.

He must answer in person if he confides the application of the trust fund to his attorney or solicitor. Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 196; Ex p. Townsend, 1 Moll. 139; Griffiths v. Porter, 25 Beav. 236; Ghost v. Waller, 9 Beav. 497; Bostock v. Floyer, L. R., 1 Eq. 26; 35 Beav. 603; Wood v. Weightman, L. R., 13 Eq. 434; Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661; 34 Beav. 411.

Or through the agent's failure pending a settlement. Edmonds v. Peake, 7 Beav. 239; Calhoun's Estate, 6 Watts (Pa.) 185.

1. Doyle v. Blake, 2 Sch. & Lef. 239; Keane v. Roberts, 4 Madd. 332; Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Mall. 199.

Delegation is permissible only by the authority or express consent of all the parties interested. Seely v. Hills, 49 Wis. 473.

2. Berger v. Duff, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 368. See Floyd v. Johnson, 2 Litt. (Ky.) 109; 13 Am. Dec. 255; infra, this title, Co-trustees.

man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the care of his own property.¹

1. See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535; King v. King, 37 Ga. 205; Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304; 95 Am. Dec. 389; Christy v. McBride, 2 Ill. 75; Mattocks v. Moulton, 84 Me. 545; Gould v. Chappell, 42 Md. 466; State v. Meagher, 44 Mo. 356; 100 Am. Dec. 298; Fudge v. Durn, 51 Mo. 266; French v. Currier, 47 N. H. 99; Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438; 57 Am. Dec. 534; King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 76; Hun v. Cary, 82 N. Y. 65; 37 Am. Rep. 546; Matter of Dean, 86 N. Y. 399; Matter of Cornell, 110 N. Y. 357; McCabe v. Fowler, 84 N. Y. 314; Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123; Miller v. Proctor, 20 Ohio St. 444; Neff's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 91; Jones' Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 142; 42 Am. Dec. 281; Fesmire's Estate, 34 Pa. St. 67; 19 Am. St. Rep. 676; Fahnestock's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 46; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544; 34 Am. Dec. 716; Mikel v. Mikel, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 220; Spaulding v. Wakefield, 53 Vt. 660; 38 Am. Rep. 708; Barney v. Parsons, 54 Vt. 623; 41 Am. Rep. 858; McCloskey v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 264; 48 Am. Rep. 770; Davis v. Harman, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 194; Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 286; 60 Am. Dec. 381; In re Speight, 22 Ch. Div. 727; L. R., 9 App. Cas. 1; Westmoreland v. Holland, 19 W. R. 302; Belchier v. Parsons, Ambli. 219; Massey v. Banner, 1 Jac. & W. 241.

All that the court requires is common skill, common prudence and common caution. Neff's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 96; Taylor v. Hite, 61 Mo. 142.

In Mattocks v. Moulton, 84 Me. 545, the court, by Emery, J., said: "It remains to be determined whether, in making the investments complained of in this case, the appellant exercised the sound discretion required of him by the law as above expounded, his good faith and integrity being unquestioned. In doing this, we must be scrupulous not to measure his discretion exercised before the event by our discretion called into action after the event."

In Barney v. Parsons, 54 Vt. 623; 41 Am. Rep. 858, the court, by Redfield, J., said: "No arbitrary rule can be made a substitute for strict fidelity, sound discretion, diligence, and care."

In Taylor v. Hite, 61 Mo. 142, the court, by Napton, J., said: "A trustee must use the same care for the safety of the trust fund and for the interest of the cestui que trust that he uses for his own interests. He is bound to employ such diligence and such prudence in the care and management of a trust fund as in general prudent men of discretion and intelligence in such matters employ in their own like affairs."

In Crabb v. Young, 92 N. Y. 56, the court, by Cruger, C. J., said: "If the defendants"—the trustees—"acted in good faith in making these loans, subsequent events which they could not foresee, and over which they had no control, operating to depreciate the value of these securities, would not render them liable to make good such loss to the estate. Such a rule would require a trustee to forecast the future with infallible accuracy, and in case of failure to do so, make him responsible for the consequences, even though he exercised the greatest caution and prudence in making investments. Under such a rule no prudent man would or could safely undertake the management of a trust estate, and it would be difficult to obtain honest and reliable men to accept what is a very necessary, but is often a thankless and troublesome duty."

Trustees are expected to act on the same principles which govern cautious and prudent men in the transaction of their own affairs. Higgins v. Whitson, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 141; Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438; 57 Am. Dec. 534; Neff's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 91; Jones' Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 143; 42 Am. Dec. 282; Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.) 154. They are bound to use and manage the trust property for the benefit of the cestui que trust with the care and diligence of a provident owner. Hutchinson v. Lord, 1 Wis. 286; 60 Am. Dec. 381. Good faith and honest intention will not protect one in the execution of a trust, who departs from the rules of prudence which the experience of others has approved. Bogart v. Van Velson, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 718. But where the trustee acts in good faith in the exercise of a fair discretion, and in the same manner he would ordinarily in regard to his own property, he will not be held to account for any loss accruing in the management of the trust estate. Finlay v. Merriman, 39 Tex. 56.

The rule that the bailee, misusing the article bailed, thereby converting it to his own use, becomes liable for its value, whether any loss results from such misuser or not, has no application to the case of a trustee, who, in the absence of fraud, is only liable for the consequences resulting from culpable negligence. State v. Foy, 65 N. Car. 265.

Where one has two demands due to him from the same person, one personally, and the other as trustee, it is his duty upon receiving satisfaction of the first demand, to apply the proceeds to both demands, pro rata, as he is bound to take as good care of the trust property as of his own. Scott v. Ray, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 360.

"No man who takes upon himself an office of trust or confidence for another, contracts for anything more than a diligent attention to its concerns and a faithful discharge of the duty which it imposes. He is not supposed to have attained infallibility." Scott v. Depeyster, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 513.

Acts of trustees, done in good faith, without selfish motives, and especially under the advice of counsel, are to be viewed indulgently by a court of equity. Ellig v. Naglee, 9 Cal. 683; Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185; Perrine v. Vreeland, 33 N. J. Eq. 102. But where they grossly violate their duty, betray their trust, or have been guilty of unreasonable negligence, their acts are inspected with the severest scrutiny, and they are dealt with according to the rules of strict, if not rigorous, justice. Diffenderfer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311.

Where, by a marriage settlement, the property was to remain in the hands of the husband, with power in the trustees to take it out of his hands, if in their opinion it should become necessary, it is the duty of the trustees, when they find that the husband is wasting and disposing of the property, to resume possession, if it can be done by proper diligence, and they will be responsible for any loss that may ensue from their failure to exercise such diligence. Freeman v. Cook, 6 Ired. Eq. 373.

Where the beneficiaries are entitled to the possession of the fund in whatever form it may be, the better to enable them to have the use and benefit of it, and the trustee is invested with the legal title only, he should be bound only to good faith and reasonable diligence, and will be held only for gross negligence. Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333.

Where the trustee of property given to secure the payment of debts, is found guilty of gross negligence or fraud in the sale of the property, he will be adjudged liable for the reasonable value of the trust estate with interest. Smith v. Vertrees, 2 Bush (Ky.) 63.

Where A, with the knowledge of the trustees to whom his estate had been conveyed to secure the payment of certain creditors, made a lottery, setting up the estate as a prize, and the trustees did not prevent it, but two of them induced a creditor to suppress a publication of his claim and notice forbidding the lottery, the holder of the ticket drawing the estate could not be compelled to surrender it to the trustees, who were responsible for the loss, and the assignees of the trustees could not pass a better title than the trustees had. White v. Prentiss, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 449.

Depreciated Currency.—A trustee accepting Confederate currency in connection with the execution of his trust, was held liable only on proof of want of diligence and good faith. Blount v. Moore, 54 Ala. 360; Ferguson v. Lowery, 54 Ala. 510; 25 Am. Rep. 718; Sudderth v. McCombs, 79 N. Car. 398; Furr v. Brower, 79 N. Car. 408; Williams v. Williams, 79 N. Car. 411; 28 Am. Rep. 330; Patton v. Farmer, 87 N. Car. 337; Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304; 95 Am. Dec. 389; Brown v. Wright, 39 Ga. 96; Jepson v. Patrick, 39 Ga. 569; Hathorn v. Maynard, 54 Ga. 688; Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194; 97 Am. Dec. 449; Morris v. Morris, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 815. And see Dockery v. French, 73 N. Car. 420; State v. Simpson, 65 N. Car. 497; Schley v. Brown, 70 Ga. 64; Gibbs v. Guignard, 1 S. Car. 359; Mayer v. Mordecai, 1 S. Car. 383; 7 Am. Rep. 26; Fitzsimons v. Fitzsimons, 1 S. Car. 400; 7 Am. Rep. 26; Sanders v. Rogers, 1 S. Car. 452.

A trustee is not responsible for money collected by him in Confederate money during the civil war, which perished on his hands, without fault on his part, when the war terminated. Foscoe v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 440; Crane v. Moses, 13 S. Car. 561.

And the same rule was announced in State v. Engelhard, 70 N. Car. 377, where a master, acting under an order of the court to collect, invested the funds in Confederate bonds, in good faith.

But he is not an insurer. All that is required of him is that he "exercise such care and diligence in respect to the discharge of the trust as, under all the circumstances, having regard to the magnitude of the trust and the interests involved and the consequences of mistake, would be reasonable."¹

A trustee received Confederate money during the war in discharge of his legal duty at a time when it was the common currency of the country, and when prudent business men were receiving it. It was held that he was to be protected, but the facts and circumstances under which it was received, must be clearly and satisfactorily shown as evidence of the good faith and fairness of the transaction. Westbrook v. Davis, 48 Ga. 471.

One holding in trust a fund alleged by him to have been collected in currency since depreciated, but kept separate from his own funds, may discharge his liability by delivering the same without interest. Saunders v. Gregory, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 567.

A Tennessee trustee who, in 1863, in good faith collected a trust fund in Tennessee bank notes, was held to be liable for no more than the value of the funds when received. State v. McAuley, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 424.

A trustee who, in good faith, received Confederate treasury notes in payment of a note held in trust, under the Georgia Act of April 18th, 1863, acted under color of law, and is protected by the act of 1866, and the ordinances of the conventions of 1865 and 1868, and if he invested said treasury notes without proper authority, or lost them by negligence, he will be liable only for their value when received, allowing him a reasonable time to reinvest. Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304; 95 Am. Dec. 389.

A trustee is relieved from liability if he shows that he received Confederate money at a time when it was the common and only currency, and when prudent business men were receiving it, and that it became worthless in his hands. But the burden is on him to make clear and satisfactory proof of the facts and circumstances under which it was received, as evidence of good faith. Venable v. Cody, 68 Ga. 171.

But it was held, in Bell v. King, 70 N. Car. 330, that an executor who collected good notes belonging to the estate, and invested the proceeds in Confederate bonds, was liable for the loss ensuing from the investment. See Coltrane v. Worrell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 434.

And so in the case of a trustee for the benefit of creditors, who, under an order of the court made on his own motion, invested the fund in Confederate securities. Kirkby v. Goodkointz, 26 Gratt. (Va.) 298.

Where money had been safely invested and secured on land, and the trustees collected it in largely depreciated Confederate notes and reinvested in Confederate bonds, which became valueless, the trustees were held liable for the depreciation. Knight v. Watts, 26 W. Va. 175.

The United States Supreme Court held in Mitchell v. Moore, 95 U. S. 587, that a trustee who had invested the trust funds in his own name, and afterward sustained losses through payments made to him in Confederate money could not charge the losses to the estate.

And in Bedinger v. Wharton, 27 Gratt. (Va.) 857, it was held that a trustee selling the farm which he held in trust, and accepting depreciated Confederate money therefor, was guilty of a breach of trust in the absence of an evident necessity for the sale, and the sale was set aside. See Coltrane v. Worrell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 434; Singleton v. Lowndes, 9 S. Car. 465; Moore v. Mitchell, 2 Woods (U. S.) 483.

A trustee is bound to know that the duties of his position require care and fidelity, and he cannot be heard to claim that he did not know, what by the exercise of ordinary diligence, he might have known. What is sufficient to put him on inquiry is notice of what inquiry would have developed. Fast v. McPherson, 98 Ill. 406.

1. Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304; 95 Am. Dec. 389. See Morrow v. Saline County, 21 Kan. 484; Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262; Williams v. Campbell, 46 Miss. 61; Rogers v. Tullos, 51 Miss. 691; McCabe v. Fowler, 84 N. Y. 314; Wilmerding v. McKesson, 103 N. Y. 339; Miller v. Proctor, 20 Ohio St. 442; Fesmire's Estate, 134 Pa. St. 67; 19 Am. St. Rep. 676; Dietz v. Mitchell, 12 Heisk. (Tenn.) 676; Carter v. Rol- land, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333; Perkins v. McGavock, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 265; Mountcastle v. Mills, 11 Heisk. (Tenn.) 267; Moses v. Ocoee Bank, 1 Lea (Tenn.) 398; State v. McAuley, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 424; Rockhold v. Blevins, 6 Baxt. (Tenn.) 115; Robertson v. Sublett, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 313.

Applied to the selection of fire insurance companies for the insurance of the trust property. Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86.

Thus, a trust deed conferring power to select the company in which to insure the trust property, does not relieve the trustee from the exercise of due care, although he will not be deemed to be a guarantor of their solvency. Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86.

However fully a discretionary power of management may have been given, yet if the trustee omit to do what would be plainly beneficial, he will be responsible. Robertson v. Sublett, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 313; Morgan v. Elam, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 375; State v. Union Bank, 9 Yerg. (Tenn.) 119.

A creditor bidding in the debtor's farm at a foreclosure sale, who, against the debtor's protest as to price, sells it for a fair price, the debtor not offering to redeem or producing anyone who will give more, is chargeable only with the price received. Childs v. Jones, 41 N. J. Eq. 74.

A trustee with discretionary powers as to investments is not liable for a loss when he has not been guilty of neglect, and has exercised a sound discretion in good faith. Cromie v. Bull, 81 Ky. 646. He is not responsible for wrongs to the trust estate in which he has no agency. Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215; 44 Am. Rep. 303. And cannot be held liable for losses occurring without his own fault or neglect. Knowlton v. Bradley, 17 N. H. 458; 43 Am. Dec. 609. He will not be responsible for the escape of a slave, part of the subject of the trust, unless negligence is shown. Chaplin v. Givens, Rice Eq. (S. Car.) 132. The trustee will, where the creator of a trust fails to point out the mode for its execution, discharge himself by the exercise of a reasonable diligence and discretion. Hester v. Hester, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 328.

The mortgagee, under a deed, conveyed the property at the mortgagor's request, receiving the purchase-money notes therefor, and held that he was not to be charged, upon a subsequent accounting with the mortgagor, with the amount of the notes where the notes proved worthless, he, himself, being without fault. Turman v. Forrester, 55 Ark. 336.

So in Zimmermann v. Fraley, 70 Md. 561, it was held that a trustee was not to be charged with the loss of the amount of a promissory note, which belonged to his beneficiary, and which had been barred by the statute of limitations when it came into the trustee's possession, and which the maker, upon the trustee's demand, refused either to pay or renew.

The sale at full price by a trustee under a will, of a farm, not deriving its value from any quality or incident which can be entirely destroyed or materially impaired by such a contingency as the construction or non-construction of a public improvement, and only liable to be affected in price by events which operate on the agricultural prosperity of the whole country, where one-sixth of the purchase-money is paid before the delivery of possession, and the lien on the land retained as security for the balance, to be paid in six annual installments, with interest on the whole sum, payable annually, cannot be considered such willful negligence as to subject the trustee to responsibility for subsequent loss. Waring v. Darnall, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 126.

It has been held that the trustee is morally and legally bound to take greater care of trust funds than he takes of his own. He has no right to speculate with trust funds, and every investment in stocks of a railroad, mining, banking, or other private corporation, must be looked upon as an adventure. Nor should railroad bonds, though nominally secured by mortgage on the track and rolling stock, be regarded as real security within any rule adopted or to be adopted. King v. Talbot, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 453.

And a trustee, who wrongfully, or by mistake, pays money to a third person, in the belief that he is thereby relieving the trust property from an incumbrance, will not thereby escape responsibility, in the matter of his trust, to the beneficiaries under the deed; and the cestuis que trustent, in the absence of fraud, are entitled to no relief against the party wrongfully receiving the money. Wasson v. Garrett, 2 Baxt. (Tenn.) 477.

It is the duty of the trustee to keep regular and correct accounts, and if he

He is liable to the estate for any damage which his neglect of duty has caused, whether he has profited by his misconduct or not.¹

b. MISTAKE.—The trustee is not liable for loss resulting from an honest mistake, unless it be such a mistake as no man of ordinary intelligence under like circumstances could make;² and if, acting under legal advice, he has made an innocent mistake in a doubtful point of law, he will not be held accountable.³

4. Duty to Execute the Trust—a. IN GENERAL.—If the trustee has once accepted the obligation and entered upon the execution of the trust, he cannot rightfully lay it down, but may be compelled to proceed and carry out the trust, in accordance with the requirements of the instrument creating it.⁴

fails to do so, every presumption of fact is against him and he assumes the burden of repelling all presumptions that he received all he might have received, and what it was his duty to endeavor to obtain. Landis v. Scott, 32 Pa. St. 495.

What is Neglect?—Failure to Sue.—A trustee is not chargeable with negligence in failing to sue his predecessor for loss resulting from non-payment of taxes, when, at the time he first learned of such non-payment, both the trustee and his surety were insolvent. Peake v. Jamison, 82 Mo. 552. But he must answer for failure to sue whenever the collection of debts of the estate is lost by such neglect. Perry v. Wooton, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 524; Morris v. Morris, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 815.

Failure to Record.—A trustee accepting and acting under the trust, is chargeable with any loss resulting from his neglect to record the trust deed. Cooper v. Day, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 26; Cogbell v. Boyd, 77 Va. 450.

Employment of Incompetent and Ignorant Attorney to Foreclose.—Wake-man v. Hazleton, 3 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 148. Or the employment of a dishonest solicitor under circumstances indicating carelessness. Sutton v. Wilders, L. R., 12 Eq. 373; 41 L. J. Ch. 30.

Failure to Pay Costs.—Pending an action brought by him, a trustee disbursed the funds of the estate, so as to leave nothing in his hands from which to pay a judgment for costs obtained against him. It was held that a judgment might with propriety be rendered against him personally for the amount. Butler v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 24 Hun (N. Y.) 99.

Depositing in a Bank of Known Insolvency.—If, from his own connection with a bank, he is bound to know of its insolvency, and nevertheless, puts trust funds on deposit there, he must answer for loss if the bank fails. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 85 Va. 870.

Failure to Take Security.—A trustee who sells the trust property and fails to take security for the payment of the purchase-money, is liable for any loss resulting. Hurt v. Fisher, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 88.

Delay in Settling Estate.—Where an administrator has inexcusably delayed a final settlement, and the funds of the estate are meanwhile lost through the failure of the broker with whom they have been deposited, he is chargeable with the loss. Wood v. Myrick, 17 Minn. 408.

A trustee who on demand, wrongfully refuses to deliver the trust property, is liable for a loss afterward resulting to it while in his hands. Horry v. Glover, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 515.

Failure to Promptly Collect Claims.—See Westmoreland v. Holland, 19 W. R. 302; Simpson v. Gowdy, 19 Ind. 292; Cross v. Petree, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 413; Neff's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 91; Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215; 44 Am. Dec. 303.

1. Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 433.

Damages cannot be recovered from a trust estate for personal injuries sustained through the negligence of the trustee in relation thereto. Norling v. Allee (B'klyn City Ct.), 13 N. Y. Supp. 791.

2. Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129; Hext v. Porcher, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 170.

3. Vez v. Emery, 5 Ves. 142. See Kimball v. Reding, 31 N. H. 352; 64 Am. Dec. 333; Miller v. Proctor, 20 Ohio St. 442.

4. Sharpe v. San Paulo R. Co., L.

If he holds his position by appointment of a court of chancery, he is subject to the orders of the court appointing him, so long as he retains his office.¹

If he desires to resign and escape further responsibility, and divest himself of the legal estate, he may do so only by virtue of some provision in the instrument of trust, by an order of a court of chancery, or with the consent of all persons interested in the execution of the trust.² He must carry out all the requirements of the instrument under which he acts, unless expressly relieved therefrom by the parties in interest.³

b. APPLICATION FOR INSTRUCTIONS FROM THE COURT AS TO THE CONDUCT OF THE TRUST.—It is always the trustee's privilege to ask and receive of the court having proper jurisdiction, directions as to the policy he shall pursue in the conduct of the trust, and as to the construction to be placed upon the instrument of trust, under which he acts, and it may be added, that in all questions of doubt it is his duty to make this application to the court.⁴

Such a proceeding is not to be instituted prematurely or need-

R., 8 Ch. 597; Armstrong v. Morrill, 14 Wall. (U. S.) 138; Drane v. Gunter, 19 Ala. 731; MacGregor v. MacGregor, 9 Iowa 65; Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland. (Md.) 409; Shepherd v. McEvers, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 136; 8 Am. Dec. 561; Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596; 28 Am. Dec. 451; Cruger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314; Robertson v. Bullions, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 117; Reed v. Allerton, 3 Robt. (N. Y.) 567; Thatcher v. Candee, 33 How. Pr. (N. Y. Ct. App.) 149; Brennan v. Wilson, 71 N. Y. 506; Strong v. Willis, 3 Fla. 124; 52 Am. Dec. 364; Perkins v. McGavock, 3 Hayw. (Tenn.) 265.

Even though no provision is made for his compensation. Switzer v. Skiles, 8 Ill. 529; 44 Am. Dec. 723.

And though the property is situated outside the state. Campbell's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 209; 20 Am. Dec. 360.

Although personal trusts were confided by a will to two executors in such manner, that one alone should not have exercised them, yet if one attempts to do so, he will render himself liable to be brought to account as a trustee. Werborn v. Austin, 77 Ala. 381.

A trustee must faithfully discharge all the duties imposed upon him. Presley v. Ellis, 48 Miss. 574.

1. Latimer v. Hanson, 1 Bland. (Md.) 51.

2. See supra, this title, Resignation and Removal of Trustee.

Walworth, Chancellor, in Cruger v.

Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314. See Ridgeley v. Johnson, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 527; Atty. Gen'l v. Christ's Hospital, 3 Bro. C. C. 165; Henderson v. Sherman, 47 Mich. 274; Matter of Bernstein, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 20; Diefendorf v. Spraker, 10 N. Y. 246.

3. Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 596; 28 Am. Dec. 451.

4. Fraser v. Page, 82 Ky. 73; Trap-hagen v. Levy, 45 N. J. Eq. 448; Griggs v. Veghte, 47 N. J. Eq. 179; Winthrop v. Atty. Gen'l, 128 Mass. 258.

Where he has a reasonable doubt as to the disposition of the funds, he may apply to the court for directions, making the persons interested parties to the proceeding. Hayden v. Marmaduke, 19 Mo. 403; Wheeler v. Perry, 18 N. H. 307; Vanness v. Jacobus, 17 N. J. Eq. 153.

If a will is so ambiguous that a trustee appointed under it is unwilling to take the responsibility of acting, the proper course for him to pursue is to seek the instruction of the court by a suit in equity, and not to render a fictitious account in the probate court for purposes of settling the rights of the parties interested. Lincoln v. Aldrich, 141 Mass. 342.

On such a bill the court will pass upon the validity of a trust in the will for the accumulation of rents and profits. Lorillard v. Coster, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 172; Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318.

lessly. It is only in emergencies where the direction of the court is actually needed that it will assume jurisdiction over this class of proceedings. Thus, it has been held that while the beneficiary of a trust fund is still alive, the court will not instruct the trustees as to what disposition they shall make of the funds upon the termination of the life interest of such beneficiary,¹ and that trustees cannot maintain a bill for instructions in regard to their administration of the fund before they shall have received such fund.²

It has been held, in a recent Massachusetts case, that where the settlor (in this case a testator) left the conduct of the trust entirely to the discretion of the trustees, the court would refuse to instruct them in their conduct of the trust, in the absence of any suggestions that they were liable to abuse the trust, or exercise authority in an arbitrary and capricious manner, and the court

The supreme court has jurisdiction of a bill filed by the executors to obtain the direction of the court in the execution of trusts arising under the will, when the same property is claimed under the will by different parties. Treadwell v. Cordis, 5 Gray (Mass.) 341.

On a bill filed to define the powers of a trustee, the court will define only the trusts and will not order a sale of the property where no adverse right is asserted. Wiswell v. First Cong. Church, 14 Ohio St. 31.

In Reynolds v. Brandon, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 593, a trustee for infants was permitted to seek the direction of the court in reference to a compromise, which called for the raising of funds not provided for in the trust deed.

Where a dispute arises as to whether a deed of trust has ever become operative, a trustee is justified in seeking instructions from the court of equity as to his rights and duties, as between the settlor and the cestui que trust. Fraser v. Davie, 11 S. Car. 56.

Wherever there is a bona fide doubt as to the true meaning of the instrument creating the trust, and as to the course which the trustee ought to pursue, he may always maintain a suit in equity, at the expense of the trust estate, to obtain a judicial construction of the trust instrument, and directions as to his conduct, and if he faithfully obeys such instructions, he will be relieved of all responsibility therefor. State v. Netherton, 26 Mo. App. 414.

The trustee may wait until a bill is brought against him, or may bring a bill asking the direction of the court. Dimmock v. Bixby, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 368.

Where a will, under which the trustee is appointed, directs him to make investments upon trusts and limitations of doubtful validity, and ambiguous in their terms as to the rights of the parties, he may appeal for direction to the court of equity. Heald v. Heald, 56 Md. 300.

A trustee appointed to sell property, cannot make application of the proceeds without the direction of the court. Tilly v. Tilly, 2 Bland (Md.) 436.

Where a dispute has arisen as to whether a trust deed has ever become operative, the trustee may properly apply to the court of equity for instructions as to his duties as between the settlor and the cestui que trust under the deed. Fraser v. Davie, 11 S. Car. 56.

Chancery will assist and protect trustees in the performance of trusts committed to them, whenever they seek the aid and direction of the court as to the establishment, management, or execution of them. Trotter v. Blocker, 6 Port. (Ala.) 269; Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland (Md.) 409.

1. Bullard v. Chandler, 149 Mass. 532.

2. Bullard v. Atty. Gen'l, 153 Mass. 249.

A trustee cannot maintain a bill in equity to obtain the instructions of the court, as to what will be his powers and duties in case a corporation, in the stock of which the trust fund is invested, shall carry out a contemplated sale of all their property to a new corporation, taking payment in shares of the new corporation, to be distributed among the old stockholders, and to adds: "The judgment of this court cannot be substituted for the discretion of the trustee, reasonably and fairly exercised."¹

The trustee will not be permitted to seek advice of the court upon a mere question of law about which he should have consulted an attorney, or, if necessary, tested the question by an action at law.²

5. Duty to Care for the Trust Property—a. POSSESSION AND SAFE KEEPING.—Upon accepting the trust, it becomes at once incumbent on the trustee, whenever his duties in any sense involve the custody of the estate or responsibility for it, to enter into possession. The moment his responsibility for its safe keeping begins, he should assume control, for he will not be heard thereafter to say in his defense that he has not yet entered into possession.³

restrain the corporation from making such sale. Treadwell v. Salisbury Mfg. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 393; 66 Am. Dec. 490.

A proceeding in equity to obtain the direction of the court, will not be entertained if needlessly or prematurely instituted. Dodge v. Morse, 129 Mass. 423.

1. Proctor v. Heyer, 122 Mass. 525, citing Amory v. Greene, 13 Allen (Mass.) 413, and Walker v. Shore, 19 Ves. 392.

2. Greene v. Mumford, 4 R. I. 313.

3. Perry on Trusts, § 438; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 163; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 674 et seq.; Young v. Miles, 10 B. Mon. (Ky.) 290; Mayfield v. Kilgour, 31 Md. 241; Speakman v. Tatem, 48 N. J. Eq. 136; Mosely v. Marshall, 22 N. Y. 200; Matthews v. McPherson, 65 N. Car. 189; Hall's Appeal, 133 Pa. St. 351; Campbell v. Prestons, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 396.

Particularly if the beneficiary be a woman. Wickham v. Berry, 55 Pa. St. 70.

Where, from the nature of the trust, the ownership of the cestui que trust is not immediate and absolute, and it would defeat, or put in his power to defeat or endanger, a legitimate ulterior limitation of the trust, he is not entitled to call for the legal estate. Battle v. Petway, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 576; 44 Am. Dec. 59.

Provided he commits no breach of the peace, a trustee may lawfully take the property of his cestui que trust wherever he can find it, and it is immaterial that its form has been changed. Brush v. Blanchard, 19 Ill. 31.

He takes possession of personalty at once. If there are notes or choses in action, it is his duty to give immediate notice of his possession to all parties in interest. Judson v. Corcoran, 17 How. (U. S.) 614; Stewart v. Kirkland, 19 Ala. 162; Foster v. Mix, 20 Conn. 395; Presley v. Stribling, 24 Miss. 527; Murdoch v. Finney, 21 Mo. 138; Pace v. Pierce, 49 Mo. 393; Matter of Barker, 6 Wend. (N. Y.) 509; Western R. Co. v. Nolan, 48 N. Y. 513; Northampton Banks v. Balliet, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 311; 42 Am. Dec. 297; Fisher v. Knox, 13 Pa. St. 622; 53 Am. Dec. 503; Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204; Barney v. Douglass, 19 Vt. 98. See also Parsons v. Boyd, 20 Ala. 112; Schley v. Lyon, 6 Ga. 530; Thompson v. Ford, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 418; Murphy v. Moore, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 118.

A trustee of chattels is entitled to the possession after sale for the purpose of delivering them to the purchaser, and may bring an action, either of replevin or trover, when the possession is withheld. Pace v. Pierce, 49 Mo. 393.

If a fund is placed in trust for the sole and separate use of A, with power of disposition by will or deed to take effect at his death, he cannot recover the fund from the trustee. Barkley v. Dosser, 15 Lea (Tenn.) 529.

Where slaves are conveyed by deed of trust to a trustee "or his legal representative," for the sole use and benefit of the grantor's unmarried daughter and her children forever, the legal title of the trustee does not cease at the death of the daughter leaving children, and if the original trustee resigns and another trustee is appointed by the court in his stead, the death of the substituted trustee does not invest the

His ownership of the legal title enables him to maintain the right to possession in any court of law, and he may recover in ejectment even against his cestui que trust, for a court of law will not go behind the legal title to inquire into the equities.¹ And unless forbidden by the instrument of trust, it is his duty to bring suit to recover the possession of the property, if possession is denied him.²

So it is his duty to retain his control of the trust property. He may not part with it needlessly, nor yield control of it, and for doing so he must answer out of his own estate.³ He must guard children with a legal title. Williams v. McConico, 36 Ala. 22.

Where slaves are conveyed to trustees for the use of a feme covert, the title does not pass to the beneficiary on possession being surrendered, but remains in the trustee, and detainee for the slaves should be in his name. Martin v. Poague, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 524.

Where a person holds personal property in trust for A, during her life, and after her death for her children, and the property is delivered into A's possession, the trust is not so executed that the trustee cannot maintain an action in his own name against a stranger, for the property. Wynn v. Lee, 5 Ga. 217. But compare Cook v. Kennerly, 12 Ala. 42, in which it was held that where slaves are conveyed in trust for the use of a person, the beneficiary is entitled to the possession to make the use effectual, unless the deed expressly declares him to be entitled only to the profits, and the trustees are not justified in withholding possession from him by the fact that the deed purports to convey the slaves to them "in their actual possession."

1. Sedgwick & Wait on Trial of Title to Land, § 222; Reece v. Allen, 10 Ill. 236; 48 Am. Dec. 336; Kirkland v. Cox, 94 Ill. 400; Kirkpatrick v. Clark, 132 Ill. 342; 22 Am. St. Rep. 531; Essex County v. Durant, 14 Gray (Mass.) 447; Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204; Roe v. Reade, 8 T. R. 118.

A trustee can be only divested of the right of possession of the trust property by a decree of a court of equity, or with his own consent. Guphill v. Isbell, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 230; 19 Am. Dec. 675.

It was held in Tyler v. Herring, 67 Miss. 169; 19 Am. St. Rep. 263, that where the trust deed provided that "upon default of payment of the debt secured, the trustee shall immediately take possession, and having given notice, sell the land conveyed," this language was intended to give the trustee the right of possession, but did not make such taking possession a condition precedent to the power of sale. See also Vaughn v. Powell, 65 Miss. 402.

2. See Huckabee v. Billingsley, 16 Ala. 414; 50 Am. Dec. 183; Sinking Fund Com'rs v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143; 38 Am. Dec. 433; Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204.

The trustee may recover in ejectment lands affected by the trust, even as against his beneficiary. Kirkpatrick v. Clark, 132 Ill. 342; 22 Am. St. Rep. 531. See also Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204; Cearnes v. Irving, 31 Vt. 606.

Where it was stipulated in a deed that a slave was to be thereafter conveyed in writing to a trustee, to the separate use of a married woman, and was put into the possession of the trustee for another purpose, but afterward it was formally agreed, by the seller and the trustee, that the latter was thenceforth to be invested with the title to the negro (he not being present, however, at the time), it was held that the trustee was at least the bailee of the former owner, and as such was entitled to recover the possession against one wrongfully withholding him. Thompson v. Bryan, & Jones (N. Car.) 340.

Under a deed conveying certain lots to trustees "for the use of the neighborhood in general for an English Protestant school, and for no other use or uses whatsoever," the trustees are the proper parties to preserve the trust; and it was held to be error to award to the city of Philadelphia any portion of the fund, because a portion of the space embraced in "the neighborhood in general" had been afterward incorporated within the city limits. Stallman's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 200.

3. See supra, this title, Delegation of the property intrusted to him with the same jealous care which a prudent man bestows upon his own.¹

(1) Protection and Preservation—(a) In General.—If the funds of the trust estate are lost by theft, robbery, accident, or default of agents and employés engaged in the performance of purely ministerial duties, the trustee is exonerated if he be able to show that he has exercised the same care which men of prudence ordinarily use in their own business.²

If the title to the property in his keeping is assailed, he must Powers and Duties, and infra, this title, Co-trustees; Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185; Kinloch v. O'On, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 190; 26 Am. Dec. 196; White v. Baugh, 2 Russ. & M. 215; 9 Bligh 181; 3 Cl. & F. 44; Salway v. Salway, 2 Russ. & M. 218; Clough v. Bond, 3 Myl. & C. 496; Matthews v. Brice, 6 Beav. 239.

Neither the attorney for trustees charged with a public trust, nor one of the trustees acting as attorney for the others, may consent, in the absence of express authority, to a decree which has the effect of taking the trust out of the hands of the trustees, or of placing the execution of it, in whole or in part, in other hands. Vose v. Trustees, etc., 2 Woods (U. S.) 647.

A trustee holding an insurance policy as security for a debt, is bound to hold the money received on the policy until the debt is due. Fergus v. Wilmarth, 17 Ill. App. 98.

Although the terms of a trust may seem to contain an unqualified direction to the trustee to pay over the money to the cestui que trust, yet the trustee is to exercise discretion on that subject, and he is not to place money, or whatever he may furnish, directly in the hands of a beneficiary, who is incapable of using it for himself. Mason v. Jones, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 229.

In Ingle v. Partridge, 32 Beav. 661, a trustee who authorized his solicitors to withdraw trust funds from the bank, was held liable for the loss resulting from the solicitors' misapplication of the money. See also Rowland v. Witherden, 3 M. & G. 568; Ghost v. Waller, 9 Beav. 497.

One to whom, in common with others, a deed is made as a trustee of a religious society, is seised to the use of the society, and has not such an interest in the land as would authorize him to withhold the deed from those from whom he had received it. Stoker v. Yerby, 11 Ala. 322. But compare

McKnight v. McKnight, 10 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 157. In this case, A conveyed negroes to trustees to hold in trust for the use of his wife and children. It was held that the mere fact that the trustees permitted the property to remain in the possession of A, for the benefit and support of his wife and children, whereby it was lost, did not show such a breach of trust as would render the trustees responsible for the loss.

1. See supra, this title, The Duty of Diligence.

2. See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813 et seq. As to default of agents employed, see supra, this title, Delegation of Powers and Duties.

Loss by Theft.—Thus, Hill says: "Where from necessity or convenience a trustee is justified in keeping any part of the trust property in his possession, and without any negligence on his part it is lost by robbery, he will not be held responsible for the loss, but will be allowed the amount in passing his accounts, and this amount may be proved by the trustee's own affidavit, for it would frequently be difficult to obtain any other proof." Hill on Trustees, p. 573. And this dictum is approved in Seawell v. Greenway, 22 Tex. 691; 75 Am. Dec. 794. See Flint on Trusts, § 339.

Freedom from negligence or fault will exonerate him from blame for loss by theft. Campbell v. Miller, 38 Ga. 304; 95 Am. Dec. 389; State v. Meagher, 44 Mo. 356; 100 Am. Dec. 298; Foster v. Davis, 46 Mo. 268; Fudge v. Durn, 51 Mo. 266; Stevens v. Gage, 55 N. H. 175; 20 Am. Rep. 191; Furman v. Coe, 1 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 96; Litchfield v. White, 7 N. Y. 438; 57 Am. Dec. 534; Neff's Appeal, 57 Pa. St. 91; Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544; 34 Am. Rep. 721; Jones v. Lewis, 2 Ves. 240; Morley v. Morley, 3 Ch. Cas. 2.

In Jones v. Lewis, 2 Ves. 240, the defend it in court and out, as though it were his own. He may expend the trust funds in the employment of counsel for this purpose,¹ as well as for legal advice generally.² If this property is levied on, or suit is brought against it, he must be diligent in the assertion of his beneficiaries' rights, and in making all necessary claims of exemption on their behalf.³ And when the trustee is trust funds were stolen from the solicitor into whose hands the trustee had put them, and the trustee was released.

The case of Morley v. Morley, 3 Ch. Cas. 2, was one where the trustee was held not responsible for a loss of trust funds from robbery by his servant.

The loss in Stevens v. Gage, 55 N. H. 175; 20 Am. Rep. 191, occurred from the burglary of an executor's safe, and the trustee was exonerated.

So held in Carpenter v. Carpenter, 12 R. I. 544, where bonds belonging to an estate were stolen from the vault of the bank where the trustees had deposited them.

And in Christy v. McBride, 2 Ill. 75, the loss occurred through the dishonesty of a collector appointed by the administrator.

In Wilkinson v. Dodd, 40 N. J. Eq. 123, it appeared that the managers of a certain savings bank had been directed, by a court of chancery, to invest certain funds on deposit in the bank in government bonds and other specified securities. They made the investments as ordered, and delivered the securities to certain New York bankers, who converted them into money, and afterward failed. The receiver of the savings bank obtained from the New York bankers a sum of money, in consideration for which he released them from further liability, and then brought suit in equity against the managers of the savings bank for the loss growing out of the difference in value between the money so obtained, and the securities that had been misapplied. It was held that the managers were guilty of a breach of trust, and that the release of the New York bankers did not affect the liability of the savings-bank managers, except as to the amount which the New York bankers refunded. See also Dodd v. Wilkinson, 41 N. J. Eq. 566.

Loss by Unavoidable Accident.—If the casualty is such a one as ordinary prudence and caution could not have foreseen, or ordinary diligence prevented, the trustee will be held free from blame for the loss resulting therefrom to his estate. State v. Meagher, 44 Mo. 359; 100 Am. Dec. 298; Mikel v. Mikel, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 220; Jenkins v. Plombe, 6 Mod. 181; Wightwick v. Lord, 6 H. L. Cas. 234.

Runaway Slaves.—In Mikel v. Mikel, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 220, and Chaplin v. Givens, Rice Eq. (S. Car.) 132, the trustee was held to be free from responsibility where he had used due care to prevent their escape.

Loss by Fire.—The loss by fire resulting from no fault on the part of the trustee, he will be held blameless. Croft v. Lyndsey, 2 Freem. Ch. 1.

Loss by Forgery.—It has been held that a trustee is bound to pay to the right person, and that if he is deceived by a forgery he must make good the loss. Eaves v. Hickson, 30 Beav. 136.

By Unforeseen Casualty.—In Bosio's Estate, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 437, the decedent left an ostrich which died while in the charge of the administrator. The administrator was exonerated, although he suffered four months to elapse without offering the bird for sale, it appearing that the bird could have been sold meanwhile only at a sacrifice, and that the delay was apparently to the advantage of the estate.

1. Gooding v. Gibbes, 17 How. (U. S.) 274; Matter of Autenreith, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 200; Wood v. Burnham, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 513; Western R. Co. v. Nolan, 48 N. Y. 513.

2. Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.) 154. See infra, this title, Accounting.

On being informed of proceedings affecting their title to the trust estate, it is the right and the duty of trustees to interpose, and on failure to do so, they are concluded by the determination made in such proceedings, although they may not have been parties to the record. Burr v. Bigler, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 177.

3. Parker v. Portis, 14 Tex. 166.

Where suit has been brought against the trust property, it is the trustee's duty to either defend it or give notice to the cestui que trust, and if the cestui que trust is a married woman, he exempt from attachment or garnishee process,¹ he is bound to claim such exemption by way of defense, or failing so to do, suffer judgment to pass against himself personally.²

Where it is in his power, by the expenditure of trust funds, to prevent a foreclosure and sale of the lands held in trust, and he allows the sale to be made and the land to be sacrificed, he is guilty of a breach of trust, and will be held accountable for the loss.³

(b) Repairs—Waste.—The trustee must not suffer the estate to waste or diminish,⁴ or fall out of repair, and while he will not be allowed, upon his own responsibility, to erect costly improvements, must notify her husband also. Dozier v. Freeman, 47 Miss. 647.

A trustee who is sued on a title hostile to his cestui que trust, must show that he acted in good faith, and that the cestui que trust knew of the suit, in order to protect himself by the recovery against him. Mackey v. Coates, 70 Pa. St. 351.

1. See GARNISHMENT, vol. 8, p. 1147; Cockey v. Leister, 12 Md. 124; 71 Am. Dec. 588; Bentley v. Shrieve, 4 Md. Ch. 412; Farmers' Bank v. Beaton, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 421; 28 Am. Dec. 226; Hinckley v. Williams, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 490; 48 Am. Dec. 642; Hoyt v. Swift, 13 Vt. 129; 37 Am. Dec. 586.

2. These are purely matters of defense, of which the trustee should avail himself by motion, pleadings, or proof, at some stage of the attachment proceeding before the final judgment. Groome v. Lewis, 23 Md. 137; 87 Am. Dec. 563.

3. Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475.

4. First Nat. F. Ins. Co. v. Salisbury, 130 Mass. 310.

Duty to Prevent Waste.—In general, the trustee must keep the principal intact, and not pay over to his cestui que trust, or for his use, any but the income of the fund, until properly authorized so to do. Cornwise v. Bourgum, 2 Ga. Dec. 15; Arthur v. Master in Equity, 1 Harp. Eq. (S. Car.) 47; Haigood v. Wells, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 59; Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333.

But if the property in trust is chargeable with the support of the cestui que trust, and produces income insufficient therefor, or to pay the taxes and necessary charges, it may be sold by order of the court. In re Herring, 35 N. J. Eq. 359.

The trustee should obtain the approval of the court before incurring expenses impairing the principal of the trust fund; but where a court can clearly see that the expenses incurred were necessary, they will be allowed just as if leave had been granted on application before incurring them. Hatton v. Weems, 12 Gill & J. (Md.) 83; Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215; 44 Am. Dec. 303.

A trustee will be chargeable with the amount of the capital disposed of by him under an order directing him to pay over the income of the fund, but in no case to diminish the principal. Arthur v. Master, Harp. Eq. (S. Car.) 47. The trustee of the legal estate in fee may maintain an action of waste against an equitable tenant for life, and in such suit need not name himself trustee. Woodman v. Good, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 169.

Anticipation of Income.—Where property is devised in trust for the support of the children of the testator out of the principal and income, with remainder over at their death, the trustee cannot anticipate the principal or income. In such case, the trustee may expend the money in their support, or pay it over to them to be applied by themselves. Van Vechten v. Van Veghten, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 104.

A trustee, though restricted in the expenditure of the income of the trust money, may, in an emergency, be justified in expending more than the profits of the current year, as where there is a drought and consequent failure of crops, or unusual sickness, making it necessary to incur heavy medical bills; yet in such case he must aver and prove the evidence of the emergency, and render a full account. Downey v. Bullock, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 102.

A trustee justified by the urgency of the case in encroaching upon the principal of the trust, is entitled to he may, if in the possession of general powers, expend upon repairs whatever is reasonably necessary to the preservation of the trust property.¹ When, however, the nature of the trust does not involve the trustee's custody of the estate, he cannot be held for its waste or destruction. Responsibility cannot be thrust upon him where it was evidently not contemplated in the creation of the trust. A mere repository of the title, having no right of possession, is not subject to the liabilities incident to possession and control.²

Where the intermediate estate has terminated and the need of his custody as trustee no longer continues, he must at once surrender his possession to the one entitled thereto under the terms of the trust.

(2) Depositing Funds in Bank.—The depositing of funds in bank is a natural and often a necessary incident to the care of a trust estate. The rule that whatever diligence is customary, in the care of funds, by a man of ordinary prudence, will be required of have it replaced out of the first accruing income. Morton v. Adams, 1 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 72.

A trustee is justified in using the interest, or even a portion of the principal of the fund placed in his hands for accumulation, in trust for a minor until he arrives at full age, for the maintenance and education of the child, where there is no other property adequate for these purposes, and the minor is an orphan of tender age and there is no devise over, and no third person interested in the fund. In re Potts, 1 Ashm. (Pa.) 340.

1. See Lewin on Trusts, pp. 574, 575, 576; Perry on Trusts, § 477 et seq.

As to the power and duty to make repairs, see Woodard v. Wright, 82 Cal. 202; Parsons v. Winslow, 16 Mass. 361; Watts v. Howard, 7 Met. (Mass.) 478; Sohier v. Eldredge, 103 Mass. 351; Mayfield v. Kilgour, 31 Md. 241; Smith v. Gibson, 15 Minn. 66; Kearney v. Kearney, 17 N. J. Eq. 59; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 26; 7 Am. Dec. 475; Herbert v. Herbert, 57 How. Pr. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 333; Matter of Odell, 1 Conn. (N. Y.) 94; Randall v. Dusenbury, 63 N. Y. 645; Hepburn v. Hepburn, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 74; Downey v. Bullock, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 102; Mannix v. Purcell, 46 Ohio St. 102; 15 Am. St. Rep. 562; Williams v. Smith, 10 R. I. 280; Fontaine v. Pellet, 1 Ves. Jr. 337; Atty. Gen'l v. Geary, 3 Mer. 513; Bridge v. Brown, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 181; Gilliland v. Crawford, 4 Ir. Eq. 35.

Where a trustee materially improves the estate, under the honest belief, with reasonable grounds for that belief, that it is his own property, and the amount received from the sale of the land is increased in consequence of such improvements, he is entitled to the excess, but no more. Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355.

If a trustee deems that the interest of his cestui que trust requires repairs to the estate before he comes of age, the trustee will be authorized to repair, Kearney v. Kearney, 17 N. J. Eq. 59; and a trustee with full power to manage the trust estate, which consists of realty, may so contract for repairs that the one furnishing them may acquire and enforce a mechanic's lien. Cheat-ham v. Rowland, 92 N. Car. 340.

It was held in Parsons v. Winslow, 16 Mass. 361, that the expense of putting in tenantable repair an estate purchased by the trustee, must be charged on the principal fund; while that of keeping it in repair is to be deducted from the income.

It was held, however, in Busse v. Schenck, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 12, that unless authorized or impelled by pressing necessity, the trustee could not bind the estate by a contract for repairs.

As to the power to erect improvements, see infra, this title, Accounting.

2. Unless he has received the trust property, he is not liable to account for the profits and hire thereof while in possession of one of the cestuis que trust. Tucker v. Cocke, 32 Miss. 184.

If the owner of an estate, as well as the trustee, is in fault, the latter is not a trustee, extends to the depositing of the funds in bank. In the absence of negligence on his part, the trustee will be shielded from liability for losses growing out of the failure of the bankers.¹

Indeed, it has been held to be a neglect of duty on the part of the custodian of trust funds, to fail to deposit them in bank.² But funds are not to be kept in bank for an unreasonable period of time.³

This doctrine is by no means universal, the decisions in some instances going so far as to make the fiduciary an insurer of the funds in his hands, and holding him to a strict accountability for all that are lost in banks and in investments.⁴

Of course the consent of the settlor to this disposition of the fund, will relieve the trustee from responsibility.⁵ And there is no culpable negligence in leaving the funds in the bank selected chargeable with the utmost that might have been made out of the estate. Miller v. Whittier, 31 Me. 577.

Where a trust is created for life with remainder over, the trustee must deliver to the remainder-men. Haddock v. Perham, 70 Ga. 572.

1. 2 Story Eq. Jur., § 1269; Hill on Trusts 573; Lewin on Trusts 295; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535. See Perry on Trusts, § 443; Atterberry v. McDuffee, 31 Mo. App. 603; State v. Greensdale, 106 Ind. 364; 55 Am. Rep. 753; Naltner v. Dolan, 108 Ind. 500; 58 Am. Rep. 61; Norwood v. Harness, 98 Ind. 134; 49 Am. Rep. 739; McCabe v. Fowler, 84 N. Y. 314; France v. Woods, Tamil. 172; Wilks v. Groome, 3 Dr. 584; Horsley v. Chaloner, 2 Ves. 85; Clough v. Bond, 3 Myl. & C. 490; Rowth v. Howell, 3 Ves. 564; Adams v. Claxton, 6 Ves. 226; Jones v. Lewis, 2 Ves. 241; Belchier v. Parsons, Ambl. 219; Massey v. Banner, 1 Jac. & W. 248; Swinfen v. Swinfen, 29 Beav. 211; Churchill v. Hobson, 1 P. Wms. 243; Fenwick v. Clarke, 31 L. J. Ch. 728; Knight v. Earl of Plymouth, 3 Atk. 480.

Where there was no necessity for placing the funds in the banker's hands, the trustee must answer for his failure. Darke v. Martyn, 1 Beav. 525; Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178; Lowry v. Fulton, 9 Sim. 115; Moyle v. Moyle, 2 Russ. & M. 710; Gibbins v. Taylor, 22 Beav. 344.

Failure of Bank on Account of War.—In Crane v. Moses, 13 S. Car. 561, the court held a trustee exempt from liability, where the funds had been deposited before the war in a bank of high standing, and the bank failed on account of the losses resulting from the civil war. See also Parsley v. Martin, 77 Va. 376; 46 Am. Rep. 733.

But if he place the trust-money in a bank which he knows to be insolvent, he is responsible for such gross negligence. Whitehead v. Whitehead, 85 Va. 870.

Money deposited at a small rate of interest, under a restriction against withdrawal except on two weeks' notice, is a deposit nevertheless, and if lost the trustee is not liable in the absence of negligence in choosing the bank. Saw's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 499; 14 L. R. A. 103. And if free from negligence, the trustee will not be held liable, although the money was deposited on time upon a certificate of deposit. In re Hunt, 141 Mass. 515.

2. Dalrymple v. Gamble, 68 Md. 156; Baskin v. Baskin, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 94; Johnston's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 129.

3. Horsley v. Chaloner, 2 Ves. 84; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535; Cann v. Cann, 51 L. T. N. S. 770; Moyle v. Moyle, 2 Russ. & M. 710.

4. See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813.

For example, a trustee, who was charged to see that the funds "be securely invested," and who allowed them to remain for two years as an investment in the bank where they were when he was made trustee, was held accountable for the loss when the bank failed. Matter of Knight's Estate (Supreme Ct.), 4 N. Y. Supp. 412; 21 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 388.

5. An assignee having deposited to his own account, in a bank then in good credit, a balance decreed payable to his assignor, notified him to come and receive it; but the latter, without communicating with the assignee, directed the bank to retain the balance on inand used by the settlor, unless the trustee has reason to doubt its solvency.¹

(3) *Confusion of Funds—Conversion.*²—The trustee may not deposit the funds in his own name,³ nor put them beyond his control.⁴ If he does either of these things any loss that accrues therefrom must be borne by him.

If he deposits trust funds in his own name and confuses them with his own deposits, a presumption arises in reference to the withdrawal of moneys by check, whereby he will be deemed to have drawn out his own in preference to the trust money. The terest without change of account. He received interest on it for some time, when the bank failed. It was held that the assignee was not responsible for the loss. Heckert's Appeal, 69 Pa. St. 264.

1. Hanbest's Appeal, 92 Pa. St. 482; Dorchester v. Effingham, 1 Taml. 279; Rowth v. Howell, 3 Ves. 565.

2. See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 835. See also, infra, this title, The Duty of Good Faith—Using the Trust for Personal Gain—Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Following the Trust Property.

3. The deposit of trust funds should be made in bank to the credit of the fund. If the trustee deposits them in his own name and loss occurs, he is liable. Phillips v. Lamar, 27 Ga. 227; 73 Am. Dec. 731; Gilbert v. Welsch, 75 Ind. 557; 2 Lead. Cas. in Eq. 1085; Naltner v. Dolan, 108 Ind. 500; 58 Am. Rep. 61; Norris v. Hero, 22 La. Ann. 605; Jenkins v. Walter, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 218; 29 Am. Dec. 539; School Dist. v. First Nat. Bank, 102 Mass. 174; Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194; 97 Am. Dec. 449; Atterbury v. McDuffee, 31 Mo. App. 603; Matter of Stafford, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 353; Brown v. Ricketts, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 303; 8 Am. Dec. 567; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Summers v. Reynolds, 95 N. Car. 404; Shaw v. Bauman, 34 Ohio St. 25; McAllister v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 536; Law's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 499; Mason v. Whitthorne, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 242; Williams v. Williams, 55 Wis. 300; 42 Am. Rep. 708; Massey v. Banner, 1 Jac. & W. 241; Wren v. Kirton, 11 Ves. 377; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Madd. 73; Robinson v. Ward, 2 Car. & P. 59; 12 E. C. L. 28; Macdonnell v. Harding, 7 Sim. 178.

4. See Perry on Trusts, §§ 443, 445; White v. Baugh, 2 Russ. & M. 215; 9 Bligh 181; 3 Cl. & F. 44; Salway v. Salway, 2 Russ. & M. 215.

Thus, the deposit must be in the ordinary course of business, subject to withdrawal on demand and free from the control of any other person. Perry on Trusts, § 443; Salway v. Salway, alias White v. Baugh, 2 Russ. & M. 215; 9 Bligh 181; 3 Cl. & Fin. 44.

If the deposit is made under an agreement that it is to be repaid at a future day, and is not to be subject to call meanwhile, it is at the trustee's risk. Baskin v. Baskin, 4 Lans. (N. Y.) 94.

But where the deposit is made, rather as an investment than as a deposit proper, as upon a time certificate of deposit, he has been held exempt from liability for loss, in the absence of negligence. In re Hunt, 141 Mass. 515.

So in Law's Estate, 144 Pa. St. 499, where money was deposited at interest under a stipulation against withdrawal except upon two weeks' notice, it was held that the trustee was not liable unless he was negligent in the selection of a bank.

It is a breach of duty for a trustee to surrender securities after accepting the trust, without the consent of the cestui que trust. Jacques v. Fackney, 64 Ill. 87. Compare Wilkinson v. Stewart, 30 Ill. 48.

The administrator who permits a business firm of which he is a member to have control of the funds of the estate, is guilty of a gross breach of trust. Forsyth v. Woods, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 484.

If the trustee lends money to a bank on interest upon personal security, it has been held that he will be held liable, that being a security disapproved by the court. Darke v. Martyn, 1 Beav. 525.

It has been held that where a trustee deposits trust funds with a banker merely on personal security, while he exacts a bond for his own money, he is guilty of gross negligence and liable trust fund will thus be preserved intact so far as possible. The rule charging the money first drawn out against the money first deposited, has no application to such a case.¹

Funds deposited to the trustee's individual account remain subject to the trust, and are not liable to appropriation by the trustee's personal creditors, in the event of his failure,² unless the bank or bailee be shown to have had notice of the fiduciary character of the deposit.³

The deposit when made must be identified and kept clear of all other funds.⁴ The confusion of property is held to be conversion, for losses resulting from the banker's failure. Anonymous, Loft 492.

1. See infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Following the Trust Property; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54; Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332; Baker v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 100 N. Y. 31; 53 Am. Rep. 150; Importers, etc., Nat. Bank v. Peters, 123 N. Y. 272; North Dakota Elevator Co. v. Clark (N. Dak. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 175; Continental Nat. Bank v. Weems, 69 Tex. 489; 5 Am. St. Rep. 85; In re Hallett's Estate, 13 Ch. Div. 696.

2. Jenkins v. Walter, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 218; 29 Am. Dec. 539.

3. Ex p. Cooke, 4 Ch. Div. 123.

In School Dist. v. First Nat. Bank, 102 Mass. 174, it was held that a bank having received trust funds without notice of the existence of the trust, could apply such deposits to the payment of the trustee's personal debts. And see Thacher v. Pray, 113 Mass. 291; Lime Rock Bank v. Plimpton, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 159; 28 Am. Dec. 286.

4. Coffin v. Bramlitt, 42 Miss. 194; 97 Am. Dec. 449; In re Stafford, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 53; Case v. Abeel, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 393; Kellett v. Rathbun, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 102; Hooley v. Gieve, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 8; 9 Daly (N. Y.) 104; Gunter v. Jones, 9 Cal. 643; Harrison v. Smith, 83 Mo. 210; 53 Am. Rep. 571; Sanders v. Forgasson, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 249; Draper v. Joiner, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 612; 49 Am. Dec. 719; Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Mer. 29. See also California Code, § 7236; Dakota Civ. Code 1306.

If he has deposited trust funds in his own name, he is liable if the bank fails. Lunham v. Blundell, 4 Jur. N. S. 3; Wren v. Kirton, 11 Ves. 377; Fletcher v. Walker, 3 Madd. 73; Wilkinson v. Bewick, 4 Jur. N. S. 1010; Massey v. Banner, 1 Jac. & W. 241; Pennell v.

Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 386; In re Speight, 22 Ch. Div. 727; Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Mer. 29; Jenkins v. Walter, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 218; 29 Am. Dec. 539; Com. v. McAlister, 28 Pa. St. 480; 30 Pa. St. 536; Matter of Stafford, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 353. But see Crane v. Moses, 13 S. Car. 561.

Liability of Trustee for Conversion.—In a suit by a beneficiary against his trustee for conversion, the beneficiary is entitled to recover the value of his property at the time of the conversion, and not merely the present value of the property for which the trust property was exchanged. Cushman v. Bonfield, 139 Ill. 219, affirming 36 Ill. App. 436.

It has been held that where the trustee has confused trust and personal property, the cestui que trust may claim all that the trustee cannot positively identify. Morrison v. Kinstra, 55 Miss. 71; Lewin on Trusts 297.

Where a trustee takes an outstanding title in his own name and employs in part funds of his own, the burden is on him to show the amount, and if he fails, the cestui que trust will take the entire estate. Ward v. Armstrong, 84 Ill. 151.

In Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332, the court, by Alvey, C. J., said: "So long as a trust fund can be traced, the court will always attribute the ownership thereof to the cestui que trust, and will not allow the right to be defeated by the wrongful act of the trustee in confusing the trust fund with funds of his own or even those of a third party. The true owner of a fund traced to the possession of another, has a right to have it restored, not as a debt due and owing, but because it is his property wrongfully withheld from him. And it can make no manner of difference whether the fund be traced into a bank account, the possession of an individual, or into the

and the trustee who converts the estate to his own use must answer for every dollar of loss, and both funds will be treated as trust property, except so far as the trustee may be able clearly to distinguish his own.¹ Interest will be exacted of him² in case of loss, and, if there be any profits, whatever profits he realizes out of the investment belong to the trust estate.³

Where he has converted the trust funds to his own use by investing them in his own name, he will be held to a strict accountability for the conversion, and the trust will follow the investment.⁴

For any irregular or improper purpose to which he may have hands of a firm composed of many individuals, if the essential facts are shown by which the identification of the fund can be established and no superior rights of innocent third parties have intervened."

Costs.—A trustee who has mingled the trust fund with his own property, and in rendering his account has neglected to charge himself with the full amount due from him, is not entitled to have the costs of a bill in equity, instituted by him for the purpose of obtaining a discharge from the further execution of the trust, allowed out of the fund; but will be charged with the payment of the expenses of taking the account. Bogle v. Bogle, 3 Allen (Mass.) 158.

1. Snorgrass v. Moore, 30 Mo. App. 232.

An administrator who is guilty of a tortious conversion to his personal use of the property of an estate intrusted to his care as an administrator, is chargeable with the highest value of the property so taken by him. Irby v. Kitchell, 42 Ala. 438.

2. Mitchell v. Moore, 95 U. S. 587; Gordon v. West, 8 N. H. 455; Knowlton v. Bradley, 17 N. H. 458; 43 Am. Dec. 609. See infra, this title, Interest.

He will be charged at least the highest legal rate of interest, even though their safety has not been endangered. Morgan v. Morgan, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 353.

3. See infra, this title, Profits and Losses.

4. See infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Following the Trust Property.

Dejarnette v. Dejarnette, 41 Ala. 708; Harrison v. Smith, 83 Mo. 210; 53 Am. Rep. 571, overruling Mills v. Post, 76 Mo. 426; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 20 N. J. Eq. 141; Morris v. Wallace, 3 Pa. St. 319; 45 Am. Dec. 642; Stanley's Appeal, 8 Pa. St. 431; 49

Am. Dec. 530; McAllister v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 536.

So held where the loss finally occurred through payments made to him in Confederate money. Mitchell v. Moore, 95 U. S. 587.

Where a trustee deposits the trust funds in a bank and takes a certificate of deposit therefor, payable to himself, he will be held responsible for loss caused by the bank's failure, although the instrument creating the trust directed the deposit of the money in that bank. Corya v. Corya, 119 Ind. 593.

Where chattels are conveyed in trust to secure the payment of a note, and the trustee sells the property and mingles the proceeds with his own funds, he may be compelled to pay the trust fund to the holder of the note. National Park Bank v. Halle, 30 Ill. App. 17; aff'd in 140 Ill. 413.

The rule that property purchased with the trust funds will, at the option of the beneficiaries, be declared to be held in trust for them, although the trustee may have taken title in his own name, and intended the purchase for his own benefit, is applicable to a purchase by a father, appointed guardian of his infant child, made with funds belonging to the estate of the child. Durling v. Hammer, 20 N. J. Eq. 220.

If a trustee wrongfully converts a trust fund into another species of property, the cestui que trust will be entitled to it. But otherwise, where such conversion is made by the creator of the trust, who himself stands in no fiduciary relation. In this case the title to the property thus wrongfully purchased with the trust fund, is in the purchaser. Hawthorne v. Brown, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 462.

Where a trustee buys land in his own name and pays for it out of trust money in his hands, a court of equity will fasten a trust upon the land in favor of the persons beneficially entitled to the

put the funds, he must answer as though he had appropriated them to his personal use, and a strict accounting will be exacted of him.¹ Such misfeasance is ground for his removal, no matter what may be the terms of his appointment or the extent of the discretion granted him in the instrument of trust,² and he may be prosecuted for embezzlement for fraudulently appropriating trust property to his own use.³

(4) Insurance.—Failure to keep the property insured in a responsible company is not consistent with ordinary care in the management of the trust estate; the trustee is bound to take this precaution against loss.⁴

money, and the cestuis que trustent have a right to the estate. Pugh v. Pugh, 9 Ind. 132.

Where a trustee purchases an estate partly with his own and partly with the trust money, the cestui que trust, on establishing the fact, will have a lien on the whole estate for the whole amount of the trust funds thus misapplied. Munro v. Collins, 95 Mo. 33.

1. A trustee who has made an improper use of trust funds may be forced to bring them into court at an earlier date than, under other circumstances, he would be obliged to pay them to the cestui que trust. Clagett v. Hall, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 80.

A trustee who assigns a bond belonging to the trust estate as security for his private debt, commits a breach of trust, and the trustee will be responsible for the value of the bond at the time of the assignment with interest, though the obligor has since become insolvent. Van Rensselaer v. Morris, 1 Paige (N. Y.) 13.

The rule that a trustee will not be permitted to claim that trust property purchased by him was so purchased for his individual benefit, applies to property which, though purchased as trust property, was bought for the purpose of performing the trust. The presumptions are against a trustee who mingles any such property with his own. Woodruff v. Boyden, 3 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 29.

If he speculates with the trust funds, he must account for the profits, if successful, and for interest, if the speculation fails. Norris' Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 106.

If a person who has the management of the property of another, so confounds it with his own that it cannot be distinguished, all the inconvenience from the confusion must be borne by him, and if it is a case of damages, they will be given to the utmost value of the property. Brackinridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 377; 20 Am. Dec. 123.

Where a trustee of slaves mingles them with his own, and has them work on his own plantation, the cestui que trust is entitled to a fair hire for their services, and is not bound to receive for their services the profits which accrued from the plantation by their labor. Johnson v. Richey, 4 How. (Miss.) 233.

A trustee who has confounded trust money with other funds, does not become a mere debtor, but by his wrongful conduct consents to be treated as a debtor or trespasser, at the option of the cestui que trust. Gunter v. Janes, 9 Cal. 643.

A trustee lending the funds of the trust, on a note and mortgage, executed to himself individually, is guilty of a devastavit, at the election of the cestui que trust. DeJarnette v. DeJarnette, 41 Ala. 708.

An executor cannot use the trust funds to purchase property in his own name. The property so purchased belongs to the trust estate. Paschall v. Hinderer, 28 Ohio St. 568. And the trust follows the property into the hands of the purchasers with notice. Morgan v. Fisher, 82 Va. 417.

2. See supra, this title, Resignation and Removal of Trustee.

A testamentary trustee who deliberately mingles the trust funds with his own, and withholds from his beneficiaries information as to the investment of them, will be removed, though he is the testator's son and the father of the cestuis que trustent, and though the will directs him to pay to them the income, from time to time, as he thinks best, and exempts him from giving bonds. Sparhawk v. Sparhawk, 114 Mass. 356.

3. See EMBEZZLEMENT, vol. 6, p. 482.

4. Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.)

(5) Taxes.—And so with the taxes. Ordinary diligence requires the payment of all legal taxes assessed against the property in trust,¹ and the redemption from tax sale, as well as resistance of all suits to enforce taxes illegally assessed. Taxes are chargeable to income rather than to capital.²

b. INVESTMENT.—(See INVESTMENT, vol. 11, p. 813.)

c. PROFITS AND LOSSES.—Under the rule requiring diligence in the custody of the trust estate, the trustee must use all ordinary care to make the trust remunerative to his cestui que trust. He must not allow the property to lie idle, nor make reckless investments of the fund. But he is not an insurer as to the rents and profits, and, in the absence of neglect, will be held blameless if the estate fails to produce the income of which it is capable, and will be held only for sums actually received.³

154; Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509; Garvey v. Owens, 12 N. Y. Supp. 349.

But the following English cases fail to sustain this proposition: Bailey v. Gould, 4 Y. & C. 221; Ex p. Andrews, 2 Rose 410; Dobson v. Land, 8 Hare 216; Fry v. Fry, 27 Beav. 146.

Touching the power and duty to insure, Perry says: "A trustee would probably be justified in insuring the property, and, in case of loss, the insurance money would belong to the cestui que trust." Perry on Trusts, § 487. See Lerow v. Wilmarth, 9 Allen (Mass.) 382.

And Lewin says: "A trustee would, it is conceived, under special circumstances and in due course of management, be justified in insuring the property." Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 580.

In the following cases it is held that a trustee has the right to procure insurance and is justified in doing so, although there is no obligation on him, in the absence of express directions, to insure at all. Columbia Ins. Co. v. Lawrence, 2 Pet. (U. S.) 25; Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509; Page v. Western M. & F. Ins. Co., 19 La. 49; Putnam v. Mercantile Marine Ins. Co., 5 Met. (Mass.) 386; Goodall v. New England Ins. Co., 25 N. H. 186; Swift v. Vermont Mut. F. Ins. Co., 18 Vt. 313; Craufurd v. Hunter, 8 T. R. 13.

Where a trustee has full power to select the company or companies in which to insure the trust property, he is to be held merely to the exercise of due care to select solvent companies or those generally so considered, not as a guarantor of their solvency. Gettins v. Scudder, 71 Ill. 86.

1. See infra, this title, Accounting; Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.) 154.

2. See infra, this title, Accounting—Capital and Income.

All gains made by the trustee by a wrongful appropriation of the trust funds go to the beneficiary, while all losses are borne by the trustee. Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 401.

3. See article by Russell Duane in 30 Am. Law Reg. 569, on "Liabilities Arising out of Employment of Trust funds in Partnerships." Profits belong to the trust. Brown v. Ricketts, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 303; 8 Am. Dec. 567; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Sharp's Estate, 2 Phila. (Pa.) 280; Wasson v. English, 13 Mo. 176; Stidger v. Reynolds, 10 Ohio 351; Hill v. Cooper, 8 Oregon 254. See also California Code 7237; Dakota Civ. Code 1307; Georgia Code 2332.

Appreciation of currency in the trustee's hands or while loaned out by him, inures to the benefit of the cestui que trust. Clarke v. Anderson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 99.

Where the taking of an account of the profits of certain slaves held in trust was referred to a master, and the trustee, having admitted the character of the slaves, brought forward no evidence of the actual value of their labor, he was charged with the usual rate of hire. Stroman v. Rottenburg, 4 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 288.

A trustee is chargeable with all the rents and profits which by reasonable effort he could have received. Mansfield v. Alwood, 84 Ill. 497.

Where an agent or trustee makes no

d. ACCOUNTING—(1) In General.—The trustee is bound to effort to secure a tenant for land of his principal, but occupies it himself, he will be chargeable with the highest rent which could have been obtained. Landis v. Scott, 33 Pa. St. 495.

Where a trustee is required to invest the trust fund in United States bonds, or on real-estate security, his liability for the failure to invest the fund is measured by the interest he might have obtained on real-estate security of the proper character. Andrews v. Schmitt, 64 Wis. 644. See also Williams v. Williams, 35 N. J. Eq. 100; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192.

Where an administrator purchasing land or other property with the money of the estate, afterward resells it at a profit, the benefit of the purchase inures to the estate, and not to himself individually. Mosley v. Lane, 27 Ala. 62; 62 Am. Dec. 752.

In Williams v. Williams, 35 N. J. Eq. 100, a testator gave $55,000 out of his bonds and mortgages for the support of his daughter, and directed the trustee, his son, to keep the money invested, and pay her the interest and so much of the principal as might be needed for her support. The trustee bought a house with the money, and accounted only for the rents derived therefrom, which were less than the fund would have produced if invested at the legal rate of interest. It was held that he must also account for the difference between the rents received by him from the house, and the legal interest on $55,000. This, on the authority of Eckford v. DeKay, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 89.

A trustee who has trust funds in his hands sufficient to purchase at a sheriff's sale for the estate, especially if such funds are mixed with his own, and which, in the exercise of an honest discretion, he would be justified in so applying, and who does so purchase, is liable to account to the cestui que trust for any profit made on the transaction, the same as if he had bought as trustee. Frank's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 190.

A trustee is bound to exercise only ordinary care over the property of the cestui que trust in his possession, and he is not chargeable with rents and profits which he did not and could not receive. Bath Paper Co. v. Langley, 23 S. Car. 148.

Trustees for creditors cannot be held responsible as tenants for more than the profits afterward received, there being no pretense of negligence, malversation, or fraud. Hamburg Mfg. Co. v. Edsall, 7 N. J. Eq. 298. See also Wilcox v. Bates, 45 Wis. 138; Hoyle v. Bailey, 58 Wis. 435.

One coming wrongfully into possession of an estate ought not to be spared, and ought to be charged to the extent of what it was capable of producing; but if he enters rightfully, his actual income, if he can show what it is, will determine the extent of his liability. The same principle applies where the party in possession, under circumstances which are held to convert him into a trustee, believes that the right of property is in himself, and has been misled by the belief that he was not liable to account, and consequently has kept no account. Johnson v. Lewis, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 157.

A bond was executed by the trustee to appropriate a bond and mortgage held by him in an official capacity for certain purposes. It was held that he was accountable for only such money as he might receive and collect thereon without default on his part, and not for the whole amount mentioned in the bond and mortgage. Staats v. Burden, 30 N. J. L. 131.

A trustee who was unable to find a purchaser for trust property and received no rents for it, was held not to be liable for estimated rents. Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476.

A trustee of land, on a purchaser's abandonment and rescission of the contract of the sale thereof, is not to be required, under a decree, to convey the land to a cestui que trust, and pay over to him likewise the purchase-money received. This is not a part of the rents and profits. Mansfield v. Alwood, 84 Ill. 497.

One who, being chargeable as trustee, sells land, may be held for its real value, although selling for less. Hardin v. Eames, 5 Ill. App. 153.

Where a trustee has wrongfully transferred property, he is liable to the cestui que trust for the profits realized by him, even though such profits are in excess of the actual value of the property. Parker v. Straat, 29 Mo. 616.

It was held in Darling v. Harmon, 47 Minn. 166, that if a mortgagee, under an absolute deed with an unrecorded defeasance, should exchange the mortgaged premises for other land which he render an account to his cestui que trust at all reasonable times upon demand.¹ He must show actual receipts and expenditures.

The fact that the management of the funds has been left by the terms of the trust to the discretion of the trustee, will not exempt him from accounting for his conduct of it.² He must account for all money and property which he has received, or with due diliafterward sells, he is chargeable on accounting with the mortgagor for the full value of the land received in exchange, even though he did not realize that value upon selling it.

When a trustee confessedly has received property and has sold it and received the proceeds, he is accountable for those proceeds. He should show what the property brought, and if he fails to do this, he will be charged with the highest value that a jury can put upon the property under the evidence. Morton's Estate, 7 Phila. (Pa.) 484.

1. In general, see supra, this title, Possession and Safe Keeping—Protection and Preservation. See also infra, this title, Insurance; Profits and Losses; Interest; Perry on Trusts, § 821; Green v. Brooks, 81 Cal. 328; Hottel v. Mason, 16 Colo. 43; Dill v. McGehee, 34 Ga. 438; Poullain v. Poullain, 76 Ga. 421; Dole v. Olmstead, 36 Ill. 150; 85 Am. Dec. 397; Smith v. Townshend, 27 Md. 368; 92 Am. Dec. 637; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 23 N. J. Eq. 493; Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 367.

The principles upon which trustees and other fiduciaries will be held to account for the trust fund, are stated in Davis v. Harman, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 194; Myers v. Zetelle, 21 Gratt. (Va.) 733.

The burden of proof is upon him to make out with reasonable certainty any defense for failure to account which he may have. So held in Montgomery v. Coldwell, 14 Lea (Tenn.) 29, where the defense set up was a loss by fire twelve years before.

Equity has jurisdiction to enforce an accounting and a surrender of trust property, where the time for an accounting and surrender by the trustee has arrived, and he refuses. Weaver v. Fisher, 110 Ill. 146.

The removal of a trustee, under a power reserved in the deed of trust, will not, per se, operate to release such discharged trustee from liability to account. Clarke v. Deveau, 1 S. Car. 172.

Where a decedent's estate is seriously involved, and one of his sons, who was also his partner in business, undertakes the management of the estate, at the request of the other heirs, without any formal administration or settlement in court, because that course was thought to be best for the credit of all parties; and where the various transactions of the estate were undertaken with the advice and consent of the other heirs, and all his dealings have been in the best faith, he will not be required, upon final settlement of his trust in court, to produce formal vouchers of all his transactions. Groom v. Thompson (Ky.), 16 S. W. Rep. 369.

A, a feme covert, applied to the superior court to have B appointed trustee of certain slaves, claimed as her separate estate. B assented to the order, and accepted the trust, taking possession of the property. In a suit at the instance of A, the cestui que trust, it was held that B could not deny the trust, and set up title in the husband of A to the negroes, in order to secure himself from accounting. Duncan v. Bryan, 11 Ga. 63.

It has been held in Maine, that where rent is paid in repairs, the trustee may omit it from his account. Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172.

M, as trustee, had possession for several years of the property of the complainants without any general accounting. It was held that they could maintain a bill against him, praying for a detailed account, and for the delivery of the property, the trust having terminated. Dill v. McGehee, 34 Ga. 438. But a stranger cannot compel an accounting. McCabe's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 427.

Though the sale of certain real estate was unnecessary, yet, the trustee in his management of the estate having procured it, must account, as trustee, for the purchase-money he received. Loveman v. Taylor, 85 Tenn. 1.

It is every trustee's duty, who submits his readiness to account, to file with his answer a statement of his account. Booth v. Sineath, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 31.

2. Libbett v. Maultsby, 71 N. Car. 345.

gence might have received.¹ His accounts must be accurate and complete, for all points of doubt and uncertainty will be construed against him.² And he cannot, by delaying or attempting to defer a settlement, keep the cestui que trust out of the enjoyment of the property to which he is entitled.³ If the accounts of

1. B conveyed certain real estate to C, to be sold by him for not less than $800, to pay a debt which B owed him. C sold the property without the consent of B for $400. It was held that he had violated the trust and was liable to the extent of $800, the limited price. Cadwell v. Brown, 36 Ill. 103.

A mortgagee under a deed absolute on its face, with an unrecorded defeasance, who exchanges the mortgaged premises for other lands, which he then sells, is chargeable, on accounting with the mortgagor, for the full value of the land received in exchange, though he did not realize that amount on selling it. Darling v. Harmon, 47 Minn. 166.

For personal property which has come to the hands of a testamentary trustee, where it does not appear how he disposed of it, he must account or be charged with the appraised value thereof. Boyer's Appeal, 125 Pa. St. 164.

Trustees with power to sell real estate must account for the deposit forfeited by the purchaser who fails to complete his purchase. Campbell v. Johnson, 1 Sandf. (N. Y.) 148.

The rules which control a court of equity in compelling a trustee to account in cases where he has used the fund for his own advantage are discussed in McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 136; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192.

For all assets coming into his hands wrongfully and retained by him, he is accountable, as well as for profits thereon. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S. Dak. 388; Wasson v. English, 13 Mo. 176.

2. Hottel v. Mason, 16 Colo. 43; In re Gaston's Trust, 35 N. J. Eq. 60; Elmer v. Loper, 25 N. J. Eq. 482; Veghte v. Steele, 35 N. J. Eq. 348; Dufford v. Smith, 46 N. J. Eq. 216; Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 214; 16 Am. Dec. 648; Pearse v. Green, 1 Jac. & W. 135; Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Mer. 40; White v. Lincoln, 8 Ves. 363; Chedworth v. Edwards, 8 Ves. 46; Lupton v. White, 15 Ves. Jr. 432; Oltley v. Gilby, 8 Beav. 602; Horton v. Brocklehurst, 29 Beav. 504;

Cramer v. Bird, L. R., 6 Eq. 143; Talbot v. Marshfield, L. R., 3 Ch. 622.

When a testamentary trustee has made certain accountings to the legatees, with the knowledge and approval of the legatees, if he has proceeded on an erroneous basis, and yet has funds enough to correct the errors of distribution, the legatees are not estopped to demand such correction, but the trustee cannot be held personally liable for any loss. Bowditch v. Ayrault (Sup. Ct.), 17 N. Y. Supp. 281.

Where one, standing in possession as trustee, neglects to keep proper accounts of his expenditures, the remuneration will be made according to the lowest estimate. McDowell v. Caldwell, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 43; 16 Am. Dec. 635.

Where the trustee states no account before the masters, refuses to produce his books of accounts before them, except such as he is compelled by the court to produce, and renders no aid to the masters in stating the accounts, he cannot afterward show error in their finding on certain items, which there is evidence to justify, by producing other of his books. Ahl's Appeal, 129 Pa. St. 26.

A trustee who keeps no separate account of the trust fund, but mixes it with his own money, is liable to account for it in case of loss. Moore v. Mitchell, 2 Woods (U. S.) 483.

If a person who is in possession of an estate and claiming to be the agent of the owner, neglects to keep a proper account of the income and expenditure thereof, the master, in stating an account, may reject that presented by the trustee, and, taking into consideration the whole evidence, exercise a sound discretion, in charging and allowing him what shall appear to be reasonable. Miller v. Whittier, 36 Me. 577.

A trustee must keep and render accurate accounts, and omissions therefrom, inimical to the interest of his cestui que trust, give rise to presumptions against him which are decisive, unless overcome by collateral proofs establishing his perfect fairness. Hottel v. Mason, 16 Colo. 43.

3. See Collins v. Covington, 84 Ga. 129.

the trust become lost through his carelessness, he should be compelled to bear any injuries consequent upon such loss.¹

While it is true, however, that all doubts are decided against him in case of deficient accounting, he will be held for no more than actual receipts and profits where, in neglect of his duty, he has failed to render a complete and accurate report of his trust.²

If he has made legitimate expenditures upon the request of the cestui que trust, he will be permitted to show the payments so made by him and have his accounts credited to that extent.³

(2) Settlement and Release.—A settlement with the cestui que trust, fairly made, will relieve the trustee from liability upon an accounting, or for any breach of trust of which he may have been guilty.⁴ Such a settlement cannot be made with a beneficiary who is not sui juris, nor with one who acts in ignorance of any material fact.⁵ By whomsoever made, it will be scrutinized with great care by the courts, and, if any unfair dealing is apparent, will not stand, but the trustee will be required to render a true and complete account of his trust.⁶

1. In re Gaston's Trust, 35 N. J. Eq. 60; Elmer v. Loper, 25 N. J. Eq. 482.

2. Hoile v. Bailey, 58 Wis. 434. A trustee in the possession of slaves, the trust property, and managing them in good faith, will be charged with the actual profits only, though he has neglected to render annual accounts. Rainsford v. Rainsford, McMull. Eq. (S. Car.) 16.

3. Lowe v. Morris, 13 Ga. 165.

4. See infra, this title, Waiver and Estoppel; Pope v. Farnsworth, 146 Mass. 344; Clark v. Law, 22 How. Pr. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 426; Anderson v. Simms, 29 S. Car. 247; 13 Am. St. Rep. 711; Blackwood v. Borrowes, 2 Con. & L. 459; French v. Hobson, 9 Ves. 103; Wilkinson v. Parry, 4 Russ. 272; Small v. Attwood, 2 Y. & J. 517; Cresswell v. Dewell, 4 Giff. 465.

A cestui que trust may, by a formal release, discharge any of the trustees from liability for a violation of the trust. Cocks v. Barlow, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 406.

A resulting trust in land purchased with the wife's money in the husband's name, is discharged by her general release, executed to him after their separation, in consideration of $800 and certain furniture. Moss v. Moss, 95 Ill. 449.

A release to an executor of all claims for the releasor's portion of the testator's personal estate, will not discharge the executor's liability for a fund which the former holds as trustee testamentary, and to which the releasor has become entitled by the terms of the trust. Hanson v. Worthington, 12 Md. 418.

An agent of the cestui que trust has no power to release a trustee from his duty; and where such agent, without authority, surrenders to the trustee the declaration of trust and procures a conveyance of the trust estate, the equity of the cestui que trust is not thereby affected. Fast v. McPherson, 98 Ill. 496.

5. See 2 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 851; Briers v. Hackney, 6 Ga. 419; Jones v. Lloyd, 117 Ill. 597; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; 91 Am. Dec. 177; Shortell's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 25.

6. 2 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 851; Matter of Taggard's Estate, 16 N. Y. Supp. 629; 62 Hun (N. Y.) 618; Schoch's Appeal, 33 Pa. St. 351; Stewart's Estate, 140 Pa. St. 124; Alexander v. Solomon (Tex. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 906. See also Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 90; Crocker v. Pierce, 61 Me. 58.

A settlement with a feme covert is prima facie evidence of its own accuracy and only liable to overthrow by proof of errors. Similar settlements with a person sui juris are conclusive. Smith v. Thomas, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 116.

Where a trustee sets up a release from his cestui que trust, he has the burden of showing that the transaction is perfectly fair in every respect and clear from all suspicion. Jones v. Lloyd, 117 Ill. 597.

The trustee may not impeach his own settlement.¹ The burden of proving a settlement and discharge is on the trustee.²

(3) Capital and Income.—In the rendition of accounts, it is often necessary to see that income accounts are kept separate from principal or capital accounts. This is true where the trust is of a dual nature, and the principal is to be kept intact for the use of the remainder-man, while the income must be devoted to the use of the immediate beneficiary. Instances illustrating the rules governing the apportionment of funds as capital and income are cited in the notes.³

A settlement between a trustee and the beneficiary will not estop the beneficiary from impugning a prior sale of an estate in the purchase whereof the trustee had become interested; the beneficiary not being then aware of such interest. Pearson v. Taylor, 37 Iowa 331.

No settlement is binding until the cestui que trust has been put in full possession of all facts affecting the state of the trust and the trustee's accounts. Diller v. Brubaker, 52 Pa. St. 498; 91 Am. Dec. 177.

A release and discharge of the trustee, executed by all parties in interest and fairly and justly obtained, will operate to discharge him from all parties interested who are sui juris, and as to them, the Statute of Limitations begins to run from the date of the release. Anderson v. Simms, 29 S. Car. 247; 13 Am. St. Rep. 711.

Trustees cannot be excused from rendering an account of the income to the executors of the beneficiary, on the ground of an alleged settlement with the beneficiary, during her life, although such a settlement might exonerate them from vouching the items of an old and long standing account. Rieben v. Hicks, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 136. But compare Ferguson v. Lowery, 54 Ala. 510; 25 Am. Rep. 718, where it was held that where no fraud appears, the courts will be slow to disturb settlements voluntarily made without litigation, although the parties to the settlement stand in the confidential relation of guardian and ward, or trustee and cestui, where the controversies adjusted grew out of transactions during the late civil war.

A bill by the infants attacking the settlements of the trustee on the ground that certain improper allowances had been made to him, and asking to have his accounts reopened and examined, can only be treated as an original bill to falsify and surcharge the accounts, and cannot be entertained in the absence of any allegation or proof of fraud in obtaining the decrees of confirmation. Vaccaro v. Cicalla, 89 Tenn. 63.

Where a cestui que trust, in negotiating with her trustees for a settlement, renounces all confidence in them, and acts exclusively on the advice of personal friends and advisers, specially chosen by her to make investigations, and counsel her, a compromise entered into between her and the trustees, who during the investigation acted in good faith, and disclosed everything within their knowledge, will not be set aside on the ground that the trustees did not impart all the knowledge which they might have acquired by diligent and skillful search. Colton v. Stanford, 82 Cal. 351; 16 Am. St. Rep. 137.

1. Jones v. Butler, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 641.

2. Dufford v. Smith, 46 N. J. Eq. 216.

3. In general, see Merritt v. Jenkins, 17 Fla. 593; Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172.

Capital and Income.—Thus, in Matter of Lawrence's Estate (Surr. Ct.), 7 N. Y. Supp. 332, where the interest of a trust fund was payable as income to a life beneficiary, and the securities in which the fund had been invested had sold at a profit, it was deemed error to credit the profit to the income account, as it was a gain to the principal, to which it should be added, to go eventually to the one entitled to receive the corpus.

A testamentary trustee who is directed to pay the entire income of a fund to A for life, with an annuity to B, during the continuance of the trust, and who, after the death of B, pays the annuity to his legal representatives, by the direction of A, out of the income, is entitled to credit for it in his account, although, by the true construction of the will, the annuity terminated on the death of B. Weston v. Jenkins, 128 Mass. 562.

Where a part of a trust fund consisted of notes of an insolvent estate, a part of which estate was applied in settlement of the notes, it was held that the loss should be ratably apportioned between principal and income. Veazie v. Forsaith, 76 Me. 172.

Where a fund or estate is given in trust for infants, with a valid limitation over at the decease of such infants, the court has no authority to break in on the corpus of the gift for the infant's support, maintenance, or advancement. Deen v. Cozzens, 7 Robt. (N. Y.) 178.

Where a trustee is appointed for the education and maintenance of children, his right over the property extends only to the income of the funds, it being the executor's right to retain the funds. Hall v. Cushing, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 395; Longley v. Hall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 124.

F. conveyed property to a trustee in trust to pay her the income annually for life, and at her death to convey the estate to her heirs. It was held that the court would not, on her application, empower the trustee to apply a part of the principal to her use, unless her necessity was fully shown. Matter of Fero, 9 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 85.

Cestuis que trustent who are life tenants may claim the whole income, unless needed for the payment of debts. The executors may properly retain the accruing income until the settlement of the estate, and when they pay over to the trustees, their account should distinguish between the capital and income. Taxes and interest on debts remaining unpaid after a year from the granting of letters testamentary are properly chargeable to the income. Ex p. Bailey, 13 R. I. 543; Dufford v. Smith, 46 N. J. Eq. 216; Hepburn v. Hepburn, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 74; Booth v. Ammerman, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 129.

In Van Blarcom v. Dager, 31 N. J. Eq. 783, it was held, as between the life tenant and the remainder-man, that the premium upon certain gold coin belonging to the testator's estate was part of the corpus, and not of the income.

No expense incurred by a cestui que trust of a fund for life, nor debts contracted by him, nor penalties resulting from his acts, can be paid out of the income after his death, even though the persons upon whom the trust estate devolved were his own children, claiming not through him, but under the provisions of the trust. Buckingham's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 105.

Where the declarant of a trust for the life of the beneficiary fails to apply the rents and profits to the use of the beneficiary as provided in the declaration, his liability incurred thereby is personal, and is not a lien on the remainder held by the declarant in the property, to take effect on the death of the beneficiary, though the declaration provides that in case of a sale there shall be an equitable lien on the proceeds. MacArthur v. Gordon, 5 N. Y. Supp. 513; 52 Hun (N. Y.) 615.

Upon a bill in equity brought by a residuary legatee to enjoin a testamentary from defraying certain expenses for repairs, etc., out of the residuary fund, and to recover his alleged share of such expenditure so made by the trustee for twenty-three years, and annually attested and "approved" by the legatee, the bill alleging that the complainant had given his approval of such previous accounts under a mistake as to his rights, but not suggesting that he was misled by any conduct on the part of the trustee, or that he labored under any mistake of fact, it was held that, although the will could not properly be construed to charge such expenses upon the residuary fund, the accounts were not open to revision in that regard. Amory v. Lowell, 104 Mass. 265.

Where the trustee of an estate held in trust has been obliged to pay taxes upon an unproductive investment received by him from his predecessor, this expense is not to be deducted from the income of other and productive investments, but may be regarded as a charge upon the principal of the unproductive investment. Stone v. Littlefield, 151 Mass. 485.

Net and Gross Income.—A testator by his will gave to his wife "the use and income" of all the residue of his estate "during her natural life," at her death "all my said estate then remaining to be divided equally between my two sisters," and appointed a trustee to hold and manage the estate during the life of his wife, "collecting the income for her so far as may be necessary to secure the same to her sole and separate use, and pay the same to her upon her sole receipt." This was held to entitle the wife to the net income only, of the estate. Stone v. Littlefield, 151 Mass. 485.

Where a manufacturing establishment was held in trust, the person entitled to the present income was held to be exclusively liable for debts contracted in conducting the establishment, the estates in remainder deriving no advantage from such expenditures. North American Coal Co. v. Dyett, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 9.

A trustee must pay assessments, interest on incumbrances, and repairs out of the income. Hepburn v. Hepburn, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 74.

Commissions due on a trust fund should be paid out of the income, and are not chargeable on the general estate. Booth v. Ammerman, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 129.

The person entitled to the annual income of an estate held in trust, should bear the expenditures necessary for the clothing and food of the negroes, overseer's wages, and other annual expenses of the plantation held in trust, and they are not a charge on the corpus of the trust estate. Tupper v. Fuller, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 170.

Where trust funds of which the income, interest, or profits are given to one person for life, and the principal bequeathed over upon the death of the life tenant, are invested, either by the trustees, or at the death of the testator, in stock or shares of an incorporated company, the value of which is made up in part of an accumulated surplus or undivided earnings laid up by the company, such additional value is part of the capital, and this, as well as the par value of the shares, must be kept by the trustee untouched for the benefit of the remainder-man; but the earnings on such capital, as well as upon the par value of the shares, belong to the life tenant. And when there is a declaration of an extra dividend out of the earnings or profits of the company, such extra dividend belongs to the life tenant, unless part of it was earnings carried to account of accumulated profits or surplus earnings at the testator's death, or at the time of the investment, if made since his death, in which case so much must be considered as part of the capital. VanDoren v. Olden, 19 N. J. Eq. 176; 97 Am. Dec. 650.

When funds are held in trust for the use of one person for life and to go to another in remainder, and a loss of a part of the fund occurs, arising out of the insufficient security of a particular investment, the life tenant and remainder-man bear such loss in the proportion which the principal sum involved in the insufficient security bears to the interest due upon it, at the time when the security is realized upon, and the amount of the loss determined. Hagen v. Platt, 48 N. J. Eq. 206.

Whereshares of stock are bequeathed in trust for a life tenant with remainder over, new shares and the profits thereof received by the trustees for the shares bequeathed, upon the stock of the corporation being increased, are treated as principal, not as income passing to the life tenant. Greene v. Smith, 17 R. I. 28.

Where a part of the original franchise and property of a corporation is sold, and the proceeds distributed among its stockholders as a dividend, this dividend, as between life tenant and remainder-man, is capital, and not income. Vinton's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 434; 44 Am. Rep. 116.

The holder of the life estate may claim so much of such new stock and proceeds as represents the surplus earnings between the testator's death and the offer of new stock, but no more than the dividends duly declare. Greene v. Smith, 17 R. I. 28.

Certain shares of corporate stock were bequeathed in trust, to pay over the dividends of said stock to another during her life, the remainder to the trustee absolutely. Thereafter the corporation increased its capital stock to represent profits actually invested in extending and perfecting its plant, and distributed the new shares ratably among the holders of the old. It was held that the new shares represented capital, and not income; and therefore the trustee was entitled, as against the life tenant, to hold the new shares received by her, subject to the same trust as the old, and with the same right of remainder. Gibbons v. Mahon, 136 U. S. 549, affirming 4 Mackey (D. C.) 130.

The property of a corporation consisted altogether of realty; a part of it was taken by eminent domain. It was held that the compensation therefor, if distributed as a dividend to stockholders, should be chargeable as capital, not income, of a trust fund invested in the shares. Heard v. Eldredge, 109 Mass. 258; 12 Am. Rep. 687.

Cash dividends and all earnings are to be treated as income, not capital. Reed v. Head, 6 Allen (Mass.) 174; Rand v. Hubbell, 115 Mass. 461; 15 Am. Rep. 121; Cogswell v. Cogswell, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231; Ware v. McCandlish, 11 Leigh (Va.) 623.

The rule is that corporate dividends paid out of earnings and profits, are treated as income, while what are termed stock dividends are deemed to be capital. See extended note to Moss' Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 264, in 24 Am. Rep. 169-172, citing Balch v. Hallet, 10 Gray (Mass.) 402; Minot v. Paine, 99 Mass. 101; 96 Am. Dec. 705; Daland v. Williams, 101 Mass. 571; Leland v. Hayden, 102 Mass. 542; Clarkson v. Clarkson, 18 Barb. (N. Y.) 646; Simpson v. Moore, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 637; Lord v. Brooks, 52 N. H. 72; Earp's Appeal, 28 Pa. St. 368; Hooper v. Rossiter, 1 McClel. 527; In re Barton's Trust, L. R., 5 Eq. 238.

In Rand v. Hubbell, 115 Mass. 461; 15 Am. Rep. 121, the court, by Gray, C. J., said: "Money earned by a corporation is corporate property, and not the separate property of the stockholders, unless and until distributed among them by the corporation. In the absence of any restraining statute, the corporation may treat it and deal with it, either as an increase of its business, or as profits of its business. So long as the corporation holds it as part of the corporate property, it is capital of the corporation, and the interest therein, represented by each share, is capital and not income of that share, as between the tenant for life and remainder-man, legal or equitable, thereof. When a distribution of such earnings is made by the corporation among its shareholders, the question whether such distribution is an apportionment of additional stock, or a division of profits, depends upon the substance and intent of the action of the corporation, as shown by its votes."

Money paid to compensate a corporation, whose property consisted of a wharf and dock, for part of its real estate taken by right of eminent domain, if distributed as dividend to the shareholders, belongs to the capital, and not to the income of the trust funds invested in the shares. Heard v. Eldredge, 109 Mass. 258; 12 Am. Rep. 687.

In Van Doren v. Olden, 19 N. J. Eq. 176; 97 Am. Dec. 650, the court, by Zabriskie, Ch., after discussing a number of authorities in point, announced the rule to be, that, "Where trust funds, of which the income, interest, or profits are given to one person for life, and the principal bequeathed over upon the death of the life tenant, are invested either by the trustee, or at the death of the testator, in stock or shares of an incorporated company, the value of which consists in part of an accumulated surplus or undivided earnings laid up by the company, such additional value is part of the capital; that this, as well as the par value of the shares, must be kept by the trustee intact for the benefit of the remainder-man; but the earnings on such capital, as well as on the par value of the shares, belongs to the life tenant. When an extra dividend is declared out of the earnings or profits of such company, such extra dividend belongs to the life tenant, unless part of it was earnings carried to account of accumulated profits or surplus earnings at the death of the testator, or at the time of the investment if made since his death; in which case, so much must be considered as part of the capital."

In Hartley v. Allen, 4 Jur. N. S. 500, a large sum of money, the proceeds which a corporation had derived from the sale of new shares of stock issued by it, was ordered to be divided ratably among the stockholders. It was held that the life tenant of certain of the old shares was not entitled to any part thereof. And in Brander v. Brander, 4 Ves. 800, a dividend of the surplus capital or reserve profit of the bank, ordered by the company to be divided ratably among the stockholders, was not treated as a part of the corpus in which the life tenant took no interest.

See also Hooper v. Rossiter, 13 Price 774; Maclaren v. Stainton, 3 De G. F. & J. 202; Nicholson v. Nicholson, 9 W. R. 676; Woodruff's Case, 1 Tuck. (N. Y.) 58; Atkins v. Albree, 12 Allen (Mass.) 359; Emery v. Wason, 107 Mass. 507; Billings v. Billings, 110 Mass. 225.

In Balch v. Hallet, 10 Gray (Mass.) 402, the court, by Bigelow, J., said: "There can be no doubt of the general rule of law, applicable to trust estates, that when a dividend is declared and paid to trustees on funds in their hands derived from the sale of trust property, by which the principal fund is impaired or diminished, or where moneys are received as the proceeds of what are termed wasting securities, such as leasehold estates, which in progress of time will expire or perish or become of greatly diminished value, if the funds are held on a trust by which the income is to be paid for life to certain persons, and on their deaths the remainder is given to other persons, it will be the duty of the trustees to add such dividends or moneys to the principal fund so as to preserve it unimpaired for those entitled to the remainder." Citing Paris v. Paris, 10 Ves. 185; Howe v. Dartmouth, 7 Ves. 151; Mills v. Mills, 7 Sim. 509; Hill on Trustees (3d Am. ed.) 386, 432. And further, in the same opinion, the court says: "In the absence of any facts showing that the dividends in question were a part of the capital of the corporation, or that the payment of them essentially impaired or diminished the value of the shares, they are to be taken as part of the revenue or profits to which the cestuis que trustent for life are entitled."

(4) Disbursements and Allowances.—All reasonable and necessary expenses and disbursements, and advancements to the cestui

An extra dividend of an accumulated surplus in a bank was declared payable either in money or new stock; a testamentary, having invested in the stock of the bank, took the stock. It was held that the payment was a dividend and belonged to the life interest in the trust fund, but that so much should be retained out of the dividend and added to the fund as would make the market value of the stock equal to its market value at the time of the original investment by the trustee, so that there should be no diminution in the amount invested. Simpson v. Moore, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 637.

In Wiltbank's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 256; 3 Am. Rep. 585, the will created a trust, the capital consisting of stock in two corporations. These corporations thereafter issued new stock to be taken by the stockholders, and the testamentary trustees sold the right to subscribe for stock in one company, and bought stock with their own money in the other company, selling it afterwards at an advance. It was held that the profits belonged to the income, and not to the capital of the trust. See also Moss' Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 264; 24 Am. Rep. 164, and note on page 169.

It becomes the trustee's duty, immediately upon the death of a life tenant, to file an account, the expense to be paid out of the corpus of the estate, and not from the income. Peterson's Estate, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 268.

The cost of administering a trust is properly charged to the corpus of the estate, instead of to the life interest, where the expense is incurred in ascertaining the amount of the corpus. Matter of Reynolds, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 82.

Where a trustee, during the lifetime of the cestui, has neglected to deduct from the income of the fund, for his services, and for counsel fees, incurred when he was appointed trustee, he cannot, after the termination of the trust, charge the remainder-man therefor. Parker v. Ames, 121 Mass. 220.

Commissions paid to brokers for bonds as an investment of a fund held in trust to pay over the income, after deducting all proper expenses, by trustees authorized to make and change the investments, will be charged to the income of the fund. Heard v. Eldredge, 109 Mass. 258; 12 Am. Rep. 687.

Circumstances sufficient to render legacy taxes, also costs of a suit brought to affirm a compromise between legatees and an executor, and of a suit by trustees for instructions, chargeable to the capital of the trust fund and not to the income were considered in Howland v. Green, 108 Mass. 283.

Certain property was devised in trust for the benefit of H., and, in the event of his death during minority, for the heirs of N., the will directing that "such portion of the estate as may be necessary shall be expended in the education and support of H." It was held that H. should not be permitted to be deprived of a proper allowance for maintenance and education, in order to enhance the contingent estate for the benefit of the heirs of N.; nor would it permit the property to be wasted on H., without regard to the contingent rights of the heirs of N. Curtis v. Smith, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537.

A conveyed land and slaves in trust for the support of himself and wife, and their children and family, during the lives of A and his wife, and the life of the survivor, with full power to the trustee to control the estate, and sell any part thereof to pay the debts of A, due at the date of the conveyance. Within seven months A incurred a debt for goods equal in amount to the whole annual value of the trust estate. It was held that such debt was not chargeable by a court of chancery on the prospective profits of the estate, so as to deprive A's wife and children of their support;

que trust, will be allowed the trustee,¹ such as expenses incurred and that the trustee could not pledge such profits, necessary for the current support of the beneficiaries, for a debt, even if contracted by himself for their past support, and much less for a debt contracted by one of the cestuis que trustent without his knowledge or approval. Markham v. Guérant, 4 Leigh (Va.) 279.

1. Flint on Trusts, §§ 338, 339. See Wade v. Pope, 44 Ala. 690; Cleveland v. Pollard, 37 Ala. 556; Merritt v. Jenkins, 17 Fla. 593; Leonard v. Powell, 41 Ga. 598; Wyllie v. Collins, 9 Ga. 223; Norton v. Phelps, 54 Miss. 467; Constant v. Matteson, 22 Ill. 546; Higgins v. Rider, 77 Ill. 360; Cook v. Gillmore, 33 Ill. App. 532; Kingsbury v. Powers, 131 Ill. 182; Chapman v. Loveland, 11 Ohio St. 214; Clark v. Hoyt, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 222; Kennedy's Appeal, 4 Pa. St. 150; Berryhill's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 245; Rensselaer, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 47 Vt. 146; Miller v. Beverleys, 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 415; Balsh v. Hyham, 2 P. Wms. 453; Jervis v. Wolferstan, L. R., 18 Eq. 18; Webb v. Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 480; Turner v. Corney, 5 Beav. 515.

Where an assignee of a certificate of purchase of land from the state has been decreed to hold the patent in trust for the grantees of his assignor, and ordered to convey to them, he may properly be reimbursed for whatever expense he has been put to in procuring the patent. Jackson v. Hyde, 91 Cal. 463.

A trustee held a mine in trust to operate and apply the profits to his expenses and the payment of certain debts, and then reconvey to the defendant. After he had mined some $20,000, the vein, which up to that time had been producing abundantly, suddenly ceased to yield, and in his fruitless efforts to discover the lost vein, he created an indebtedness of $52,000. These efforts met the defendant's approval, and it was held that this expense could properly be charged upon the property, and that the defendant, having approved of the expenditure, would not be heard to complain. Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326.

Upon this subject, Pomeroy says: "The trustee is entitled to be allowed, as against the estate and the beneficiary, for all his proper expenses out of pocket, which include all payments expressly authorized by the instrument of trust, all reasonable expenses in carrying out the directions of the trust, and, in the absence of any such directions, all expenses reasonably necessary for the security, protection, and preservation of the trust property, or for the prevention of a failure of the trust." 2 Pom. Eq. Jur. § 1085, quoted in Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326. See also Rahway Sav. Inst. v. Drake, 25 N. J. Eq. 220.

All reasonable expenses incurred in protecting the property committed to his care, will be allowed. Gooding v. Gibbes, 17 How. (U. S.) 274; Perry on Trusts, § 478; Williams v. Gibbes, 20 How. (U. S.) 535.

"So they have a right to protect it from indirect and probable injuries." Perry on Trusts, § 478, citing Bright v. North, 2 Phill. 220; Queen v. Norfolk Com'rs, 15 Q. B. 549; Atty. Gen'l v. Andrews, 2 Mac. & G. 225; Atty. Gen'l v. Eastlake, 11 Hare 205.

Necessaries furnished for the support of minor cestuis que trustent will be allowed him. Burroughs v. Bunnell, 70 Md. 18.

A direction to board and educate minor children authorizes disbursements for their clothing where no other provision has been made for their support. Hardy v. Park, 28 Ga. 369.

Where a will conferred upon trustees a discretion in applying money to the support of the testator's children, the trustees may be compelled to pay for the necessary medical services rendered to one of the children, if their refusal has not been actuated by a fair and proper exercise of their discretion. Pole v. Pietsch, 61 Md. 570.

Compensation for Services of a Third Person.—The supreme court has power, independent of statutory provisions, to award compensation out of a trust fund for services resulting in advantage to the trust estate, even though they were not rendered at the instance of the trustee. Matter of Holden, 12 N. Y. Supp. 842; 58 Hun (N. Y.) 611.

As to an allowance for the services of an auctioneer, the trustee must pay for such services, unless the necessity for the employment is established. Ingham v. Lindemann, 37 Ohio St. 218.

Purchase of Outstanding Title.—Money advanced to buy in an outstanding title for the benefit of the trust will by him in the acquisition of trust property,¹ counsel fees,² court costs, and expenses in all suits and proceedings properly brought by be refunded. King v. Cushman, 41 Ill. 31; 89 Am. Dec. 366; Wagenseller v. Prettyman, 7 Ill. App. 192.

Removal of Incumbrances.—See Harrison v. Mock, 16 Ala. 616; Freeman v. Tompkins, 1 Strobh. Eq. (S. Car.) 53.

Interest on Moneys Advanced.—Interest will be allowed or withheld in the discretion of the court. Turner v. Turner, 44 Ark. 25. Interest allowable, Dilworth v. Sinderling, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 488; 2 Am. Dec. 469.

But Not if Unauthorized.—See Tracy v. Gravois R. Co., 84 Mo. 210. Trustees of an unincorporated land company cannot be allowed for expenditures made by them without authority from the company, although the value of the land has been greatly enhanced thereby. McKinley v. Irvine, 13 Ala. 681.

One who holds real estate in trust for a man and his wife and children has no lien thereon as against the wife for the husband's liabilities, which the trustee had assumed without the consent of the wife. Raybold v. Raybold, 20 Pa. St. 308.

Where the trustee expends without authority, the cestui que trust has the option of taking or refusing the benefit or loss of the trustee's unauthorized act. Harrison v. Harrison, 2 Atk. 120; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475.

Or Unnecessary.—Where a trustee of property to secure a debt has, at the creditor's request, made a sale of the property, and gone to expenses therein, when in fact the debt was promptly paid, and such proceedings were wholly needless, he must look for reimbursement to the creditor. Wetmore v. Brown, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 133.

1. Jackson v. Hyde, 91 Cal. 463; Hanna v. Spotts, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 362; 43 Am. Dec. 132.

Where a suit was instituted for the enforcement of a trust arising upon a sale of distillery property to one of the sureties upon the owner's government bonds, and for a division of the proceeds alleged to be in the hands of the trustee, it was held that from the amount charged him he was entitled to deduct what he had paid out to procure the title to the trust property. Wagenseller v. Prettyman, 7 Ill. App. 192.

2. Counsel Fees.—Burr v. McEwen,

(U. S.) 154; Dow v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 23 Blatchf. (U. S.) 84; Grimball v. Cruse, 70 Ala. 534; Clark v. Anderson, 13 Bush (Ky.) 111; Brady v. Dilley, 27 Md. 570; Downing v. Marshall, 37 N. Y. 380; Wetmore v. Parker, 52 N. Y. 450; Cherry v. Jarratt, 25 Miss. 221; Shirley v. Shattuck, 28 Miss. 26; Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57; Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 129 N. Y. 27; Heckert's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 482; Biddle's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 340; 24 Am. Rep. 183; Ingham v. Lindemann, 37 Ohio St. 218; Wilson's Appeal, 41 Pa. St. 94; McElhenny's Appeal, 46 Pa. St. 347; Perkins' Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 314; 56 Am. Rep. 208; Walker's Appeal, 140 Pa. St. 124; Williams v. Smith, 10 R. I. 280; Towle v. Mack, 2 Vt. 19; Vaccaro v. Cecalla, 89 Tenn. 63; Chamberlin v. Estey, 55 Vt. 378. Compare Chemical Co. v. Johnson, 101 N. Car. 223.

A trustee may be allowed counsel fees to defend the suit brought against him by the cestui que trust to have the settlements surcharged and corrected, even though his accounts are to some extent successfully attacked, and this, though the cestui que trust employed counsel to represent the whole interest. Clark v. Anderson, 13 Bush (Ky.) 111.

Where a trustee makes a proper and reasonable expenditure for counsel in the execution of his trust, he should be allowed therefor. Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland (Md.) 409; Green v. Putney, 1 Md. Ch. 262.

A reasonable amount will be allowed by the court for solicitor's fees, due for services in a proceeding against the administrator of the old trustee, made necessary by the omission of their intestate; but such fee will not be deducted from the commissions allowed to the old trustee. Bentley v. Shreve, 2 Md. Ch. 215.

Trustees are allowed counsel fees, but counsel fees will not be allowed a stakeholder out of the funds in his hands. Ohio Co. v. Winn, 4 Md. Ch. 253. A trustee was allowed attorney's fees of $20 and $150, upon the existence of evidence that they were fair and reasonable and that they were necessary to the proper discharge of the trust, and where there was an express provision in the trust to allow the trustee all just and the trustee, or the defense of which was required by the best interests of the trust,¹ commissions paid to rental agents for the collec-reasonable expenses. Brady v. Dilley, 27 Md. 570.

In Randall v. Dasenbury, 79 N. Y. Super. Ct. 174, the trustee had no funds on hand, and services had to be performed either for obtaining possession, or for the preservation of the trust property, and it was held that he might enter into a contract for the performance of these services, not on his personal responsibility, but solely on the faith and credit of the trust property, so that the payment thereof should be contingent on success and be made out of the trust property.

Whether he will be allowed for his own services rendered to the trust as attorney is a question. Such an allowance was made in the following cases: Lowrie's Appeal, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 373; Perkins' Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 314; 56 Am. Rep. 208; Babcock v. Hubbard, 56 Conn. 284. And denied in Perry on Trusts, § 904. See Mayer v. Galluchat, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 1; Binsse v. Paige, 1 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 138; Cook v. Gilmore, 133 Ill. 139; Jenkins v. Fickling, 4 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 369; Edmonds v. Crenshaw, Harp. Eq. (S. Car.) 232; New v. Jones, 1 H. & Tw. 632; Broughton v. Broughton, 2 S. & G. 422; Lincoln v. Winsor, 9 Hare 158; Collins v. Carey, 2 Beav. 129; Bainbridge v. Blair, 8 Beav. 588; Todd v. Wilson, 9 Beav. 486; Christophers v. White, 10 Beav. 523; Selatter v. Cottam, 3 Jur. N. S. 630; Mathison v. Clarke, 3 Drew. 3; In re Taylor, 18 Beav. 165.

It has even been held that counsel fees will not be allowed to the partner of the trustee or to his legal firm unless the trustee be expressly excluded from participation in the compensation. Collins v. Carey, 2 Beav. 128; Lincoln v. Winsor, 9 Hare 158; Christophers v. White, 10 Beav. 523; Lyon v. Baker, 5 De G. & S. 622; Clack v. Carlon, 7 Jur. N. S. 441; Burge v. Brutton, 2 Hare 373.

A person to whom a mortgage has been made as trustee for another person has no right, on the distribution of the proceeds on foreclosure, to be paid out of such proceeds any sum as counsel fees for services rendered in resisting the exceptions to the sale. Mahoney v. Mackubin, 54 Md. 268.

But he will not be allowed for services rendered in a suit which might have been avoided. Page v. Boynton, 63 N. H. 190; Beatty v. Clark, 20 Cal. 11; Holcombe v. Holcombe, 13 N. J. Eq. 415. Nor for attorney's fees needlessly incurred.

A trustee will not be allowed for compensation paid to an attorney out of the trust fund, for services which the trustee should have performed himself; nor for services rendered in a suit brought by the trustee improvidently, or for his own protection. Vaccaro v. Cicalla, 89 Tenn. 63.

In Holcombe v. Holcombe, 13 N. J. Eq. 415, the court, by Green, Ch., said: "There is nothing in the account to require or justify the services of counsel or attorney. A trustee has no right to subject the trust fund unnecessarily to charges for counsel and attorney's fees. Where the services of counsel are required, some discretion must be allowed the trustee as to the amount of compensation; but the mere fact that a trustee has paid fees to an attorney or counsel will not of itself be a warrant for the allowance, especially where it is obvious that there could be no occasion for their services."

1. Costs and Expenses.—Trustees, etc., v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527; Fleming v. Wilson, 6 Bush (Ky.) 610; Lape v. Jones (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 658; Morton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 257; 39 Am. Dec. 575; Parsons v. Winslow, 16 Mass. 361; Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 129 N. Y. 27; Chamberlin v. Estey, 55 Vt. 378.

A trustee is to be allowed costs and expenses of suits and arbitrations, expended in good faith in the concern of the trust, but not those incurred after the surrender of the trust has been called for by the cestui que trust and he has refused. Towle v. Mack, 2 Vt. 19.

Where the trustee appeals from the decree in a suit brought by him to construe the trust, he cannot charge his expenses in the transaction of such appeal to the trust fund. Sherman v. Leman, 137 Ill. 94. His own carelessness or neglect in the institution of needless litigation in the defense of valid suits against the trust will throw on him the penalty of personal liability for the costs incurred. Caffrey v. Darby, 6 Ves. 497; Peers v. Ceeley, 15

tion of rents of the trust estate,¹ whatever expense he has been put to to protect the property from liens,² waste, or destruction,³ and the cost of preparing the account, where the services of an accountant were required.⁴ If he has to advance money to the estate to pay its debts, or to meet its necessary expenses, he is entitled to reimbursement⁵ with interest.⁶ Ordinarily, he will be allowed nothing for improvements, unless the power to make improvements be clearly conferred by the trust instrument, and the Beav. 209; Leedham v. Chawner, 1 K. & J. 458.

1. Garvey v. Owens, 12 N. Y. Supp. 349; 58 Hun (N. Y.) 609.

2. See supra, this title, Possession and Safe Keeping—Protection and Preservation; Babcock v. Hubbard, 56 Conn. 284.

Money advanced by a trustee for the purchase in of an outstanding title, would be, independent of any covenant, considered by a court of equity as an advance for the benefit of the cestui que trust, and not for his own use, giving him a lien on the property, until he has reimbursed the advancement. King v. Cushman, 41 Ill. 31; 89 Am. Dec. 366.

A trustee who, after accepting the trust in good faith, pays off executions which create a lien on the trust estate, should be reimbursed the full amount of such payments, but he cannot be allowed to avail himself of executions thus purchased to sell the trust effects. Harrison v. Mock, 16 Ala. 616.

Where the record title of land is in one who holds merely as a trustee, and his personal representatives pay off a mortgage on the land in ignorance of the trust deed and in order to protect the property, the amount of such payment is properly deducted from the amount of rents and profits due the beneficiary. Garvey v. New York L. Ins., etc., Co., 7 N. Y. Supp. 818; 54 Hun (N. Y.) 637.

Such as Tax Liens.—Garvey v. Owens, 12 N. Y. Supp. 349; 58 Hun (N. Y.) 609; Merritt v. Jenkins, 17 Fla. 593; Ex p. Bailey, 13 R. I. 543; Fischbeck v. Gross, 112 Ill. 208. See also Fisk v. Brunette, 30 Wis. 102; Hepburn v. Hepburn, 2 Bradf. (N. Y.) 74. Compare Smith v. Thomas, 8 Baxt. (Tenn.) 417. And he may even pay taxes out of the corpus of the fund where it has not yielded income sufficient to do so. Patterson v. Johnson, 113 Ill. 559. But compare Booth v. Ammerman, 4 Bradf. (N. Y.) 129.

If he holds the legal title to land for another and as security for money advanced, and buys in tax certificates, which he may purchase against the land, he holds these also in trust, and as against the beneficiary he is entitled to nothing more than the legal rate of interest on what he has expended; the excess of interest goes to the beneficiary as part of the trust fund. Fisk v. Brunette, 30 Wis. 102.

3. Constant v. Matteson, 22 Ill. 546; Cook v. Gilmore, 133 Ill. 139; Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457; Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57. In the first case, the court said: "It is his duty to take all reasonable care of the property, and, when necessary for its preservation, he may expend reasonable sums of money, or employ agents for the purpose, and so far as such outlays are necessary, he is entitled to have them refunded. But even in this, courts will guard the fund with jealous care and be vigilant to prevent the fund from being wasted."

On a decree for an accounting of rents, expenses incurred for repairs are a proper allowance where the repairs were necessary to the full enjoyment of the premises, and without them it would have been impossible to rent the same. Garvey v. Owens, 12 N. Y. Supp. 349; 58 Hun (N. Y.) 609.

It was held in Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57, that the trustees were entitled to reimbursement for all proper expenditures made for taxes, insurance, repairs, seed, fertilizers, expense of accounting, counsel fees, and interest upon all advances made.

See supra, this title, Protection and Preservation—Repairs—Waste.

4. Kingsbury v. Powers, 131 Ill. 182; Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57; Yoder's Appeal, 45 Pa. St. 394.

5. Carpenter's Appeal, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 381; Altimus v. Elliott, 2 Pa. St. 62.

6. Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57; Cook v. Lowry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 20; Carpenter's Appeal, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.)

improvements charged for be made in good faith, and for the best interest of the estate.¹

(5) Lien for Reimbursement.—For all proper disbursements and advancements made, the trustee holds a lien upon the trust property for his reimbursement,² as also, no doubt, for his own com-

381; Dillwarth v. Sinderling, 1 Binn. (Pa.) 488; 2 Am. Dec. 469; Jenckes v. Cook, 10 R. I. 215.

1. Improvements.—Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355; 48 Am. Dec. 492; Cogswell v. Cogswell, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 231; L'Amoureux v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 34; Ames v. Downing, 1 Bradf. (N. Y.) 321; Wykoff v. Wykoff, 3 W. & S. (Pa.) 481.

A trustee will not be reimbursed for improvements on land of which he has tortiously retained possession; but he is not to be charged an increased rent because of them. Tatum v. McLellan, 56 Miss. 352.

A trustee is not entitled to be allowed for improvements upon the trust estate, as in building, etc., though made in good faith, if such expenses are not within the purview of the trust. Only reasonable expenditures for repairs can be recovered by him. Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475.

The testator's widow, a testamentary trustee, who is authorized and directed to keep his estate together in her possession, and to apply the rents and profits to the support of herself and her children, until the youngest shall attain its majority, with the power to sell and reinvest in other property, cannot erect permanent improvements on a vacant lot, to the extent of four times its value. Dickinson v. Conniff, 65 Ala. 581.

A guardian who has erected buildings on his ward's land, without authority, will not be reimbursed. Payne v. Stone, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 367; Haggerty v. McCanna, 25 N. J. Eq. 51; Putnam v. Ritchie, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 390; Bellinger v. Shafer, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 293; Hassard v. Rowe, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 24.

The cost of improvements intended partly as a gift and partly in return for the trustee's other obligations to his beneficiary, will not be repaid. Thompson v. Thompson, 16 Wis. 91.

Where a party tortiously retains the title to property which he knows he ought to convey to another, he is not to be compensated for improvements made thereon while he so retains the title; but those who improve in good faith, believing that their title is good, may enforce such claims for improvements. Thompson v. Thompson, 16 Wis. 91.

In Williams v. Smith, 10 R. I. 280, Smith held certain real estate in trust to pay rents and profits to Williams for life, and on his death to convey the fee to Williams' children. Williams assigned to Smith for the benefit of his creditors, a building erected thereon which was free from the trust, and upon its destruction, Smith rebuilt. It was held that Smith could not charge the trust estate with the expense of rebuilding, but might remove the building therefrom before conveying the estate to Williams' children.

Exceptions.—But compare Spindler v. Atkinson, 3 Md. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 755.

A trustee to whom there was a devise in trust for his children, was allowed the value of all his valuable and necessary improvements upon the premises, to the extent of the money, or value of the labor, actually used in the improvements. Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 214; 16 Am. Dec. 648.

The cost of improvements erected on a trust estate, in reliance on the estate, and followed by a promise of the trustee to pay for them, is properly chargeable against the trust property. Field v. Wilbur, 49 Vt. 157.

A mine was conveyed to a trustee to operate, and apply the profits to its expenses and the payment of certain debts, and then to reconvey to the defendant. After the trustee had mined some $20,000, the vein, which had been yielding abundantly, suddenly failed, and in fruitless efforts to find the lost vein, $52,000 indebtedness was incurred. These efforts were all approved by the defendant. It was held that it was proper to charge these expenses upon the property, under the terms of the declaration of trust, and that the defendant, having approved of such expenditures, could not complain. Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326.

2. Hewitt v. Phelps, 105 U. S. 393; Jones v. Dawson, 19 Ala. 672; Dickinson

pensation. And he may retain out of the income sufficient money to reimburse himself, or he may hold possession of the estate until he is reimbursed.¹ Where he has paid off outstanding incumbrances, he will be subrogated to the rights of the holders thereof, and may retain incumbrance, as, for example, a mortgage, to secure his advancements,² or he may retain possession of the corpus until he has been repaid.³

As between himself and a purchaser of the trust property, the trustee may forfeit his lien by voluntarily yielding possession of the property.⁴

(6) Interest.—A trustee who exercises diligence and good faith in the custody of the trust funds, is not chargeable with interest unless he has used them for his own profit,⁵ or has invested them son v. Conniff, 65 Ala. 581; Bradbury v. Birchmore, 117 Mass. 569; Johnston v. Fletcher, 32 Ill. App. 589; King v. Cushman, 41 Ill. 31; 89 Am. Dec. 366; Johnson v. Leman, 131 Ill. 609; 19 Am. St. Rep. 63; Smith v. Walker, 49 Iowa 293; Fearn v. Mayers, 53 Miss. 458; Mulford v. Minch, 11 N. J. Eq. 16; 64 Am. Dec. 472; Ferry v. Laible, 27 N. J. Eq. 146; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475; Murray v. DeRottenham, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 52; Noyes v. Blakeman, 6 N. Y. 567; Randall v. Dusenbury, 39 N. Y. Super. Ct. 174; 63 N. Y. 645; Stanton v. King, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 4; New v. Nicoll, 73 N. Y. 127; 29 Am. Rep. 111; Williams v. Smith, 10 R. I. 280; Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 214; 16 Am. Dec. 648; Rensselaer, etc., R. Co. v. Miller, 47 Vt. 146; Morison v. Morison, 7 De G. M. & G. 226; In re Norwich Yarn Co., 22 Beav. 143. Compare Ward v. Armstrong, 84 Ill. 151.

Allowances Refused.—A trustee should not be allowed for traveling expenses incurred in order to make payments to his cestui que trust in a neighboring city against her express remonstrances. Berryhill's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 245.

A trust fund is not liable for services rendered in the defense of one of the trustees, against a proceeding to declare him a lunatic. Bickham v. Smith, 55 Pa. St. 335.

1. Lewin on Trusts and Trustees 640; Jones v. Dawson, 19 Ala. 672; Askew v. Myrick, 54 Ala. 31; Woodard v. Wright, 82 Cal. 202; Waters v. Waters, 1 Md. Ch. 196; Ex p. James, 1 D. & C. 272; Hill v. Magan, 2 Moill. 460; Ex p. Chippendale, 4 De G. M. & G. 19.

2. Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57; Freeman v. Tompkins, 1 Strobb. Eq.

(S. Car.) 53; Mathews v. Dragaud, 3 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 25.

A trustee of real estate may, with the beneficiary's consent, take title in his own name for the purpose of securing the repayment to himself of the money advanced by him upon the contract of purchase. Stewart v. Fellows, 128 Ill. 480.

In Iredell v. Langston, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 392, it was held that a creditor of the cestui que trust would not be allowed to draw the trust fund out of the hands of the trustee, without paying the debts due from the beneficiary to the trustee.

3. Matthews v. McPherson, 65 N. Car. 189; McMeekin v. Edmonds, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 288; 26 Am. Dec. 203.

A trustee who has made necessary repairs and improvements on the trust estate, this expenditure being approved by the cestui que trust, may hold the land on which the money was expended till the sum is repaid. Woodard v. Wright, 82 Cal. 202.

4. Johnson v. Packer, 1 Nott. & M. (S. Car.) 1.

5. Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.) 154; Lehmann v. Rothbarth, 111 Ill. 185; Voorhees v. Stoothoff, 11 N. J. L. 145; Fulton v. Davidson, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 614. See also the additional cases of Gott v. State, 44 Md. 319; In re Hensing's Estate (Cal. 1892), 31 Pac. Rep. 578.

Upon a bill by cestuis que trustent against a trustee, for an account and general relief, interest may be allowed against the trustee, though not prayed for in the bill, if, under the facts disclosed, it appears equitable that it should be allowed. Glenn v. Cockey, 16 Md. 446.

An assignee, who is a member of a so as to produce interest,¹ or has suffered them to lie idle when they might have been invested,² or has needlessly delayed settlement and surrender of the property.³

He is entitled to interest on all advances made by him to satisfy the debts of the estate,⁴ but on funds in his hands at the same time, he is chargeable with interest.⁵

e. COMPENSATION OF THE TRUSTEE—(1) In General.—A different rule from that prevalent in England prevails in the United States with reference to the compensation of trustees for their services in the conduct of the trust. Under the English practice, private banking firm, deposits with them the trust fund, distinct from his own money, and draws no interest on such deposit. The fact that, as a member of the banking firm, he may receive a profit from the use of such deposits generally does not make him liable for interest on the fund. He is not bound to invest the trust fund. Hess's Estate, 68 Pa. St. 554.

Where personal property has come into the hands of a testamentary trustee, and there is no evidence showing that he had sold it or converted it to his own use, it is error to charge him with interest in his final account on the value of the property from the time it came into his hands. Reading F. Ins. Co.'s Appeal, 125 Pa. St. 164.

1. Interest.—A trustee who has collected from the executors interest upon the legacy from the time of the testator's death must pay it over to the trust estate. Foscue v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 440.

Where the account of a trustee extends over a number of years, and the legal rate of interest has meanwhile been changed, that charged in the account should conform to the fluctuations in the legal rate. Gilmore v. Tuttle, 34 N. J. Eq. 45.

The cestui que trust will get the benefit of all profits accruing from money lent on usurious interest by the trustee. Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535.

2. Tew v. Winterton, 1 Ves. Jr. 452; Plety v. Stace, 4 Ves. 619; Pocock v. Reddington, 5 Ves. 799; Roche v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58; Bates v. Scales, 12 Ves. 402; Forbes v. Ross, 2 Cox 113; Tebbs v. Carpenter, 1 Madd. 290; Voorhees v. Stoothoff, 11 N. J. L. 145; Andrew v. Schmit, 64 Wis. 664.

A trustee who is found to have little or no money on hand at the time when his report shows that he held a large amount of the trust fund, is accountable for interest on such fund, even though his report states that he was unable to invest it. Lehmann v. Rothbarth, 111 Ill. 185.

3. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; Jenkins v. Doolittle, 69 Ill. 415.

A decedent devised his daughter's portion of his estate to executors, as trustees, the income to be paid to his daughter. One of the trustees accepted the trust, but afterwards resigned, no order of discharge being entered. The daughter brought suit to declare the trust discharged, and for a payment of the trust fund to her. It was held that the trust would not be discharged, and that the original trustee should account to the cestui que trust for interest on the fund, from the date of the settlement of the estate. Tucker v. Grundy, 83 Ky. 540.

Where a trustee uses the trust funds, realizes a large profit, and fails to keep an exact account, or refuses to account, the court will charge him with the original fund and interest computed with annual rests. Ogden v. Larabee, 57 Ill. 389; Asay v. Allen, 124 Ill. 391.

In Hughes v. People, 111 Ill. 457, it was said that the law was settled where the trustee willfully violated a duty in respect to the trust estate resulting in loss, he might be charged properly with compound interest. The case was one of a guardian who objected that he should be charged only with simple interest, but the court said that, by putting out the money in the manner he did, in violation of an express provision of the statute, he placed it beyond his power to make it bring compound interest, as it would have done if it had been properly lent, and that the violation of the statute was knowingly and therefore willfully done.

4. See supra, this title, Disbursements and Allowances.

5. Garvey v. Owens, 12 N. Y. Supp. 349; 58 Hun (N. Y.) 609.

and under the common law, except as modified by American decisions, no allowance is made to the trustee for his time and labor,¹ the reason assigned being found in the familiar rule that "the trustee must make no profits out of his office."²

In the United States, it has been the general practice, to compensate the trustee in some form for services actually rendered.³

1. See the notes on the subject of compensation of trustees in 17 Am. Dec. 266.

No compensation is allowed trustees under the English practice. Perry on Trusts, § 904; Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 337; Bonithon v. Hockmore, 1 Vern. 316; Moore v. Frowd, 3 Myl. & C. 50; Charitable Corp. v. Sutton, 2 Atk. 406; Ayliffe v. Murray, 2 Atk. 58; Robinson v. Pitt, 3 P. Wms. 251; 2 Ld. Cas. in Eq. 238 and note; In re Ormsby, 1 B. & B. 189; Kendall v. New England Carpet Co., 13 Conn. 383.

Although a per diem is sometimes allowed them and termed an "indemnity." See Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

2. Compensation.—See Perry on Trusts, § 904, citing Moore v. Frowd, 3 Myl. & C. 50; Burton v. Wookey, 6 Madd. 368; Hamilton v. Wright, 9 Cl. & F. 111. See also Hough v. Harvey, 71 Ill. 72.

3. Compensation Is Allowable.—See Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535; Spence v. Whitaker, 3 Port. (Ala.) 327; Phillips v. Thompson, 9 Port. (Ala.) 667; Benford v. Daniels, 13 Ala. 667; Bethea v. McColl, 5 Ala. 314; Grimboll v. Cruse, 70 Ala. 534; Clark v. Platt, 30 Conn. 282; Muscotee Lumber Co. v. Hyer, 18 Fla. 698; 43 Am. Rep. 332; Lowe v. Morris, 13 Ga. 165; Phillips v. Bustard, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 348; Winder v. Diffenderffer, 2 Bland (Md.) 166; Widener v. Fay, 51 Md. 273; Longley v. Hall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 124; Urann v. Coates, 117 Mass. 41; Schwarz v. Wendell, Walk. (Mich.) 267; Barnebee v. Beckley, 43 Mich. 613; Clark v. Hoyt, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 222; Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 329; Royster v. Johnson, 73 N. Car. 474; Morris v. Harris, 19 Ohio St. 15; Kinney v. Heatley, 13 Oregon 35; Spangler's Estate, 21 Pa. St. 335; Heckert's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 482; Lane's Appeal, 24 Pa. St. 487; Hubbard v. Fisher, 25 Vt. 539; 2 Kelly's Rev. Stat. (W. Va. 1879) 625, ch. 92, § 18. And see note, 17 Am. Dec. 266.

Where a cestui que trust has faithfully and skillfully managed the trust fund, he should be liberally compensated. Fleming v. Wilson, 6 Bush (Ky.) 610.

In Sollee v. Croft, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 474, a South Carolina trustee was compensated for his personal services in going to Alabama to see after and secure the trust property.

Under the Georgia Act of 1764, every fiduciary should be compensated for his services in such trust. Burney v. Spear, 78 Ga. 223.

A trust deed by a railroad company provided that upon a sale of trust property by the trustee, he should, after paying the costs and expenses of the sale and of this trust, pay to the holders of the bond secured thereby, the amount so held by them out of the proceeds of the sale. If the trustee performed services in executing the bonds, etc., for which he was entitled to compensation, his compensation for these services should be paid in preference to the bondholders secured by the deed. Smith v. Washington City, etc., 33 Gratt. (Va.) 617.

A trustee of a sum of money invested on bond and mortgage by a testatrix and bequeathed to her two sons on their reaching the age of twenty-one years, meanwhile to be applied for their use and benefit, should have a reasonable commission on the principal of the trust on the settlement of his accounts, where the bequest was not a specific gift of one-half the mortgage, and there was no obligation on the part of the legatees to receive the balance due on the mortgage itself. Lukens' Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 356.

A trustee should be allowed, not only a fair commission, but also actual expenses. But where a master in his report allowed the trustee nothing for his expenses, but a greater amount of commission than had been agreed upon by the parties, and, upon the whole, it appeared that the trustee had received no more than a reasonable compensation, the court refused to disturb the report. Clark v. Hoyt, 8 Ired. (N. Car.) 222.

This, in many of the states, is awarded as a commission based upon a certain fixed percentage of the amount for which the trustee has become responsible, the rate per cent. to be determined by judicial custom or legislative enactment.¹ In other states, an allowance is made in accordance with the chancellor's estimate of the

A father made a conveyance of land and negroes to one of his sons, to be managed under the direction of that son, in trust that he would apply the proceeds to the support of the father and his family during his father's lifetime. After his death he should sell the property and distribute the proceeds thereof among his heirs and distributees. It was held that the son was entitled to a fair compensation for his trouble in the management of the property. Raiford v. Raiford, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 490.

Where it has become necessary for a trustee to engage in litigation for the settlement of the rights of different claimants to the trust property, he is entitled to compensation for any extra labor cast upon him by reason of such suit. Grimball v. Cruse, 70 Ala. 534.

When the trust estate is partly real and partly personal, the allowance and compensation granted should be apportioned between the two kinds of property. Grimball v. Cruse, 70 Ala. 534.

1. Percentage Commission.—A certain fixed rate of commission is awarded by way of compensation, either by custom or by statutory authority, in the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Mississippi, Missouri, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia. See Perry on Trusts, § 918 and notes; Donelson v. Perry, 13 Ala. 752; Gantt's Dig. Arkansas St. (1874), § 122; Comp. Laws Arizona (1877) 273, § 221; Moore v. Felkel, 7 Fla. 44; Lowe v. Morris, 13 Ga. 169; Gilman v. Des Moines Valley R. Co., 41 Iowa 22; Fleming v. Wilson, 6 Bush (Ky.) 613; Ellicott v. Ellicott, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 35; Waring v. Darnall, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 126; Williams v. Mosher, 6 Gill (Md.) 454; Denny v. Allen, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 147; Ellis v. Ellis, 12 Pick. (Mass.) 178; Dixon v. Homer, 2 Met. (Mass.) 420; Longley v. Hall, 11 Pick. (Mass.) 120; Scudder v. Crocker, 1 Cush. (Mass.) 323; Satterwhite v. Littlefields, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 307;

Merrill v. Moore, 7 How. (Miss.) 292; 60 Am. Dec. 60; Cherry v. Jarratt, 25 Miss. 221; Shurtleff v. Witherspoon, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 613; Smart v. Fisher, 7 Mo. 581; Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 329; Sherrill v. Shuford, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 228; Raiford v. Raiford, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 490; Wendell v. French, 19 N. H. 210; Tuttle v. Robinson, 33 N. H. 118; Nixon's Digest (New Jersey) 566, §§ 98, 99; State Bank v. Marsh, 1 N. J. Eq. 288; Stretch v. Gowdey, 3 Tenn. Ch. 565; Granberry v. Granberry, 1 Wash. (Va.) 246; 1 Am. Dec. 455; Taliaferro v. Minor, 2 Call (Va.) 197; Kee v. Kee, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 132; Lyons v. Byrd, 2 Hen. & M. (Va.) 22; Whitehead v. Whitehead, 85 Va. 870.

A delivered certain claims to B, for which B was to have a certain commission. Afterward A assigned the claims to B in trust, the better to enable him to collect them. B died without having collected them, and they were collected by his administratrix. It was held she was entitled to the commissions. DePeyster v. Ferrers, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 13.

Unless the will otherwise directs, trustees under the will, who have received commissions on the fund, should receive full actual commissions on the income. Frame v. Willets, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 368.

A trustee appointed to prosecute certain suits, may claim commissions on the sum received by the cestui que trust by way of compromise, the money being paid on the joint receipt of them. Lainer v. Brunson, 21 S. Car. 41.

H., after enjoying the rents and profits of certain land for years, against the claim of a judgment creditor of his grantor, was held to be a bona fide owner of the property. It was held, in accounting for the rents and profits, that he was entitled to commissions. Cowing v. Howard, 46 Barb. (N. Y.) 579.

The fact that a trustee had semi-annually for five years rendered informal accounts to the cestui que trust, without deducting his commissions, did not estop him from claiming them in his final account, in the absence of any contrary agreement. Wister's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 160.

When a trustee dies before completing his trust, the court will allow a reasonable compensation to his estate. Bentley v. Shreve, 2 Md. Ch. 215.

Method of Determining the Amount.

—Though receivers of insolvent corporations and partnerships have often been allowed a commission of eight per cent., yet that is not the established rule. The allowance should be according to the circumstances of each case, and the general rule in regard to trustees should be taken as a guide. Abbott v. Baltimore, etc., Steam Packet Co., 4 Md. Ch. 310.

When several sales are made at different times, the sales are not to be treated as if made at one time, and the commissions of the trustee should be calculated upon each sale separately. Goodburn v. Stevens, 1 Md. Ch. 420.

It was held in Pennsylvania, that a trustee was entitled to commissions, under the equity act of that state, which allows them to executors. Prevost v. Gratz, 3 Wash. (U. S.) 434; and so in Maryland, Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; and North Carolina, Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 329.

In New York, the trustee's commissions must be based upon the value of the real estate; not on the value of the life estate therein during the continuance of which the trust is to last. Phoenix v. Phoenix, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 629.

A trustee who resigns for his own convenience, is not entitled to commissions upon the principal of the trust estate. He is, however, entitled to commissions upon the income. Matter of Allen, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 7.

In the payment of trustees, the usage which exists among factors, merchants, and others who undertake to manage the interests of others, and the highest rates at which those services are usually paid for, should be allowed to the trustee. Barrell v. Joy, 16 Mass. 221; Rathburn v. Colton, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 471.

In New York, trustees for the payment of debts, and in all cases of express trusts of a similar nature, should have only the same compensation for their services which is allowed by statute to executors, etc., unless there is an agreement for a different allowance. Meacham v. Stearns, 9 Paige (N. Y.)

398; Woodruff v. New York, etc., R. Co., 129 N. Y. 27.

In computing the commissions of trustees, under a will, the principal and income are to be regarded as one fund, and if the trustees have received the five per cent. allowed by statute on $1,000, and two and a half per cent. on $9,000, they are entitled afterward to one per cent. only. Matter of Schmidt, 3 Dem. (N. Y.) 245.

A trustee is entitled to his commission upon the entire fund in his hands, even though he turns over to the beneficiaries the identical securities received by him. Matter of Moffat, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 325.

Where the trustee has properly administered the trust, he will be allowed a rehearing as to a decree for compensation, which was entered without permitting him to prove the value of his services. Hodges v. McDuff, 76 Mich. 303.

In New York, a trustee is entitled to the same commissions as an executor, even though nothing is said of compensation in the instrument creating the trust, and the amount of property, both real and personal, held by the trustee will be looked upon as the basis of the allowance of commissions. Wagstaff v. Lowerre, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 209; Duffy v. Duncan, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 587.

Where the principal of a trust fund is less than $100,000, it is not permissible to add the income to it in order to bring up the amount, so that the trustees under the will may have the separate commissions to which they are entitled under the New York Code, §§ 2736, 2811, when the fund reaches that amount. Slosson v. Naylor, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 257; Biddle's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 340; 24 Am. Rep. 183. See generally Mauzy v. Chesapeake, etc., R. Co., 27 Gratt. (Va.) 698; Matter of Meserole, 36 Hun (N. Y.) 298; Phoenix v. Livingston, 101 N. Y. 451; Matter of Selleck, 111 N. Y. 284.

Amount of Commissions Allowable.—See generally Whitehead v. Whitehead, 85 Va. 870; Palmer v. Dunham, 52 Hun (N. Y.) 468; Wistar's Appeal, 125 Pa. St. 526; Hosack v. Rogers, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 461; Matter of Allen, 96 N. Y. 327; Montgomery's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 230.

Where, from the nature of the trust property, the trustee is put to unusual annoyance and trouble, a fair compensation will be five per cent. on the amount of his receipts and disbursements each. Woodruff v. Snedecor, 68 Ala. 437.

One per cent. on receipts and disbursements allowed to trustees for the settlement of the affairs of the United States Bank, not to exceed $2,000 per annum to each trustee, is not unreasonable. U. S. Bank v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423.

Where a trustee receives money to be profitably and prudently invested, and used for the purposes of the trust, five per cent. on their disbursements, which were finally decreed to be paid by them, was held to be a reasonable compensation. Greening v. Fox, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 187.

The amount of compensation allowed to trustees varies with their skill and fidelity; and where a trust fund had been retained and used by a trustee for a number of years, under such circumstances that he was made to pay compound interest, but who had kept full and fair accounts of his receipts and disbursements, it was held that he had not forfeited all claims to commissions, as he otherwise would have done, and half the usual amount was decreed. Difenderffer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311.

In Maryland, the court of chancery will not allow a testamentary trustee more than five per cent. commission upon a sale of land, although he has retained a larger amount under the sanction of the orphans' court. Waring v. Darnall, 10 Gill & J. (Md.) 126.

B and C were appointed executors and trustees under the will of A. They were allowed by the auditor five per cent. commission upon certain rents of the trust estate which they had collected in person, and one-half per cent. on others, for the collection of which they had previously paid an agent seven and a half per cent., and he rejected their claim for a solicitor's fee, paid for preparing their answer in this cause. It was held that these allowances and this rejection were properly made. Williams v. Mosher, 6 Gill (Md.) 454.

Where an orphans' court had allowed a commission of one and a half per cent., it was held on appeal to be a fair compensation. Luken's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 356.

A trustee may be entitled to compensation beyond the mere percentage payable out of the income of the trust estate. Pedrick's Estate, 5 Phila. (Pa.) 478.

As to the settlement of the accounts of trustees, and the charges and compensation allowed, see Pennell's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 216.

At a sale of real estate, assigned for the benefit of creditors, the assignees were allowed two and a half per cent. commissions, the purchase-money being about $44,000, of which $13,000 came into their hands, the residue remaining a lien, by agreement between the purchaser and the mortgagee. Shunk's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 304.

Where four trustees of an estate committed the management to one of them, and his charge of five per cent. was not objected to, the amount thus charged was held a proper compensation for the services of the trustee. Savage v. Sherman, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 307.

Upon the death of the managing trustee, the survivors committed his duties to his son, upon an agreement for similar compensation. It was held that no additional charge could be made by the trustees. Savage v. Sherman, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 307.

Where property is conveyed to a creditor in trust, to be sold for the benefit of himself and other creditors, the trustee is entitled to compensation for making the sale and disposing of the proceeds, and two and a half per cent. commission is not unreasonable. Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 62.

Where real estate was given to a trustee to sell and apply the proceeds, though the trust continued in existence for sixteen years, the allowance of five per cent. commission and one per cent. brokerage was unreasonable. Dunal's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 112.

In Turnbull v. Pomeroy, 140 Mass. 117, the court, by Holmes, J., discusses the subject of compensation of trustees, and, citing a number of cases, says: "It is to be remembered that the English rule, refusing compensation for professional or business services which it was not the duty of the trustee to render, and for which he might have employed and paid another, is only a special application of the general rule which refuses trustees compensation for services, as such, of any kind (citing English case), a rule which does not prevail here. But when it is once admitted that a trustee may be paid for ordinary services, it is hard not to admit also that there may be circumstances under which he may be allowed an additional sum for extraordinary services which it was not his duty to render, the allowance not standing on contract any more than in the common case, but being subject to the discretion and control of the court." Citing Urann v. Coates, 117 Mass. 41; Blake v. Pegram, 109 Mass. 541; Bainbridge v. Blair, 8 Beav. 588.

A trustee is entitled to an allowance and compensation while an interpleader suit is pending, where he has not used the fund, even though he may not have paid it into court. Daniel v. Fain, 5 Lea (Tenn.) 258.

The question of reasonable compensation to trustees depends largely upon the circumstances of the particular case, and is not governed by any inflexible rule. Carrier's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 230; Perkins' Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 314; 56 Am. Rep. 208.

It must be graduated according to the responsibility incurred, the amount of the estate, and the nature and extent of the services performed. Harland's Accounts, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 330; Perkins' Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 314; 56 Am. Rep. 208.

An allowance of one per cent. to trustees under a mortgage for $2,600,000 was held to be reasonable in Dow v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 32 Fed. Rep. 185.

Five per cent. will not be allowed a trustee for simply receiving and disbursing dividends to the cestuis que trustent. Turnage v. Greene, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 63; 62 Am. Dec. 208.

For the sale of real estate, a commission of two and a half per cent. has generally been regarded as a proper one in Pennsylvania, for the trustee. Carrier's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 230.

An allowance to executors and trustees of six per cent. commission for collecting rents of thirty-six houses, is sufficient where there appears no evidence of peculiar difficulty in the collection. Wood's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 346.

The commission on the corpus of a trust fund of $46,500 allowed to a trustee under the Girard will, was reduced to one and one-fourth per cent. Hemphill's Estate, 9 Phila. (Pa.) 486.

For the care of funds which have come into his hands as a volunteer, he will be given no commission. Riddle v. Lewis, 7 Bush (Ky.) 197; Haglar v. McCombe, 66 N. Car. 345. But compare Carrier's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 230, in which a compensation of $500 was allowed him in lieu of his claim of five per cent. on $37,740, where the heirs on whom the real estate descended were all sui juris and made a contract for its sale, and the trustee under his own advice was appointed by the orphans' court, under the act of April 18th, 1853, to make a private sale according to the contract, merely to pass the title.

Disbursements.—Payments over to the cestui que trust by a trustee, are not disbursements within the meaning of a decree allowing to the trustee commissions upon his disbursements. Whyte v. Dimmock, 55 Md. 452.

Instances Where a Commission Was Refused.—Where a portion of a trust fund was invested in a mortgage, a commission being allowed to the trustees on the investment, and the mortgage was paid, the amount to be invested in ground rents, it was held that the trustees were not entitled to a commission on the mortgage debt collected, nor on the amount reinvested in ground rents. Jenkins v. Whyte, 62 Md. 427.

Where a debtor conveyed to his creditor his farm, with the power to sell it and apply the proceeds to the payment of his debt and the discharge of prior liens, returning the surplus to the debtor, it was held, in the absence of any proof that the parties contemplated any remuneration for the transaction, that the creditor was not entitled to any commission therefor. First Nat. Bank v. Owen, 23 Iowa 185.

A will directed the executors "immediately after my death to transfer and deliver to the C. college the certificate of stock for $166,000, in the city of C. six-per-cent. stocks, and convey, for the best price that can be obtained, said plantation, with the negroes, etc., and after deducting and retaining to their own use five per cent. on the proceeds of such sale, as well as all costs and expenses they may incur in the transaction, as compensation for their care and trouble in the premises, shall divide the net proceeds" among certain legatees. It was held that the executors should not have commissions on the stock certificate transferred to C. college. Charleston College v. Willingham, 13 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 195.

The trustee of a sum of money, invested by a testator in a certain loan, should not be allowed commissions on the fund itself, where the investment continues unchanged by the trustee, but only for the interest on the loan paid in to him. McCauseland's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 466.

A trustee to invest moneys is not actual value of the services, in a gross sum.¹ In some states no compensation is awarded.² But where compensation is claimed, it will be allowed only when the trustee can show that he has entitled to commissions on each temporary loan he may see proper to make, unless, from the circumstances of the case, the interests of the beneficiary will be thereby enhanced. Lowrie's Appeal, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 373.

By the terms of a deed of trust executed in 1855, provision was made for payment to the trustee of a commission on sales of land, and for the appointment by the court of a successor, upon the resignation of the trustee. The trustee resigned a year later, and the defendant was appointed to succeed him. The cestuis que trustent, under the original deed, sold their interests, and subsequently their vendees conveyed the land to the plaintiff in trust for themselves. By this latter conveyance, the plaintiff was authorized to sell or appoint agents for the purpose, with the power of substitution. For eleven years from the time of the original deed of trust, the defendant did nothing in relation to the trust property. From 1866 to 1874, he had charge of the property for the plaintiff's agents, and on their behalf made sales of the land. All his conveyances the plaintiff executed as trustee, sales being made in his name, and notes taken payable to him as trustee. The defendant never demanded of him any commissions. The plaintiff managed his business through agents, and was ignorant of the defendant's appointment as trustee. It was held that the defendant did not make these sales as trustee, and that accordingly he was not entitled to receive any commissions. Lathrop v. Baubie, 106 Mo. 470.

1. Harris v. Martin, 9 Ala. 899; Gould v. Hays, 25 Ala. 432; Canfield v. Bostwick, 21 Conn. 551; Clark v. Platt, 30 Conn. 282; Schwarz v. Wendell, Walk. (Mich.) 267; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 23 N. J. Eq. 495; McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 136; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Moore v. Zabriskie, 18 N. J. Eq. 51; Harland's Accounts, 5 Rawle (Pa.) 323; Kennedy's Appeal, 4 Pa. St. 149; McElhenny's Appeal, 46 Pa. St. 347; Biddle's Appeal, 83 Pa. St. 340; 24 Am. Rep. 183; Evarts v. Nason, 11 Vt. 122; Hubbard v. Fisher, 25 Vt. 539; Nimms v. Com., 4 Hen. & M. (Va.) 57; 4 Am. Dec. 488.

2. None is allowed in Delaware.

State v. Platt, 4 Harr. (Del.) 154; Egbert v. Brooks, 3 Harr. (Del.) 112.

Nor in Illinois, unless expressly agreed upon. Cheaney v. Lafayette, etc., R. Co., 68 Ill. 570; 18 Am. Rep. 584; Buckingham v. Morrison, 136 Ill. 437; Jenkins v. Doolittle, 69 Ill. 415; Huggins v. Rider, 77 Ill. 360; Constant v. Matteson, 22 Ill. 547; Hough v. Harvey, 71 Ill. 72; Cook v. Gilmore, 133 Ill. 139; 33 Ill. App. 532.

No compensation was allowed a trustee at common law, and could not be recovered on a quantum meruit; and, in Illinois, the president and directors of a railway company are trustees for the stockholders, and for that reason no promise will be imposed to pay them for discharging the duties implied upon persons occupying that position. Following Cooper v. Platt, 39 Pa. 528; New York, etc., R. Co. v. Ketchum, 27 Conn. 170; Butts v. Wood, 37 N. Y. 317; Cheaney v. Lafayette, etc., R. Co., 68 Ill. 570; 18 Am. Rep. 584.

Nor in the early Kentucky decisions. Hite v. Hite, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 179; Breckenridge v. Brooks, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 339; 12 Am. Dec. 401; McMillen v. Scott, 1 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 150; Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457.

If a trust coupled with an interest is accepted by a trustee without any stipulation as to remuneration, he is entitled to none. Miles v. Bacon, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 457.

But the English doctrine was denied in Lane v. Coleman, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 571. And see Phillips v. Bustard, 1 B. Mon. (Ky.) 350; Greening v. Fox, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 190; Fleming v. Wilson, 6 Bush (Ky.) 610.

In New Jersey, at first no allowance will be made to trustees for their services in the discharge of their trust, and under an order to make them a "just allowance" they are entitled only to charges and expenses. State Bank v. Marsh, 1 N. J. Eq. 288.

Nor under the early North Carolina practice. Schaw v. Schaw, Taylor (N. Car.) 125. But this is changed now.

Nor under the common law in the early New York decisions. Mumford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 37; 7 Am. Dec. 475; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 534. But fulfilled his duties to the trust,¹ and the services paid for must be only such as the instrument creating the trust will authorize.²

If he has neglected his duties, exercised bad faith in the conduct of his trust, or committed a breach of his obligation in any way, he forfeits his right to compensation.³ This rule is not inflexible, this rule was overthrown in Meacham v. Sternes, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 398.

Nor in Ohio, Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129, until remedied by statute.

By a general rule of equity, compensation will be allowed a trustee only for time and expenses, unless it is stipulated by the parties to be paid. But, where the assignee of a certain manufacturing company's stock, to work it up and from the profits to indemnify himself for his responsibilities for such company, accepted the trust under an agreement with one of the partners, who was agent of the company, that he should be allowed the same compensation to which he would have been entitled had he not been the trustee, and it appeared that the business was conducted with good faith and without unnecessary delay, that his services were highly important to the company and all concerned, and without them the consequences would have been ruinous, it was held that he was entitled to certain sums charged in his account as commissions on his responsibilities, which were found to be, all things considered, only a fair compensation. Kendall v. New England Carpet Co., 13 Conn. 383.

1. Jenkins v. Doolittle, 69 Ill. 415.

A trustee who resigns for his own convenience cannot claim compensation as of course, but may be allowed it by the court, if the court considers that he is entitled to receive it, on terms and conditions, if the court deems it proper to impose terms and conditions. Matter of Allen, 96 N. Y. 327.

2. A trustee can receive pay out of the trust fund for such services and disbursements only as are within the line of duties which the instrument creating the trust imposes upon him. Tracy v. Gravois R. Co., 84 Mo. 210.

3. Flagg v. Mann, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 84; Barney v. Saunders, 16 How. (U. S.) 535; Jenkins v. Eldredge, 3 Story (U. S.) 325; Walker v. Beal, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 743; Henderson v. Sherman, 47 Mich. 267; Gordon v. Matthews, 30 Md. 235; Marcy's Account, 24 N. J. Eq. 451; Dufford v. Smith, 46 N. J. Eq. 216; Kemp v. Foster (Mo. App.), 16 L. R. A. 42; Polis v. Tice, 28 N. J. Eq. 432; McKnight v. Walsh, 23 N. J. Eq. 136; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Fall v. Simmons, 6 Ga. 274; Kenan v. Hall, 8 Ga. 417; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 23 N. J. Eq. 495; Cook v. Lowry, 95 N. Y. 103; Matter of Baker, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 272; Sherrill v. Shuford, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 228; Gilbert v. Sutliff, 3 Ohio St. 129; Dyott's Estate, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 557; Nagle's Estate, 12 Phila. (Pa.) 25; Berryhill's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 245; Robinet's Appeal, 36 Pa. St. 174; Stehman's Appeal, 5 Pa. St. 413; Hermstead's Appeal, 60 Pa. St. 423; Swartzwalter's Account, 4 Watts (Pa.) 77; Norris' Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 106; Harris v. Sheldon (Pa. 1889), 16 Atl. Rep. 828; 24 W. N. C. (Pa.) 370; Singleton v. Lowndes, 9 S. Car. 465; Frazier v. Vaux, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 203; McCloskey v. Gleason, 56 Vt. 264; 48 Am. Rep. 770; Spaulding v. Wakefield, 53 Vt. 660; 38 Am. Rep. 709; Ward v. Funsten, 86 Va. 359.

A trustee assuming a position hostile to the trust is not entitled to compensation from the trust fund. Greenfield's Estate, 24 Pa. St. 232.

A trustee failing for a long period to reinvest, as directed by the testator, the funds obtained from the sale of a trust estate, violates his duty, and forfeits his title to compensation, which is given by theory for a faithful discharge of duty. Warbass v. Armstrong, 10 N. J. Eq. 263.

A trustee violating his trust is not entitled to anything as such trustee, but he may be allowed compensation for any important services rendered to the cestui que trust. Moore v. Zabriskie, 18 N. J. Eq. 51.

Where services are self-imposed by the trustee and result from his own wrong, he cannot receive compensation. Stearly's Appeal, 38 Pa. St. 525.

The trustees of the Real Estate Bank had no power, by an order passed by themselves, to increase their compensation beyond that fixed in the instrument creating the trust, and a court of chancery will not interfere to allow extra compensation, where it appears however.¹ A mere technical or trivial violation of imposed duties will not be permitted to outweigh valuable services rendered. Thus, where the trustee has faithfully discharged the trust for years, he will not forfeit his right to be paid for his time and labor by receiving small gifts from those with whom he may have had dealings,² nor by mingling the trust funds with his own.³ Nor will he necessarily forfeit his commissions by irregularities that have done no harm.⁴

that they have not faithfully performed their duty. Biscoe v. State, 23 Ark. 592.

Where a creditor, having accepted a trust to provide for his own security, as well as the security of other debtors, repudiates the trust by insisting that the assignment to him was absolute, and refuses to pay other creditors out of the surplus, he will be allowed no commissions as a trustee, upon its being established by a creditor that he is a trustee. Ireland v. Potter, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 218; 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 175.

One who turns over trust funds to a life tenant, in violation of the trust, is entitled to no commissions. Singleton v. Lowndes, 9 S. Car. 465.

A trustee whose conduct of the trust is vexatious to the heirs, and who delays distribution by an exorbitant claim for commissions, is not entitled to as liberal an allowance by way of compensation as one who makes a reasonable claim. Carrier's Appeal, 79 Pa. St. 230.

Where a trustee so violates his trust that the damage resulting to the beneficiaries exceeds the benefit derived from his services, he will be allowed no compensation. Probate Judge v. Jackson, 58 N. H. 458.

One in the possession of property, who is sought to be charged as trustee, and who denies the trust, claiming title as the absolute owner, cannot, upon a rendition of judgment against him, claim compensation for services in the management of the property. Stallcup, C., dissenting; Pollard v. Lathrop, 12 Colo. 171.

A trustee appointed to sell property in pursuance of a decree, cannot be deprived of his ordinary allowance for commissions and expenses accruing under the execution of the trust, on the ground of misconduct, without being notified of the charge, and without having an opportunity given him of proving his innocence. Ellicott v. Ellicott, 6 Gill & J. (Md.) 35.

Where a trustee succeeding another trustee found the funds invested in a mortgage for $2,416.66 on property, for which the mortgagor had paid $4,000, and the land subsequently depreciated; but the trustee, on repeated inquiries, was informed by the residents in the neighborhood that it was worth $3,000, until, on foreclosure of the mortgage, it was sold for only $2,000, it was held that the trustee was not guilty of negligence, and should be allowed compensation for his services. Fahnestock's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 46.

1. Finch v. Ragland, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 137; Gee v. Hicks, Rich. Eq. Cas. (S. Car.) 5; Kee v. Kee, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 116; Myers' Appeal, 62 Pa. St. 104.

2. Jacobus v. Munn, 37 N. J. Eq. 48. In this case, a testamentary trustee had for thirty years the sole management of a large amount of real estate, involving great responsibility and care, and the expenditure of large sums of money in repairing and the renting and collecting of rents of several houses thereon. It was held that the fact that he, several years before, had received presents from one of the tenants and from some of the mechanics whom he had employed to repair houses, which he had openly admitted at the time and since, and which caused no loss whatever to the estate, was not sufficient proof of malfeasance to deprive him of his commissions, although he must account to the estate, of course, for the money so received by him.

3. Biddle's Appeal, 129 Pa. St. 26; Parker's Estate, 64 Pa. St. 307. See also Cook v. Lowry, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 20; modified on appeal in 95 N. Y. 103.

4. The omission to make regular returns to the secretary's office, will not deprive a trustee, other than an executor or administrator, of his right to commissions, except where the estate has received an injury by such omission. Muckerfuss v. Heath, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 182. See also Morgan v. Morgan, 4 Dem. (N. Y.) 353.

No allowance will be made to the trustee if he has rendered no valuable services to the trust. And if the services rendered were rendered for his own advantage, rather than in the interest of the trust, he can make no charge therefor.¹

Serving as a merely nominal trustee, with no active duties to perform and no responsibilities, will not entitle him to make any charge therefor.² Services needlessly rendered will not be paid for.³

The instrument creating the trust may take the question of compensation out of the hands of the court altogether by stipulating that the trustee shall receive none,⁴ or by fixing what his compensation shall be.⁵ And where the beneficiary is sui juris

A trustee will be entitled to remuneration for his skill and care in managing the estate, and such remuneration will not be the less because of the fact that he has been charged with interest on certain funds by reason of his misconduct in relation to them. Winder v. Diffenderffer, 2 Bland (Md.) 166.

1. In Reiff's Appeal, 124 Pa. St. 145, the testator divided his estate into as many portions as he had children; as to the shares intended for his daughters, he provided that one be given to each, to be held by her in trust, to receive the income for her life, and her share to be thereupon paid over to her children then living, or to their issue. In default of issue, the share was to be held in trust, to be paid to the testator's surviving children, or to the issue of such children as should be deceased. One of his daughters survived him, and died without issue. One of his sons died in the daughter's lifetime, leaving children who survived her. Upon these facts the court held that the share received by such deceased daughter was her own for life, and subject only to a liability against her estate to pay it over to the remainder-men at her death, and she was entitled to no compensation out of the fund as a trustee for her services in taking care of it.

2. Henderson v. Sherman, 47 Mich. 267.

Where it appears from the instrument creating the trust that it was not the intention that any commissions should be allowed conventional trustees for their services in executing the trust, and very little labor is imposed upon them, and very little of their time required, and the trust is in its nature somewhat of a public character, and in its execution the trustees are engaged in subserving great and important public interests, commissions will not be allowed. Northern Cent. R. Co. v. Keighler, 29 Md. 572.

In the absence of a contract for compensation, see Wetmore v. Brown, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 133.

3. A trustee who could have settled his trust by merely handing the funds, etc., over, will not be allowed a charge for filing an account. Harris v. Sheldon (Pa. 1889), 16 Atl. Rep. 828; 24 W. N. C. (Pa.) 370.

Testamentary trustees who have made up their accounts each year, the same, however, not having been ordered by the surrogate nor settled, do not thereby acquire the right to claim commissions annually. Brush v. Smith, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 477.

4. A trustee who accepts a trust coupled with an interest, with no contract as to compensation, is entitled to none. Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622; 79 Am. Dec. 116.

5. A case where the rate of interest is fixed by the terms of the trust deed does not come within the general law specifying the commissions of trustees. Charleston College v. Willingham, 13 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 195.

Where by the terms of the trust deed the trustee is to receive twelve and one-half per cent., this will not be sufficient to avoid it, where no proof appears that such compensation was unconscionable. Donelson v. Posey, 13 Ala. 752.

Where the compensation of one of the testamentary trustees was intrusted by the testator to the discretion of the other trustees, it was held that the court had no right to interfere to control its exercise while the trustees continued to exercise this discretionary power in good faith. Hawley v. James, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 318.

Where the testator said that the tesand competent to act, a valid agreement may be made between the trustee and the beneficiary which will bind the court in the control of the trust, and the allowance of compensation.¹ Where a will has fixed a certain compensation and the same has been paid to the first executor or trustee, a successor in the trust is entitled to an allowance for services rendered.²

The trustee may waive his right to compensation,³ although his waiver will not estop him from receiving commissions subsequently earned.⁴

He will not as a rule be permitted to fix the amount which he shall receive for his services. This must be determined by the court or by the terms of the instrument by which the trust was created.⁵

The allowance of compensation rests within the sound discretion of the court. Except so far as the trustee's remuneration is governed by the terms of the instrument of trust, or by contract, or by statute, the court may diminish or increase the allowance, or refuse it altogether, as it sees fit.⁶

tamentary trustee, whom he also appointed his executor, should have ten per cent. on the whole amount of property which should come into his hands as trustee, it was held that he was entitled to this percentage on the whole amount of the property, and not on the income only, independent of the amount allowed him by the orphans' court as executor, and that in this respect the two offices were to be looked upon as distinct as if filled by two different persons. Mitchell v. Holmes, 1 Md. Ch. 287.

Where the trust instrument provides that the trustee shall have a reasonable compensation for his services, he is not confined to the statutory allowance, but his compensation will be whatever shall be determined, upon judicial investigation, to be reasonable under the circumstances, regardless of the statute. Matter of Schell, 53 N. Y. 263.

A testator created a dry trust and gave the trustee $5,000 for his services. It was held that there was, notwithstanding that the compensation was out of proportion to the labor, a consideration for the legacy which gave it preference over legacies such as were merely bounties—at least, that, so long as the trust continued in force, it should be so held. Harper's Appeal, 111 Pa. St. 243.

Powers were given by will to the two executors as trustees of the testator's niece, authorizing them to act collectively or individually in all matters appertaining to the estate, and giving to each $3,000 "in lieu of any and all commissions, and in full compensation for their services in closing up my estate and making distribution thereof, in conformity with and on the conditions herein before stated." This was held to cover their whole compensation, and they could receive no separate commissions as trustees. Brownson v. Roberts, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 576.

1. Bowker v. Pierce, 130 Mass. 262; Jackson v. Jackson, 3 N. J. Eq. 113.

2. Young v. Smith, 9 Bush (Ky.) 429.

3. Ridgely v. Gittings, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 58; Vestry, etc. v. Barksdale, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 197; Haglar v. McCombs, 66 N. Car. 345; Barry v. Barry, 1 Md. Ch. 20.

A trustee having waived all claim to commissions before his appointment, and having procured his appointment under a family arrangement, in which he was himself concerned, on the express agreement and understanding, by parol, and proved by parol evidence, that no compensation was to be charged, is entitled to nothing but his actual expenses. Ridgely v. Gittings, 2 Har. & G. (Md.) 58.

4. Denmead v. Denmead, 62 Md. 321.

Nor will the trustee forfeit his right to commissions by the mere expression of an intention to charge nothing. Eversfield v. Eversfield, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 12.

5. Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 395.

6. Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257.

(2) Double Compensation.—The fact that the trustee is receiving compensation as executor or administrator, or in any other capacity, will not necessarily deprive him of his right to commissions for services rendered or responsibilities borne as trustee, where the duties are separate.¹

6. The Duty of Good Faith.—a. IN GENERAL.—Good faith is at once the duty of a trustee and his protection.² A trustee who

Where the statute provides for the payment of certain commissions, the court has no discretion to allow or disallow them. King v. Talbot, 40 N. Y. 96.

1. Clark v. Anderson, 10 Bush (Ky.) 99; Laytin v. Davidson, 29 Hun (N. Y.) 622; 95 N. Y. 263; Matter of Jackson, 32 Hun (N. Y.) 200; Hall v. Campbell, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 415; Matter of Mason, 98 N. Y. 527; Matter of Crawford, 113 N. Y. 560.

This exception to the general doctrine that double commissions will be denied, is explained by Finch, J., in Johnson v. Lawrence, 95 N. Y. 162, as follows: "Taking the adjudged cases together, they appear to establish that to entitle the same persons to commissions as executors and as trustees, the will must provide, either by express terms or by fair intendment, for the separation of the two functions and duties, one duty to precede the other and to be performed before the latter is begun, or substantially so performed, and must not provide for the co-existence, continuously and from the beginning, of the two functions and duties." Matter of Mason, 98 N. Y. 527. See also Phoenix v. Livingston, 101 N. Y. 451; Matter of Crawford, 113 N. Y. 560.

The New York Statute of 1866, which gave to testamentary trustees the same commissions allowed by law to executors and administrators, applies to the case where such trustees have also been executors, provided that the will discriminates between their office as executors and trustees; and, in such case, they may be allowed full commissions as trustees, although they have already received full commissions as executors, on their final accounting in that character. Matter of Carman, 3 Redf. (N. Y.) 46.

Certain persons were named as executors and trustees, by a will which created a series of trust estates running for the lives of the beneficiaries, and requiring the setting apart of money, the partitioning of land, and the management of the estates. It was held that commissions could be claimed in both capacities, but that the trustees were not entitled to commissions on the value of the real estate left unsold at the termination of the trusts. Phoenix v. Livingston, 101 N. Y. 451.

A trustee may receive commissions as upon six separate trusts, although the property has not been divided, where six trusts were created by the will, and the trustee has actually managed the property and paid over the income to the six beneficiaries. Clute v. Gould, 28 Hun (N. Y.) 348.

Where the executor is also a trustee, and the will contemplated a separation of the powers and duties incident to each capacity, a settlement of the executorial accounts having been made, the allowance of commissions therein will not prevent a further compensation by way of commissions for services as trustee, upon the settlement of his accounts in the latter capacity. Matter of Willets, 112 N. Y. 289, 665.

In the following cases the duties were held to be so inseparably blended that double commissions must be denied: Johnson v. Lawrence, 95 N. Y. 154; Matter of Hood, 98 N. Y. 363; Matter of McAlpine (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. St. Rep. 532. Great care should be taken to prevent double compensation. See Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257; Holley v. S. G., 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 284; Blake v. Pegram, 101 Mass. 592.

2. Good Faith.—Absolute good faith is required of him. In Bound v. South Carolina R. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 853, the court, by Simonton, J., said: "A trustee, in dealing with his cestui que trust, or in the management of the trust estate, must always show uberrima fides. He must never lose sight of the fact that he is acting for another, who is the real beneficiary; and no thought or hope or purpose of personal advantage can have part in the motive for or in the result of his act." See also Juzan v. Toulmin, 9 Ala. 662; 44 Am. Dec. 448; Ellig v. Naglee, 9 Cal. 683; Colton v. Stanford, 82 Cal. 351; 16 Am. St.

acts in good faith is treated with indulgence by the courts, and, in the absence of inexcusable neglect, misconduct or fraud, will be relieved from any responsibility for loss.¹

Any want of good faith will of itself create a presumption of Rep. 137; Fairman v. Bavin, 29 Ill. 75; First Nat. F. Ins. Co. v. Salisbury, 130 Mass. 310; Diffenderfer v. Winder, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 311; Powers v. Kueckhoff, 41 Mo. 425; 97 Am. Dec. 281; Chesley v. Chesley, 49 Mo. 540; Fraser v. Davie, 11 S. Car. 56. See also California Code, § 7228; Dakota Civ. Code 1298.

1. Cromie v. Bull, 81 Ky. 646; Matlocks v. Moulton, 84 Me. 545; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 185; 35 Am. Dec. 277; Bryant v. Russell, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 540; Perrine v. Vreeland, 33 N. J. Eq. 102, affirmed 33 N. J. Eq. 596; Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 76; Thompson v. Brown, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 619; Denton v. Sanford, 103 N. Y. 607; Crabb v. Young, 92 N. Y. 56; Stewart v. Kismam, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 271.

Acts of a trustee done in good faith, and for the benefit of the estate, will be sanctioned, even though not strictly legal. Putnam v. Ritchie, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 391.

A trustee does not transcend his power or abuse his trust by paying over to his beneficiary the funds of the estate in good faith, under authority from the instrument of trust to do so, when in his judgment it seems necessary. Kimball v. Reding, 31 N. H. 352; 64 Am. Dec. 333.

Where money is bequeathed to a trustee to be paid over to the testator's son, at such times and in such sums as in the judgment of the trustee his interest shall seem to require, the court will not, ordinarily, make the trustee accountable for money actually paid over by him in good faith. Kimball v. Reding, 31 N. H. 352; 64 Am. Dec. 333.

If a trustee makes a sale or investment in good faith, the court will be slow to make him account for any loss. Dorsett v. Frith, 25 Ga. 537.

When trustees, in the sale of real estate under an authority, act in good faith, and for what they consider the best interest of the cestuis que trustent, they will not be accountable beyond the amount of the sale. Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 7 Am. Dec. 513.

A party who agrees with two others to unite in the purchase of land, each to furnish one-third of the purchase-money, such party to conduct the negotiations and buy the land for the lowest possible price, his position is that of a trustee towards his associates, and he is bound to exercise the utmost good faith toward them and to share with them all the profits of the bargain. King v. Wise, 43 Cal. 628.

A trustee who had a large number of houses belonging to the trust estate, in good faith and in pursuance of a definite policy, demanded such high rents that many of the houses remained empty. It was held that he was not to be charged with what he might have received had he let the houses on the best terms obtainable. Pleasanton's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 362.

Where a debt, intended to be secured by a trust deed, is not correctly described in the deed, though the creditor may, by identifying it, recover it out of the trust fund, while that remains; yet if the trustee has in good faith paid out the trust fund to discharge other debts, without any notice of the mistake by the creditor to the trustee, the creditor cannot make the trustee personally responsible. Almond v. Russell, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 183.

Where the instrument creating the trust gives the trustee discretion to do, or not to do a particular thing, the courts will not command or prohibit the exercise of the power, so long as the trustee is acting in good faith and is not influenced by improper motives. Read v. Patterson, 44 N. J. Eq. 211; 6 Am. St. Rep. 877.

Where a trustee has, in good faith and at a fair price, taken land from a debtor to an estate, in satisfaction of a debt which cannot be collected in money, such land becomes trust property, and the trustee cannot sell it without an order of the court. For this reason, if he, a few days after the transfer, has refused an offer made to him by a third person to take the land off his hands at the same price, this refusal will not operate to charge him with any subsequent depreciation in its value. Foscoe v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 440.

wrong against him,¹ whereas, if he exercises good faith in his acts as trustee, he will be protected, even though the trust subsequently be declared void.²

Conduct in relation to the trust property which is fraudulent in its nature or tendency, is deemed to be the individual conduct of the trustee; its consequences, if injurious, are imputed to him personally, and his own estate will be held therefor.³

1. See Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 292.

The rule that the burden of proving the perfect good faith of any transaction between the trustee and the beneficiary is upon the trustee, applies to a mortgage by a legatee and her husband of her residuary legacy, given to an executor to secure a debt of the husband to the executor; also to a subsequent deed of trust from the life annuitant to secure the same debt. Pairo v. Vickery, 37 Md. 467.

2. Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 61.

3. Trustees to sell and pay debts, when they sell within a reasonable time and apply the proceeds to pay the debts, execute their trust; but in case of a fraudulent sale and the subsequent application of the proceeds to the debts, the trustees would be answerable for the difference between the full value at the time, and the price brought, with interest. Cleghorn v. Love, 24 Ga. 590.

Thus, where a testamentary trustee caused improvements to be made on his beneficiary's land by representing that a lease would be given, when no such lease could be made, was responsible out of his own estate for the value of the improvements. Findley v. Wilson, 3 Litt. (Ky.) 390.

Where a trustee obtained from the beneficiary a release of his contingent remainder in the trust fund, for an inadequate consideration, and concealed from him a material fact, as, for example, that part of the funds had been used in the purchase of land which had been conveyed to the trustee's wife, such release should be held invalid for the suppression of this fact, though the beneficiary is of full age, and employed counsel to examine the records, etc., to determine the value of his interest. Simpson, C. J., dissenting. Waldrop v. Leaman, 30 S. Car. 428. See also McCook v. Harp, 81 Ga. 229; Deegan v. Capner, 44 N. J. Eq. 339.

If a trustee acting in bad faith, prevents a sale of the stock held by him in trust while it possesses some value, he must account for any loss which ensues by reason of depreciation, unless evidence is adduced as to the market value of the stock when the sale could have been made, and of the receipt of any dividends or interest by the stockholders for the amount paid in. He will also be held for interest from the time the trust was acknowledged. Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 292.

In the same case, the trustee of certain shares of stock made a very advantageous sale of other shares of the same stock which belonged to him, and transferred the trust stock to the same persons without consideration. Subsequently, the cestui que trust, ignorant of either transaction, urged him to dispose of the trust property, and he, although in a position to know that in a few days its value would be merely nominal, dissuaded the cestui que trust from selling, by alleging its great value. The trustee was held liable for want of a faithful performance of his duty, and the court ruled that the cestui que trust could not be compelled to receive worthless shares in satisfaction. Snyder v. McComb, 39 Fed. Rep. 292.

If a trust fund, or any part thereof, is misapplied by anyone, and the trustee who has not applied to the court for direction, receives from the one misapplying, any property as payment or security, he must state the transaction plainly, or answer for the consequences which may result from his failure to do so. Wayman v. Jones, 4 Md. Ch. 500. It is immaterial whether goods are converted into money or not; trustees are equally accountable to creditors whose rights to the goods or proceeds are established; and if the trustees pay away the proceeds pendente lite, they are responsible, and where there is no allegation that the trustees are insolvent, transient or irresponsible, or the fund is in a hazardous condition, the court will not grant nor sustain an injunction. Thayer v. Swift, Harr. (Mich.) 430.

A trustee who intentionally destroys the written evidence of his trust, places himself in a position where the court

A distinction in respect to the trustee's liability is made between a trustee whose control of the property is absolute and one who is the mere repository of the legal title. One who is in possession is held to a strict accountability.¹ But in the other case, the trustee is bound only to good faith and reasonable diligence, and liable only for gross negligence.² But evidence of good faith will not shield him from the consequences of his inexcusable neglect or imprudence.³

b. USING THE TRUST FOR PERSONAL GAIN.—In the execution of the trust, duty and interest must not be allowed to come into conflict. Nor will any opportunity for conflict be permitted. The trustee is forbidden to reap any personal advantage from his position, or deal with the trust property for his own benefit,⁴ and is bound to make all reasonable presumptions against him. Jones v. Knauss, 31 N. J. Eq. 609; 32 N. J. Eq. 323.

Where a trustee has bought for the trust estate, a mortgage, owned by himself on property at the time worth much less than the amount of the mortgage, his liability for the amount of such investment is not affected by the fact that on a sale of the property under the mortgage it is bid in by order of the beneficiaries, and a conveyance of it made to one of them, when their suit is based altogether upon the false representations of the trustee as to the value of the property, and on learning the real value, they promptly demand that he take back the property and account for the amount invested in the mortgage. Nichols' Appeal, 157 Mass. 20.

1. Bradshaw v. Cruise, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 260; Draper v. Joiner, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 612; 49 Am. Dec. 719; Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333; Lowry v. McGee, 3 Head (Tenn.) 269.

2. Hester v. Wilkinson, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 215; 44 Am. Dec. 303; Carter v. Rolland, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 333.

3. See supra, this title, Duty of Diligence; Bogart v. Van Velsor, 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 718.

4. Sloo v. Law, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 459; Campbell v. Campbell, 8 Fed. Rep. 460; Saltmarsh v. Beene, 4 Port. (Ala.) 291; 30 Am. Dec. 525; Wright v. Ross, 36 Cal. 432; Page v. Naglee, 6 Cal. 241; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; Miller v. Davidson, 8 Ill. 518; 44 Am. Dec. 715; Hughes v. Hughes, 87 Ala. 652; Sypher v. McHenry, 18 Iowa 232; Pugh v. Bell, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 399;

Richardson v. Spencer, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 450; Handlin v. Davis, 81 Ky. 34; Smith v. Townshend, 27 Md. 368; 92 Am. Dec. 637; Arnold v. Brown, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 96; 35 Am. Dec. 296; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; Loring v. Salisbury Mills, 125 Mass. 138; 97 Am. Dec. 107; Nichols' Appeal, 157 Mass. 20; Emerson v. Atwater, 7 Mich. 12; Jones v. Smith, 33 Miss. 215; Stine v. Wilkison, 10 Mo. 75; Sallee v. Chandler, 26 Mo. 124; Jamison v. Glascock, 29 Mo. 191; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 20 N. J. Eq. 141; Dodd v. Wakeman, 26 N. J. Eq. 488; Ellicott v. Chamberlin, 38 N. J. Eq. 604; Wyckoff v. Wyckoff, 44 N. J. Eq. 56; Howell v. Baker, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 118; Van Epps v. Van Epps, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 237; Garniss v. Gardiner, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 128; Schieffelin v. Stewart, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 620; 7 Am. Dec. 507; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475; Parkist v. Alexander, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 394; Reed v. Warner, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 656; Vestal v. Sloan, 76 N. Car. 127; Tagg v. Bowman, 99 Pa. St. 376; Chorpenning's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 789; Whitman v. Bowden, 27 S. Car. 53; Baker's Appeal, 120 Pa. St. 33; Bass v. Lucas, 7 S. Car. 116; Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 214; 16 Am. Dec. 648; Merriman v. Russell, 39 Tex. 285; Graff v. Castleman, 5 Rand. (Va.) 195; 16 Am. Dec. 741; Coltrane v. Worrell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 434; Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 367. See also California Code, §§ 7229, 7231; Dakota Civ. Code, §§ 1299, 1301; Georgia, § 2332; Titherington v. Hodge, 81 Ky. 286. See article by Russell Duane in 30 Am. Law Reg. 569, on "The Liabilities Arising out of the Employment of Trust Funds in Partnerships." See supra, this title, Conversion.

A trustee has no right to apply the trust fund to the payment of a debt which he claims is owing to him from the cestui que trust, especially if the latter disputes the debt. Terry v. Bale, 1 Dem. (N. Y.) 452.

Where land belonging to a wife is conveyed by the husband and wife to a trustee, in trust to sell for the use of the grantors, the land being unsold, it cannot be held by the trustee, as against a subsequent bona fide mortgagee without notice, in satisfaction of debts due to him from the husband before the mortgage was executed. McClanachan v. Siler, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 280.

A trustee may not settle a debt due to the trust estate by receiving a credit on his individual obligation to the debtor. Maynard v. Cleveland, 76 Ga. 52.

Nor will a trustee be permitted to settle a debt owing to him in his fiduciary capacity by merely cancelling one due from him individually to the trust debtor. If, however, the cestui que trust adopts the settlement and sues the trustee's sureties to make good the amount, the cestui que trust will not afterward be permitted to recover it from the original debtor. Sweet v. Jeffries, 67 Mo. 420.

One receiving a claim from another, in trust to collect it, and applying the proceeds in the discharge of debts, to which third persons are sureties, is accountable for the proceeds at the nominal amount for which it was made available to him, in the discharge or payment of his own debt. Smith v. McGehee, 14 Ala. 404.

A party who receives an estate from another under an agreement to deliver it to a third person, cannot refuse to do so because the person who delivers it to him is indebted to himself or others. Sledge v. Clopton, 6 Ala. 589.

A trustee authorized by his cestui que trust to sell land, and receive one-half in cash, and take a mortgage for the balance, is liable to the cestui que trust for the whole amount, although the note is not yet due, if he gets the mortgage note discounted and uses the proceeds himself. Brown v. Cowell, 116 Mass. 461. But compare Patterson v. Lennig, 118 Pa. St. 571, where the rule was held not to apply, upon the following facts: The owners of stock of an insolvent corporation intrusted it to one of their number, who was himself a creditor, to be applied in the discharge of debts, the surplus to be returned to the contributors. Four years after paying the other creditors, the trustee paid his own debt with the stock which remained, at a fair valuation.

A trustee is not allowed to alien trust funds for the liquidation of his own debts. Graff v. Castleman, 5 Rand. (Va.) 195.

He may not mortgage the trust property for his own debts. Brewster v. Galloway, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 558; Merriman v. Russell, 39 Tex. 278.

If a trustee who borrows money for his own use, assigns an order or decree in favor of the trust estate as security, the assignment is invalid. Brewster v. Galloway, 4 Lea (Tenn.) 558.

The receiving of a bonus by a trustee for lending the trust funds, does not of itself show bad faith. The trustee, however, must charge himself with the bonus. Sherman v. Lanier, 39 N. J. Eq. 249.

A trustee receiving gifts from the tenants of his estate, should be punished more severely than simply by being compelled to give up the sums he has received, though possibly the deprivation of all his commission might be too severe. Jacobus v. Munn, 38 N. J. Eq. 622.

A trustee is not permitted to use the trust property for his own benefit, and his being the father of the cestuis que trustent, and maintaining them in the meantime, do not affect the question. Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 213; 16 Am. Dec. 648.

An agent who had charge of his principal's real estate during his absence, let a portion of it and received rents, but neglected to pay taxes, in consequence of which the property was sold at a tax sale, the agent being the purchaser. It was held that the court would enjoin the agent from executing a writ of possession under a judgment obtained by default against his principal for the land so purchased. Morris v. Joseph, 1 W. Va. 256; 91 Am. Dec. 386.

A testator gave a portion of his estate to A, as trustee, to pay the income at his discretion to the testator's son B for his life, and on his death to divide the same equally among B's children. B had previously compromised with his creditors, who accepted a percentage and discharged him from the balance, A being among them and doing the same. B afterward made his note his acts will be scrutinized with great care for the prevention of any improper use of his trust. The doctrine is a familiar one that every presumption is indulged against the trustee who has personal dealings with the trust. Nor can he, after accepting the

for the balance to A, who, with B's consent, took payment therefor out of the income which he was to pay to B. This was held to be an abuse of his discretion as trustee. Clement's Appeal, 49 Conn. 519.

A trustee, though chargeable with all profits which he himself may have secretly made out of his trust relation, will not be held to answer for what some one else has been enabled to make through an accidental connection with him. Bent v. Priest, 10 Mo. App. 562.

In order that a charge may be made by the trustee against the trust fund, for articles furnished the cestui que trust by the latter's express desire, upon the faith and credit of said fund, it must be shown that the articles were reasonably worth the sum charged, and that no profit was made by him thereon. Cleveland v. Pollard, 37 Ala. 556.

Parties who deal with an executor or trustee, and co-operate with him in misapplying assets or trust funds, in breach of the duties of the executor, or in breach of the trust, cannot use such transactions as a defense against the claim of creditors, legatees, or cestuis que trustent; and the application of assets or trust fund by the executor or trustee to the discharge of his individual debts is, unless the estate or trust is indebted to the executor or trustee, a violation of the trust. Jackson v. Updegraffe, 1 Rob. (Va.) 114.

A trustee's promise to allow his personal debt as a credit upon a note held by him as trustee will not bind the trust; and a breach thereof is no defense to the note, even though the personal debt may have become barred by statute from delay to sue induced by the promise. Vason v. Beall, 58 Ga. 500.

Transaction for His Benefit Indirectly.

—A sale by a trustee, directly or indirectly, to a corporation in which he is a large owner, is as fraudulent as an outright transfer to himself. Robbins v. Butler, 24 Ill. 387.

A majority of the trustees in one religious corporation were also trustees of another. Acting as such trustees, they conveyed certain real estate from one corporation to the other, without the payment of any price, but for the sole purpose of affording pecuniary aid gratuitously. It was held that these facts alone established the fraudulent character of the transaction. St. James Church v. Church of the Redeemer, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 356.

One who, by agreement with the owner of land which is about to be sold on execution, becomes the purchaser under a promise to reconvey, stands, until the obligation to reconvey is discharged, in the relation of trustee, within the rule which restricts a trustee from dealing with the trust property for his own benefit. Vestal v. Sloan, 76 N. Car. 127.

A contract entered into with the trust for the benefit of the trustee's wife or child, is subject to the same restrictions that govern a trustee's personal dealings with the trust. Dunham v. Milhous, 70 Ala. 596; Carter v. Burr, 46 N. J. Eq. 134; affirmed 47 N. J. Eq. 599.

Where trustees make investments in securities which they are obliged to sell within two years, and each one of them, in the absence of the other, at a judicial sale, buys for his son, at about two-thirds the amount of the investment, the son just having reached his majority, being in his father's employ at a small compensation, not present at the sale nor in any wise consulted; and the father admitting the property sold to be worth $300, at least, more than his bid, and retaining the possession of the deed and of the property, and managing it for all for his own protection, and continuing to pay interest on the original sum so invested for several years, such sale will not be upheld, but the property will be decreed to be liable for the whole amount due upon such investment, and another sale of the premises ordered. Carter v. Burr, 46 N. J. Eq. 134; affirmed 47 N. J. Eq. 599. See also Higgins v. Curtiss, 82 Ill. 28; Dundas' Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 325.

But it is not a fraud per se, for a trustee to lend a part of the trust fund to his son, if the loan is well secured. Caldwell v. Boyd, 109 Ind. 447.

If he contracts with himself, the contract will not stand. Pickett v. School Dist. No. 1, 25 Wis. 551; 3 Am. Rep. 105. See also Cumberland Coal Co.

trust, dispute the title of his cestui que trust nor set up any claim adverse thereto.¹ Nor may he make any admission to the prejudice of the trust fund and against the cestuis que trustent.²

c. BUYING AT HIS OWN SALE.—He may not buy at his own sale, either directly or through another,³ unless the peculiar circumstances of the case will justify the court, upon application, in directing the sale to be made, or unless the several parties in

v. Sherman, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 553; People v. Township Board, 11 Mich. 222; Whitcote v. Lawrence, 3 Ves. 740.

1. Benjamin v. Gill, 45 Ga. 110; Smith v. Sutton, 74 Ga. 528; McLeran v. Melvin, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 195; Irby v. Kitchell, 42 Ala. 438.

A person who holds the naked legal title, the trust being satisfied, cannot assert that title in an action of ejectment to recover the land from a beneficiary who has the entire beneficial interest. Lockhart v. Canfield, 48 Miss. 470.

The executor or administrator of a trustee holding the trust estate at his death, is estopped from setting up another title to defeat that under which his intestate held. Colburn v. Broughton, 9 Ala. 351.

A trustee for a feme covert and her children, under an appointment from the chancery court, who knew, at the time of his acceptance, that the deed creating the trust was fraudulent as to creditors, assumes all the duties, liabilities, and disabilities which attach to ordinary trustees, and is estopped from setting up against the beneficiaries creditors' claims or his own claims as surety of the debtor. Henderson v. Segars, 28 Ala. 352.

A trustee acting for another person in selling land, and receiving the purchase-money, is estopped from questioning his principal's title to the premises, or to the proceeds of the sale. Von Hurter v. Spengeman, 17 N. J. Eq. 185.

2. Thomas v. Bowman, 29 Ill. 426; Thomas v. Bowman, 30 Ill. 84; McKissick v. Pickle, 16 Pa. St. 140; Mayrant v. Guignard, 3 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 112.

3. See AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 375; ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 960; Wormley v. Wormley, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 421; Michoud v. Girod, 4 How. (U. S.) 503; Allen v. Gillette, 127 U. S. 589; Keith v. Kellam, 35 Fed. Rep. 243; Saltmarsh v. Beene, 4 Port. (Ala.) 283; 30 Am. Dec. 525; James v. James, 55 Ala. 525; Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622; 79 Am. Dec. 117; Wright v. Campbell, 27 Ark. 637; Boyd v.

Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146; Van Dyke v. Johns, 1 Del. Ch. 93; 12 Am. Dec. 76; Renew v. Butler, 30 Ga. 954; Thorp v. McCullum, 6 Ill. 614; Casey v. Casey, 14 Ill. 112; Kruse v. Steffens, 47 Ill. 112; Munn v. Burges, 70 Ill. 604; Bush v. Sherman, 80 Ill. 160; Higgins v. Curtiss, 82 Ill. 28; Commercial Union Assur. Co. v. Scammon, 126 Ill. 355; 9 Am. St. Rep. 607; Clark v. Wilson, 77 Ind. 176; Narcissa v. Wathan, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 241; Stapp v. Toler, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 450; Price v. Thompson, 84 Ky. 219; Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355; 48 Am. Dec. 492; Freeman v. Harwood, 49 Me. 195; Dorsey v. Dorsey, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 410; 6 Am. Dec. 506; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; Mason v. Martin, 4 Md. 124; Davis v. Simpson, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 147; 9 Am. Dec. 500; Singstack v. Harding, 4 Har. & J. (Md.) 186; 7 Am. Dec. 669; North Baltimore Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Caldwell, 25 Md. 420; 90 Am. Dec. 67; Ricketts v. Montgomery, 15 Md. 46; Clark v. Blackington, 110 Mass. 369; Dyer v. Shurtleff, 112 Mass. 165; 17 Am. Rep. 77; Prichard v. Farrar, 116 Mass. 213; Brown v. Cowell, 116 Mass. 461; Dwight v. Blackmar, 2 Mich. 330; 57 Am. Dec. 130; Schwarz v. Wendell, Walk. (Mich.) 267; White v. Trotter, 14 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 30; 53 Am. Dec. 112; Scott v. Freeland, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 409; 45 Am. Dec. 310; Wasson v. English, 13 Mo. 176; Jamison v. Glascock, 29 Mo. 191; Grumley v. Webb, 44 Mo. 444; 100 Am. Dec. 304; Roberts v. Moseley, 64 Mo. 507; King v. Remington, 36 Minn. 15; Winn v. Dillon, 27 Miss. 494; Remick v. Butterfield, 31 N. H. 70; 64 Am. Dec. 316; Holt v. Webb, 36 N. H. 158; Den v. Wright, 7 N. J. L. 175; 11 Am. Dec. 546; Den v. Hillman, 7 N. J. L. 180; Den v. Hammel, 18 N. J. L. 73; Blauvelt v. Ackerman, 20 N. J. Eq. 141; Wright v. Smith, 23 N. J. Eq. 106; Smith v. Drake, 23 N. J. Eq. 302; Wakeman v. Dodd, 27 N. J. Eq. 564; Bassett v. Shoemaker, 46 N. J. Eq. 538; 19 Am. St. Rep. 435; Torrey

v. Bank of Orleans, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 649; De Caters v. De Chaumont, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 178; Child v. Brace, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 309; Campbell v. Johnston, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 148; Dickinson v. Codwise, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 214; Cram v. Mitchell, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 251; Sweet v. Jacocks, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 355; 31 Am. Dec. 252; Iddings v. Bruen, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 263; Chapin v. Weed, Clarke Ch. (N. Y.) 464; Sheldon v. Sheldon, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 220; Brothers v. Brothers, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 150; Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 304; Hill v. Frazier, 22 Pa. St. 320; McGinn v. Shaeffer, 7 Watts (Pa.) 412; Chorpenning's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 789; Hallman's Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 562; Hammond v. Stanton, 4 R. I. 65; Wilson v. Central Bridge, 9 R. I. 590; McCants v. Bee, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 383; 16 Am. Dec. 610; Mathews v. Dragand, 3 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 25; Tisdale v. Tisdale, 2 Sneed (Tenn.) 596; 64 Am. Dec. 775; Wade v. Harper, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 383; Hamblin v. Warnecke, 31 Tex. 91; Marsh v. Hubbard, 50 Tex. 203; Washington, etc., R. Co. v. Alexandria, etc., R. Co., 19 Gratt. (Va.) 592; 100 Am. Dec. 710; Geisse v. Beall, 3 Wis. 367; Puzey v. Senier, 9 Wis. 370; Gillett v. Gillett, 9 Wis. 194; Roller v. Spilmore, 13 Wis. 26; Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131; In re Taylor Orphan Asylum, 36 Wis. 534; Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mills Co., 43 Wis. 423; Newcomb v. Brooks, 16 W. Va. 32; Lewis v. Hillman, 3 H. L. Cas. 607; 18 Eng. L. & Eq. 34; Fox v. Mackreth, 2 Bro. C. C. 400; Gibson v. Jeyes, 6 Ves. Jr. 266.

Nor may an executor, administrator, or guardian, either directly or indirectly, become a purchaser at his own sale. Mulford v. Bowen, 9 N. J. Eq. 797; Price v. Morris, 5 McLean 4; Huston v. Cassidy, 13 N. J. Eq. 228; Mulford v. Minch, 11 N. J. Eq. 16; 64 Am. Dec. 472; Culver v. Culver, 11 N. J. Eq. 215; Scott v. Gamble, 9 N. J. Eq. 218.

It has been held in Louisiana, that a sale to curators or administrators is null and void. This has no application, however, to a sale made by an heir, of his interest in the succession, to the administrator; such a nullity is relative, and does not avail anybody, except the vendor. Peyton v. Enos, 16 La. Ann. 135; Vanwickle v. Matta, 16 La. Ann. 325; Dugas v. Gilbeau, 15 La. Ann. 581.

A testamentary trustee cannot make a legal transfer of the trust fund to his wife. Such transfer would create, at most, but an equity in the wife subordinate to that of the beneficiaries and as to them fraudulent. Leitch v. Wells, 48 Barb. (N. Y.) 637.

A trustee purchasing the trust property at his own sale, or procuring another to purchase it for him at such sale, holds it subject to the original trust. Herr's Estate, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 272; Rosenberger's Appeal, 26 Pa. St. 67.

The courts will not permit a trustee to acquire a title adverse to the interest of his cestui que trust, even by purchase at a judicial sale under a title superior to that conveyed to him as a trustee, and his grantee, under the sale, with notice actual or constructive, of the rights of the beneficiary and of her heirs, takes no better title. Roberts v. Moseley, 64 Mo. 507; Toole v. McKiernan, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 163.

Nor can a trustee of land, who is in possession, purchase an outstanding title, or acquire a personal interest by a tax sale, and set up the title which he thus acquires to defeat that of the beneficiary, in equity. Until he has surrendered the possession, he cannot claim adversely to the title under which he enters. O'Halloran v. Fitzgerald, 71 Ill. 53. See also Cushman v. Bonfield, 139 Ill. 219, affirming 36 Ill. App. 436.

In Greenlaw v. King, 5 Jur. 18, the court, by Lord Chancellor Cottingham, said: "The principle is not confined to a particular class of persons, such as guardians, trustees, or solicitors, but is a rule of universal application to all persons coming within the principle, which is, that no party can be permitted to purchase an interest where he has a duty to perform inconsistent with the character of purchaser." Cited and quoted in Torrey v. Bank of Orleans, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 663, and Maryland F. Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 422; 89 Am. Dec. 779. See also Keighler v. Savage Mfg. Co., 12 Md. 384; 71 Am. Dec. 600.

A trustee who buys in the trust property for his own benefit, who, although legally in possession of the trust property, refuses a rightful demand to deliver it to the cestui que trust, is chargeable with a conversion. Smith v. Frost, 42 N. Y. Super. Ct. 87. And this doctrine reaches all cases in which confidence has been reposed, and it extends as strongly to those who have gratuitously or officiously undertaken the management of another's property, as to those who are engaged for that purpose and paid for it. Wright v. Smith, 23 N. J. Eq. 106.

The rule applied where an administrator attempted to purchase a decedent's lands, which had been sold under an order obtained by him, to raise money for the payment of debts. Smith v. Drake, 23 N. J. Eq. 302.

A trustee, as such, became an accommodation indorser on his beneficiary's note, suffered a judgment to be rendered therefor against the beneficiary, and at the execution sale purchased the equitable interest at an inadequate price. It was held that this purchase was voidable, and that the trustee could be compelled to reconvey to the beneficiary and answer for all rents and profits. Ricketts' Appeal (Pa. 1888), 12 Atl. Rep. 60.

At public sale, where the interest of the trust estate calls for the highest possible price, the trustee cannot bid and purchase. Price v. Thompson, 84 Ky. 219; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 254. See also Carter v. Burr, 46 N. J. Eq. 134; Deegan v. Capner, 44 N. J. Eq. 339.

Equity will not allow a trust estate to be conveyed to one of several trustees before his duties as trustee are ended, although the consideration paid was the same as that for which the property was sold by them, unless it is for the benefit of the beneficiary that such conveyance is made. Boynton v. Brastow, 53 Md. 362.

A trustee is not allowed, by a sale of trust property on proceedings in partition at which he is the purchaser, to defeat the estate of the cestui que trust. The Statute of Limitations can no more run in his favor after such a purchase than before. Williams v. Van Tuyl, 2 Ohio St. 336.

Where the purchaser of real estate at a foreclosure sale was, at the time, the confidential advisor of the foreclosure defendant upon matters in connection therewith, he was held to be disqualified, on account of that trust relationship, from becoming a purchaser for himself, and required to account as trustee. Wakeman v. Dodd, 27 N. J. Eq. 564.

A trustee of land denied his cestui que trust's title, and instituted a suit at law to evict him, and the land was sold pendente lite on execution against the cestui que trust, the trustee becoming the purchaser at a grossly inadequate price. It was held that the land should stand as security to the trustee, for the amount paid by him, only. Keaton v. Cobb, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 443; 18 Am. Dec. 595.

Where a judgment held in trust for minors, is a lien upon the lands of a party, and prior judgment liens exist against the same land, which is the only estate of the judgment debtor, said land must be regarded as the trust subject, and the trustee will not be permitted to buy it at a judicial sale for his personal benefit. Feamster v. Feamster, 35 W. Va. 1.

Where a trustee, acting for others, sells an estate and becomes interested in the purchase, the cestui que trust is entitled, in a court of equity, to set aside the purchase, and have the property re-exposed for sale. Bank of Old Dominion v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 277; 74 Am. Dec. 302; McGregor v. Gardner, 14 Iowa 326; Sypher v. McHenry, 18 Iowa 232; Clark v. Lee, 14 Iowa 425.

The bill averred that the defendant trustee purchased at his own sale through a relative. The answer denied collusion between the defendant and the purchaser, but admitted that the immediate purchaser soon after conveyed to the defendant. It did not aver that the first purchaser paid for the property or received consideration from the defendant for the conveyance to him. It was held that this answer was an admission that the defendant was in fact a purchaser at his own sale. Higgins v. Curtiss, 82 Ill. 28.

Where at an administrator's sale land was bought by a stranger, and afterward, for a nominal consideration, conveyed by the purchaser to the administrator, the administrator's title is voidable if attacked within a reasonable time. Mitchell v. McMullen, 59 Mo. 252.

A sale by a trustee to himself, for a grossly inadequate consideration made through the medium of a third person, should be set aside. McNeil v. Gates, 41 Ark. 264.

In Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mill Co., 43 Wis. 433, the court, by Ryan, C. J., said: "A trustee is not barred from ever becoming a purchaser of what had once been part of the trust estate. When the title of the trust estate has passed by valid sale, in which the trustee has no interest, and all interest of interest consent to its consummation.¹ There is so evident a conflict between his personal interests and his duties as trustee, that the courts have, almost without exception, held such transactions constructively fraudulent. The courts will not only prevent fraud wherever possible, but they will remove all opportunity for fraud and all temptation to it. For this reason they will set aside such dealings, whether they appear to be fair or not.² The trustee's the cestui que trust in it has ceased, the trustee becomes a stranger to the property, and may purchase it like any other stranger. But, where the trustee's sale to a stranger is colorable only, and made in whole or in part for the use of the trustee, or upon any understanding, expressed or implied, between the trustee and the purchaser, for any future interest of the trustee in the purchase, or in the trust property purchased, a court of equity will deal with the trustee as a direct purchaser from himself, and will avoid his purchase at the suit of his cestui que trust. And where the trustee, having ostensibly conveyed to a stranger, suddenly becomes interested with his own grantee, the court of equity will regard the transaction with great jealousy, and void it in favor of the cestui que trust, upon slight evidence of collusion in the trustee's sale, between the trustee and the purchaser."

A sale of a trust estate and an immediate resale, as within two days, to the trustee, is conclusively presumed to be simply a means of getting the property into the hands of the trustee, and is as fraudulent as a direct sale by the trustee to himself. Abbot v. American Hard Rubber Co., 33 Barb. (N. Y.) 578.

B devised real estate to trustees in trust for his slaves, with the power to sell if one of the slaves, named Jack, desired to sell, and the trustees did sell for a grossly inadequate consideration, and after a week one of the trustees bought back for his own use the land sold at an advance. It was held that the interposition of a third person, and the inadequacy of the price, were both indicative of fraud. Smith v. Isaac, 12 Mo. 106.

Exceptions.—But a judgment plaintiff or mortgagee is not forbidden to purchase at his own sale. Murdock's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 461; 20 Am. Dec. 381. And the following cases are in conflict with the general doctrine.

Where A delivered to B a treasurer's deed for certain land, as security for a debt, it was held that B did not thereby sustain such a fiduciary relation as to prevent him from purchasing the same land at a subsequent treasurer's sale. Smith v. Reber, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 217.

In the absence of any proof of collusion, the fact that property was sold by a trustee for less than half its actual value, and was shortly afterward resold to him by the purchaser for the same amount, is not sufficient to charge him with speculation in violation of his duty. Boehlert v. McBride, 48 Mo. 505.

A trustee who holds a legal title to a railroad for the use of its bondholders, can purchase an outstanding title at a judicial sale or elsewhere, and hold it for his own use. Baker v. Springfield R. Co., 86 Mo. 75.

1. Parties acting as fiduciaries, and having the power to sell, cannot become purchasers of the trust property, unless such purchase is made under the authority of the court, or with the concurrence and approval of those interested. Faucett v. Faucett, 1 Bush (Ky.) 511; 89 Am. Dec. 639; Cumberland Coal, etc., Co. v. Sherman, 20 Md. 117; Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731.

In the absence of permission from the court, a trustee will never be permitted to buy the trust property. Carson v. Marshall, 37 N. J. Eq. 213; 38 N. J. Eq. 250.

2. The case of Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 252, is the leading case upon this subject. The early decisions of the English courts are considered by the court, speaking in that decision through Chancellor Kent. There the executor sold the trust property at public sale to his wife, and the court set aside the sale upon the ground that the trustee's interests conflicted with his duty, and the sale therefore could not stand. The court, by Chancellor Kent, said, following the ruling of Lord Eldon in Ex p. Bennett, 10 Ves. 385: "If the trustee can buy in an honest case, he may prime duty is to serve the highest interest of the estate. His is not only the negative obligation to do nothing that will impair the property held in trust, but he is charged with the positive duty of using every reasonable active endeavor to protect the estate from loss.

And where one trustee buys of his co-trustee, the same princiin a case having that appearance, but which, from the infirmity of human testimony, may be grossly otherwise; and yet the power of the court would not be equal to detect the deception. Human infirmity will rarely permit a man to exert against himself that providence which the vendor ought to exert, in order to sell the estate most advantageously for the cestuis que trustent, and which a purchaser is at liberty to exert for himself in order to purchase at the lowest price. If the trustee cannot bid for himself, he cannot, on the same principle, bid for another. The distinction of its being a weaker temptation is too thin to form a safe rule of justice." See also Bassett v. Shoemaker, 46 N. J. Eq. 538; 19 Am. St. Rep. 435.

In Michoud v. Girod, 4 How. (U. S.) 503, the court, by Wayne, J., said: "The general rule stands upon our great moral obligation to refrain from placing ourselves in relations which ordinarily excite a conflict between self-interest and integrity. It restrains all agents, public and private; but the value of the prohibition is most felt and its application is more frequent in the private relations in which the vendor and purchaser may stand toward each other. The disability to purchase is a consequence of that relation between them which imposes on the one a duty to protect the interest of the other, from the faithful discharge of which duty his own personal interest may withdraw him. In this conflict of interest the law wisely interposes. . . . The inquiry in such a case is not whether there was or was not fraud in fact. The purchase is void, and will be set aside at the instance of the cestui que trust, and a re-sale ordered, on the ground of the temptation to abuse and of the danger of imposition inaccessible to the eye of the court."

In Moore v. Moore, 5 N. Y. 256, the court, by Gardiner, J., said: "The law does not stop to speculate upon the probabilities that the agent has resisted temptation; it removes the temptation by proclaiming in advance that he shall not acquire the property."

The reason of the rule is well stated in Staats v. Bergen, 17 N. J. Eq. 554, by Beasley, C. J., as follows: "The rule is one of public policy. The trustee is not prevented from bidding for property which he himself sells, on the ground simply of the supposition of actual fraud, but because the law has established, as an inflexible rule, applicable to every emergency, that he shall not place himself in a situation in which he will be tempted to take advantage of his cestui que trust. This is a wise public regulation, intended to protect a species of property, which otherwise would be constantly exposed to peculiar hazard. The trustee must, therefore, submit to this regulation, and if he does an act in violation of it, no matter how pure his intention may be, such act is voidable at the instance of the person whom he represents. . . . At these sales, then, the trustee is forbidden to purchase, because his interest as such purchaser is opposed to the interest of his cestui que trust, and he acts therefore under a bias in his own favor. Nor does this rule rest, to any considerable extent, in the fact that, in a particular line of cases, the trustee has peculiar opportunities for the practice of fraudulent acts with regard to the property in his charge. The rule, to be efficacious, must be general, and the law implies, therefore, that in all cases of trust, such opportunities may exist, and consequently the prohibition is universal, that he may not do anything which, while it is an advantage to himself, is, or may be, a loss to the trust estate. So jealous is the law upon this point, that a trustee may not put himself in a position, in which to be honest must be a strain upon him."

In Gillett v. Gillett, 9 Wis. 194, the court, by Paine, J., said: "The rule is well settled that trustees are not permitted to purchase trust property; not because they might not, in many instances, make fair and honest disposition of it to themselves, but because the

ple controls, for joint trustees are, in contemplation of law, one collective trustee.¹ For the same reason, the trustee cannot act as agent for another in purchasing at his own sale, nor in any transaction where interest and duty conflict, for the same conflict between interest and duty will arise when he buys for another as when he buys for himself.²

The purchase of trust property by the trustee is voidable at the election of the party holding the beneficial interest, who may have it set aside as a matter of course and without any showing of cause.³

probability is so great that they would frequently do otherwise, without danger of detection, that the law considers it better policy to prohibit such purchases entirely than to assume them to be valid, except where they can prove them to be fraudulent." See also Puzey v. Senior, 9 Wis. 370; Roller v. Spillmore, 13 Wis. 26; Pickett v. School Dist. No. 1, 25 Wis. 551; 3 Am. Rep. 105; Stuart v. Mather, 32 Wis. 344; In re Taylor Orphan Asylum, 36 Wis. 552.

In Harrison v. McHenry, 9 Ga. 164; 52 Am. Dec. 434, the court, by Nesbit, J., said: "Trustees, generally, are unable to buy the property of their cestui que trust. The purchase is not in their case void per se, but the cestui que trust may come in, as a matter of right, and set it aside. He may do this whether the sale be bona fide or not. His right to set it aside does not depend upon the fairness of the transaction. The honesty of the trustee has nothing to do with it. The object of the rule is to secure fidelity of the trustee to the interests committed to his hands. To secure this, the law does not abrogate his purchase because it was fraudulent and injurious to the rights and interests of the cestui que trust, but goes upon the idea that he shall not be subjected to the temptation of violating his trust by committing a fraud. It shields him from the temptation by declaring him incapable of making a purchase which will bind those whom he represents; and it gives them the option of vacating or affirming the purchase, according as they may consider it their interest to do one or the other."

In Anderson v. Butler, 31 S. Car. 183, the court, by Simpson, C. J., said: "This doctrine has been long settled, both in England and this country, and it is a wise and wholesome principle. It strikes at once at the root of danger, and destroys it. It removes from the trustee the temptation to do wrong, and guarantees the faithful execution of his trust in the sale of the property of his cestui que trust." See Munson v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 75.

1. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250. See also infra, this title, Co-Trustees.

Where a trustee is a purchaser at the sale of a co-trustee, in order to render the sale utterly void by reason of the fraudulent acts of the seller, it is necessary to connect the purchaser with them. Beeson v. Beeson, 9 Pa. St. 279.

2. Bryson v. Rayner, 25 Md. 424; 90 Am. Dec. 69; Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 717; Gould v. Gould, 36 Barb. (N. Y.) 270; U. S. Rolling Stock Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 34 Ohio St. 450.

When a trustee appointed by a decree of the court to sell real estate, bids for and purchases the property for a third person at a public sale of the same, the sale should be set aside. North Baltimore Bldg. Assoc. v. Caldwell, 25 Md. 420; 90 Am. Dec. 67.

3. Lenox v. Lenox, Hempst. (U. S.) 225; Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219; Crutchfield v. Haynes, 14 Ala. 49; Charles v. Dubose, 29 Ala. 367; Carter v. Thompson, 41 Ala. 375; Wiswall v. Stewart, 32 Ala. 433; 70 Am. Dec. 549; McNeil v. Gates, 41 Ark. 264; Searcy v. Yarnell, 47 Ark. 269; Guererro v. Ballerino, 48 Cal. 118; Golson v. Dunlap, 73 Cal. 157; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; Van Dyke v. Johns, 1 Del. Ch. 93; 12 Am. Dec. 76; Bellamy v. Bellamy, 6 Fla. 62; Worthy v. Johnson, 8 Ga. 236; 52 Am. Dec. 399; Harrison v. McHenry, 9 Ga. 164; 52 Am. Dec. 435; Carr v. Houser, 46 Ga. 477; Anderson v. Green, 46 Ga. 361; Thorp v. McCullum, 6 Ill. 614; Robbins v. Butler, 24 Ill. 387; Miles v.

Wheeler, 43 Ill. 123; Kruse v. Steffens, 47 Ill. 112; Ogden v. Larrabee, 57 Ill. 389; Borders v. Murphy, 125 Ill. 577; Brackenridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 377; 20 Am. Dec. 123; Potter v. Smith, 36 Ind. 231; Murphy v. Teter, 56 Ind. 545; Rice v. Cleghorn, 21 Ind. 80; Bank of Old Dominion v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 277; 74 Am. Dec. 302; Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 284; 85 Am. Dec. 516; Sypher v. McHenry, 18 Iowa 232; McClanahan v. Henderson, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 388; 12 Am. Dec. 412; Price v. Thompson, 84 Ky. 219; Pratt v. Thornton, 28 Me. 355; 48 Am. Dec. 492; Boynton v. Brastow, 53 Me. 362; Patten v. Pearson, 60 Me. 220; Mason v. Martin, 4 Md. 124; Richardson v. Jones, 3 Gill & J. (Md.) 163; 22 Am. Dec. 293; Hoffman Steam Coal Co. v. Cumberland Coal, etc., Co., 16 Md. 456; 77 Am. Dec. 311; Jennison v. Hapgood, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 1; 19 Am. Dec. 258; Litchfield v. Cudworth, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Arnold v. Brown, 24 Pick. (Mass.) 96; 35 Am. Dec. 296; Ives v. Ashley, 97 Mass. 198; Burns v. Thayer, 115 Mass. 89; Learned v. Foster, 117 Mass. 365; Scott v. Freeland, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 409; 45 Am. Dec. 310; Jones v. Smith, 33 Miss. 215; Staats v. Bergen, 17 N. J. Eq. 554; Smith v. Drake, 23 N. J. Eq. 302; Deegan v. Capner, 44 N. J. Eq. 339; Bassett v. Shoemaker, 46 N. J. Eq. 538; 19 Am. St. Rep. 435; Jewett v. Miller, 10 N. Y. 406; 65 Am. Dec. 751; Boerum v. Schenck, 41 N. Y. 182; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 252; Graves v. Waterman, 63 N. Y. 658; Smith v. Frost, 70 N. Y. 65; Dodge v. Stevens, 94 N. Y. 209; Munson v. Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 103 N. Y. 58; Brothers v. Brothers, 7 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 150; Pitt v. Petway, 12 Ired. (N. Car.) 69; Brantly v. Kee, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 332; Hunt v. Bass, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 292; 24 Am. Dec. 274; Froneberger v. Lewis, 70 N. Car. 456; Ryden v. Jones, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 497; 9 Am. Dec. 660; Glass v. Great-house, 20 Ohio 503; Riddle v. Roll, 20 Ohio St. 572; Campbell v. Pennsylvania L. Ins. Co., 2 Whart. (Pa.) 53; Bunting's Estate, 5 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 623; Rosenberger's Appeal, 26 Pa. St. 67; Costen's Appeal, 13 Pa. St. 292; Patterson v. Lennig, 118 Pa. St. 571; Ex p. Wiggins, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 353; Edmondson v. Crenshaw, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 252; McClure v. Miller, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 107; 21 Am. Dec. 522; Zimmerman v. Harmon, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 165; Connally v. Hammond, 51 Tex. 647; Armstrong v. Campbell, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 236; 24 Am. Dec. 556; Mead v. Byington, 10 Vt. 116; Green v. Sargeant, 23 Vt. 466; 56 Am. Dec. 88; Bailey v. Robinson, 1 Gratt. (Va.) 4; 42 Am. Dec. 540; Moore v. Hilton, 12 Leigh (Va.) 1; Newcomb v. Brooks, 16 W. Va. 32; In re Taylor Orphan Asylum, 36 Wis. 534; Whitcomb v. Minchin, 5 Madd. 91; Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 678; Sanderson v. Walker, 13 Ves. 601; Ex p. Lacey, 6 Ves. 625; Ex p. Bennett, 10 Ves. 381; Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 355.

A conveyance of trust property from the trustee to himself is not ipso facto void; and where it is freed from suspicion by circumstances, is at least sufficient to give color of title. Veasey v. Graham, 17 Ga. 99; 63 Am. Dec. 228.

In Dodge v. Stevens, 94 N. Y. 209, the records disclosed that the trust estate had been purchased by the trustee. A suit was brought by the cestui que trust to compel the transfer of the title. It was held that the trustee could not be heard to contend that the defect of the trustee's title being apparent, no relief was required, such purchase being merely voidable and not void.

A, against whom a judgment had been recovered, assigned his property to B, to secure his claims against, and liabilities for, A; the property of A was sold on execution, and bid off at a low price by B's agent. The cestui que trust attended the sale, and declined to bid himself, but did not discover that the purchaser was the agent of B until eighteen years afterward. Upon a bill brought by A against B, it was held that the sale was voidable at the election of A; that the purchase was made by B as the trustee of A; that B would be accountable to A for the same, after his own claims were satisfied; and that the fact that his trust was coupled with an interest did not alter his relation as trustee. Bell v. Webb, 2 Gill (Md.) 122.

A trustee cannot become the purchaser of trust property in his charge at a sale under the trust agreement. Such purchases are void ipso jure, and may be set aside by the cestui que trust at his option, and irrespective of the question as to whether the bargain was advantageous or detrimental to either party. Star F. Ins. Co. v. Palmer, 41 N. Y. Super. Ct. 267. Such a transaction is voidable and not void, and a clear and unequivocal affirmation of the sale may bind the cestui, if he is under no legal disability and the act is voluntary, with full knowledge of all the facts, and free from undue influence arising out of the relation between the parties. Accepting the proceeds of such a sale would, in general, be an affirmation by the beneficiary of the sale; but where the proceeds are received under protest, and with an express reservation of the right to contest the validity of the sale, such receipt does not operate as an estoppel, nor otherwise preclude proceedings by the beneficiary to disaffirm the sale and obtain a resale. Boerum v. Schenck, 41 N. Y. 182.

While the decisions are for the most part clear on this point, they do not without exception go to the limit of the rule stated.

In Kruse v. Steffens, 47 Ill. 112, the facts were as follows: The auctioneer at an administrator's sale bid in the premises, and, without having made any payment or given any notes or other security therefor, exchanged deeds with the administrator, who took possession thereof, married the decedent's widow, and was appointed guardian of the minor heir, who, ten years after the sale, died, still a minor. The court held the sale to be voidable, and that the bringing of a bill to set it aside within a year after such death, was within a reasonable time.

The purchase of trust property by a trustee is voidable, and not void; and it is valid to pass the title as against strangers until rescinded. Union State Co. v. Tilton, 69 Me. 244.

Where a trustee, appointed by the court of chancery to sell land, sold and conveyed it to A, who, in fact, purchased for the trustee, and subsequently reconveyed it to him, the court of chancery, upon the application of the cestui que trust, compelled the trustee to reconvey it to him on the repayment of the purchase-money. There was no evidence that the cestui que trust ever assented to the purchase. Dorsey v. Dorsey, 3 Har. & J. (Md.) 410; 6 Am. Dec. 506.

A guardian or trustee will not be permitted to gain any advantage at the expense of the ward or cestui que trust. Hence, if he purchases the trust property, the sale may be set aside at the option of the ward or cestui que trust, even though full value was paid for such property. Clarke v. Deveau, 1 S. Car. 172. See also Culver v. Culver, 11 N. J.

Eq. 215; Mulford v. Bowen, 9 N. J. Eq. 797.

If a trustee trades with himself upon the trust fund, the cestui que trust may repudiate such act. Boyd v. Clements, 14 Ga. 639.

The court will sustain a bill to set aside a purchase by a trustee at his own sale made under a decree, although the sale was ratified without any objection on the part of the complainants, if there was no objectionable conduct on their part. Davis v. Simpson, 5 Har. & J. (Md.) 114; 9 Am. Dec. 500.

Where the trustee purchased the estate of his cestui que trust, the question is not whether he has made a profit, but the sale will be set aside as a matter of course, unless ratified with a full knowledge of the circumstances. Piatt v. Oliver, 2 McLean (U. S.) 267; Ricketts v. Montgomery, 15 Md. 46; Field v. Arrowsmith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185.

The courts will not permit a trustee to purchase for his own benefit property which, although not the subject of the trust, is so connected with it, that a sale of such property for less than its value will impair the trust fund, and if he buys for less than the value of the property, the advantage resulting inures to the benefit of the cestui que trust. Fulton v. Whitney, 66 N. Y. 548.

Under this rule, a receiver who has bought upon a foreclosure, property of which he held the equity of redemption as receiver, is forbidden to hold the property as against a cestui que trust who elects to claim the benefit of the purchase. Jewett v. Miller, 10 N. Y. 402; 61 Am. Dec. 751.

A cestui que trust need make no showing of fraud to successfully impeach the transaction. Price v. Winter, 15 Fla. 109; Grubbs v. McGlawn, 39 Ga. 675; Personneau v. Bleakley, 14 Ill. 15; Miles v. Wheeler, 43 Ill. 126; Barders v. Murphy, 125 Ill. 577; Bank of Old Dominion v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 8 Iowa 277; 74 Am. Dec. 302; Sypher v. McHenry, 18 Iowa 232; McGregor v. Gardner, 14 Iowa 326; Clark v. Lee, 14 Iowa 425.

The rule that a purchase of trust property by the trustee is voidable, and may be set aside at the will of the beneficiary, extends to a guardian ad

For it has been held that a bona fide purchase by the trustee of the property held by him in trust will be sustained, if made for a valuable consideration;¹ while others have held such a sale absolutely void.²

If the transaction is to be set aside, steps tending thereto must be taken within a reasonable time, or the silence of the cestui will be taken as acquiescence.³ And if the cestui que trust has given his consent to the purchase,⁴ or ratifies his trustee's item in a suit for partition under the statute. Gallatin v. Cunningham, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 361.

1. Such a sale will not be set aside when it is evident that the beneficiary intended the trustee to buy, and that there is no fraud, concealment, or advantage taken by the trustee. Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 284; 85 Am. Dec. 516.

A trustee to whom property has been conveyed in trust, may purchase the property, if he does so bona fide, and for value. Birdwell v. Cain, 1 Coldw. (Tenn.) 301.

A trustee sold trust property under a power for an adequate price, afterward purchased other property with his own funds, made improvements upon it, and finally exchanged it for the trust property so sold by him. It was held that no presumption of fraud arose from these circumstances, and that the trustee was only liable for the price for which he sold the property. De Bevoise v. Sandford, Hoffm. (N. Y.) 192.

2. Hamblin v. Warnicke, 31 Tex. 91; Miles v. Wheeler, 43 Ill. 123; Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 355; Ex p. Bennett, 10 Ves. 381; Wright v. Campbell, 27 Ark. 637; North Baltimore Bldg. Assoc. v. Caldwell, 25 Md. 420; 90 Am. Dec. 67; Korns v. Shaffer, 27 Md. 83.

Where trust property at a sale by the trustee, is purchased by a third person, in trust for the trustee and others, the sale is void. Hunt v. Bass, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 292; 24 Am. Dec. 274.

3. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 90; James v. James, 55 Ala. 525; Carter v. Thompson, 41 Ala. 375; Boyd v. Blankman, 29 Cal. 19; 87 Am. Dec. 146; VanDyke v. Johns, 1 Del. Ch. 93; 12 Am. Dec. 76; Harrison v. McHenry, 9 Ga. 164; 52 Am. Dec. 435; Flanders v. Flanders, 23 Ga. 249; 68 Am. Dec. 523; Kruse v. Steffens, 47 Ill. 112; Munn v. Burges, 70 Ill. 604; Brackenridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 377; 20 Am. Dec. 123; Wallace v. Associate Reformed Church, 10 Ind. 162; Patten v. Pearson, 60 Me. 220; Litchfield v.

Cudworth, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 23; Clark v. Blackington, 110 Mass. 369; Learned v. Foster, 117 Mass. 365; Mitchell v. McMullen, 59 Mo. 252; Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 717; Jackson v. Walsh, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 407; Barr v. New York, etc., R. Co., 125 N. Y. 263; Musselman v. Eshleman, 10 Pa. St. 394; 51 Am. Dec. 493; Connolly v. Hammond, 51 Tex. 647; Green v. Sargeant, 23 Vt. 466; 56 Am. Dec. 88; Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 J. & W. 51.

A delay of ten days is too long. Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y. 98. So with a delay of eight years. Scott v. Freeland, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 409; 45 Am. Dec. 310. So with sixteen years. Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 1; 2 Am. Dec. 281.

If a cestui que trust discovers facts which may give him a right to repudiate the acts of his trustee, e. g., in purchasing property, he is entitled to reasonable time to investigate them. But he must make his decision to repudiate or affirm the acts within a reasonable time. And if he lies by for three years and suffers the trustee to make payments for the property, he will be bound by his acts. Follansby v. Kilbreth, 17 Ill. 522; 65 Am. Dec. 691.

Where a trustee purchases his cestui que trust's property, if the cestui que trust does not in a reasonable time take steps after he knows of the sale, or, if he is a minor, after his disability is removed, to set the sale aside, his assent to the purchase will be conclusively presumed. Scott v. Freeland, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 409; 45 Am. Dec. 310.

A cestui que trust has the option of taking the benefit of any purchase which may be made by the trustee of claims or titles adverse to the estate, upon reimbursing the trustee to the extent of his outlay; but he must signify that he elects to do so within a reasonable time. Wiswall v. Stewart, 32 Ala. 433; 70 Am. Dec. 549.

4. See Field v. Arrowsmith, 3 Humph. (Tenn.) 442; 39 Am. Dec. 185. A trustee cannot purchase the trust act, he is estopped by such consent or ratification thereafter to attempt its overthrow.¹

The transaction is voidable only at the election of those who hold a beneficial interest. Third persons cannot impeach it;² not even the settlor.³

It must follow that the trustee who has bought at his own sale cannot enforce his purchase in court, even though it was made with the consent of the cestui que trust.⁴ All such transactions are presumed to have been entered into for the benefit of the trust.⁵ The profits arising therefrom inure to the trust, while estate, for his own benefit, but his purchase will be for the benefit of the cestui que trust, if the latter elects to avail himself of it. But if the beneficiary chooses to confirm the purchase, or even to hold the trustee to it against his wishes, he can do so. Huff v. Earl, 3 Ind. 306; McGinn v. Shaeffer, 7 Watts (Pa.) 412.

Where a trustee purchases a trust estate at his own sale, the parties interested, by claiming the price, are estopped from setting aside the sale. Price v. Nesbit, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 445.

Where a trustee has been guilty of a violation of trust by secretly buying the trust property at his own sale, in order to avail himself of the cestui que trust's acquiescence in his ownership as a bar to his rights, he must show that the latter was fully apprised by him of the nature and extent of the fraud practised on him. West v. Sloan, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 102.

1. VanDyke v. Johns, 1 Del. Ch. 93; 12 Am. Dec. 76; Jennison v. Hapgood, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 1; 19 Am. Dec. 258; Boerum v. Schenck, 41 N. Y. 182. See also Piatt v. Oliver, 2 McLean (U. S.) 313; Dunlap v. Mitchell, 10 Ohio 117; Beeson v. Beeson, 9 Pa. St. 279; Harrington v. Erie County Sav. Bank, 101 N. Y. 257.

2. McKinley v. Irvine, 13 Ala. 681; Thorp v. McCullum, 6 Ill. 614; Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560; Rice v. Cleghorn, 21 Ind. 80; Harrington v. Brown, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 519; Jennison v. Hapgood, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 1; 10 Pick. (Mass.) 77; 19 Am. Dec. 258; Litchfield v. Cudworth, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 31; Baldwin v. Allison, 4 Minn. 25; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 252; Wilson v. Troup, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 238; 14 Am. Dec. 458; Waelper's Appeal, 2 Pa. St. 71; Paniter v. Henderson, 7 Pa. St. 48; McNish v. Pope, 8 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 112.

It is not a matter of course for equity to interfere and set aside a purchase by a trustee of the trust estate; but if the cestui que trust agrees to the sale, the purchase will stand. And in such case, a court of law will not permit a stranger to raise the objection or invalidate the sale. Jackson v. Van Dalsen, 5 Johns. (N. Y.) 43; Wilson v. Troup, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 195; 14 Am. Dec. 458; Johnson v. Bennett, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 237; Villines v. Norfleet, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 167; Beeson v. Beeson, 9 Pa. St. 279.

Where an administratrix forecloses a mortgage, and herself purchases the land at the sale, the beneficiary only can call the purchaser in question. Kern v. Chalfant, 7 Minn. 487.

Of course, the trustee will not be allowed to plead his fiduciary relationship in avoidance of his purchase. McClure v. Miller, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 107; 21 Am. Dec. 522.

No one but the cestui que trust can avoid the purchase of trust property, made by the trustee in his own name. Kern v. Chalfant, 7 Minn. 487. Compare Baldwin v. Allison, 4 Minn. 25.

3. Where a father, by deed, creates a voluntary trust in favor of his children, who are minors, and delivers the deed and the property conveyed by it to the trustee, who accepts the trust, the cestuis que trustent are not concluded by the grantor's ratification of a purchase by a trustee at his own sale. Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219.

In Miller v. Iowa Land Co., 56 Iowa 374, it appeared that the trustee of a railway company had conveyed some of its real estate for their own benefit, in payment for their services as trustees, under authority from the board of directors. The court held that this conveyance was valid as to all other persons except the beneficiaries, and as to them, it was voidable only.

4. Munro v. Alaire, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 320.

5. Wiswall v. Stewart, 32 Ala. 433;

70 Am. Dec. 549; Russell v. Peyton, 4 Ill. App. 473; Brackenridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 477; 20 Am. Dec. 123; McCrary v. Foster, 1 Iowa 271; Phillips v. Overfield, 100 Mo. 466; Mulford v. Minch, 11 N. J. Eq. 16; 64 Am. Dec. 472; Ashuelot Railroad v. Elliott, 57 N. H. 397; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; 7 Am. Dec. 475; Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 76; Iddings v. Bruen, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 223; Moore v. Moore, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 37; Colburn v. Morton, 5 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y.) 315; Stiles v. Stiles, 1 Lans. (N. Y.) 99; Evertson v. Tappen, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 498; Torrey v. Bank of Orleans, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 650; 7 Hill (N. Y.) 260; Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 177; Penman v. Slocum, 41 N. Y. 63; Jewett v. Miller, 10 N. Y. 405; 65 Am. Dec. 751; Fulton v. Whitney, 66 N. Y. 548; Valentine v. Belden, 20 Hun (N. Y.) 542; New York Cent. Ins. Co. v. National Protection Ins. Co., 14 N. Y. 91; Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y. 98; Slade v. Van Vechten, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 21; De Caters v. De Chaumont, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 178; Matter of Oakley, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 478; Myers v. Myers, 2 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 214; 16 Am. Dec. 648.

A trustee may become the purchaser of trust property levied on and sold at the sheriff's sale, at the instance of others, and he should be reimbursed for his expenditures in the purchase, but he cannot deprive the beneficiary of the benefit arising from the purchase, if there is such benefit. Spindler v. Atkinson, 3 Md. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 755.

If a trustee purchases at his own sale, and immediately sells to another, at an advance, according to a previous agreement that such other should not bid at the sale, equity will compel him to account for the advance to the beneficiary. Wasson v. English, 13 Mo. 176.

A trustee for creditors suing out a mortgage belonging to the trust, and purchasing real estate at such sale in his own name, acts as trustee for the creditors. Campbell v. McLain, 51 Pa. St. 200.

Where one acted as prochain ami to infants in a proceeding for partition, and, at the sale, became himself the purchaser, it was held that the purchase accrued to the benefit of the infants, and created a trust in their favor, even as against a purchaser with notice, and even before the court. Collins v. Smith, 1 Head (Tenn.) 251.

Where the president of a steamship company held a mortgage on all the vessels, and had authority to sell them, and did at a private sale sell them to his son, taking his note payable in one year for the purchase-money, and then himself continued to control and manage the vessels, and did not account to his son, it was held that the transaction should be set aside, and that the trustee must be ordered to resell the vessels and account to the company for the proceeds. Murray v. Vanderbilt, 59 Barb. (N. Y.) 140.

A party who holds half a contract of land in his own right and half as trustee, and buys under an adverse claim, acts for the joint benefit of himself and the beneficiary, but the latter must refund half the sum with interest; but if the trustee relinquish to an opposing title, he must show the superiority of such title, or on a division between himself and his beneficiary, he must convey the land relinquished in his name. M'Clanahan v. Henderson, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 388; 12 Am. Dec. 412.

A trustee purchasing a debt due from the cestui que trust to a third person, at a discount, will be regarded as having purchased for the benefit of the cestui que trust. Matter of Oakley, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 478.

A trustee who purchases an incumbrance upon a trust estate, takes it for the benefit of the estate, and cannot be allowed to use it for his own benefit. Hawley v. Maucius, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 174; Green v. Winter, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 27; Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 195.

An administrator who, knowing that his intestate held in trust for third parties, certain lands, which were partly paid for, permits the same to be forfeited, and acquires a patent in his own name on the sale, will be compelled to convey to the real parties in interest. Carrier v. Pecker, 62 Mich. 441.

Where the receiver uses trust funds for the purchase of property, the profit accrues to the benefit of the cestui que trust. People v. Merchants' Bank, 35 Hun (N. Y.) 97.

Purchasing property with trust funds, he will be deemed to have taken the property in trust for his beneficiary. Phillips v. Overfield, 100 Mo. 466.

Where the trustee owned a half interest in the estate and held the other half for his cestui que trust and purchased an adverse claim, it was held that the cestui was entitled to the benefit of half of the claim so purchased. M'Clanahan v. Henderson, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 388; 12 Am. Dec. 412.

A person having occupied part of a lot of land adjoining his own under an alleged parol contract for the purchase, and having made improvements thereon, assigned his property for the benefit of creditors; and the assignee, being unable to obtain a consummation of the alleged agreement, made an absolute purchase in his own name, it was held that the purchase inured to the benefit of the cestui que trust. Chapin v. Weed, 1 Clarke Ch. (N. Y.) 464.

The treasurer of a corporation who buys at an execution sale of the corporate property, will be deemed to have bought for the company's benefit and not for his own. McAllen v. Woodcock, 60 Mo. 174.

An executor who had become a purchaser of land at his own sale, filed an account, purporting to be a final settlement, in which he charged himself with the price at which the land was bid off by his own agent. Afterward, he sold the land at a higher price, and it was held that he could not set up the account already filed to estop the legatees from claiming further. Shuman's Appeal, 27 Pa. St. 64.

A trustee of the equity of redemption in mortgaged premises cannot become a purchaser upon foreclosure so as to remove them from the operation of the trust. He is liable to be called upon by the cestui que trust for an accounting and a payment of the rents and profits. Hubbell v. Medbury, 53 N. Y. 98.

If land upon which a judgment held in trust for infant children is a lien, is purchased by the trustee at a price which fails to satisfy the judgment of his beneficiaries, and is resold by him at a profit, the beneficiaries may require that said profits be applied toward the payment of their judgment. Feamster v. Feamster, 35 W. Va. 1.

If a trustee purchases claims against the trust estate at a discount, the courts will not permit him to derive a personal profit from the transaction. The profit inures to the benefit of the estate. He may demand, however, that he be reimbursed the amount of his expenditure in making the purchase, with interest. Baugh v. Walker, 77 Va. 99.

So, a trustee who purchases lands at his own sale conducted under an order of the court, and uses the trust funds to pay for them, must account to the beneficiaries for all profits made on a re-sale, even though the order of sale allows the trustee to become a bidder. Baker's Appeal, 120 Pa. St. 33.

A trustee who buys in property under a prior incumbrance and at a price below what it is actually worth, will be held to have done so for the benefit of his beneficiary, and it matters not whether the property purchased belongs to the trust nor whether the purchase necessarily has the effect of injuring other trust property. Fulton v. Whitney, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 16.

A trustee who has taken a conveyance of the lands of his testator from a purchaser thereof at a sale, in the notice of which such trustee joined with his co-trustees, and declared with them, by the conditions of the sale, the terms upon which it must be made (thereby accepting the trust), cannot relieve himself from liability to his cestui que trust for the profits which he made on a re-sale of those lands, on the ground that he did not take out letters testamentary under the testator's will. Romaine v. Hendrickson, 27 N. J. Eq. 162.

A trustee is not allowed to purchase the trust property, when sold under a prior incumbrance, for his own benefit and to the prejudice of the beneficiary. Slade v. Van Vechten, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 21; Van Epps v. Van Epps, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 237; Jewett v. Miller, 10 N. Y. 402; 65 Am. Dec. 751.

A trustee is forbidden to deal with the property for his own benefit. He cannot purchase an outstanding title and hold for his own use against his cestui que trust, even though such purchase is at a judicial sale and under a title superior to that conveyed to him as trustee. Roberts v. Moseley, 64 Mo. 507; Crutchfield v. Haynes, 14 Ala. 49. See also Evertson v. Tappan, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 497.

He cannot acquire any interest that is hostile to that of his beneficiary. Harrison v. Mock, 10 Ala. 185; Adams v. LaRose, 75 Ind. 471; Shuey v. Latta, 90 Ind. 136; Roberts v. Moseley, 64 Mo. 507; Conger v. Ring, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 364; Streeter v. Shultz, 45 Hun (N. Y.) 408; Toole v. McKiernan, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 163; Goodin v. Cincinnati, etc., Canal Co., 18 Ohio St. 169; 98 Am. Dec. 95; Lee v. Fox, 6 Dana (Ky.) 176; Cavagnaro v. Don, 63 Cal. 227; Columbus Co. v. Hurford, 1 Neb. 146; Stettinsche v. Lamb, 18

Neb. 619; Hawley v. Mancius, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 174; Kellogg v. Wood, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 578; Morris v. Joseph, 1 W. Va. 256; 91 Am. Dec. 386; Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mill Co., 43 Wis. 433. See also California Code, § 7233; Dakota Civ. Code, § 1303.

A court of equity under no circumstances will allow a trustee to secure a debt of his own, not secured by the trust, by forming a combination with one who claims adversely to the cestui que trustent. Irwin v. Harris, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 215.

Where a trustee has placed himself in a position adverse to the trust, he can claim no benefit under it. Ennor v. Hodson, 28 Ill. App. 445.

Any adverse claim which he purchases, inures to the benefit of the trust. M'Clanahan v. Henderson, 2 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 388; 12 Am. Dec. 412.

So he is forbidden to hold possession adverse to the claims of his cestui que trust, or to establish any title thereby in himself. Huntly v. Huntly, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 250.

An administrator and trustee invested trust funds in a second mortgage on an estate upon which, in his individual capacity, he held a first mortgage. A building upon the estate burned, leaving the security insufficient to pay both mortgages. It was held that the trust mortgage should be treated as senior to the mortgage which he held individually, even as against the assignee of such first mortgage, who took it after maturity and with constructive, if not actual, notice of the facts. Shuey v. Latta, 90 Ind. 136.

A trustee who allows trust property to get out of repair for the purpose of purchasing it, and thereby does purchase it for less than its value, should be charged with its full value. Prichard v. Farrar, 116 Mass. 213.

Corporate Officers Acquiring Interests Adverse to Those of Stockholders.—A familiar application of this doctrine is made in cases where the officers and directors of corporations have attempted to secure some personal advantage out of their official position, in violation of their obligations as trustees for the stockholders. The officers and directors of a corporation are trustees for its stockholders, and are forbidden in equity to acquire any interest hostile to the interests of the stockholders. See Cook v. Sherman, 20 Fed. Rep. 167. See also note of J. C. Harper, same case, pp. 175-179.

In Cook v. Sherman, 20 Fed. 167, two directors and the president and chief engineer of the Chicago, etc., Railroad Company purchased certain lands in advance of the location of the railroad line and of the depots and stations of the road, with a view to locating the same on the lands so secured. In that case, the court, by McCrary, J., said: "If the courts should enforce such contracts, they would lend their sanction to a practice, the inevitable tendency of which is to encourage breaches of trust to the sacrifice of private rights and of the public interest. The managing officers of quasi public corporations, possessing vast powers and engaged in great enterprises, are too apt to forget that they are not to have any interest adverse to those whom they represent, and the courts of justice should not in the least relax the rule requiring of them scrupulous fidelity and entire impartiality in the discharge of their official duties."

A director occupies one of those fiduciary relations where his dealing with the subject-matter of the trust and with the beneficiary is viewed with jealousy by the courts, and may be set aside on slight grounds. Koehler v. Black River Falls Iron Co., 2 Black (U. S.) 715; Drury v. Cross, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 299; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587; Wickersham v. Crittenden, 93 Cal. 17; Wildrig v. Newport St. R. Co., 82 Ky. 511; Hoffman Steam Coal Co. v. Cumberland Coal, etc., Co., 16 Md. 456; 77 Am. Dec. 311; Cumberland Coal Co. v. Sherman, 30 Barb. (N. Y.) 553; Railroad Co. v. Magnay, 25 Beav. 586.

Upon this subject Beach says: "It is by no means a well-settled point, what is the precise relation which directors sustain to stockholders. They are undoubtedly said by many authorities to be trustees, but this is to be taken only in a general sense, as the term is to be applied to any agent or bailee intrusted with the care and management of the property of another. It is certain that they are not technical trustees. . . . A director whose personal interests are adverse to those of the corporation has no right to act as a director. As soon as he finds that he has personal interests which are in conflict with those of the company, he ought to resign." Beach the losses, if any, fall on the trustee, and the cestui que trust has the option of ratifying the transaction and accepting the proceeds or having the sale set aside.¹

There are cases, it is true, where a purchase by the trustee of the trust property will be sustained. But this apparent exception is not an actual one. It extends to open public sales conducted by officers of the court who are in no way under the control or direction of the trustee, and where it is manifest that the trustee is party to no combination or scheme to govern the price. There can be no opportunity for fraud under these limitations, and hence sales thus made will be upheld.² Indeed, it sometimes becomes on Private Corporations, § 240. See also Cook on Stock and Stockholders, § 648 et seq.

In Young v. Fox, 37 Fed. Rep. 385, the general manager of a corporation, Powell, sold his thirty shares of stock to Young, who became manager in his place, and who paid a portion of the purchase price of the stock. While Young was acting as manager, the sheriff called on him with an attachment against Powell and asked if Powell owned any stock in the company. Upon Young's representation that the thirty shares belonged to Powell, the sheriff sold them, Young giving Powell no notice of the suit, but attending the sale and buying the stock for $496. Young having failed to pay the $2,000 when due, F., another stockholder, who had guaranteed its payment, paid it. In a suit between them as to the ownership of the stock, Young relied entirely on his purchase at the attachment sale, repudiating his purchase from Powell. It was held that he must be treated as holding the stock in trust for Powell and F., and that, in view of his conduct, he was not entitled to have the $496 which he had paid refunded to him.

A railroad director who makes a contract with his company for the construction of a road, is forbidden to gain any benefit from the contract. European, etc., Co. v. Poor, 59 Me. 277.

Corporate directors are trustees for the stockholders and cannot buy the property of the corporation. Cook v. Berlin Woolen Mill Co., 43 Wis. 433. In this case the court, by Ryan, C. J., said: "A distinction is recognized in the books between corporate officers, whose offices are of the essence of the corporation, and whose offices are merely ministerial. Courts of equity deal with the former as trustees, and with the latter as agents."

But a director may lend money to his corporation, where the money is needed, and the loan is openly and conscientiously made. Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587.

1. Ogden v. Larrabee, 57 Ill. 389; Bush v. Sherman, 80 Ill. 160; Watson v. Sherman, 84 Ill. 263; Creveling v. Fritts, 34 N. J. Eq. 134. See also Silverthorn v. McKinister, 12 Pa. St. 67; De Bevoise v. Sandford, Hoffm. Ch. (N. Y.) 192.

Where a trustee, having power to sell and convey land, executes a deed, for a valuable consideration, of a part of the trust property, and immediately thereafter takes a reconveyance of the premises granted, the conveyance is valid at law, and the grantee will not be regarded as taking as trustee. Jackson v. Brooks, 8 Wend. (N. Y.) 426.

An administrator is not allowed to agree with anyone before the sale to bid off the land for his own benefit, but the moment his sale is concluded, he may agree with the purchaser for a conveyance to himself. Wortman v. Skinner, 12 N. J. Eq. 358.

Where the title of a mortgagor, remainder-man, or beneficiary, is destroyed, the mortgagee, tenant for life, or trustee may acquire the real title, if his condition and conduct are free from fraud. Price v. Evans, 26 Mo. 30.

But a New York court has held that one who holds mortgaged lands as trustee will not be permitted to buy of the purchaser at the foreclosure sale so as to acquire an interest adverse to that of the cestui que trust. Toole v. McKiernan, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 163.

2. Prevost v. Gratz, 1 Pet. (C. C.) 378; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587; Allen v. Gillette, 127 U. S. 589; Felton v. LeBreton, 92 Cal. 457; Barber v. Bowen, 47 Minn. 118; Baker v. Springfield, etc., R. Co., 86 Mo. 75; Fisk v. Sarber, 6 W. & S.

the duty of the trustee to buy at such sales, as it does where, by so doing, he can better protect the estate,¹ or where the trustee already has an individual interest in the property and must purchase in order to prevent the sacrifice of that interest.²

(Pa.) 18; Chorpensing's Appeal, 32 Pa. St. 315; 72 Am. Dec. 789; Lusk's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 152.

In Allen v. Gillette, 127 U. S. 589, the court, by Lamar, J., said: "The principle that a trustee may purchase the trust property at a judicial sale brought about by a third party, which he had taken no part in procuring, and over which he could not have had control, is upheld by numerous decisions of this court and of other courts of this country (citing cases in this note, supra). It is true that the rule upon this subject as stated by some text-writers is more stringent than that stated in these cases. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 205; Hill on Trustees, § 250. We think, however, that the language employed by them does not present a thorough and perfect generalization of the essential principles pervading the decisions upon this subject. They are in manifest conflict with the uniform current of decisions of the supreme court of Texas, which are our guides in this case." The court, in this connection, cited Howards v. Davis, 6 Tex. 174; Scott v. Mann, 33 Tex. 725; Goodgame v. Rushing, 35 Tex. 722; Erskine v. De LaBaum, 3 Tex. 406; 49 Am. Dec. 75.

The rule which forbids a trustee from purchasing for his own benefit at his own sale, does not apply to the guardians of infant heirs who purchase lands belonging to the ancestor's estate at an administrator's sale, held under the order of the probate court, the guardian having no power or control over such sale. Barber v. Bowen, 47 Minn. 118.

1 See Spindler v. Atkinson, 3 Md. 409; 56 Am. Dec. 755; Munro v. Aire, 2 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 183; 2 Am. Dec. 330.

2 Michoud v. Girod, 4 How. (U. S.) 503; Faucett v. Faucett, 1 Bush (Ky.) 511; 89 Am. Dec. 639; Colgate v. Colgate, 23 N. J. Eq. 372; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 251; Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Cal. Cas. (N. Y.) 20; 2 Am. Dec. 281; DeCaters v. DeChaumont, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 178; Chapin v. Weed, 1 Clarke Ch. (N. Y.) 464; Abell v. Bradner (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 64; Scholle v. Scholle, 101 N. Y. 167; Froneberger v. Lewis, 79 N. Car. 426; McCelvey v. Thomson, 7 S. Car. 185; Anderson v. Butler, 32 S. Car. 283; Bohn v. Davis, 75 Tex. 24; Farmer v. Dean, 32 Beav. 327; Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 678.

The directors of a corporation may buy in corporate property at a sale under the foreclosure of a mortgage given to them to secure their own debts. McMurtry v. Montgomery Masonic Temple Co., 86 Ky. 206.

The executor of a will, who was also a legatee and trustee for certain other legatees, purchased at a sale of the decedent's real estate made under order of court to pay debts. It appeared that he was a bona fide purchaser, that there was no chilling combination or conspiracy, and that he paid the highest price the land would bring. These facts were held to show that the trustee did not sustain the inconsistent relation of vendor and vendee, and hence the rule that the cestui que trust may at his option abide by or set aside a purchase made by the trustee is inapplicable. Anderson v. Butler, 31 S. Car. 183.

A court of equity will not allow one, acting as trustee, to create an interest in himself opposed to that of his beneficiary; but where a bona fide creditor afterward becomes trustee, he may buy in a judgment against the beneficiary and may pursue all legal remedies to enforce payment of it, nor has the cestui que trust a right to demand to know how much the former paid for it. Prevost v. Gratz, Pet. (C. C.) 364.

A person to whom certain property has been conveyed in trust for other parties, is not thereby debarred from purchasing or levying on other property of the debtor for his own personal benefit. Eldridge v. Smith, 34 Vt. 484.

A beneficiary under a mortgage, who is also trustee with power to sell, holds a power coupled with an interest, and may be a purchaser of the property at a sale otherwise fairly made, whether he makes the purchase himself or by his agent or attorney. So held, reluctantly, in deference to Howards v. Davis, 6 Tex. 183, distinguishing Shannon v. Marmaduke, 14 Tex. 220; Scott v. Mann, 33 Tex. 721.

A trustee may purchase the trust

And the statute sometimes makes a special provision for the purchase by the fiduciary at his own sale, always requiring, however, that there be perfect fairness in the transaction.¹

Wherever such sales have been permitted, it has been because some such special provision of the statute or some order of the court has authorized the transaction, or where the parties holding the beneficial interest and having authority to consent or ratify the sale, have done so, and there has been entire good faith.² But if the trustee is permitted, by the court, to bid at his own sale, he must act strictly within his authority, and in no case can he so bid where his duty conflicts with his personal interests.³

property at a judicial sale which is not under his control, provided he acts in good faith and to protect the interests of himself and others. Lusk's Appeal, 108 Pa. St. 152.

A person to whom certain property has been conveyed by his debtor, in trust for other parties, is not thereby debarred from purchasing or levying upon other property of the debtor for his own personal benefit. Eldridge v. Smith, 34 Vt. 484.

It was held in Colgate v. Colgate, 23 N. J. Eq. 372, that when it is necessary that land held in trust should be sold, and the trustee is in a situation that induces him to give more than any other purchaser would give, the court may authorize a sale by him at a full, fair price, to be approved by the court, to himself, or to someone for his benefit. Citing Campbell v. Walker, 5 Ves. 678; Michoud v. Girod, 4 How. (U. S.) 503.

1. See Huger v. Huger, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 217; Anderson v. Butler, 31 S. Car. 183; Gallatian v. Cunningham, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 361.

Thus the New York statute permits a mortgagee with power to sell to be a purchaser at such sale. Wilson v. Troup, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 196; 14 Am. Dec. 458; Jackson v. Colden, 4 Cow. (N. Y.) 266; Slee v. Manhattan Co., 1 Paige (N. Y.) 48; Ten Eyck v. Craig, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 65; 2 Hun (N. Y.) 452. But this power exists only by virtue of the statute. Dobson v. Racey, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 60. And a purchase by such a mortgagee, where not expressly so empowered by statute, may be set aside at the suit of the cestui. Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622; 79 Am. Dec. 122; Wade v. Harper, 3 Yerg. (Tenn.) 383.

Of course, the mortgagee without power of sale is under no such restriction, for he has no duty to perform that is inconsistent with the character of a purchaser. Imboden v. Hunter, 23 Ark. 622; 79 Am. Dec. 116; Murdock's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 468; 20 Am. Dec. 381; Lyon v. Jones, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 533.

2. Kennedy v. Dunn, 58 Cal. 339; Faucett v. Faucett, 1 Bush (Ky.) 511; 89 Am. Dec. 639; Cumberland Coal, etc., Co. v. Sherman, 20 Md. 117; Roberts v. Roberts, 65 N. Car. 27; Ames v. Port Huron Log Driving, etc., Co., 11 Mich. 139; 83 Am. Dec. 731; Scholle v. Scholle, 101 N. Y. 167.

A guardian ad litem may obtain the consent of the court to his bidding at a partition sale. Gallatian v. Cunningham, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 361.

Although, as a general rule, a sale by a trustee to his wife would be set aside on the ground of her relationship to the trustee, yet it is in the power of the orphans' court to make an order permitting the wife to bid. Dundas' Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 325.

A trustee who has an interest to protect by bidding at a sale of the trust property, and who makes a special application to the court for permission to bid, which, upon a hearing of all the parties interested, is granted, can make a purchase which is valid and binding upon all the parties, and obtain thereunder a perfect title. Scholle v. Scholle, 101 N. Y. 167.

Trustees are never permitted to buy the trust property, except upon authority of the court. Carson v. Marshall, 37 N. J. Eq. 213.

3. Cadwalader's Appeal, 64 Pa. St. 293.

For cases in which leave was granted by the court to the trustee to bid at his own sale, see Michoud v. Girod, 4 How. (U. S.) 503; Faucett v. Faucett, 1 Bush (Ky.) 511; Colgate v. Colgate, 23 N. J. Eq. 372; Bergen v. Bennett, 1 Cai. Cas. (N. Y.) 20; 2 Am. Dec. 281; Gallatian v. Cunningham, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 361; DeCaters v. DeChaumont, 3

This prohibition rests upon the trustee only so long as the trust continues; as soon as that ceases, he occupies the same relation to the trust property that a stranger does, and may have dealings with the trust or acquire the trust property by purchase or otherwise, so long as he acts in good faith.¹

d. DEALINGS WITH THE BENEFICIARY.—The trustee is not forbidden to buy directly of his cestui que trust, but the burden is on him to show a full, fair, and sufficient consideration, and it must appear that the cestui had power to sell, and had the fullest information concerning the transaction and the trust.² But the Paige (N. Y.) 178; Scholle v. Scholle, 101 N. Y. 172; Froneberger v. Lewis, 79 N. Car. 426.

1. Munn v. Burges, 70 Ill. 604; Bush v. Sherman, 80 Ill. 160; Ball v. Carew, 13 Pick. (Mass.) 28; Creveling v. Fritts, 34 N. J. Eq. 134; Rammelsberg v. Mitchell, 29 Ohio St. 22. See Colton v. Stanford, 82 Cal. 351; 16 Am. St. Rep. 137.

Where trust property was sold under a decree upon adverse proceedings upon an incumbrance, made prior to the trust, and the trustee afterwards purchased, for his own benefit, from a bona fide purchaser, it was held that, by the sale under the decree, the trust determined and the subsequent purchase by the trustee was valid. DeBevoise v. Sandford, Hoffm. (N. Y.) 102.

2. Cook v. Sherman, 20 Fed. Rep. 167; Kennedy v. Kennedy, 2 Ala. 571; Bryan v. Duncan, 11 Ga. 67; Buford v. Guthrie, 14 Bush (Ky.) 677; Brackenridge v. Holland, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 377; 20 Am. Dec. 123; Buell v. Buckingham, 16 Iowa 284; 85 Am. Dec. 516; Smith v. Townshend, 27 Md. 368; 92 Am. Dec. 637; Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 212; Brown v. Cowell, 116 Mass. 461; Schwarz v. Wendell, Walk. (Mich.) 267; Staats v. Bergen, 17 N. J. Eq. 554, 297; Graves v. Waterman, 63 N. Y. 657; Bruch v. Lantz, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 392; 21 Am. Dec. 458; McCants v. Bee, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 383; 16 Am. Dec. 610; Hickman v. Stewart, 69 Tex. 255; Coffee v. Ruffin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 487; Puzey v. Senier, 9 Wis. 370; Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 247; Morse v. Royal, 12 Ves. 355.

Where one of several joint purchasers of real estate has taken the title for their joint benefit, with authority to sell and divide the proceeds, he is deemed a trustee, and cannot purchase the others' interests save upon such full and fair disclosure of all the facts as enables them to deal with him on terms of perfect equality. Cook v. Sherman, 20 Fed. Rep. 167; 4 McCrary (U. S.) 20.

"The burden is on the trustee to establish that there was such a bona fide contract as will support the purchase in a court of equity on a careful and jealous examination of all the circumstances, and a rigid inquiry into the perfect fairness and propriety of the transaction." Graves v. Waterman, 63 N. Y. 657.

A court of equity will only sustain such a purchase when it has been deliberately agreed and understood between them that the relation shall be considered dissolved, and the court, upon a scrupulous examination of all the circumstances, is convinced that there is a clear contract, and that the cestui intended that the trustee should buy; and that there is no fraud, concealment, or advantage taken by him. Beckett v. Tyler, 3 MacArthur (D. C.) 319.

The burden is on a trustee who has purchased the trust estate from the cestui, to prove the fairness of the transaction; as all presumptions are against its validity. Lathrop v. Polard, 6 Colo. 424.

A trustee who purchases from his cestui, must show that he made the fullest disclosures of all he knew as to the subject, and that the price he paid was adequate. Spencer's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 317. It has been held in Mississippi, however, that, although a trustee may purchase of the cestui que trust his share in the fund, the sale is voidable at the election of the cestui que trust. Tatum v. McLellan, 50 Miss. 1.

In Puzey v. Senier, 9 Wis. 370, the court, by Cole, J., said: "It is true, in certain cases, the trustee has been permitted to buy trust property, but it is the language of all the authorities that such a transaction is always scrutinized in a court of equity with a watchful and jealous eye, and will not be sustained to the disadvantage of the cestui que trust, except upon the most complete and satisfactory evidence of good faith and fair dealing on the part of the trustee." Citing Stuart v. Kilsam, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 494; Davoue v. Fanning, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 252; Gibson v. Jeyes, 6 Ves. Jr. 266.

A trustee may deal with the cestui que trust and may purchase his share in the funds. The cestui que trust may either avoid the sale, or, by acquiescence, confirm it; it is for him to say whether it shall stand or not. Tatum v. McLellan, 50 Miss. 1.

But deeds from the beneficiary to the trustee will be set aside if it appear that the cestui was ignorant of the value of the property and sold it for an inadequate price. Smith v. Townshend, 27 Md. 388; 92 Am. Dec. 637.

Other Dealings With the Beneficiary.—The same principles govern all dealings between trustee and cestui, and such dealings are jealously watched by the courts. McCants v. Bee, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 383; 16 Am. Dec. 610; Gibson v. Jeyes, 6 Ves. Jr. 266; Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

The rule as followed by the Illinois decisions, is stated in Thorp v. McCullum, 6 Ill. 614, to be, that one standing in a fiduciary relation cannot deal on his own account with the person or the thing affected by the trust relation. Followed by Wickliff v. Robinson, 18 Ill. 145; Dennis v. McCagg, 32 Ill. 429; Miles v. Wheeler, 43 Ill. 123; Munn v. Burges, 70 Ill. 604; Bush v. Sherman, 80 Ill. 160; Ward v. Armstrong, 84 Ill. 151; Fast v. McPherson, 98 Ill. 496; Allen v. Jackson, 122 Ill. 567; Vallette v. Tedens, 122 Ill. 607. And it applies to all who hold fiduciary relations, as well as trustees, strictly so called. Colton v. Field, 28 Ill. App. 354. See Reed v. Peterson, 91 Ill. 288.

In an action by a trustee of the separate estate of a feme covert, to recover a debt from her, it is not enough to prove that the articles were furnished at her request, on the credit of her separate estate, and were suitable for her condition in life; it is necessary to repel the presumption of bad faith which such a transaction gives rise to, and it must be shown that the charges were reasonable, and that the trustee made no profit by the transaction.

Cleveland v. Pollard, 1 Ala. Sel. Cas. 481.

Dealings between a trustee and beneficiary in relation to the trust estate are not prohibited, but the court watches them with great jealousy, and the trustee is required to show affirmatively that the dealings were fair and for a reasonable consideration, so as to remove all suspicion that any advantage was taken of the confidence which the fiduciary relation inspires. Allen v. Bryant, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 276; Boyd v. Hawkins, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 195; Marshall v. Stephens, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 159.

Contracts between a trustee and his beneficiary, or guardian and ward, soon after the ward becomes of age, or of one acting as guardian, are voidable by the latter, provided he seeks to avoid them in a reasonable time. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 90.

Where a cestui que trust has undertaken to indemnify his trustees for a breach of the trust, the court of chancery requires to be satisfied that he was free to act as a rational, intelligent man, and if he appears to have been governed by the belief that he was in a state of dependence upon them, such indemnity will not be regarded. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

A contract made between the executor and the life beneficiary to whom the income of a certain fund was to be paid by the terms of the will, after eighteen years had passed without any accounting by the executor, whereby he agreed to support the beneficiary during her life, in lieu of paying her the income of the fund, will not bind the beneficiary, though she was of sound mind and fully understood the nature and effect of the contract, unless evidence is adduced which affirmatively shows that she had knowledge of all facts bearing on the contract, and that she acted therein advisedly and without undue influence. In re Hodges' Estate, 63 Vt. 661.

In Whiteside v. Taylor, 105 Ill. 496, it was held that where a trustee is seeking to purchase from his cestui que trust, he is not bound to disclose that he has already sold half of the property, if the deed is duly recorded.

The fairness of a contract by which the trustee purchases trust property directly from the cestui que trust is a question of fact for the jury. Brown v. Crowell, 116 Mass. 461.

purchase by the trustee of the cestui que trust, puts an end to the trust.¹ Indeed, the parties may, under certain conditions, first dissolve the trust relation, and, putting themselves at arm's length, deal freely with one another.²

7. Co-Trustees.—The duties and liabilities of co-trustees are joint and not individual. Co-trustees may not act independently of one another nor ignore each other in the management of the estate. The trust is entitled to the benefit of the united judgment, discretion, and ability of all the trustees selected.³

1. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 90; Chalmer v. Bradley, 1 Jac. & W. 51.

2. In Colton v. Stanford, 82 Cal. 351; 16 Am. St. Rep. 137, the court, by Paterson, J., said: "If at the time of the purchase, or compromise, the trustee has shaken off his fiduciary character and the confidence which is presumed to result therefrom, it matters not what has occurred immediately preceding or long prior to the final transaction. In other words, if the transaction is one in which the trustee may lawfully deal with his cestui que trust by first dissolving the trust relation, it is not too late for him to do so at any time before the cestui que trust is prevented from making a full and fair investigation and consideration of the business in hand, and before he executes the contract."

3. Co-Trustees.—Perry says: "Where a settlor vests his property in several co-trustees, they all form as it were, one collective trustee." Perry on Trusts, § 411.

And Lewin: "Where the administration of the trust is vested in co-trustees they all form, as it were, but one collective trustee, and therefore must execute the duties of their office in their joint capacity." Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. *258; Sloo v. Law, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 459; Wilbur v. Almy, 12 How. (U. S.) 189; Patterson v. Leavitt, 4 Conn. 50; 10 Am. Dec. 98; Smith v. Wildman, 37 Conn. 384; Ex p. Griffin, 2 Gill & J. (Md.) 116; Cox v. Walker, 26 Me. 504; Heard v. March, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 580; Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15; Towne v. Jaquith, 6 Mass. 46; 4 Am. Dec. 84; Austin v. Shaw, 10 Allen (Mass.) 552; Shaw v. Canfield, 86 Mich. 1; White v. Watkins, 23 Mo. 423; Hill v. Josselyn, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 597; Crane v. Hearn, 26 N. J. Eq. 378; King v. Stow, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 323; Green v. Miller, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 39; 5 Am. Dec. 184; Shook v. Shook, 19 Barb.

(N. Y.) 653; Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 431; DePeyster v. Ferrers, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 13; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 543; Wilder v. Ranney, 95 N. Y. 7; Vandever's Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 405; 42 Am. Dec. 305; Blin v. Hay, 2 Tyler (Vt.) 304; 4 Am. Dec. 738; Low v. Perkins, 10 Vt. 532; 33 Am. Dec. 217; Lipse v. Spear, 4 Hughes (U. S.) 535; Lee v. Sankey, L. R., 15 Eq. 204; Fellows v. Mitchell, 1 P. Wms. 83; Churchill v. Hobson, 2 Vern. 241; Leigh v. Barry, 3 Atk. 584; Belchier v. Parsons, Ambl. 219; Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 198; Ex p. Rigby, 19 Ves. 463; Right v. Cathill, 5 East 491; Cole v. Wade, 16 Ves. 44; Down v. Worrall, 1 Myl. & K. 561; Townsend v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ald. 608; Nailor v. Goodall, 47 L. J. Ch. 53.

Powers, Joint.—All of several trustees must join both in receipts and conveyances; their power over the trust estate being equal and undivided, they cannot act separately. Latrobe v. Tiernan, 2 Md. Ch. 474; Ridgeley v. Johnson, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 527.

Separate conveyances, not for a charity or public trust, are void. Chapin v. First Universalist Soc., 8 Gray (Mass.) 580. A sale and conveyance by one of two trustees is void, Wilbur v. Almy, 12 How. (U. S.) 180; Learned v. Welton, 40 Cal. 349; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 553; Van Rensselaer v. Akin, 22 Wend. (N. Y.) 540; Ham v. Ham, 58 N. H. 70; and a court of equity will order a reconveyance. Heard v. March, 12 Cush. (Mass.) 580. Neither can make a contract to convey which will bind the other, Wilder v. Ranney, 95 N. Y. 7; nor a valid lease of the estate, Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 543; and a lease given by a part of the trustees can give the lessee no better right to disposition than the residue of the trustees have, though they are in the minority. Cox v. Walker, 26 Me. 504.

One of several co-trustees cannot, in the absence of authority or pressing necessity, make a binding contract for repairs to the trust estate, Busse v. Schenck, 12 Daly (N. Y.) 12; nor pledge the property, Ham v. Ham, 58 N. H. 70; nor assign a mortgage held by them. Austin v. Shaw, 10 Allen (Mass.) 552. They must all unite and bring an action on behalf of the estate. Thatcher v. Candee, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 387.

For this reason they may not delegate discretionary power among themselves, nor escape responsibility for the safe exercise of the entire trust by distributing the duties among themselves and dividing its responsibilities.¹

A deed of trust to the trustees, "their executors, administrators, and assigns, the survivor or survivors of them, his or their executors, administrators or assigns, or a majority of them," implies that the majority have power to execute the provisions of the deed. Ratcliffe v. Sangston, 18 Md. 383.

When an estate is conveyed to trustees and the survivors or survivor of them, with the power to appoint a new trustee in case of the death of any of their number, the surviving trustees may sell and give a good title without making such appointment. Belmont v. O'Brien, 12 N. Y. 394.

A majority cannot, by the adoption of any rule or resolution, exclude one of their number, and so divest him of his rights as to make his subsequent act of obtaining possession of the trust fund a tort. Church v. Stewart, 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 553.

1. See articles by Arthur Biddle, Esq., on "Delegation of Discretionary Powers by a Trustee," 12 Cent. L. J. 266, and 12 Cent. L. J. 290; Crewe v. Dicken, 4 Ves. 97; Gill v. Atty. Gen'l, Hardr. 314; Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. C. C. 114; Sloo v. Law, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 471; Chapin v. First Universalist Soc., 8 Gray (Mass.) 583; Holcomb v. Holcomb, 11 N. J. Eq. 281; Sinclair v. Jackson, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 544; State v. Guilford, 15 Ohio 593; Vandever's Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 405; 42 Am. Dec. 282.

Liabilities, Joint.—When.—A trustee permitting his co-trustee to take the trust fund into his exclusive possession and control, is jointly answerable with him for it, Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; 9 Am. Dec. 298; Rayall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; Graham v. Davidson, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N.

Car.) 165; Evans' Estate, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 470; McMurray v. Montgomery, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 374; and the sale of the property by one trustee to his co-trustees is illegal, and renders them jointly responsible. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

Where trustees divide the amount of the trust fund between them, they are both responsible for the whole amount, and not each for the amount received by him only, Thomas v. Schruggs, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 400; and this, though the division was made with the consent of the beneficiary. Graham v. Austin, 2 Gratt. (Va.) 273.

One trustee is not exempted from liability by the fact that the duties of the trustees have been exclusively performed by his co-trustees with his concurrence and consent. He is accountable for the management of the co-trustees, to whom he has thought proper to delegate his power, to the same extent as if they had been executed by himself. Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157. They are both liable for the proceeds of stock belonging to the trust fund, although such proceeds passed wholly into the hands of one of them. Spencer v. Spencer, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 299.

Two or more trustees who jointly receipt for the trust funds, are each liable presumptively for the entire sum, even though a part of it may have gone into the exclusive possession of one of them. Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; 9 Am. Dec. 298; Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 277; 29 Am. Dec. 84; McKim v. Aulbach, 130 Mass. 484; 39 Am. Rep. 473; Deaderick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 263; 31 Am. Dec. 578.

Where a trustee has suffered the entire trust funds to pass into the control of his co-trustee, he is liable for the acts of the co-trustee in reference thereto. Royall v. McKenzie, 25 Ala. 363; Fox v. Tay, 89 Cal. 339; 23 Am. St. Rep. 474; Porter v. Moores, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 25; Hughlett v. Hughlett, 5 Humph. (Tenn.) 474; Breen v. Gillet, 115 N. Y. 10; 12 Am. St. Rep. 764; Bone v. Cooke, McClell. 168. See Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 333; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 472;

"It has been more than once asserted," says a learned author, "that there are certain cases where trustees may delegate their powers, which constitute an exception to the rule we have laid down" (that a trustee cannot delegate a discretionary power), "as where a trustee is resident abroad or where there is a case of urgent necessity."¹

With ministerial duties the rule is different. The transaction of the ordinary business of the trust, which involves no special personal fitness in the one who must conduct it, and calls for the exercise of no particular degree of judgment or discretion upon his part, may legally be deputed to one of a number of trustees by the others, and they will be liable for losses only where they have been guilty of negligence in connection with such delegation of power.² If trustees may delegate such powers to agents and employes,³ there can be no reason to forbid them from delegating the performance of like duties to certain of their own number.

A trustee cannot be held responsible for a loss or injury to the estate, occurring through the fault of a co-trustee, if he himself has been blameless.⁴ Co-trustees who continue the business of Joy v. Campbell, 1 Sch. & Lef. 341; Rodbard v. Cooke, 36 L. T. N. S. 504; 25 W. R. 555.

The trustee who receives any of the proceeds of a transaction must personally see to their application. He may not turn them over to his co-trustee for investment or distribution and thus escape responsibility. Fox v. Tay, 89 Cal. 339; 23 Am. St. Rep. 474.

The rule that where trustees unite in the execution of a power of sale and one receives the money all will be liable, does not govern where the one receiving was allowed to hold the money for twenty years with the consent of the cestui, who was sui juris, and the other trustee received no benefit. Laurel County Ct. v. Trustees, etc. (Ky. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 258.

1. Mr. Biddle, in 12 Cent L. J., p. 293, citing and quoting from Rossiter v. Trafalgar L. Assur. Assoc., 27 Beav. 381; Stuart v. Morton, 14 Moore P. C. 32:

"In matters of discretion, in contradistinction to ministerial acts, co-trustees cannot act separately in discharging their trust; their receipts and their certificates of bankruptcy must be joint. A case of urgent necessity might be an exception to the rule; but if the other trustee might be consulted, such necessity does not exist." Vandever's Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 405; 42 Am. Dec. 305.

2. Howard F. Ins. Co. v. Chase, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 509.

3. See supra, this title, Delegation of Powers and Duties.

4. Banks v. Wilkes, 3 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 99; Kip v. Deniston, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; Matter of Cozzens' Estate, (Surr. Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 771; State v. Guilford, 15 Ohio 593; Fesmire's Estate, 134 Pa. St. 67; 19 Am. St. Rep. 676; Glenn v. McKim, 3 Gill (Md.) 366; Williams v. Taylor, 4 Port. (Ala.) 234; Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476; Boyd v. Boyd, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 113; Palmer v. Jones, 1 Vern. 184; Mann v. Ballet, 1 Vern. 44; Howard v. Webster, Sel. Cas. in Ch. 53.

He is under no obligations to take measures against his co-trustee, except upon probable cause. Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337; State v. Guilford, 18 Ohio 500; Irwin's Appeal, 35 Pa. St. 294.

Unless trustees have made some agreement by which they have expressly agreed to be bound for each other, or have by their own voluntary co-operation or connivance enabled each other to accomplish some known object in violation of the trust, they cannot be held responsible for the acts of each other. Taylor v. Roberts, 3 Ala. 83; Henson v. Williamson, 74 Ala. 105; Chambers v. Smith, 30 Ala. 368; Latrobe v. Tiernan, 2 Md. Ch. 474.

A trustee is not liable for money an estate do not sustain the relation of partners, and where one retires he is not liable for purchases made in the course of business by the other trustees after his retirement, even though the purchases be made from one with whom the firm had already had dealings and who knew nothing of the withdrawal of the trustee.¹

Each trustee must be watchful, and if the exercise of care upon his part might have prevented the waste or injury at the hands of the delinquent trustee, he will be liable for the loss.²

received by his co-trustee in the regular discharge of the trust, though he may join in the receipt therefor; but when he joins in a receipt for money which the co-trustee had no right to receive, he will be considered as co-operating in a breach of trust, and will be held liable. Wallis v. Thornton, 2 Brock. (U. S.) 422.

A trustee is not responsible for a loss resulting from his having taken unauthorized securities from the solvent estate of a deceased co-trustee in whose hands the fund had been left. Ormiston v. Olcott, 84 N. Y. 339, reversing 22 Hun (N. Y.) 270.

A trustee acting for conformity, merely for the purpose of enabling his co-trustee, who has taken upon himself the more responsible duties of an active trustee, to transmit or acquire title, or make collections, is not as a rule responsible for the estate thus coming to the hands of the active trustee; but a trustee who seeks to escape liability on the ground that he had acted merely for conformity should raise that issue in his pleadings, and the burden is upon him to show that the active trustee alone collected and controlled the fund. Gray v. Reamer, 11 Bush (Ky.) 113.

1. Noyes v. Turnbull, 54 Hun (N. Y.) 26; affirmed in 130 N. Y. 639.

2. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250; Wayman v. Jones, 4 Md. Ch. 500; Com. v. Eagle, etc., Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 344; Fonte v. Horton, 36 Miss. 350; Laroe v. Douglass, 13 N. J. Eq. 308; Schenck v. Schenck, 16 N. J. Eq. 174; Crane v. Hearn, 26 N. J. Eq. 378; Weetjen v. Vibbard, 5 Hun (N. Y.) 265; Matter of Cozzens' Estate (Surr. Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 771; Graham v. Davidson, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 155; Evans' Estate, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 470; Hilles' Estate, 13 Phila. (Pa.) 402; Pim v. Downing, 11 S. & R. (Pa.) 66; McMurray v. Montgomery, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 374; Hale v. Adams, 21 W. R. 400; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beav. 475;

Dix v. Burford, 19 Beav. 409; Egbert v. Butter, 21 Beav. 560; West v. Jones, 1 Sim. N. S. 205. See also Walker v. Walker, 88 Ky. 615; Tichenor v. Tichenor, 43 N. J. Eq. 163.

One of several trustees cannot remain passive, if he knows of irregular conduct on the part of his associates, without rendering himself liable for such irregularities. Matter of Niles, 113 N. Y. 547.

Co-trustees authorizing one of their number to receive and control the trust fund are liable for any loss or defalcation of such trustee, resulting from their negligence in failing to take security, or look after the fund. State v. Guilford, 15 Ohio 593. But this would be rather the liability of the principal for the agent. Home v. Pringle, 8 Cl. & F. 264; Toplis v. Hurrell, 19 Beav. 427.

A sole trustee suffered the fund to be intermingled with a fund for which he was also joint trustee with another, and the whole to be controlled by the co-trustee, and he was held responsible for the property so misapplied, to a person who was cestui que trust in both funds, though such cestui que trust had discharged the co-trustee in ignorance of the mingling of the funds by the several trustees. Mumford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1.

It is a duty of one of two trustees to collect the purchase-money from his co-trustee, who contracted for the purchase of part of the trust property before his appointment. If he fails to do this, and suffers it to lie in the hands of the other, knowing that he is abusing the trust by failing to apply the money to the payment of debts due from his cestui que trust, the trustees are jointly responsible. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

Where trustees sold land, taking notes for the purchase-money payable to themselves jointly, and one of them took the notes for collection and collected the money and applied it to his own use for twelve years, when he became insolvent, it was held that his co-trustee was liable for his default. Deaderick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 263; 31 Am. Dec. 576.

The rule is general that each is liable only for his own acts and responsible only for what property has been turned over to him. If he consents to his co-trustee's misapplication of the funds or puts them into the co-trustee's hands, he makes the acts of such co-trustee his own and extends his responsibility thus far.¹

It is the duty of a trustee to protect the trust estate from any misfeasance by his co-trustee, upon being made aware of the intended act, by obtaining an injunction against him; and if the wrongful act has been already committed, to take measures, by suit or otherwise, to compel the restitution of the property, and its application in the manner required by the trust. Crane v. Hearn, 26 N. J. Eq. 378. See also Hill on Trustees 314; Perry on Trusts, § 417; and the cases of Laroe v. Douglas, 13 N. J. Eq. 308; Smith v. Pettigrew, 34 N. J. Eq. 216; Crane v. Howell, 35 N. J. Eq. 374.

In Deaderick v. Cantrell, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 263; 31 Am. Dec. 576, the court, by Turley, J., said: "A trustee is liable for an abuse of trust by his co-trustee: 1. When the money has been received jointly. 2. When a joint receipt has been given, unless it be shown by satisfactory proof that the joining in the receipt was necessary or merely formal, and that the money was, in fact, paid to his companion. 3. When the moneys were in fact paid to his companion, yet so paid by his act, direction or agreement." And see Thomas v. Scruggs, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 405; McMurray v. Montgomery, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 377.

In Mucklow v. Fuller, Jac. 198, and Candler v. Tillet, 22 Beav. 257, the executor was held liable for failure to collect from a co-executor.

Where a trustee appropriated the amount of the securities returned to him by his co-trustee, together with other moneys received by him belonging to the trust fund, to the purchase of lands in the State of Ohio, it was held that it was no objection to the liability of the co-trustee for the amount of the securities lost through his negligence, that the party injured made no attempt to enforce the specific lien which might have existed against the land purchased by the bankrupt trustee. Evans' Estate, 2 Ashm. (Pa.) 470.

1. Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15; Monell v. Monell, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 283; 9 Am. Dec. 298; Manahan v. Gibbons, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 427; Sutherland v. Brush, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 17; 11 Am. Dec. 383; Croft v. Williams, 88 N. Y. 384; Paulding v. Sharkey, 88 N. Y. 432; Adair v. Brimmer, 74 N. Y. 564; Munford v. Murray, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; Jones' Appeal, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 143; 42 Am. Dec. 282; McMurray v. Montgomery, 2 Swan (Tenn.) 374; Sparhawk v. Buell, 9 Vt. 41; Joy v. Campbell, 1 Sch. & Lef. 328; Moses v. Levi, 3 Y. & Coll. 359.

In Ames v. Armstrong, 106 Mass. 15, the court, by Ames, J., said: "Co-executors, even though numerous, are regarded in law as but one person. The acts of one, within the scope of his authority in the administration of the estate, are the acts of all, with this qualification, that at common law each was responsible only for such assets as came to his own hands. Under ordinary circumstances, one of two or more executors was not to be held accountable for waste or other misconduct on the part of an associate. The misplaced confidence of the testator in the integrity or capacity of one of the number was not allowed to operate to the prejudice of another. But even according to the common law, whenever any part of the estate, by any act or agreement of one executor, passes or is intrusted to the custody of a co-executor, they are thereby rendered jointly responsible. In such a case it would be inferred that there had been a joint possession or custody, and that one executor, having power and opportunity to make it secure, had yielded the control to the other."

In Stowe v. Bowen, 99 Mass. 194, the court, by Colt, J., said: "As a general rule, co-trustees are responsible for their own acts. They may, by agreement to that effect or by co-operation with or connivance in the act of another in violation of the trust, become themselves in one sense responsible for the act of a co-trustee. In the dis-

The liability of trustees who unite in a breach of the trust is joint and several; that is to say, the cestui que trust, in seeking relief against the breach of trust, may proceed against all the trustees or against any one of them.¹

In the execution of private trusts, then, the concurrence of all the acting trustees is requisite to the validity of any act involving the conduct thereof. With public trusts and those of a quasi public character the rule is different, and a majority of the trustees may exercise the powers intrusted to all.² But the terms of the trust itself may confer upon a majority of the trustees the authority to act.³

Renunciation by one or more of the trustees devolves upon the remaining trustees the performance of the duties of the trust, and the trust is as valid in the one accepting its provisions as if the one renouncing had never been named as trustee.⁴ and the trustee who has renounced the trust cannot be held responsible charge of their trust, they must join in giving receipts and discharges for money paid them; but such joint receipts are open to explanation, and those only into whose actual possession and control the money has come, will be liable for its subsequent misapplication. It is said that this does not apply to executors whose concurrence in acts relating to the estate is not necessary." Citing Kip v. Deniston, 4 Johns. (N. Y.) 23; Leigh v. Barry, 3 Atk. 584; Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. C. C. 117. See also Hall v. Boyd, 6 Pa. St. 270; Stell's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 149; Wilson's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 95; Fesmire's Estate, 134 Pa. St. 676; 19 Am. St. Rep. 676; Worth v. M'Aden, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 199; Ducommun's Appeal, 17 Pa. St. 268; Griffin v. Macaulay, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 476; Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. C. C. 117; Fellows v. Mitchell, 1 P. Wms. 81; Chambers v. Minchin, 7 Ves. 198; Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 324; Shipbrook v. Hinchinbrook, 16 Ves. 479; In re Fryer, 3 Kay & J. 317; Terrell v. Matthews, 11 L. J. Ch. N. S. 31; Adair v. Shaw, 1 Sch. & Lef. 272.

1. Gilchrist v. Stevenson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

2. The rule, requiring a power to be exercised in strict conformity with the authority by which it is conferred, does not apply to business of a public or judicial nature. In such case, a power, intrusted to several, may be exercised by a majority. Sloo v. Law, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 459; Chambers v. Perry, 17 Ala. 726; Beall v. State, 9 Ga. 367; Hill v. Josselyn, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 597;

McCready v. Guardians of the Poor, 9 S. & R. (Pa.) 94; 11 Am. Dec. 667; Com. v. Canal Com'rs, 9 Watts (Pa.) 470; State Road, etc., 60 Pa. St. 330; Allegheny County v. Lecky, 6 S. & R. (Pa.) 170; 9 Am. Dec. 418; First Nat. Bank v. Mount Tabor Tp., 52 Vt. 87; 36 Am. Rep. 734; Atty. Gen'l v. Shearman, 2 Beav. 104; Younger v. Welham, 3 Swanst. 180; Atty. Gen'l v. Scott, 1 Ves. 413; Wilson v. Dennison, Ambl. 82; Wilkinson v. Malin, 2 Tyrw. 544; Atty. Gen'l v. Cumming, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 139.

The acts of trustees of corporations are within the latter rule; thus, upon any matter within their competency, the act of a majority of a board of trustees is the act of the corporation for which they act. Ex p. Greenville Academies, 7 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 471. And viewers to assess damages. Baltimore Turnpike Case, 5 Binn. (Pa.) 481.

In Wilkinson v. Malin, 2 C. & J. 636; 2 Tyrw. 544, the trust was to apply funds "toward the repairs of the church of W., the payment of the fifteenths and relief of the poor of W., buying of armor and setting forth soldiers, and repairing Sawbridge bridge within the parish," and this was held a trust of a public nature, so that the act of a majority of the trustees was valid.

3. Crane v. Decker, 22 Hun (N. Y.) 452.

4. Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 273; Shockley v. Fisher, 75 Mo. 502; Scull v. Reeves, 3 N. J. Eq. 84; 29 Am. Dec. 694; Matter of Stevenson, 3 Paige (N. Y.) 420; King v. Donnelly, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 46; Matter for any subsequent misconduct of his co-trustee.¹ And the death of one of the trustees has the same effect as to the survivors that renunciation has.²

8. Contracts of the Trustee.—While it is true that the contracts entered into by the trustee as such are as distinct from his individual acts as though they were the transactions of two persons, yet, as we have seen, an individual liability is imposed upon the trustee to faithfully perform all obligations which he may have entered into on behalf of the trust, and he must look to the trust estate for his protection and reimbursement.³ And the fact that the contract was executed in his trust capacity and that the contractee recognized the existence of the trust by accepting such obligation will make no difference. The contractual authority of a trustee is limited by the terms of the trust.⁴ The scope of this authority, the various powers which he may exercise,⁵ the extent to which he may charge the trust estate by his acts,⁶ and the limitations within which he may deal with the cestui que trust,⁷ as well as rights of third persons arising out of the trustee's acts, are considered elsewhere in this article.⁸

9. Sales by the Trustee⁹—a. POWER OF SALE.—The power to sell is not ordinarily an incident to the execution of the trust, nor is it to be exercised, in the absence of authority expressly conferred by the trust instrument or by the order of

of Van Schoonhoven, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 560; Niles v. Stevens, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 403; Burrill v. Sheil, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 468; Matter of Reynolds, 11 Hun (N. Y.) 44; Matter of Crossman, 20 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 354; Zebach v. Smith, 3 Binn. (Pa.) 69; 5 Am. Dec. 352; Williams v. Otey, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 563; 47 Am. Dec. 635; Crewe v. Dicken, 4 Ves. 100; Nicolson v. Wordsworth, 2 Swanst. 365; Flanders v. Clarke, 1 Ves. 9; Adams v. Taunton, 5 Madd. 435; Worthington v. Evans, 1 Sim. & S. 165. But compare Blanton v. Mayes, 58 Tex. 422. In this case an estate was devised to A, B, and C, and the survivor of them, upon certain trusts, inter alia, to "manage" and "control" the estate until the heirs should arrive at the age of twenty-one, and then to divide the same, with the accumulations, among them. No express power to sell was given, nor could such power fairly be implied from the language of the will. A, B, and C were also named as executors. B and C renounced the trusts. A qualified, and alone sold and conveyed the land for the purpose of reinvesting for an income. It was held that A could give no title, he not being the survivor of B and C, and that, moreover, the will conferring no power to sell at all, the sale and conveyance for that reason were void.

1. Clagett v. Hall, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 80.

2. Peter v. Beverly, 10 Pet. (U. S.) 532; Golder v. Bressler, 105 Ill. 419; Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 20; 7 Am. Dec. 513; Burr v. Sim, 1 Whart. (Pa.) 266; 29 Am. Dec. 48; Jones v. Price, 11 Sim. 557; 10 L. J. Ch. N. S. 195; 5 Jur. 719.

3. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

4. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Scope and Limitations.

5. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Scope and Limitations.

6. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

7. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—The Duty of Good Faith.

8. See infra, this title, Rights and Liabilities of Third Parties.

9. See valuable note on this subject in Tyler v. Herring, 67 Miss. 169; 19 Am. St. Rep. 266.

As to the purchase of trust property by the trustee, see supra, this title, The court, unless plainly demanded by the urgent necessities of the case.¹

Unless a sale of the trust property is absolutely forbidden by the instrument of trust, the assent of all parties interested may

Duty of Good Faith—Buying at His Own Sale. See also SALES, vol. 21, p. 445.

1. See POWERS, vol. 18, pp. 877, 938, under which subject the power of sale is discussed at length. See also Foscue v. Lyon, 55 Ala. 440; Kent v. Plumb, 57 Ga. 207; Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; 11 Am. Rep. 401; Matter of Roe, 119 N. Y. 509; Howard v. Thornton, 50 Mo. 291; St. Louis v. Priest, 88 Mo. 612.

The legislature has the power to authorize the sale of real estate held by an executor as trustee, for the benefit of the testator's children for their lives, then to go to the issue of such children in fee, when it appears that such issues are minors, that the real estate is not only unproductive, but costly to them, and that it is for their best interest that it should be sold, and a conveyance in fee executed by the executor under such authority is valid and binding, and the purchasers will hold the real estate, both as against the issues in esse at the time of the sale, and as against those subsequently born. Leggett v. Hunter, 19 N. Y. 445.

Where land was conveyed in trust, to pay the debts of the grantor out of the rents and profits, and then for the support of himself, his wife and children, and at his death to be divided among his children, it was held that the trustees had no authority to sell for the payment of the debts, or for any other purpose, however urgent the necessity. Mundy v. Vawter, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 518.

It is a clear violation of duty for a trustee to contract to sell at a certain time, under a penalty binding on him personally. Ricketts v. Montgomery, 15 Md. 46.

A trustee, for a sale to pay debts, who sells without absolute necessity, under a palpable disadvantage, will be liable for the full value of the property sold. Hunt v. Bass, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 292; 24 Am. Dec. 274. But it was held in Porter v. Schofield, 55 Mo. 56, that a trust deed, binding the trust estate for the payment of the debts of the cestui que trust, without express words, confers on the trustee an implied power to sell for that purpose.

An insolvent debtor appointed trustee to manage his property for the mutual benefit of all his creditors, upon an agreement by the creditors to take a certain percentage of their demands, upon the payment of which the property was to be returned to the debtor; "otherwise said property to be sold for the benefit of all parties creditors hereto, and divided pro rata" between said creditors. It was held that the power to sell was given to the trustees, and that presumptively the trustees were accountable only for the actual proceeds of sale. Luigi v. Luchesi, 12 Nev. 306.

Power of Sale Construed.—Where a will devised a lot of ground, with buildings, "to the trustees of the Presbyterian church in Hopkinsville, and to their successors, in fee-simple . . . to be used and enjoyed by said church and their ministers as a parsonage," it was held, that the trustees could, with the consent of the legislature, convey in fee simple, there being no limitation of use, the abandonment of which would act as a forfeiture. Littell v. Wallace, 80 Ky. 252.

Where realty is conveyed in trust for the use of a married woman, and the trustee is empowered to sell the land upon her written request, and at her request he conveys the land in trust to secure her debt, neither she nor her husband are necessary parties to the deed, nor is the husband a necessary party to his wife's written request. Norvell v. Hedrick, 21 W. Va. 523.

Where land was conveyed upon various trusts, with the power to sell free from the said trust, and was reconveyed to the grantor, with the intention of annulling the said trust, and he reconveyed it to the trustees, to hold it for the same uses as by the first conveyance, it was held that the trustees' power to sell was revived, and that they could convey a perfect title. Salisbury v. Bigelow, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 174.

Where property is conveyed in trust, with power to the trustee to use the proceeds in payment of debts of the grantor, the trustee has implied power to sell and convey. Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632.

When Sale Will Be Ordered.—Where a justify a sale, even though no special authority therefor has been conferred.¹ And a sale made irregularly or improperly may be given the force and effect of a regular and legal transaction by receiving the assent or ratification of all parties in interest.²

It has been held in Vermont that the trustee who holds the legal title has full power to sell the trust property to whomsotract of land was given in trust for the sole and separate use of a married woman for life, the remainder in trust for her children living at her death, the court of equity will not decree a sale thereof, with a view to a reinvestment of the proceeds, on the ground that the land is valuable principally for its timber, and yields no present rents and profits. Troy v. Troy, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. Car.) 85.

The legislature may authorize a trustee of the legal estate in the land to convert it into money, for the purpose of distributing the proceeds among the parties entitled. Kerr v. Kitchen, 17 Pa. St. 433.

The legislature cannot authorize a trustee to sell the trust property to discharge debts incurred by him without authority, if the rights of remaindermen will be prejudiced. Martin's Appeal, 23 Pa. St. 433.

The necessary repairs of the buildings upon a farm, devised in trust for life with remainder over, are a charge upon the estate of the life tenant, during its continuance; and the trustee of the life tenant is justified in applying, from time to time, such portion of the rent as may be necessary to make such repairs. The trustee has, however, no power to sell the interest of the life tenant in any portion of the farm, to make such repairs, nor will a court of equity authorize him to do so; the life tenant being sui juris, and there being no restraint upon his alienation of his estate. Thurston v. Thurston, 6 R. I. 296.

Land devised in trust to pay the income, during the life of the testator's sons and the survivor of them, to them and the heirs of those who should die first, and, on the survivor's decease, to convey the land to their heirs, may, under authority of the legislature, be sold, upon giving security to invest the proceeds upon the same trust. Clarke v. Hayes, 9 Gray (Mass.) 426.

A trustee may sell trust property to pay the expenses of litigation sustained for its protection, and this, too, without authority from the court. White v. Dinkins, 19 Ga. 285.

A court of equity will confirm a trustee's sale of land made to pay off an incumbrance upon the trust property, and will charge him with the proceeds. Morrison v. Bowman, 29 Cal. 337.

A power to sell will be implied where it is necessary to the proper execution of the trust. Rankin v. Rankin, 36 Ill. 293; 87 Am. Dec. 216, note; Vallette v. Bennett, 69 Ill. 632; Winston v. Jones, 6 Ala. 550; Curling v. Austin, 2 D. & S. 129; Ames v. Ames, 15 R. I. 12; Stall v. Cincinnati, 16 Ohio St. 170; Eidsforth v. Armstead, 2 Kay & J. 333; Blatch v. Wilder, 1 Atk. 419; Barker v. Devonshire, 3 Mer. 310.

1. Robinson v. Fidelity Trust, etc., Vault Co. (Ky. 1889), 11 S. W. Rep. 806; Pownall v. Myers, 16 Vt. 408; Norvell v. Hedrick, 21 W. Va. 523.

It is competent for the trustee, provided there is no restriction upon his powers in the deed, and no limitations over the children or third persons, to sell the trust property by, and with the consent and approbation of the cestui que trust. Arrington v. Cherry, 10 Ga. 429.

A testator devised certain lands in trust for A, to be held by a trustee until she became of age or married, and upon her marriage to be settled to her separate use, so that neither the land, nor its proceeds nor profits, should be liable for her husband's debts or contracts. Upon her marriage, it was held that she, her husband, and the trustee could, by a conveyance of the property, give a good title in fee. Averett v. Lipscombe, 76 Va. 404.

2. See infra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary; Waiver and Estoppel.

A purchaser, under a defective execution of a power by a trustee, cannot resist payment on the ground of such defect, where the cestui que trust is the only person entitled to object to the sale, and is a party to the suit for the purchase-money affirming the sale. Schenck v. Ellingwood, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 175.

ever he chooses.¹ Where the deed of trust authorizes a sale, the trustee will not be enjoined from making the sale on the ground that great financial depression prevails, and that therefore the property cannot bring its true value.² And it has been held that the court may order a sale if in its judgment such an order will benefit the trust.³

A sale improvidently made is just ground for equitable relief; for the court will not permit the highest interests of the trust to suffer or be sacrificed by any misconduct of the trustee.⁴ No greater title can be required of him than by the terms of the trust has been conferred upon him.⁵ Thus, if he hold for the life of another, he cannot convey a fee.⁶ And if his trust is to sell realty to pay debts, his power to sell is limited to that purpose and he cannot exercise it after the debts have been satisfied.⁷

He is not bound to warrant the title against any acts save his own and the acts of those claiming under him.⁸ But he must convey the legal title.⁹ This he cannot do by a deed which purports only to convey the right, title, and interest of the cestui que trust therein.¹⁰ And whatever rights the trustee had in the property inure to the benefit of his vendee upon completion of the sale.¹¹

1. Blaisdell v. Stevens, 16 Vt. 179. And see Pownal v. Myers, 16 Vt. 408; Mitchell v. Stevens, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 16.

2. Muller v. Stone, 84 Va. 834; 10 Am. St. Rep. 889.

3. Aleman v. Wensinger, 40 Cal. 288.

The court will direct a sale or mortgage of the estate, if the purposes of a trust cannot be accomplished without the most serious delays and inconveniences, and this, though a power is only given to raise money for these purposes in a different way. Conkling v. Washington University, 2 Md. Ch. 497.

4. Hill v. Shoemaker, 1 MacArthur (D. C.) 305.

5. See Walton v. Follansbee, 131 Ill. 147.

6. Rogers v. Pace, 75 Ga. 436; West v. Fitz, 109 Ill. 425.

Where the trustee of a life estate makes a conveyance of the land under an order of the court granted in term upon his ex parte petition, the life tenant alone consenting, the remaindermen not being represented or made parties to the proceeding, only an estate for life passes, though the deed purports to convey the fee and the purchaser pays full value. Lamar v. Pearre, 82 Ga. 354; 14 Am. St. Rep. 168.

7. Where a testator by his will left all his real estate to trustees with power to sell and to pay certain specific debts, and in the same will devised all his estate to his children, it was held that, after the debts had been satisfied, the trustees had no power to sell, and any conveyance by them thereafter was void. Murdock v. Johnson, 7 Coldw. (Tenn.) 605.

8. Kirten v. Spears, 44 Ark. 166; Worthy v. Johnson, 8 Ga. 236; 52 Am. Dec. 399; Ennis v. Leach, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 416; Fleming v. Holt, 12 W. Va. 143.

A trustee required by a court of equity to convey land to the beneficiary, is bound to warrant against persons claiming under himself. Dwinel v. Veazie, 36 Me. 509.

In such conveyance, under an Illinois decision, a warranty against his own acts is all that should be required of him. Hoare v. Harris, 11 Ill. 24.

Where land was conveyed to a trustee, to sell and pay certain debts, and pay the balance to one of the grantors, and the trustee sold such title as was vested in him, without warranty, it was held that the trustee was not liable to the purchaser for any defect in the title to any part of the premises, and that the proceeds in his hands ought not to be refunded to the purchaser. Sutton v. Sutton, 7 Gratt. (Va.) 234.

9. Saunders v. Schmaelzle, 49 Cal. 59.

10. Titcomb v. Currier, 4 Cush. (Mass.) 591.

11. A purchaser at the sale of a trustee in a deed of trust, takes thereby the right to use the name of the grantor in the deed of trust, to enforce by action a right accruing under the deed to such grantor. Alexander v. Schreiber, 13 Mo. 271.

If the trustee is entitled to the possession of the property sold, it is his duty to acquire possession before selling.¹ Authority to sell does not imply a power to mortgage;² nor does a power to mortgage imply a power of sale.³

A power to sell does not carry with it the authority to exchange,⁴ although under a power "to sell and exchange" the trustee may make and receive deeds of partition with other joint owners.⁵

A delegation of the power of sale will not be upheld. Such a power involves the exercise of discretion and judgment and can be used by none but the trustee himself.⁶

1. Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 300.

2. See POWERS, vol. 18, p. 940; Patapasco Guano Co. v. Morrison, 2 Woods (U. S.) 395; Hubbard v. German Catholic Congregation, 34 Iowa 31; Dolan v. Baltimore, 4 Gill (Md.) 394; Tyson v. Latrobe, 42 Md. 325; Paine v. Barnes, 100 Mass. 470; Hoyt v. Jaques, 129 Mass. 286; Stokes v. Payne, 58 Miss. 614; 38 Am. Rep. 340; Ferry v. Laible, 31 N. J. Eq. 567; Constant v. Servoss, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 128; Waldron v. McComb, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 111; Cumming v. Williamson, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 17; Russell v. Russell, 36 N. Y. 581; 93 Am. Dec. 540; Albany F. Ins. Co. v. Bay, 4 N. Y. 9; Bloomer v. Waldron, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 361; Head v. Temple, 4 Heisk. (Tenn.) 34; Shaftesbury v. Marlborough, 2 Myl. & K. 111; Stronghill v. Amstey, 1 De G. M. & G. 635; Davey v. Durrant, 1 De G. & J. 535; Butler v. Duncomb, 1 P. Wms. 448; Page v. Cooper, 16 Beav. 400; Devaynes v. Robinson, 24 Beav. 86; Eland v. Baker, 29 Beav. 137. But compare the following cases in which the contrary rule was adopted. Wayne v. Middleton, 2 Ga. 383; Watson v. James, 15 La. Ann. 386; Williams v. Woodard, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 492; Pennsylvania Ins. Co. v. Austin, 42 Pa. St. 257; Mills v. Banks, 3 P. Wms. 9; Allen v. Backhouse, 2 Ves. & B. 65; Ball v. Harris, 4 Myl. & Cr. 264. See also Wood v. Goodridge, 6 Cush. (Mass.) 117; 52 Am. Dec. 771.

Under a power to sell lands given by a will, with directions to reinvest the money arising from the sale, the trustee may not mortgage the lands. Such a mortgage is void. Bloomer v. Waldron, 3 Hill (N. Y.) 361.

3. Drake v. Whitmore, 5 De G. & S. 619.

4. Cleveland v. State Bank, 16 Ohio St. 236; 88 Am. Dec. 445; Wadsworth Poor School v. McCully, 11 Rich. (S. Car.) 424; King v. Whiton, 15 Wis. 684; Mauser v. Dix, 8 De G. M. & G. 703.

Trustees empowered by a deed to sell real estate, cannot exchange it for other real estate. By making such exchange, though with the best intentions, they are responsible to the cestui que trust for the full value of the land parted with; for the actual value, if it can be clearly ascertained, otherwise for the utmost value. Ringgold v. Ringgold, 1 Har. & G. (Md.) 11; 18 Am. Dec. 250.

5. Phelps v. Harris, 101 U. S. 370; Phelps v. Harris, 51 Miss. 789; contra, see Brassey v. Chalmers, 4 De G. M. & G. 528; 16 Beav. 223; Bradshaw v. Fane, 3 Drew. 536.

6. It was so held in Bohlen's Estate, 75 Pa. St. 304, where a testator gave authority to his executors, "or the survivor of them," to sell certain real estate and invest, etc., "as they shall see proper for the purposes of this my will," and the executors having died, one of the successors, upon his removal to Europe, made a power of attorney to the other "to sell or change any or all stocks and loans," and this delegation of power was held to be invalid. But compare May v. Frazee, 4 Litt. (Ky.) 391; 14 Am. Dec. 159.

In Warnecke v. Lembca, 71 Ill. 91; 22 Am. Rep. 85, where the deed authorized the trustee, "or his legal representative," to sell the property, it was held that this power could not be exercised by the administrator of the trustee, but only by his successor in

If there be several trustees, all should unite in the conveyance, for their interest in the trust estate is an entirety. Where one trustee dies, however, the successors may execute a valid conveyance, unless forbidden by the instrument of trust.¹

b. MANNER OF SALE.—The sale of trust property, like any other act in the execution of the trust, must be conducted according to the manner prescribed by the instrument creating the trust.² The trustee may not waive any of its requirements or trust. See Dunning v. Ocean Nat. Bank, 61 N. Y. 497; 19 Am. Rep. 293.

The case of Fuller v. O'Neil, 69 Tex. 349; 5 Am. St. Rep. 59, was one in which the trustee was given power to sell, and left the conduct of the sale in the hands of an agent. The court, by Willie, C. J., said: "The grantor of the power is entitled to have his directions obeyed, to have the proper notice of the sale given, to have it take place at the time and place and by the person appointed by him. He gives these directions because he thinks that a sale made by the person selected, and under the circumstances stated, will be to his interest, and make his property produce the largest amount of money. Of the prescribed conditions, none is more important than that which requires that the trustee shall in person make the sale. He is chosen because of the confidence the grantor has in his integrity and discretion. . . . The trustee can no more absent himself whilst the sale is going on than he can make it at a time or a place or for a character of consideration different from that authorized in the deed." And to this point the court cites Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; 11 Am. Rep. 401; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Powell v. Tuttle, 3 N. Y. 396.

In Brickenkamp v. Rees, 69 Mo. 426, it was declared to be the trustee's duty to be present during an entire sale made under his deed of trust; otherwise, the sale would be void.

See also Taylor v. Hopkins, 40 Ill. 442; Spurlock v. Sproule, 72 Mo. 503; Vail v. Jacobs, 62 Mo. 130; Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 18; Howard v. Thornton, 50 Mo. 291; Bales v. Perry, 51 Mo. 449; Bradford v. Belfield, 2 Sim. 264; Greenham v. Gibleson, 10 Bing. 363; 25 E. C. L. 163; Hitch v. Leworthy, 2 Hare 200; Townsend v. Wilson, 1 B. & Ad. 608.

In Graham v. King, 50 Mo. 22; 11 Am. Rep. 401, the sale was overthrown, although the trustee was present at the beginning and close of the auction, and had merely stepped across the street meanwhile, leaving the auctioneer in charge. The court said: "It was the duty of the trustee to be present during the crying of the sale, to observe the progress thereof, protect the interests of the parties concerned, to reject fraudulent bids made to frustrate the sale, and, if necessary, to adjourn the sale." And see supra, this title, Delegation of Powers and Duties.

1. Golder v. Bressler, 105 Ill. 419.

2. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Scope and Limitations. See also Huntt v. Townshend, 31 Md. 336; 100 Am. Dec. 63; Blanton v. Mayes, 58 Tex. 422; Quarles v. Lacey, 4 Munf. (Va.) 251. Or the sale will be set aside and a resale ordered. Norman v. Hill, 2 Patt. & H. (Va.) 676. A purchase at an unauthorized and voidable sale must be for a valuable consideration and in good faith, without notice of existing equities, or it will be set aside. Morgan v. Clayton, 61 Ill. 35.

One who takes as trustee under a stipulation for partition, cannot convey otherwise than as stipulated. Haack v. Weicken, 118 N. Y. 67.

A trust deed recited that the beneficiary had paid certain debts as security for the grantor, the amounts of which were not given, and authorized the trustee to sell to satisfy such as had been paid and should be presented to the grantor. The trustee sold, but on the trial there was no proof that any indebtedness existed, nor that any claim had ever been presented to the grantor as having been paid. It was held that the trustee had no authority to sell, and that his deed passed no title to the purchaser. Mills v. Traylor, 30 Tex. 7.

A Sale Made by a Trustee Prior to the Date.—Where a deed of trust of lands directs that no sale shall be made prior conditions, nor alter any of its terms. If he is acting under a broad, general power of sale, the manner of conducting it is left to his discretion, and any ordinary mode that he may consider proper to adopt will meet the approval of the court.¹

The rules which govern the manner of conducting sales, differ so widely in the various jurisdictions that no principles generally applicable can be announced. Cases illustrating the requirements of different courts as to the notice of sale, parties to the proceeding, and the time, place, and terms of sale, are cited in the notes.²

to a certain day, a deed, though joined in by the cestuis que trustent, executed before that time, is invalid. But it seems that the trustee may confirm the sale after the appointed time for selling has arrived. Isham v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 11 N. J. Eq. 227.

The court has no power, upon the petition of the grantor, the cestui que trust, and the trustees, to order a sale of real estate held in trust and partly for the benefit of infants, although a state of facts is shown, from which it appears that a sale would be beneficial to the cestui que trust, where such a sale would be contrary to the provisions of the grant, and where the remainder-men were uncertain and could not yet be ascertained. Matter of Turner, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 552.

Where property was conveyed in trust to secure the payment of a promissory note, dated Nov. 11th, 1858, the trustee being empowered, if the note was not paid at maturity, to advertise the land for twenty days, and then sell the same and make payment, and upon default the trustee sold the land on Dec. 1st, 1859, the sale was held void as to the maker of the deed, since the sale was not made after the lapse of twenty days from default of payment, such default not occurring until the first minute of Nov. 12th, 1859. Young v. Van Benthuyssen, 30 Tex. 762.

As to what recitals contain a sufficient reference to the source of a trustee's power to validate his sale and deed, see Porter v. Schofield, 55 Mo. 303.

As to whether the sale should be in gross or in parcels, see Carter v. Abshire, 48 Mo. 300; Sumrall v. Chaffin, 48 Mo. 402.

Sales made by trustees on mere personal security are at their own risk. Swoyer's Appeal, 5 Pa. St. 377.

1. See POWERS, vol. 18, p. 944.

In general, see Gindrat v. Montgomery Gas Light Co., 82 Ala. 596; 60

Am. Rep. 769, and the large number of cases there cited; Burr v. McEwen, Baldw. (U. S.) 154; Mattox v. Eberhart, 38 Ga. 581; Crane v. Reeder, 22 Mich. 322; Minuse v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; 9 Am. Dec. 313; Gray v. Shaw, 14 Mo. 341; Rogers v. DeForest, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 273; Stall v. Macalester, 9 Ohio 19; Hoffman v. Mackall, 5 Ohio St. 124; 64 Am. Dec. 637; Huger v. Huger, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 217; Summers v. Bean, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 404.

The trustee of real estate under a will, may convey the same in his own name without reciting the trusts. Bradstreet v. Clarke, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 602.

A trustee in a deed of trust to pay debts, is not bound to sell within a particular time, but is bound to use his discretion in the matter, in order to obtain the highest price. Hawkins v. Alston, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 137.

Under an express trust, with power of sale, the trustee is not required to apply to a court to authorize the sale, nor to give a bond for the execution of the trust unless required, nor can the title in the vendee be questioned for want of consideration. Hes v. Martin, 69 Ind. 114.

In the absence of extrinsic equities, a sale of real estate in accordance with the terms of a power in a deed of trust, but without the intervention of judicial proceedings, is valid against a subsequent mortgagee. Lowe v. Grinnan, 19 Iowa 193.

A conveyance of real estate, made in consideration of personal property or choses in action, is strictly and literally a sale, and may be valid, though it is not a sale for money. Speigle v. Meredith, 4 Biss. (U. S.) 120.

2. Irregularities in the Sale.—Notice of Sale.—In general, see Burke v. Adair, 23 W. Va. 139; Leffler v. Armstrong, 4 Iowa 482; 68 Am. Dec. 672.

It has been held that a sale without notice will confer a valid title, notwithstanding a direction of the trustee to sell on notice, and the remedy is against the trustee for the deficiency in price occasioned by his failure to give notice. Minuse v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; 9 Am. Dec. 313. But compare Henderson v. Calloway, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 692, in which it was held that where the trustee in a deed to secure the payment of debts is required to give notice of the time and place of sale to the bargainor, such notice is a condition precedent, and a sale without notice is void and communicates no title. A power of sale must be strictly pursued as to the time and place of notice. Thornton v. Boyden, 31 Ill. 200. But a clerical error in a trustee's deed as to the day of posting notice of sale, does not invalidate it. O'Neil v. Vanderburgh, 25 Iowa 104.

Where the notice of a sale omitted to state by or to whom the deed of trust was executed, and did not describe, nor identify, nor locate the lands so as to enable one who was not familiar with them to know what lands were to be sold, without first examining the county records, it was held insufficient, and the sale was set aside. Reeside v. Peter, 33 Md. 120.

Time of Publication.—See generally Leffler v. Armstrong, 4 Iowa 482; 68 Am. Dec. 672; Cushman v. Stone, 69 Ill. 516; Graham v. Fitts, 53 Miss. 307.

Where twenty days' notice of the time and place of sale are required, the publication must continue up to the date of the sale; one insertion is insufficient. Stine v. Wilkson, 10 Mo. 75. But where three weeks notice was required, it was held that an advertisement inserted once a week for three weeks, and once on the day of sale, in two daily newspapers, was sufficient. Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill (Md.) 269. And where the trust deed required thirty days, by posting the same in three or more public places in the county, it was held that if the notices were put up thirty days before the sale, it was unnecessary that they should remain posted every day up to the sale. Graham v. Fitts, 53 Miss. 307.

The law does not contemplate that the notice shall be examined on Sunday, and where notice was required to be posted in three public places, and one of the notices was posted on the inside of the post-office door, which was closed and invisible on Sunday, save for two hours, it was held sufficient. Graham v. Fitts, 53 Miss. 307.

Where a notice dated December 7th, gave notice of a sale "on the 28th of December next," it was held that it could not mislead purchasers, and that a sale on the 28th of the same December was valid. Gray v. Shaw, 14 Mo. 341.

The naming of an impossible day for the sale will invalidate the notice. Thacker v. Tracy, 8 Mo. App. 318.

Where land was given to a trustee to sell "at auction or otherwise, in whole or in parcels, on giving three weeks' notice thereof," he can sell at private sale and without notice. Minuse v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; 9 Am. Dec. 313.

Place of Publication.—See generally Campbell v. Tagge, 30 Iowa 307; Pursley v. Hayes, 22 Iowa 21; Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill (Md.) 269.

Where notice is required to be published in a newspaper, without designating any particular one, the trustee, in the absence of fraud, has unlimited discretion in selection of the newspaper. Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589.

Where the deed authorized a sale after twenty days' notice posted on the front door of a certain hotel, a sale made after a notice posted anywhere else than on such door, was held void. Sears v. Livermore, 17 Iowa 297; 85 Am. Dec. 564.

Discontinuance of a newspaper in which notice was directed to be published, does not divest the legal title of the trustee. Tucker v. Silver, 9 Iowa 261.

Where the notice was published in a locality required by the deed, and all the parties concerned in the sale had actual notice thereof, the publication was held sufficient, although the certified copy of the record of the deed from the recorder's office, made it appear that the notice was to be published elsewhere. Jones v. Moore, 42 Mo. 413.

Contents of the Notice.—There is no prescribed form for a notice of sale, but the description of the land must be reasonably certain, that there may be no mistake of the land to be sold. Newman v. Jackson, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 570. It is unnecessary to specify the amount of the debt that should be paid. Winwall v. Ross, 4 Port. (Ala.) 321. And in the absence of proof that competition was prevented, or that the sale was in any respect prejudiced thereby, a sale will not be vacated because the notice failed to state the name of the parties to the suit in which a decree of sale passed or the several incumbranches on the property. Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44.

The notice of sale should contain such facts as reasonably to apprise the public of the place, time, and terms of sale, and the property to be sold. But mere inaccuracies and omissions in these respects, not calculated to mislead, and working no prejudice, will not be regarded. Gray v. Shaw, 14 Mo. 341; Beatie v. Butler, 21 Mo. 313; 64 Am. Dec. 234; Powers v. Kueckhoff, 41 Mo. 425; 97 Am. Dec. 281; Stephenson v. January, 49 Mo. 465; Chesley v. Chesley, 49 Mo. 540.

Form of Notice.—Mere informality in the form of notice, even where a particular form is prescribed by law, will not invalidate the sale. Boston Safe Deposit, etc., Co. v. Mixter, 146 Mass. 100. Nor is any special form requisite. Newman v. Jackson, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 570. See generally, note to Tyler v. Herring, 67 Miss. 169, in 19 Am. St. Rep. 263.

Parties.—The omission to make a prior incumbrancer a party in a bill relating to a trustee's sale, is not sufficient ground for treating the proceedings as a nullity, and the sale void, although it might be error for which the decree would be reversed on appeal. Speed v. Smith, 4 Md. Ch. 299.

Where the trustee is seised of the legal estate in fee, and is a party before the court, there is a greater facility in giving a perfect title to the purchaser, although all the parties in interest are not before the court, inasmuch as the decree for sale operates on the fee simple in the trustee, and passes that to the purchaser discharged of the equities of the cestui que trust. Williman v. Holmes, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 475.

A trustee was empowered to sell land with "the assent in writing of the said cestui que trust." A was the sole cestui que trust for his life, and then others took his place, and it was held that his assent alone was necessary to a sale. Gindrat v. Montgomery Gas-Light Co., 82 Ala. 596; 60 Am. Rep. 769.

Minors.—Under the Pennsylvania Statute, passed to facilitate the alienation of real estate, and providing that a sale of land may be ordered upon the application of a guardian or other interested party, when the land in question is owned by a minor, or when a party interested therein is under a legal disability to convey, it is within the jurisdiction of the orphans' court to order a private sale of land, on the petition of a trustee, to whom it is devised, for the payment of debts, and then to apply the income to certain persons, with contingent remainders to others, where it appears from the fact that it is an expense to the estate, and unproductive, that the interest of all parties requires its sale, and that an arrangement has been made privately to sell it for a larger sum than had been offered for it at a recently attempted public sale; as the interests of the remainder-men can, under the provisions of the act mentioned, be protected by proper orders governing the application of the purchase-money. Moorhead v. Wolff, 123 Pa. St. 365.

A trust estate in which the cestuis que trustent are minors, cannot be legally sold on the petition of the trustee, unless the minors are made parties by a representative properly appointed. East Rome Town Co. v. Cothram, 81 Ga. 359, following Hill v. Printup, 48 Ga. 452.

Manner and Terms of Sale.—A trustee appointed to sell to the highest bidder is bound to see that the sale is fairly made and that there is a real competition. Fairfax v. Hopkins, 2 Cranch (U. S. C. C.) 134; Johnston v. Eason, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 330.

A trustee directed to sell at public auction and pay certain debts, has no authority to sell except at public auction, although the grantor's interest may be promoted by a private sale. Greenleaf v. Queen, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 138. But where a trustee has advertised the property as prescribed by the decree of sale, without succeeding in making a sale, he may sell at private sale, or otherwise, in his discretion. Gibson's Case, 1 Bland (Md.) 138; 17 Am. Dec. 257.

Where a trustee was appointed by a decree to sell property at public sale, and so offered it, but without success, and finally after unusual efforts found a purchaser at private sale, it was held that if the sale was for a fair price and in good faith, it would be ratified by the court. Tyson v. Mickle, 2 Gill (Md.) 376.

Where a trustee applied to the court for leave to sell real estate belonging to the trust, and the petition stated that he had been offered seven thousand dollars for the property by A, which was a fair offer, and the court passed the following order: "Read and sanctioned; the petitioner has leave to sell;" it was held that a private sale to

A for seven thousand dollars was legal under the order. Shacklett v. Ransom, 54 Ga. 350.

If persons acting in a fiduciary character do acts or make declarations preventing competition at the sale of trust property, or which cause a sacrifice of the same, the sale will be set aside at the instance of a beneficiary injured thereby. Goodwin v. Mix, 38 Ill. 115.

The rights of a bona fide purchaser, who has conveyed the property to another, will not be vitiated by the fact that the premises included in the deed were sold en masse, instead of in parcels, or for only one-third of their value, or when there was only a small attendance at the sale, or that the notice of sale erroneously stated that all the interest was unpaid. Shine v. Hill, 23 Iowa 264. And, although a trust deed described the land conveyed as two separate parcels, when it appeared that they constituted but one farm, and with the assent of the beneficiary and by the advice of the trustees were sold together, it was held that the sale in that form was proper. Kellogg v. Carrico, 47 Mo. 157. The sale of a trust estate made merely for the purpose of reinvestment may be made under an order of the court without the intervention of a commissioner. Griffith v. Burton, 5 Bush (Ky.) 358.

To prevent a person becoming the highest bidder at a sale under a decree when he is wholly unable to comply with his contract, the court may direct that his bid shall not be received and that the trustee report the two highest bidders, so that in case the highest fails to comply with the terms of sale, the next highest may be received and considered as a purchaser. Murdock's Case, 2 Bland (Md.) 461; 20 Am. Dec. 381.

A trustee empowered to sell for cash and pay certain debts, cannot, in the event of non-payment, sell on credit, and such a sale will be set aside at the instance of the debtor. Cassell v. Ross, 33 Ill. 244; 85 Am. Dec. 270.

The terms of a deed of trust required that upon default in the payment of the notes for which the deed was given as security, the trustee should "sell the property for cash." Subsequent to the execution of the deed, and before the sale, several liens were created on the property. At the sale, the purchaser paid a part of the purchase-money in cash, and executed his notes to the owners and holders of the liens for the respective balances due them over and above the amounts realized by them at the sale, and the lien-holders yielded up all their claim against the maker of the deed of trust. It was held that the notes given were equivalent to cash placed in the hands of the trustee. Mead v. McLaughlin, 42 Mo. 198.

After a trustee's sale under a deed forbidding a sale on credit, the creditor for whose benefit the sale is made, may lend the purchaser a portion of the money with which to pay the amount of his bid, and the transaction will not be regarded as a sale upon credit by the trustee. Waterman v. Spaulding, 51 Ill. 425.

Where a will directed a sale of slaves to purchasers for their own use, but not to speculators, without prescribing the terms of the sale, a sale on a credit of twelve months was held proper. Stone v. Hinton, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 15.

Adjournment of Sale.—The trustee may adjourn the sale in his discretion to a more favorable time. Richards v. Holmes, 18 How. (U. S.) 143; Judge v. Booge, 47 Mo. 544; Sayles v. Smith, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 57; 27 Am. Dec. 117; Jackson v. Clark, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 225. See also Patten v. Stewart, 26 Ind. 395; Thornton v. Boyden, 31 Ill. 200; Griffin v. Marine Co., 52 Ill. 130; Montgomery v. Barrow, 19 La. Ann. 169; Dana v. Farrington, 4 Minn. 433; Enloe v. Miles, 12 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 147.

But, upon adjourning the sale, the trustee is bound to give a new notice for the same length of time required in the first instance, and this whether the deed contains a clause authorizing an adjournment of the sale or not. Griffin v. Marine Co., 52 Ill. 130.

Power to Correct Error.—Trustees advertised and sold the whole of a tract of land, and the purchaser, supposing only a part was sold, took a deed of that part. On the discovery of the mistake, it was held that the trustees might convey the rest to him by a second deed. O'Day v. Vansant, 3 Mackey (D. C.) 196.

Requirements as to Resale.—A bid made at a trustee's sale through a misunderstanding as to the terms of payment, may be retracted by the consent of the trustee, without avoiding the sale, though the sale is finally effected on a lower bid. Waterman v. Spaulding, 51 Ill. 425.

Where the sale of trust property by a trustee under a power to sell, is set aside

c. SETTING THE SALE ASIDE.—While the trustee's deed will convey a legal title indefeasible in a court of common law, even though made in violation of his duty,¹ it may be set aside by a by the supreme court, on the ground that the property was not sufficiently described in the public notice of sale, and the cause is remanded for a re-sale, and the necessary steps have been taken in the court below for that purpose, in conformity with the opinion of the appellate court, the trustee may proceed to resell the property without an order of the circuit court directing such sale. Reeside v. Peter, 35 Md. 221.

When the purchaser refuses to complete the contract, it would be improper for the trustee to resell the property on the same day, but he must re-advertise, and sell upon full notice, in order that the bidding may be open to competition, and a fair price be obtained. Judge v. Booge, 47 Mo. 544; Barnard v. Duncan, 38 Mo. 170; 90 Am. Dec. 416; Givan v. Doe, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 260; Williams v. Barlow, 49 Ga. 530.

Requirements in the Deed.—It must be clear and definite in naming the grantee. Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480.

It should recite the trust, or at least call attention to it, by conveying as trustee. Porter v. Schofield, 55 Mo. 303.

There Must Be a Grantee Named.—A deed executed by a trustee, relinquishing his whole estate in the trust property, but not purporting to convey it to any person, is inoperative. Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480.

But such a recital or reference is not vital to the validity of the deed. Gindrat v. Montgomery Gas Light Co., 82 Ala. 596; 60 Am. Rep. 769; Hall v. Preble, 68 Me. 100; Bradstreet v. Clarke, 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 602; South v. South, 91 Ind. 221; 46 Am. Rep. 591; Baird v. Boucher, 60 Miss. 329; Campbell v. Johnson, 65 Mo. 439; Bishop v. Remple, 11 Ohio St. 277; Funk v. Eggleston, 92 Ill. 515; Orr v. O'Brien, 55 Tex. 149; Flux v. Best, 31 L. T. N. S. 645; 23 Wkly. Rep. 228.

A trustee's sale is not invalidated by a misrecital in the notice of sale and in the deed, of the circumstances which devolved the execution of the trust upon him, where the deed of trust contains no provision requiring a recital of such circumstances. Irish v. Antioch College, 126 Ill. 474; 9 Am. St. Rep. 638.

It is the established doctrine in Maryland, that a sale made by a trustee, under a decree of a court of chancery, is a transaction between the court and the purchaser; and the report of the trustee and the order of the court ratifying the sale, must be regarded as the evidence of the contract between the parties. Goldsborough v. Ringgold, 1 Md. Ch. 239.

1. Bank of U. S. v. Benning, 4 Cranch (C. C.) 81; Taylor v. Benham, 5 How. (U. S.) 272; Reece v. Allen, 10 Ill. 236; 48 Am. Dec. 336; Dawson v. Hayden, 67 Ill. 52; Koester v. Burke, 81 Ill. 436; Martin v. Clark, 116 Ill. 654; Walton v. Follansbee, 131 Ill. 147; Prather v. McDowell, 8 Bush (Ky.) 46; Thatcher v. St. Andrew's Church, 37 Mich. 264; Gale v. Mensing, 20 Mo. 461; 64 Am. Dec. 197; Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Green, 68 Mo. 177; Taylor v. King, 6 Munf. (Va.) 358; D'Oyley v. Loveland, 1 Strobb. (S. Car.) 45; Minuse v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; 9 Am. Dec. 313; Varner v. Gunn, 61 Ga. 54; Den v. Troutman, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 155; Pownal v. Myers, 16 Vt. 408; Blaisdell v. Stevens, 16 Vt. 179.

The trustee can convey an absolute title at law, whether in compliance with the trust or not, but the party injured by the breach of trust may defeat it in equity. Taylor v. King, 6 Munf. (Va.) 358; 8 Am. Dec. 746.

Until a redemption is had the grantee will hold it, and may set it up in defense of an action of ejectment. Wilson v. South Park Com'rs, 70 Ill. 46.

But where a trustee, for the separate use of a feme covert, executed a deed, purporting to convey the legal title, it was allowed to operate merely as a declaration of the trust, and not to divest the title of the trustee. Thompson v. McDonald, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 463.

Where property was devised to a trustee, with directions to sell the principal only, for reinvestment in more profitable securities, a bona fide conveyance by him in exchange for Confederate bonds, was held to pass title to the purchaser. Schley v. Brown, 70 Ga. 64.

The grantee of a trustee is not bound court of equity upon the application of the beneficiary.¹ The trustee may not impeach his own sale.² Nor can the regularity or validity of the transaction be questioned by a stranger,³ nor impeached collaterally.⁴

"Public policy as well as the stability of rules of property," it is said, "demand that sales, and titles founded thereon, should not be avoided for slight and trivial reasons; but where the power has not been executed in accordance with essential conditions, the sale and deed will be held to be utterly void, both at law and in equity."⁵

While fraud or gross unfairness will vitiate the sale,⁶ yet fraud is not to be presumed upon slight grounds; whatever pre-to show that the conditions of the trust deed have been complied with by the trustee. Reece v. Allen, 10 Ill. 236; 48 Am. Dec. 336.

A deed, with the consent of the beneficiary, though to secure a debt, passes the title. Dykes v. McVay, 67 Ga. 502.

1. Prouty v. Edgar, 6 Iowa 353; Hazeltine v. Fourney, 120 Ill. 493. Where the powers conferred on the trustees are not strictly pursued, a court of chancery will set aside their sales. Stine v. Wilkson, 10 Mo. 75.

By standing by and assenting to the sale, even though the sale were unauthorized, the cestui que trust waives his right to object. Spencer v. Hawkins, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 288.

2. Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560; Prouty v. Edgar, 6 Iowa 353; Parker v. Allen (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 265.

3. Gary v. Colgin, 11 Ala. 514; Herbert v. Hanrick, 16 Ala. 581; Larco v. Casaneuava, 30 Cal. 560; Lee v. Parker, 5 Whart. (Pa.) 350; Coxe v. Blanden, 1 Watts (Pa.) 533; 26 Am. Dec. 83; Hunt v. Crawford, 3 P. & W. (Pa.) 426.

4. Reid v. Mullins, 48 Mo. 344; Quesenberry v. Barbour, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 491.

5. Wagner, J., in Powers v. Kueckhoff, 41 Mo. 425; 97 Am. Dec. 281. See also Dana v. Farrington, 4 Minn. 433; Stine v. Wilkson, 10 Mo. 75; Thornburg v. Jones, 36 Mo. 514; Jackson v. Clark, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 217; Miller v. Hull, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 104; Sherwood v. Reade, 7 Hill (N. Y.) 431; King v. Duntz, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 192.

It constitutes no objection to the validity of a sale that the trustees, in the exercise of a reasonable discretion, sell the land in lots. Gray v. Shaw, 14 Mo. 341; Stall v. Macalester, 9 Ohio 19.

If the bidder at a sale of trust property refuses to accept a deed and pay the money, the trustee may waive his bid and advertise the property again for sale on another day. Dover v. Kennerly, 38 Mo. 469.

The fact that a trustee was an alien when the deed was made to him, and when he conveyed the land to the purchaser, furnishes no ground for setting aside his sale and conveyance of the land. Ferguson v. Franklins, 6 Munf. (Va.) 305. See also Escheator v. Smith, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 452.

The mere fact that a sale occurred on the day of the general state election does not constitute a sufficient ground for setting it aside, Bank of Commerce v. Lanahan, 45 Md. 396; nor will the court set aside a trustee's sale merely because it was made after the death of the grantor, Spencer v. Lee, 19 W. Va. 179; nor because bankruptcy proceedings have been commenced against the grantor, which have not reached adjudication. The purchaser would have a legal title, available in ejectment. McGready v. Harris, 54 Mo. 137.

6. Clarkson v. Creely, 35 Mo. 95; Gillespie v. Smith, 29 Ill. 473; 81 Am. Dec. 328; Obert v. Obert, 12 N. J. Eq. 423.

Where a trustee sold an undivided interest in real estate for a grossly inadequate price, after a partition had been decreed, and when the precise value would have been known in a few days, the sale was regarded as a nullity. James v. Gibbs, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 277.

A trustee was about to sell under a trust deed, and upon the request of one of the grantors, that he would postpone the sale to as late an hour as he lawfully could, the latter stating that an injunction against the sale had been applied for, the trustee promised that sumptions are indulged will be in favor of the fairness and regularity of the proceedings.¹ Thus, it has been held that a report by a trustee of his sale is conclusive as to its terms, when ratified by the court, in the absence of fraud or mistake.²

In the absence of fraud, mere inadequacy of consideration is no ground for setting aside a sale,³ unless the consideration be so grossly inadequate as to indicate fraud or a plain want of judgment and discretion on the part of the trustee,⁴ or unless inadequacy of price is accompanied by irregularity or fraud of some sort.⁵ But where the sale is to a cestui que trust, and is a plain sacrifice of the interests of the trust, it will not be allowed to he would not sell until one o'clock, but in fact sold the land between eleven and twelve o'clock, after the grantor had left, to the creditor in the trust deed, who was the only bidder, at one-fifth of its value. The grantor returned with the injunction before one o'clock. It was held that the sale was fraudulent and void. Hoppes v. Cheek, 21 Ark. 585.

Where trustees are required to sell for cash, a sale to one with whom it is agreed that no cash shall be paid and that he will hold subject to the direction of the trustees, is fraudulent, and will be set aside at the instance of a beneficiary. Scott v. Sierra Lumber Co., 67 Cal. 71.

A trustee who converts into money well-secured bonds belonging to the trust fund, by selling the same at a large sacrifice to a purchaser, with full notice of the trust, is guilty of such manifest impropriety that both he and the purchaser become prima facie responsible therefor, and the burden is upon them to show that the necessities of the trust demanded the sacrifice. Cocke v. Minor, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 246.

1. Graham v. Fitts, 53 Miss. 307.

That a trustee for a creditor knew that the purchaser was bidding for the creditor is not ground for setting aside the sale. Lucas v. Oliver, 34 Ala. 626.

The fact that the trustee sold the property at auction at a time when money was scarce and there were but twelve or twenty persons present at the sale, is no evidence of fraud. Newman v. Meek, 1 Freem. Ch. (Miss.) 441.

The mere fact that the land conveyed by a deed of trust is sold under the deed, in gross, will not of itself invalidate the sale. There must be some attendant fraud, or unfair dealing, or abuse of confidence reposed in the trustee made manifest, or a court of equity will not lend its aid to divert a title acquired under such a sale. Ben-kendorf v. Vincenz, 52 Mo. 441.

2. Brown v. Wallace, 2 Bland (Md.) 585.

3. Clark v. Freedman's Sav., etc., Co., 100 U. S. 149; Booker v. Anderson, 36 Ill. 66; Waterman v. Spaulding, 51 Ill. 425; Iles v. Martin, 69 Ind. 114; Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589; Carter v. Abshire, 48 Mo. 300; Clark v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 58 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 21; Franklin v. Osgood, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 527; Bassett v. Higgins, 2 W. Va. 485.

4. Booker v. Anderson, 35 Ill. 66; Hintze v. Stingel, 1 Md. Ch. 283; Johnson v. Dorsey, 7 Gill (Md.) 269; Gibbs v. Cunningham, 1 Md. Ch. 44; Warfield v. Ross, 38 Md. 85; Horsey v. Hough, 38 Md. 130; Meath v. Porter, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 224.

The trustee in a deed given to secure a note, is the agent of the grantor as well as of the beneficiary, and is bound to sell the property at the best possible figure. If he sells for a grossly inadequate price, as where he receives $4,500 for property worth $16,000, equity will seize upon any incident of surprise, undue advantage, or other inequitable circumstances, to give relief. Meath v. Porter, 9 Heisk. (Tenn.) 224.

The proof of gross inadequacy of consideration must be conclusive, before one who purchases trust property from a trustee who has authority to sell, will be held liable in equity to account to the cestui que trust on the ground of fraudulent collusion with the trustee in the purchase, where the sole basis of this claim is an inference of fraud arising from the inadequacy of consideration, and there is no evidence of actual fraud. Carpenter v. Robinson, 1 Holmes (U. S.) 67.

5. See FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; Saltmarsh v. Beene, 4 Port. (Ala.) 283; 30 stand.¹ A beneficiary cannot set aside a sale by his trustee and recover back the property, and yet retain the consideration.²

In making the sale the trustee must guard the interests of the trust, and any sale made in violation of the highest interest of the estate will be deemed a breach of trust.³

It has been held that the sale will not be set aside for any mere irregularity, where the complainant has lain by for over ten years, and when, in the meanwhile, the value of the property has increased or the circumstances of the parties have changed.⁴

d. RIGHTS OF THE PURCHASER.—(See infra, this title, Rights and Liabilities of Third Parties.)

XVI. RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF THE BENEFICIARY—1. Nature of the Beneficiary's Estate.—Much has been said in the preceding pages of this article in reference to the nature of the estate which the beneficiary acquires.⁵ The extent of this estate depends, of necessity, upon the limitations put upon it by the deed, will, or other instrument under which the beneficiary holds title. Broadly stated, his is the equitable title, as distinguished from the legal estate which the trustee acquires.⁶ In equity he is the absolute owner, just as at law the trustee is.⁷

Unless the duties confided to the trustee are such as to require the custody by him of the trust property, the beneficiary is entitled to the possession of it, and the income arising out of it is his, subject to the payment of expenses incident to the conduct of the trust.⁸

Am. Dec. 525; Hoppes v. Cheek, 21 Ark. 585; Cassell v. Ross, 33 Ill. 244; 85 Am. Dec. 270; Towle v. Amba, 123 Ill. 410; Hazeltine v. Fournery, 120 Ill. 493; Singleton v. Scott, 11 Iowa 589; Franklin v. Osgood, 14 Johns. (N. Y.) 527.

1. In a sale of property as a whole to the cestui que trust by a trustee, under a deed of trust to secure a debt, where it clearly appears that the property would have brought a much higher price if it had been sold in lots than as a whole, the court will set aside the sale. Goode v. Comfort, 39 Mo. 313.

2. Fears v. Lynch, 28 Ga. 249.

3. Hunt v. Bass, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 292; 24 Am. Dec. 274.

He is bound to use not only good faith, but also every requisite diligence and prudence in conducting the sale. Johnston v. Eason, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 330.

Where a trustee sells at auction, he is not bound to accept the highest bid; the exercise of a certain discretion will justify him in rejecting a bid, the expense of which might frustrate the very purpose of the sale, even though such bid was nominally the best. Gray v. Veirs, 33 Md. 18.

4. See supra, this title, Statute of Limitations—Laches—Lapse of Time; Irish v. Antioch College, 126 Ill. 474; 9 Am. St. Rep. 638.

5. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate; Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee.

6. You v. Flinn, 34 Ala. 409; Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 586.

7. Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 572; Croxall v. Shererd, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 268; Badgett v. Keating, 31 Ark. 400.

8. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate—Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Accounting; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 674 et seq.; Armstrong v. Paise, 3 Burr. 1808, 1901; Atty. Gen'l v. Lord Gower, Barn. 150; Brown v. How, Barn. 354; Glover v. Stamps, 73 Ga. 209; 54 Am. Rep. 870; Ingham v. Burnell, 31 Kan. 333.

Until the purposes of a trust relating to lands are completed, and the trustee has been paid his reasonable charges and expenses, the beneficiary cannot, under the North Carolina Code, recover possession, in a civil action, of lands held by a person under the legal

The trustee so far represents the cestui que trust, that in a court of equity the possession by the trustee is deemed to be the possession of the cestui que trust.¹

The equitable estate may be conveyed² or mortgaged³ by the cestui que trust, just as the legal title may, unless the settlor's intention, as manifested in the deed of trust, is such as to preclude the beneficiary's parting with the title, or incumbering it. In the latter event, he has no power of alienation, either voluntary or involuntary; for the courts have generally upheld the right of the settlor to provide against alienation by the cestui que trust, as well as to provide a protection against the cestui que title. Matthews v. McPherson, 65 N. Car. 189.

A conveyance of land to trustees for the use of a church, vests the use in the church, and the chancellor will protect the church in the enjoyment of the use. Hadden v. Chorn, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 70.

The person for whose benefit a trust is created, and who is to be the ultimate receiver of the money, may sustain a bill in equity to have it paid directly to himself. Russel v. Clark, 7 Cranch. (U. S.) 69; Fausler v. Jones, 7 Ind. 277.

1. Hill on Trustees, § 264; Lewis v. Hawkins, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 119; Green v. Otter, 3 B. Mon. (Ky.) 102; Murphy v. Grice, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 199; Miller v. Bingham, 1 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 423; 36 Am. Dec. 58.

2. Equitable Estate May Be Conveyed.—See Elliott v. Armstrong, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 198; Rogers v. Colt, 21 N. J. L. 704; Henson v. Wright, 88 Tenn. 501; Dibrell v. Carlisle, 51 Miss. 785; Converse v. Noyes (N. H. 1891), 22 Atl. Rep. 556; Havens v. Healey, 15 Barb. (N. Y.) 301; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 51; 67 Am. Dec. 113.

Trustees will not be allowed to recover trust property from the cestui que trust's grantee, while the cestui que trust's estate continues. Bowen v. Bower, 19 Mo. 399.

"The equitable estate of the vendee is alienable, descendible and devisable in like manner as real estate held by a legal title." Lewis v. Hawkins, 23 Wall. (U. S.) 119.

A use executed may be inherited. Pierson v. Armstrong, 1 Iowa 282; 63 Am. Dec. 440. See also Bowen v. Chase, 94 U. S. 812; Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189.

Unless it is to be collected from the expressions in the will or the purposes and objects of the testator, that his intention was otherwise, trust estates will pass by the usual general words in a will passing other estates. Jackson v. Delancy, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 537; 7 Am. Dec. 403.

By the provisions of a will a certain sum was to be invested in good securities for A, "not to be used—the principal—until she shall arrive at twenty-six years of age, except the income or interest." Certain land of the estate was conveyed to A's father, as her guardian, for her use. It was held that A, on arriving at her majority, might sell and convey her interest in the land; and that a sale to her guardian was not necessarily invalid. Burford v. Guthrie, 14 Bush (Ky.) 677.

3. Equitable Estate May Be Mortgaged.—A beneficiary, although a feme covert, unless restricted by the provisions of the trust, may mortgage the trust estate for supplies furnished to make crops, etc. Tift v. Mayo, 61 Ga. 246.

A cestui who is entitled to the rents and profits of the land for life, may mortgage such interest. Perrine v. Newell, 49 N. J. Eq. 57.

The beneficiary may sell or mortgage the trust estate without the assent of the trustee, unless expressly forbidden in the instrument creating the estate. Dibrell v. Carlisle, 51 Miss. 785.

A beneficiary under a will, to whom is given a life support out of the estate conveyed in trust to the executor, has no power to mortgage the estate. Barnes v. Dow, 59 Vt. 530.

Rents and profits to which a cestui que trust is entitled out of property held by a trustee, are proper subjects of sale, assignment, or pledge to secure debts. Wilson v. Russ, 17 Fla. 691. But the trustee must join in the mortgage.

In Henson v. Wright, 88 Tenn. 501, trust's creditors. A power of alienation reposed in the beneficiary is not to be transcended; in other words, he is not to convey a larger estate than he acquires.¹

Under the New York statute and decisions, the equitable estate is inalienable, and the beneficiary may neither assign nor mortgage his interest in the trust property,² nor anticipate the income therefrom.³ The insolvency of the beneficiary, or the appointment of a receiver or assignee on behalf of his creditors, cannot deprive him of the right to enjoy the beneficial estate.⁴ Creditors can assert no claim against it.⁵

A few early New York decisions held that the provisions of a statute of that state which forbids the alienation by a beneficiary real estate had been conveyed to a trustee to hold for the use of a certain named beneficiary for life, the remainder to be taken, held, and conveyed by the trustee to certain persons designated. This was held to create an active trust with a distinct legal and equitable estate, so that the beneficiary could not mortgage his interests without the trustee uniting with him in the execution of the mortgage.

Where a deed of trust gave the beneficiary, a married woman, full power of disposition of the estate after the death of her husband, and the same power during his life with his assent, a mortgage executed by the husband and wife is a good execution of the power, and conveys the estate. Campbell v. Low, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 585.

Where a testator set apart a fund to be held in trust for the use of a son, the interest to be paid to him semi-annually during life, and at his death the principal to go to his heirs, an assignment to the trustee by the cestui que trust of the future income to secure an advancement of money, is valid in the absence of fraud and of any testamentary or statutory restriction of the power of alienation. Caldwell v. Boyd, 109 Ind. 447. See also Wood v. Wallace, 24 Ind. 226; Farmers, etc., Bank v. Brewer, 27 Conn. 600.

1. The settlor conveyed land in trust for his wife during her life, the remainder in trust for her children during minority, the trustee to convey to them on their coming of age. The wife survived the children. Upon her death it was held that the heirs of the grantor took the property, and that a conveyance by the wife was invalid as against them. Parker v. McMillan, 55 Mich. 265.

Certain government bonds were deposited by their owner in a bank, accompanied by a written declaration of the trust, providing that the owner's wife should enjoy the interest during her life and the owner's heirs succeed to it upon her death. The settlor died, and thereupon for the purpose of making a better investment, the widow and one of the heirs agreed in writing that the bonds should be released from the trust. The widow took possession of these funds and upon her death bequeathed her entire estate to one of the heirs, to the exclusion of the other. It was held that the latter was entitled to recover his interest in the trust fund. Comer v. Comer, 24 Ill. App. 526, affirmed 120 Ill. 420.

2. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate; Genet v. Foster, 18 How. Pr. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 54; Wood v. Wood, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 600; 28 Am. Dec. 451; Clute v. Bool, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 82; Hawley v. James, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 61; Coster v. Lorillard, 14 Wend. (N. Y.) 265; Irving v. DeKay, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 521; Van Epps v. Van Epps, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 237; Belmont v. O'Brien, 12 N. Y. 401; Heermans v. Robertson, 5 Thomp. & C. (N. Y.) 601; 3 Hun (N. Y.) 469. See also Crooke v. Kings County, 97 N. Y. 421; Kane v. Gott, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 641; 35 Am. Dec. 641.

3. De Graw v. Clason, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 136; Scott v. Nevins, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 676; Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 361; L'Amoureux v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 34; Noyes v. Blakeman, 6 N. Y. 567.

4. Graff v. Bennett, 2 Robt. (N. Y.) 56. See also Scott v. Nevins, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 676.

5. Stewart v. McMartin, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 444; Campbell v. Foster, 16 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 275; Bryan v. Knickerbacker, 1 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 427.

of his interest in an express trust, do not apply to trusts in personal property,¹ but later rulings have overthrown this doctrine.²

Under the English rulings, equitable, as well as legal, estates are subject to the payment of the debts of the cestui que trust.³ And this rule has been followed by the California Code, and the Kentucky statutes and decisions, and the courts elsewhere.⁴

In England, a restriction against alienation (except in the case of a married woman) will have no more effect in equitable than in legal interests, but will be rejected as contravening the policy of the law.⁵

Whether or not the trust property can be subjected to the payment of the debts of the cestui que trust is still an open question. The weight of authority seems to support the proposition that, unless the instrument of trust provides that the beneficiary's interest shall be kept free from all claims of creditors, whatever interest the cestui que trust may possess in the property is liable for the payment of his debts,⁶ and this provision has been made in

1. Titus v. Weeks, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 136; Arnold v. Gilbert, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 199; Cruger v. Cruger, 5 Barb. (N. Y.) 250; 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 522; Scott v. Nevins, 6 Duer (N. Y.) 676. See also Kane v. Gott, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 641; 35 Am. Dec. 641.

2. Graff v. Bonnett, 31 N. Y. 13; 88 Am. Dec. 236; Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 372; Roosevelt v. Roosevelt, 6 Hun (N. Y.) 44.

3. Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429; Rochford v. Hackman, 9 Hare 480; Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Sim. 66; Green v. Spicer, 1 Russ. & M. 395; Young-husband v. Gisborne, 1 Coll. 400; Hood v. Oglander, 34 Beav. 513; In re Teague's Settlement, L. R., 10 Eq. 564; Shaw v. Ford, 7 Ch. Div. 669; Wilkinson v. Wilkinson, 3 Swanst. 515.

4. Kentucky Gen. St., ch. 63, art. 1, § 21; Samuel v. Ellis, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 479; Eastland v. Jordan, 3 Bibb (Ky.) 186; Marshall v. Rash, 87 Ky. 116; 12 Am. St. Rep. 467; Graves v. Reed (Ky. 1889), 12 S. W. Rep. 550; Parsons v. Spencer, 83 Ky. 305; Dickison v. Ogden, 89 Ky. 162. Compare Pope v. Elliott, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 56; White v. Thomas, 8 Bush (Ky.) 661; Davidson v. Kemper, 79 Ky. 5; Battle v. Petway, 5 Ired. (N. Car.) 576; 44 Am. Dec. 59; Forbes v. Smith, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 40.

The estate of a cestui que use may be taken by attachment, writ of entry, execution, or any other appropriate proceeding at law, without resort to equitable remedies. Hutchins v. Heywood, 50 N. H. 491.

Rents devised to a trustee, with directions to pay them to the cestui que trust as they fall due, are liable in the hands of the trustee to the payment of the debts of the cestui que trust. Knefler v. Shreve, 78 Ky. 297.

In Parsons v. Spencer, 83 Ky. 305, the decedent had devised certain property in trust for his daughter for life, "not to be liable for debts or liability she may have or hereafter contract." It was held that while the trustee could not be deprived of the possession of the property, the court could require that the income be applied to the satisfaction of the debts of the beneficiary.

See California Code Civ. Proc., § 688; LeRoy v. Dunkerly, 54 Cal. 460; James v. Throckmorton, 57 Cal. 384; Kennedy v. Nunan, 52 Cal. 326; Fish v. Fowle, 58 Cal. 373. And see McKeon v. Bisbee, 9 Cal. 137; 70 Am. Dec. 642; McWilliams v. Withington, 7 Sawyer (U. S.) 205; Girard Life Ins. Co. v. Chambers, 46 Pa. St. 485; 86 Am. Dec. 513; Mathews v. Stephenson, 6 Pa. St. 496.

5. Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 693, citing Snowdon v. Dales, 6 Sim. 524; Green v. Spicer, 1 Russ. & M. 395; Graves v. Dolphin, 1 Sim. 66; Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 429; Rochford v. Hackman, 9 Hare 480.

6. See article by Horace C. Brannin, on "Liability of Trust Property to Debts," in Kentucky Law Jour., reprinted in 3 Ohio Law Jour. 324.

An exhaustive note upon this subject is published with the report of McIlvaine v. Smith, 42 Mo. 45; 97 Am.

the statutes in Indiana. The cases in support of this proposition and in denial of it will be found in the notes.¹

Dec. 295. See also Bates v. Spooner, 45 Ind. 492; Cox v. Arnsmann, 76 Ind. 210; Palmer v. Stevens, 15 Gray (Mass.) 343; Sparhawk v. Cloon, 125 Mass. 267; Daniels v. Eldredge, 125 Mass. 356; Forbes v. Lothrop, 137 Mass. 522; Clute v. Bool, 8 Paige (N. Y.) 82; Shyrock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 430.

A deviser's intention to place his devise beyond the reach of the devisee's creditors, will not be presumed from the surrounding circumstances, of which the creditor has no record notice, when the terms of the instrument creating the trust do not expressly declare such intention, and the surrounding circumstances do not raise a necessary implication thereof. Pickens v. Dorris, 20 Mo. App. 1.

The decedent left a bequest in money to trustees, the income to be paid to his daughter for her separate use upon her receipt thereof. Upon the daughter's death she was to have the power to dispose of the funds "by will or otherwise." It was held that her creditors could reach both the principal and income. Forbes v. Lothrop, 137 Mass. 523.

A wife bequeathed to her husband an income conditioned upon his executing a release of his estate by the curtesy, which the husband accordingly executed. This income was held, in Bank of Commerce v. Chambers, 96 Mo. 459, to be subject to the claims of his creditors, notwithstanding any testamentary provisions to the contrary. Compare Lampert v. Haydel, 96 Mo. 439; 9 Am. St. Rep. 358.

In Dickinson v. Conniff, 65 Ala. 581, the trustee was also one of the cestuis que trustent of the estate. It was held that one who had rendered services to the estate at the trustee's instance, and obtained a judgment at law against him, with an execution returned unsatisfied thereon, might, in equity, reach and subject his interest in the trust estate.

Trusts for Support Excepted.—An apparent exception to the rule stated in the text appears in cases where the trust has been created for the support of the beneficiary, and where a clear surplus remains after a reasonable sum has been appropriated for the support of the cestui que trust, and in such cases courts of equity have authority to interfere on behalf of judgment creditors and divert a portion of the income to the payment of such debts. Genet v. Beekman, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 382; Leigh v. Harrison (Miss. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 604. See also Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 47; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Williams v. Thorn, 70 N. Y. 279; Sillick v. Mason, 2 Barb. Ch. (N. Y.) 79; Craig v. Hone, 2 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 569; Arzbacher v. Mayer, 53 Wis. 393.

Where a fund has been bequeathed in trust to the testator's son, the income to be applied to the son's use for life, a creditor of the son cannot reach any of such income, unless he shows that the income exceeds the amount necessary for the support of the son in the style to which he has been accustomed, and in which his father has brought him up. Stow v. Chapin, 4 N. Y. 496. See also Henderson v. Zachry, 80 Ga. 98.

Where an estate was devised in trust, for the sole use of the testator's daughter, a married woman, and her children, during her life, with remainder to her children, it was held that the estate was liable for the payment of articles of merchandise suitable to her condition of life and obtained on the faith of the trust estate. Campbell v. Brannin, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 478.

1. A court of equity refused to authorize a trustee to sell the trust estate to pay judgments for debts against a profligate and extravagant beneficiary, for whom the property had been devised in trust by his father to have the use and income during life, with remainder over, and this though some of the debts were incurred to the trustee, who lent him money and became his surety. McKnight v. Wilson, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 491.

The equitable assets of a debtor cannot be held for his debts in an action at law. Patterson v. Lawrence, 83 Ga. 703.

The North Carolina Act of 1812, rendering lands liable to execution against the cestui que trust, relates only to those fraudulent trusts in which the trustee has only the formal legal title, and the cestui que trust the whole beneficial interest. Hawkins v. Sneed, 3 Hawks (N. Car.) 149.

Slaves held by a trustee, to be divided among the children of A who may now be living, and those who represent any deceased child, as if they were claiming the slaves as next of kin of their father, are not liable to attachment or execution at the instance of a creditor of one of the cestuis que trustent. Gillis v. McKay, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 172.

The property cannot be subjected to the payment of debts of the cestui que trust, unless it is shown that he did not have sufficient assets to pay them. Patterson v. Lawrence, 83 Ga. 703.

A devise of land to trustees in fee, in trust, during the life of a son of the testator, to pay over the profits to him, or to such persons as he should appoint, and, after his death, to convey according to the son's appointment by will, or, in default, to such as would be his heirs if he died intestate, with power to the trustees and son to change the property and reinvest, provided that, if the son should be so relieved from embarrassment as in the opinion of the trustees to render it expedient, they should convey to him in fee, does not vest in the son an estate which can be taken on execution against him. Vaux v. Parke, 7 W. & S. (Pa.) 19.

Where the deed creating the trust directs that the rents and profits be applied to the support, maintenance, and education of the children of the beneficiary, such beneficiary has no interest in the trust estate which a court of equity can apply to the discharge of a judgment debt. Pickrell v. Zell, 2 MacArth. (D. C.) 65.

Equitable estates are not subject to execution in Michigan. Trask v. Green, 9 Mich. 358; Gorham v. Wing, 10 Mich. 486. Nor in New Jersey. Vancleve v. Grove, 4 N. J. Eq. 330; Hogan v. Jacques, 19 N. J. Eq. 123; 97 Am. Dec. 644; Lippincott v. Evens, 35 N. J. Eq. 553; Hunterdon County v. Henry, 41 N. J. Eq. 388. Nor in Alabama. Wilson v. Beard, 19 Ala. 629; Shaw v. Lindsey, 60 Ala. 344. And see Lavender v. Lee, 14 Ala. 688. Nor in Ohio. See also Douglass v. Houston, 6 Ohio 156; Scott v. Douglass, 7 Ohio 227; Miner v. Wallace, 10 Ohio 403; Haynes v. Baker, 5 Ohio St. 255.

Under a Missouri statute subjecting to execution sale "all real estate whereof defendant for his use was seised in law or equity," only land of which the defendant has seisin is liable. He must possess an actual, equitable interest in the land itself, a vested equitable estate in possession, and not a mere ground of equitable relief against the trustee or an equitable chose in action. McIlvain v. Smith, 42 Mo. 45; 97 Am. Dec. 295; Brant v. Robertson, 16 Mo. 149.

In Broadwell v. Yantis, 10 Mo. 403, Napton, J., said: "There must be an interest in land which a court of law can protect or enforce in order that it may be subject to the lien of a judgment and execution. A mere equity, unaccompanied with possession, is not such an interest."

A decedent devised an estate to his executor, with instructions to pay out of the income of the estate such sums of money as he should deem expedient for the support of the testator's son. It was held that inasmuch as the son could not enforce the payment of any moneys to him under this devise, his creditors could not subject the equitable interest which he possessed, to the payment of his debts. Davidson v. Kemper, 79 Ky. 5. See also Foster v. Foster, 133 Mass. 179; Leavitt v. Bierne, 21 Conn. 1; Hall v. Williams, 120 Mass. 344; Nixon v. Rose, 12 Gratt. (Va.) 425; Keyser v. Mitchell, 67 Pa. St. 473; Doswell v. Anderson, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 185; Holmes v. Penney, 3 K. & J. 90; Twopenny v. Peyton, 10 Sim. 487; Lucas v. Lockhart, 10 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 466; 48 Am. Dec. 766.

So, also, it was held in Banfield v. Wiggan, 58 N. H. 155, that a legacy bestowed upon a trustee, to be disposed of at the trustee's discretion for the benefit of another, could not be attached by a trustee process in an action against the cestui que trust.

A legacy in the hands of an executor upon no other trust than to pay it over to the legatee, is not held in trust within the meaning of the exception in the statute, but may be reached by a judgment creditor by proceedings under the statute. But where a fund is given to executors with directions to invest it and to pay to the legatee during his life the interest and income thereof at such times and in such manner and in such amounts as the executors shall deem prudent, there are present the essential qualities of a trust—confidence, discretion, and active duties to be performed by the trustee—and the principal fund and the interest and income thereof are held in trust within the meaning of the exception in the statute. Neither the principal fund nor the accumulation of interest which the executors have kept back from the

Wherever this equitable interest has been reached by the creditor, it has been through equitable remedies.¹ Thus, garnishment has been held to be an improper method of subjecting the fund to the payment of the beneficiary's debts.²

There is no reason why the owner of property who bestows it upon another should not be permitted to impose any reasonable limitation upon its use and enjoyment, and a slight preponderance of authority sustains the settlor's right to provide against the legatee, they not having deemed it prudent to pay it over to him, can be reached in a court of chancery by a judgment creditor of the legatee for life, and be applied in payment of a judgment under the statute. Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 645. See also Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 42; Frazier v. Barnum, 11 N. J. Eq. 316; Rider v. Mason, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 352; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 41; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Graff v. Bonnett, 31 N. Y. 9; 88 Am. Dec. 236; Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 361.

It has been held in a large number of cases that a bequest of money in trust for A, "not subject to any debt or debts he may have contracted, but for his comfort and support" is subject to his debts nevertheless, because the condition is void. Smith v. Moore, 37 Ala. 327; Mebane v. Mebane, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 131; 44 Am. Dec. 102; Gray v. Obear, 54 Ga. 231; McIlvaine v. Smith, 42 Mo. 45; 97 Am. Dec. 295.

No beneficial interest must rest in the trustee. Blanchard v. Taylor, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 645.

The entire beneficial interest must be in the cestui que trust, the collection of whose debt is sought to be enforced. Joint equitable interests cannot be reached on the individual debts of the beneficiary. Jackson v. Bateman, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 570; Lynch v. Utica Ins. Co., 18 Wend. (N. Y.) 236; Guthrie v. Gardner, 19 Wend. (N. Y.) 414; Kellogg v. Wood, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 578; Gillis v. McKay, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 172; Rice v. Burnett, 1 Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 579; 42 Am. Dec. 336; Coults v. Walker, 2 Leigh (Va.) 280.

Where the testator devises real estate in trust, the trustee to collect the rents and profits and pay the same to testator's son, "into his own hands and not into another, whether claiming by his authority or otherwise," the intention of the testator is that the income be paid into the hands of his son to the exclusion of all other persons, whether claiming as alienees or as creditors; and such rents and profits, while in the hands of the trustee, cannot be reached by the beneficiary's creditors by any process, either at law or in equity. Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; 9 Am. St. Rep. 398.

Where property is conveyed in trust for the beneficiary for life with a power of appointment by will, the property does not become subject to the debts of the beneficiary upon his exercise of the power, where the will was thus made only to insure title to one who had previously, in good faith, purchased the property when it was sold under a decree of court. Patterson v. Lawrence, 83 Ga. 703.

1. Lackland v. Smith, 5 Mo. App. 153. In Pettit v. Johnson, 15 Ark. 55, the court, by Walker, J., said: "In all such cases, where the debtor is possessed of an equitable estate, in which there are conflicting interests, upon the determination of which the debtor's real interest must depend, and the creditor seeks to subject it to the payment of his debt, his best, and in most cases his only, remedy is in chancery, where all the parties interested can be heard and the real interest of the debtor ascertained, and where a sale may be had under process so guarded as to protect the interest of the debtor and give assurance to the purchaser of an unincumbered title."

A mortgage given by trustees was foreclosed, and the mortgaged property sold, but, the proceeds of sale not being sufficient to satisfy the decree, an order was given that executions should issue against the trustees for the balance over, to be satisfied out of trust property not covered by the mortgage. It was held that the order and the executions were invalid, on the ground that, when trust property is bound by the trustees within the scope of their authority, it can only be reached by proceeding against it in chancery. Zehnbart v. Spillman, 25 Fla. 591.

2. See Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; application to a beneficiary's debts of property which he has given him.¹ But in order to bestow such an estate, the language of the settlor to that end must be unequivocal.²

9 Am. St. Rep. 398; Dodd v. Levy, 10 Mo. App. 123.

1. Nichols v. Eaton, 91 U. S. 725; Hyde v. Woods, 94 U. S. 523; Sprindie v. Shreve, 9 Biss. (U. S.) 199; Leavitt v. Beirne, 21 Conn. 1; Braman v. Stiles, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 464; 13 Am. Dec. 445; Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; 9 Am. St. Rep. 398; Broadway Nat. Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170; 43 Am. Rep. 504; Slattery v. Watson, 151 Mass. 266; Lampert v. Haydel, 96 Mo. 439; 9 Am. St. Rep. 358; Arnwine v. Carroll, 8 N. J. Eq. 625; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 41; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Degraw v. Clason, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 136; Holdship v. Patterson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 547; Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Thackara v. Mintzer, 100 Pa. St. 151; Brown v. Williamson, 36 Pa. St. 338; Stambaugh's Estate, 135 Pa. St. 585; Jourlmon v. Massengill, 86 Tenn. 81; Van Amee v. Jackson, 35 Vt. 173; Roberts v. Hall, 35 Vt. 28; White v. White, 30 Vt. 338; Nickell v. Handly, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 336; Camp v. Cleary, 76 Va. 140.

Generally as to the power of the settlor to place an equitable estate beyond the reach of the beneficiary's creditors, and to prevent the alienation thereof by the beneficiary, see Jourlmon v. Massengill, 86 Tenn. 81, and cases cited. See also Holdship v. Patterson, 7 Watts (Pa.) 547; Rife v. Geyer, 59 Pa. St. 393; 98 Am. Dec. 351; Shankland's Appeal, 47 Pa. St. 113; Leavitt v. Beirne, 21 Conn. 1; White v. White, 30 Vt. 338; Nickell v. Handly, 10 Gratt. (Va.) 336; Pope v. Elliott, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 56; Campbell v. Foster, 35 N. Y. 361; Fisher v. Taylor, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 33; Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; 9 Am. St. Rep. 398; Garland v. Garland, 87 Va. 758; 24 Am. St. Rep. 682; Cooper v. Wyatt, 5 Madd. 489; Rex v. Robinson, Wightw. 393; Shee v. Hale, 13 Ves. 406; Brandon v. Robinson, 18 Ves. 432. In all of the cases last cited, the authority of the settlor to thus dispose of the trust estate has been recognized. But compare dissenting opinion by Alvey, C. J., and Bryan, J., in Smith v. Towers, 69 Md. 77; 9 Am. St. Rep. 404. And in the following cases the English rule is followed and the right to apply trust property to the satisfaction of the beneficiary's debts is upheld, regardless of the settlor's provision against such application. Nichol v. Levy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 441; Smith v. Moore, 37 Ala. 327; Taylor v. Harwell, 65 Ala. 13; Samuel v. Ellis, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 479; Mandlebaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78; McIlvaine v. Smith, 42 Mo. 45; 97 Am. Dec. 295; Hallett v. Thompson, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 583; Mebane v. Mebane, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 131; 44 Am. Dec. 102; Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R. I. 205; Heath v. Bishop, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 46; 55 Am. Dec. 654.

A debtor's beneficial interest in property bequeathed to a trustee for the use and benefit of the debtor and his family, but not to be liable for his debts, cannot be subjected in equity by his creditors. Hill v. McRae, 27 Ala. 175; Pope v. Elliott, 8 B. Mon. (Ky.) 56.

2. Sears v. Choate, 146 Mass. 395; 4 Am. St. Rep. 320.

It will not be presumed where the intention is not expressed in the instrument or necessarily implied therefrom. Pickens v. Dorris, 20 Mo. App. 1; Overman's Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 276.

It has been held that a settlor cannot put his own property in the hands of trustees for his own use, free from the claims of creditors. See SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, vol. 23, p. 5.

In Maryland Grange Agency v. Lee, 72 Md. 161, a testatrix devised certain real estate to her sons in trust for the support and education of their families, the land in no event to be liable for their debts. It was held that the crops grown upon the real estate so devised, were also exempt from the claims of the creditors.

This right to provide against alienation and cut off the claims of creditors of the cestui que trust, is expressly conferred by statute in New York. Williams v. Thorn, 70 N. Y. 270; Tolles v. Wood, 99 N. Y. 616. See also Steib v. Whitehead, 111 Ill. 252; Hardenburgh v. Blair, 30 N. J. Eq. 42; Arzbacher v. Mayer, 53 Wis. 380.

In Wales v. Bowdish, 61 Vt. 23, decedent devised an estate in trust for her brother to use and occupy for life, and on his death to be "conveyed to whom

But this exemption of the beneficiary's property from application to the payment of his debts, must not be made an instrument of fraud. Thus, he cannot invest his individual property in improving the land and thus create a trust in the improvements to the prejudice of his creditors.¹

The settlor may settle the property in such a manner that it may not be aliened by the beneficiary or the right to its income taken from him,² and this is done legally by a proviso that the estate shall not take effect unless the cestui que trust is free from debt, or that the estate shall terminate whenever the beneficiary shall become a bankrupt, or when a creditor's bill shall be filed against him, or an execution issue against his interest in the property.³

So various are the terms and limitations put upon estates in trust that it would be impossible to formulate any doctrine which and in the manner he shall direct." This was held to vest in him an interest which existing creditors could not reach. And see generally SPENDTHRIFT TRUSTS, vol. 23, p. 5.

1. Woodruff v. Johnson, 8 N. J. Eq. 729; 55 Am. Dec. 247.

2. Hall v. Williams, 120 Mass. 344; Foster v. Foster, 133 Mass. 179; Broadway Nat. Bank v. Adams, 133 Mass. 170; 43 Am. Rep. 504; Baker v. Brown, 146 Mass. 369; Slattery v. Wason, 151 Mass. 266; Wallace v. Campbell, 53 Tex. 229; Johnston v. Zane, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 552; Markham v. Guerrant, 4 Leigh (Va.) 284; Garland v. Garland, 87 Va. 758; 24 Am. St. Rep. 682; Kearsley v. Woodcock, 3 Hare 185; Joel v. Mills, 3 Kay & J. 458; Large's Case, 2 Leon. 82; Churchill v. Marks, 1 Coll. 441; Sharp v. Cossent, 20 Beav. 470; Shee v. Hale, 13 Ves. 404; Lewes v. Lewes, 6 Sim. 304; Cooper v. Wyatt, 5 Madd. 482; Lockyer v. Savage, 2 Str. 947; Yarnold v. Moorhouse, 1 Russ. & M. 364; Stephens v. James, 4 Sim. 499; Ex p. Oxley, 1 B. & B. 257.

Provisions against the alienation of real estate are not encouraged by the courts. It has been held in a number of cases that trusts cannot, in general, be created for the purpose of preventing the alienation of the beneficial interest. See Perry on Trusts 386; Story's Eq. Jur. 974 A; 3 Williams on Executors 1374; Mandelbaum v. McDonell, 29 Mich. 78; In re Teague's Settlement, L. R., 10 Eq. 564; the Michigan case citing and reviewing the oldest authorities upon this point.

It has also been held, however, that the power of alienation may be suspended for a limited period by the creation of a trust, or alienation to a particular person can be prohibited. See McKinster v. Smith, 27 Conn. 628; Stewart v. Brady, 3 Bush (Ky.) 623; Lippincott v. Ridgway, 10 N. J. Eq. 164; Attwater v. Attwater, 18 Beav. 330; In re Teague's Settlement, L. R., 10 Eq. 564; In re Cunyngname's Settlement, L. R., 11 Eq. 324.

3. Nichol v. Levy, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 433; Easterby v. Keney, 36 Conn. 18; Marshall v. Rash, 87 Ky. 119; 12 Am. St. Rep. 467; White v. Thomas, 8 Bush (Ky.) 661; Bramhall v. Ferris, 14 N. Y. 41; 67 Am. Dec. 113; Hallett v. Thompson, 5 Paige (N. Y.) 583; Dick v. Pitchford, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 480; Tillinghast v. Bradford, 5 R. I. 205; Greene v. Wilbur, 15 R. I. 251; Bridge v. Ward, 35 Wis. 687; White v. Chitty, L. R., 1 Eq. 372; Cox v. Fonblanque, L. R., 6 Eq. 482; Lloyd v. Lloyd, L. R., 2 Eq. 722; Trappes v. Meredith, L. R., 9 Eq. 229; Hatton v. May, 3 Ch. Div. 148; Hunt-Foulston v. Furber, 3 Ch. Div. 285; Sharp v. Cossent, 20 Beav. 470; Manning v. Chambers, 1 De G. & S. 282; Oldham v. Oldham, L. R., 3 Eq. 404.

Judge Redfield, in his work on Wills (2 Redfield on Wills, p. 668), says: "There is no question but the testator may bequeath property for the mere purpose of benefiting the donee personally, and provide that no creditor or purchaser shall take any interest or benefit of the same. . . . But it is now settled that if such is the clearly declared purpose of the testator, the bequest will fail, upon the legatee or devisee becoming insolvent or bank-would determine the scope of the respective estates of the trustee and the beneficiary, and adapt itself to all cases. Instances are given in the notes which show the construction placed by different courts, with respect to the respective estates of trustee and cestui que trust, upon various trusts created.¹

rupt, even where it occurs during the life of the testator. Either a life or an absolute estate by bequest may be so framed as to cease upon the happening of a particular event," and this language is quoted with approval in Bridge v. Ward, 35 Wis. 687.

1. An insolvent debtor conveyed his property to a creditor, who in turn conveyed it in trust to be managed solely for his benefit, but to be reconveyed to the debtor after the trust was executed. It was held that the status of the debtor was that of a cestui, who could demand an account, an enforcement of the trust, etc. Loud v. Winchester, 52 Mich. 174.

A trust in land created for a wife and her children, vests in the children at her death. U. S. Bank v. Ennis, Wright (Ohio) 605.

Under a conveyance made in trust for a married woman and her infant children, the legal estate will not vest in them, although the conveyance prescribes no duties to be performed by the trustee. Dean v. Long, 122 Ill. 447.

A man conveyed property in trust for the separate use of his wife and children, born or to be born, and the survivors or survivor of them, and authorized the trustees to sell any part of the estate, on the request of the mother alone, holding the proceeds, etc. It was held, that the wife had a life estate, and that, at her death, it passed to the children or child who survived her. Rogers v. Payne, 14 B. Mon. (Ky.) 135.

Lands were conveyed to the mother, in trust for her daughter and her heirs and assigns; but if her daughter should die under age, and without issue, then for the sole use of the grantee in fee. On the death of the mother, leaving her daughter a minor, and her sole heir at law, the whole legal and equitable estate was held to vest in the daughter. Matter of DeKay, 4 Paige, (N. Y.) 403.

A conveyance in trust for a woman and her children, she having children at the time, nothing appearing on the face of the deed to show a contrary intention, was held to vest an estate in the mother, and the children then born, and in one en ventre sa mere as tenants in common; but that children born afterwards were not entitled to come in. Gay v. Baker, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 344; 78 Am. Dec. 229.

Where a husband and wife united in a deed of her property in trust for their use during their joint lives, and, in case of the death of the wife before the husband, without issue, to the use of the husband in fee, it was held that where the wife died and left a child that survived her a few days, the husband did not take a fee. Huston v. Hamilton, 2 Binn. (Pa.) 387.

A devise of lands in trust for the use and benefit of testator's married daughter, with direction to the trustee not to pay any part of the proceeds to the husband, but providing that any "receipts or writings witnessing the payment of such proceeds to his daughter, shall be a sufficient discharge of such trustee," entitles the daughter to receive and dispose of the proceeds, at least, for the support of herself and children. Gill v. Claggett, 4 Md. Ch. 153.

Where, by an ante-nuptial agreement, property of the wife is conveyed to a trustee for her separate use, subject to her disposition by written directions to the trustee, she cannot afterwards, by parol gift, pass the legal title to another without the co-operation of the trustee; and the donee, in such a case, cannot maintain replevin for the property so given him. Daniel v. Daniel, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 230.

Where the contrary does not appear on the face of the instrument of trust (a woman and her children being beneficiaries thereunder), the estate vests in the woman, her children then born, and one en ventre sa mere as tenants in common, but none vests in her children subsequently begotten. Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399.

In Ward v. Funsten, 86 Va. 359, the settlors had requested that the funds be invested and applied "in such a way as will best promote the interest of the family," and the court ordered the investment of the funds for the benefit of a widow and her children during her life, and until the youngest child should come of age, and all the female children should marry and be provided with homes. The widow died, the children all attained their majority, and all the daughters but one married, she having a home with her aunt. It was held that the trust was absolute, and that the unmarried daughter must receive the entire income.

In Warner v. Morse, 149 Mass. 400, a testator, after bequeathing all his estate (consisting of personal property) to his wife absolutely, revoked by a codicil "so much of said legacy as gives to my said wife N. my property forever, she to hold said property during her life. I give and bequeath at her decease the said property to J. and her son H., for their use and behoof forever." It was held that the widow took a life estate, remainder to J. and her son.

Under a gift of the rents, issues, and profits of each undivided fourth of a fund, in trust to be applied (each of said parts), to the several uses of four several cestuis que trustent, during their respective lives, and, after their deaths, the said several portions, the use whereof is so limited to them respectively, to their respective children, the children of any of such original cestuis que trustent dying, are entitled to the immediate possession of the property limited by the will to the use of their parent. Pennington v. Rutherford, 26 N. J. Eq. 313.

Where a fund was placed in trust, to be held for the benefit of a certain person during his life, and at his death the entire fund to be paid over to another person specified, it was held that such specified person could not be considered as deriving title from the beneficiary, whose estate was a mere life estate in the fund. Hullin v. Faure, 15 La. Ann. 622.

A testatrix devised specified property to a trustee, for the benefit of her three sons during their lives, remainders in trust for their children, if they should have any, if none, to each other; other specified property for her three daughters, with the same remainders and a clause for separate use; the residue of her estate to the same trustee, for the use of the six, "in the same way and manner, and under the same and like uses and trusts, as are hereinbefore set forth." One son died without issue. It was held that the surviving brothers and sisters took equal shares in his estate. Lipman's Appeal, 30 Pa. St. 180; 72 Am. Dec. 692.

Real estate passed by will to a trustee in fee to pay over the income, no time being limited, the interest of one of the cestuis que trustent to terminate in the event he should ever become insolvent and his share to be paid over to the others. In a certain contingency the trustee was to turn over the estate to the cestuis que trustent in fee. The beneficiaries were held to have taken an equitable estate in fee. Greene v. Wilbur, 15 R. I. 251.

The holder of a fee conveyed in trust for his life, with power of disposition at his death, may dispose of the entire property conveyed in trust by deed; the life estate and reversion merging in him. Warner v. Sprigg, 62 Md. 14.

A beneficiary becoming the purchaser of the trust estate at a public sale, acquires the same title that a stranger would. State Bank v. Macy, 4 Ind. 362.

A conveyance in trust to the use of certain children, provided they attain the age of twenty-one, gives them only a contingent interest during minority. Megowan v. Way, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 418.

Where a fund was bequeathed in trust for the equal use and benefit of testator's daughters for life, at their death in trust for the use of their children, and provided that in case either daughter should die without issue, her share to go to her sisters, but if she left issue, to such issue, the daughters were held to take as tenants in common during their respective lives and not as joint tenants for life. Dunn v. Bryan, 38 Ga. 154.

A devise of property in trust for the use of testator's daughters, "in equal proportion, share and share alike, and not subject to the debts, contracts, or sale of their present or future husbands," gives each daughter a separate estate in her share, free from the control of her husband. Nix v. Bradley, 6 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 43.

Where property was devised in trust for the testatrix's daughters during their natural lives, remainder to the heirs of their bodies forever, it was held that the children of the daughters in being at the death of the testatrix took vested interests, which passed to their representative at their death, and that when other children were born from time to time, the estate in remainder

2. Rights and Remedies as Against the Trustee—a. IN GENERAL.

—The beneficiary is entitled to enforce in a court of equity the performance of every duty enjoined upon the trustee, such as the exercise of diligence and good faith in the care of the trust property, its preservation from waste, loss, or destruction, the proper would open and vest severally in such children. Ward v. Saunders, 3 Sneed (Tenn.) 387.

Where the right of a beneficiary to a trust estate is immediate and absolute, there being no statutory limitation and no continuing duty to be performed with it by the trustee, the court will decree the life estate to be conveyed to those entitled. Turnage v. Greene, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 63; 62 Am. Dec. 208.

A husband conveyed a life estate in certain realty to his wife, providing in the deed of trust that upon her death, in case she survived him, one-half of the lands "shall inure and belong to my devisees, and in default of devisees, to the heirs-at-law" of the wife; and "the remaining one-half shall inure and belong to the devisees, and in default of devisees, to the heirs-at-law" of the grantor. He died, leaving no will, and afterward his wife died, distributing her property equally by will among the three defendants. It was held that the plaintiff, who was the husband's niece and heir-at-law, was a tenant in common with the three defendants, and acquired by inheritance a one-half interest, the defendants receiving the other half. Ohmer v. Boyer, 89 Ala. 273.

By a trust deed, a trustee was instructed to pay the income upon certain bonds to A, providing further that, "should said A die, the said trust herein declared shall inure to the benefit of her heirs, and if she has no children, the same shall revert to my estate." It was held that A acquired a mere equitable life estate by this deed, and had no right, upon the birth of a child, to take the corpus of a trust estate absolutely. Fowler's Appeal, 125 Pa. St. 388.

In Bennett v. Garlock, 79 N. Y. 302; 35 Am. Rep. 517, real estate was conveyed to trustees, their heirs and assigns, in trust, to sell enough to pay certain debts and then to lease and support certain cestuis que trustent for life; the residue to be held for the benefit of the settlors' heirs at the expiration of the life estate, and reserving in the settlors the power to direct where the residue should go. The trustees were given the power of sale in their discretion upon the request of the settlors. It was held that under this deed the cestuis que trustent took no estate, but simply a right to enforce the performance of the trust in equity.

Under a conveyance of property in trust for the settlor during life, with directions to the trustee at her death to pay a stated sum to one person, and to convey a certain share of personal property to another, the sum and share vests immediately in the beneficiaries; and, in the event of their death during the life of the grantor, their interests will pass to their legal representatives. Eldredge v. Greene, 17 R. I. 17.

In Davidson v. Kemper, 79 Ky. 5, the testator devised his estate to his executors, to be held for the use and benefit of his son, with full discretionary power to control and dispose of the same; the executors to pay him in their discretion not to exceed the income of the estate; the son to have no power to sell or incumber any part of the estate or the income or profits, and no part of the estate or income to be liable for his debts. It was held that the powers delegated to the executors were personal, that the son had no estate independent of their will, and inasmuch as the trust was not enforceable by the beneficiary, the estate could not be taken to satisfy his debts.

A mortgage to trustees recited that its purpose was to secure to A the income of certain money for life, and after her death, this income was to be paid to such persons as she might name, or, in case she should name no one, then to her heirs. A deed of conveyance was also executed to the same trustees, directing the application of the land and profits to A's use for life, the land, after her death, to be conveyed to such persons as she might indicate. Authority was conferred upon the trustees to sell the land, if they considered it advisable, and the same directions were given in regard to the trustees as the mortgage contained. It was held that A's interest was merely a life estate in the investment of the funds, and a strict accounting of all receipts and profits, actual and possible.¹

income, and that she had no right to the corpus of the trust estate. Pillot v. Landon, 46 N. J. Eq. 310.

1. Sortore v. Scott, 6 Lans. (N. Y.) 271; Featherston v. Richardson, 68 Ga. 501; Lexington L., etc., Ins. Co. v. Page, 17 B. Mon. (Ky.) 412; 66 Am. Dec. 165. Upon this subject generally, see supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee.

Where a trustee pledges the trust property as collateral for his own debt, which property, by an arrangement by the debtor and creditor, is agreed to be given up, equity will enforce this agreement for the benefit of the cestui que trust, upon a bill brought by the latter for this purpose. Wheeler v. Brown, 26 Ill. 369.

Where one of two trustees begins cutting wheat claimed by the other, the cestui may seek relief in equity. Kerr v. Hill, 27 W. Va. 576.

A beneficiary, though his interest is merely a contingent remainder, may maintain a bill in equity against the trustee and life tenant to have that interest protected. Clarke v. Deveaux, 1 S. Car. 172.

A trustee will be compelled by a court of equity to distribute funds in accordance with the trust deed, and upon his failure to do so, he will be made personally liable. Robertson v. Sublett, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 313; Constant v. Matteson, 22 Ill. 546.

In Kintner v. Jones, 122 Ind. 148, the court, by Mitchell, C. J., said: "The obligation which arises when a mere power is conferred, is not to be confounded with the duty imposed where the power is coupled with an express or implied trust. Mere naked powers are purely discretionary, and the donee of such a power is not subject to the compulsory power of a court of chancery. Where, however, the power is coupled with a trust for the benefit of third parties, or in the execution of which third parties are interested, it becomes imperative and its execution may be coerced." In this case the deed of trust contemplated the sale of the property conveyed, and the distribution of the proceeds by the trustee without being reimbursed for services rendered. Upon a suit being brought to compel the trustee to make a sale of the property so held in trust, the supreme court said: "While the power to sell was, in some sense, discretionary with the trustee, so far as respects the right to determine the fair value and terms of sale, she was not, after having paid the debts and made the improvements specified out of the rental or profits of the property, authorized arbitrarily or capriciously to refuse to make a sale at a fair price. Her duty was to offer the property for sale within a reasonable time after the debts were paid, and to use all reasonable diligence to obtain the best price. Having, as appears from the complaint, not only failed to do this, but repudiated the trust and asserted an absolute right to the whole estate, the complaint made a case for the intervention of the chancery powers of the court." Citing Irvine v. Dunham, 111 U. S. 327; Cavender v. Cavender, 114 U. S. 464.

The decedent made a will by which he constituted his surviving partner and his bookkeeper trustees, with instructions to withdraw his interest from the firm, and invest it in a certain specified manner. Instead of doing this, they continued to conduct the business for their own profit, and to use the funds of the trust estate in continuing the business. It was held that the beneficiaries had the right to demand the withdrawal from the partnership assets of all the trust property, although the trust estate had become so much confused with other property as to be indistinguishable, and that their rights in the trust estate were superior to those of the general creditors of the new firm. Hooley v. Gieve, 9 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 8; 9 Daly (N. Y.) 104.

A court of equity will interfere where the trustee is wanting in necessary care and diligence in the execution of a trust, or omits to act when required by duty to do so. Jones v. Dougherty, 10 Ga. 273. Thus, where the trustee refuses to make the affidavit and take the steps necessary to a trial of the right of the property, the beneficiary may resort to a court of equity to have the trust enforced. Robinson v. Maulden, 11 Ala. 977. See Duncan v. Simmons, 2 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 356.

A court of equity will aid a beneficiary, not only against the trustee, but all persons claiming benefit from his acts. Bush v. Bush, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 377.

Where the trustee has put the trust funds into his own business, the beneficiary has the option of demanding either the profits of the business or legal interest.¹ It is the beneficiary's right to insist that the purposes of the trust be fully accomplished, and that the duties imposed and the uses declared be respected and performed.²

A bill will lie to compel a trustee to apply the fund to the purposes for which the trust was created. Wilson v. John's Island Church, 2 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 192.

Where property was devised to a trustee for the benefit of the testator's intemperate son, with a provision that the trustee, if he should deem it prudent, might give the control of it to the son, it was held that the trustee, having declared his belief that the son had reformed and might be trusted with the control of the property, a court of equity would direct him to deliver it to the son. Cochran v. Paris, 11 Gratt. (Va.) 348.

Where a trustee to whom property was conveyed to secure creditors, refused to act, one or more of the creditors secured may file a bill to have the trust executed. Reynolds v. Bank of Virginia, 6 Gratt. (Va.) 174.

Though a trustee will not be compelled by a court of equity to take upon himself the burden of a trust, yet having once voluntarily assumed it, the court will compel a faithful execution of it for the preservation of rights depending upon and derivable from it. Cooper v. McClun, 16 Ill. 435.

In Crawford v. Ginn, 35 Iowa 543, the evidence indicated that the defendant bid off and acquired the title to the land in controversy at a sheriff's sale, under an arrangement with the judgment creditor that it should be acquired and held by him as security for sums advanced in payment of his bids at the sale, and for certain other claims. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to have the trust enforced according to its terms, and certain of the land remaining unsold in the defendant's hands after his reimbursement, conveyed to the plaintiff, with a full account of their rents and profits.

Trustees may be compelled by a court of equity to execute the trust assumed by a corporation according to the scheme prescribed. But unless specially conferred by statute, the court has no power to sequester the funds of a corporation and deprive it of them, and dispose of them as it may judge to be equitable and just among those beneficially interested. Savings Inst. v. Makin, 23 Me. 360.

Where a trustee, with the authority to sell on the written request of the beneficiary, if he should consider a sale to be to her advantage, and the right to require her to file a petition in equity praying for the sale before he would make it, refused to sell upon a written request, though admitting the sale to be necessary, and a petition was filed, it was held that equity could decree the sale, not under the power in the deed, but under the equitable power of a chancellor to compel a trustee to perform his duty. Walker v. Symser, 80 Ky. 620.

Where the whole beneficial interest in land directed to be converted into money, belongs to the person for whose use it is given, the trustee will not be compelled to execute the trust against the wishes of the cestui que trust, but the latter will be permitted to take the land before the conversion has actually been made. But where there are other cestuis que trustent who take otherwise than as heirs-at-law, the trustee will be compelled to execute the trust created by the will. Fluke v. Fluke, 16 N. J. Eq. 478.

If the mortgage of a railroad creates a trust, and provides that the power of sale is to be executed by the trustee on certain contingencies, he may be controlled, restrained, and directed by a court of equity, at the suit of a party standing in the relation of cestui que trust; the rule for his guidance being derived from the instrument itself. Bradley v. Chester Valley R. Co., 36 Pa. St. 141.

1. Bond v. Lockwood, 33 Ill. 212.

2. Where land on which a meeting-house stands is inclosed as a meeting-house green, and conveyed to that use, it would be a breach of the trust to abandon that use of it, though the house continues to stand and has been put to no other use; but destruction by casualty would not be a breach, while the intention to rebuild is entertained in

b. INJUNCTION.—The breach of any of these duties may be prevented by injunction.¹ Thus, the trustee will be enjoined from conveying the trust property in violation of his duty, and from mortgaging or incumbering it.² An injunction will be granted to prevent the disposition of the fund by a trustee shown to be insolvent,³ or by one proven to be of bad habits or bad character.⁴

c. PERSONAL PENALTIES UPON THE TRUSTEE—REMOVAL—WITHHOLDING COMPENSATION.—The beneficiary's rights may be protected by an order of court removing the trustee,⁵ or by withholding any compensation from him for his services,⁶ in case he has been unfaithful, or by a suit against the trustee personally, either at law or in equity.⁷

good faith. Howe v. School Dist. No. 3, 43 Vt. 282. Where there had been no such breach of trust, it was held, in the same case, that the complainants, having shown a legal or equitable title to a pew in the church, were entitled to enjoin the defendant school district from converting the meeting-house into a schoolhouse; the district having acquired the right of the original grantor, and having taken a quitclaim from the only surviving grantee.

1. See INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, pp. 914, 915; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 855 et seq.; Perry on Trusts, § 816; St. Luke's Hospital v. Barclay, 3 Blatchf. (U. S.) 259; Jenkins v. Jones, 2 Giff. 99; Atty. Gen'l v. Foundling Hospital, 2 Ves. Jr. 42; Balls v. Strutt, 1 Hare 146; In re Chertsey Market, 6 Price 279; Ludlows v. Greenhouse, 1 Bligh (U. S.) 57; Scott v. Becher, 4 Price 346; Mansfield v. Shaw, 3 Madd. 100; Gladdon v. Stoneman, 1 Madd. 143, note; Webb v. Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 487; Atty. Gen'l v. Liverpool, 1 Myl. & C. 171; Reeve v. Parkins, Jac. & W. 390; Anonymous, 6 Madd. 10; Dance v. Goldingham, L. R., 8 Ch. 902.

Thus, one holding land in trust will be enjoined from parting with his control over it. Hunt v. Freeman, 1 Ohio 490. A sale by the trustees will be enjoined while the title is in dispute and the full value cannot probably be obtained. Faulkner v. Davis, 18 Gratt. (Va.) 651; Lane v. Tidball, Gilm. (Va.) 130. The sale of property covered by a deed of trust, under an execution in favor of a third person without regard to the trust, may be enjoined. Phillips v. Winslow, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 431; 68 Am. Dec. 729. A trustee may be enjoined from asserting a claim in violation of his trust. Blake v. Buffalo Creek R. Co., 56 N. Y. 485.

But a legitimate exercise of a discretionary authority will not be enjoined. Caperton v. Landcraft, 3 W. Va. 540.

2. See INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 914.

3. See Perry on Trusts, § 816; Mansfield v. Shaw, 3 Madd. 100; Scott v. Becher, 4 Price 346; Taylor v. Allen, 2 Atk. 213.

But it has been held in Illinois that this ground alone will not suffice, but that it must appear that the trustee has become insolvent since his appointment, or that there is danger that he will misapply the proceeds of the sale. Tooke v. Newman, 75 Ill. 215.

4. Everett v. Prythergch, 12 Sim. 365.

5. See supra, this title, Resignation and Removal of Trustee.

6. See supra, this title, Accounting—Compensation of the Trustee.

7. See infra, this title, Procedure—Jurisdiction.

If A deposits money in bank in trust for B, and A's executor draws it out, B may sue him. Anderson v. Thompson, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 394.

At Law.—Baker v. Biddle, Baldw. (U. S.) 394; Bennett v. Preston, 17 Ind. 291; McCollister v. Willey, 52 Ind. 382; Farrelly v. Ladd, 10 Allen (Mass.) 127; Chase v. Perley, 148 Mass. 294; Johnson v. Johnson, 120 Mass. 465; Catlin v. Birchard, 13 Mich. 110.

Assumpsit, debt, account, or detinue, may be brought against a trustee named in a will, to compel an account of his receipts and disbursements. Bredin v. Dwen, 2 Watts (Pa.) 95.

The trustee is answerable for damages, as on an implied assumpsit to the cestui que trust, that he will execute the trust. Newhall v. Wheeler, 7 Mass. 189.

In Equity.—Hukill v. Page, 63 Biss. (U. S.) 183; Hearne v. Hearne, 55 Me. 445; Dorsey v. Garey, 30 Md. 489;

The cestui que trust's right to control the funds, or a portion of them, may be enforced by an order requiring the trustee to pay them into court for his benefit.¹ And such an order will be granted where it is apparent that the trustee is misapplying the funds in such a way as to endanger the safety of the trust.²

If the trustee has been guilty of any misconduct in relation to the trust, by a misapplication of the funds or an unauthorized investment, or by dealing with the trust property for his personal advantage, the cestui que trust may at his option either confirm the trustee's acts or compel him to account therefor.³

d. RECEIVER.—Another remedy of the cestui que trust for relief from the trustee's maladministration, and the prevention of Brooks v. Brooks, 11 Cush. (Mass.) 18; Peabody v. Harvard College, 10 Gray (Mass.) 283.

B received from A a claim to be collected and paid to C, with whom B agreed so to do. Upon B's failure to pay after collecting, it was held that C could sue him at law for money had and received, or in equity to enforce the trust. Miller v. Lake, 24 W. Va. 545.

A cestui que trust is not required to establish his debt by an action at law, in order to compel an enforcement of the trust, or to protect the trust property from unlawful interference. Spelman v. Freedman, 130 N. Y. 426.

As a general rule, the enforcement of a claim against the trustee must be accomplished by a court of equity, and not at law. But this rule has its exceptions. Arms v. Ashley, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 70; Buttrick v. King, 7 Met. (Mass.) 20; Rogers v. Daniel, 8 Allen (Mass.) 343.

So long as the trust remains open, the cestui que trust cannot maintain an action at law against the trustee. His only remedy is in equity. Johnson v. Johnson, 120 Mass. 465; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377.

1. Perry on Trusts, §§ 825-827; Freeman v. Fairlee, 3 Mer. 29; Dubless v. Flint, 4 Myl. & C. 502; McHardy v. Hitchcock, 11 Beav. 77; Ross v. Ross, 12 Beav. 89; Whitmarsh v. Robertson, 4 Beav. 26; Bartlett v. Bartlett, 4 Hare 631; Rogers v. Rogers, 1 Anstr. 174; Hammond v. Walker, 3 Jur. N. S. 686; Score v. Ford, 7 Beav. 336.

A trustee filed a bill for a settlement of his accounts, and upon the commissioner finding a certain sum to be in his hands, the court issued an order requiring him to show cause why he should not pay it into court, and upon his failure to show cause, it was held that the court could direct the payment of this sum by the trustee, even though it did not appear that he had abused his trust, or that the fund was in danger. Grinnan v. Long, 22 W. Va. 693.

2. Contee v. Dawson, 2 Bland (Md.) 264; Clagett v. Hall, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 81; Hosack v. Rogers, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 468; Nokes v. Sheppings, 2 Ph. 19; Johnson v. Aston, 1 Sim. & S. 73; Rothwell v. Rothwell, 2 Sim. & S. 217; Richardson v. Bank of England, 4 M. & C. 184; Wyatt v. Sharratt, 3 Beav. 499; Boschetti v. Power, 8 Beav. 98; Bourne v. Mole, 8 Beav. 177; Fulter v. Jackson, 6 Beav. 424; Ross v. Ross, 12 Beav. 89; Meyer v. Montrieu, 4 Beav. 343; Hinde v. Blake, 4 Beav. 597; Vigrass v. Binfield, 3 Madd. 62; Marryatt v. Marryatt, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 876; Talbot v. Marshfield, 2 D. & S. 285; Freeman v. Fairlee, 3 Mer. 39; Collis v. Collis, 2 Sim. 366; Widdowson v. Duck, 3 Mer. 494; Bartlett v. Bartlett, 4 Hare 631.

Where a trustee disposes of a trust fund pending an application to have it brought into court, he is guilty of contempt. Waterman v. Waterman, Taney (U. S.) 362.

8. Dodge v. Stevens, 94 N. Y. 215; Brazel v. Fair, 26 S. Car. 370. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—The Duty of Good Faith—Buying at His Own Sale.

If either the trustee or a third person comes into the possession of lands or other property, by an illegal appropriation of the trust funds which he has knowingly procured to be made, the beneficiary can elect either to take the property or pursue his remedy in personam. Treadwell v. McKeon, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 201. Compare Miller v. Birdsong, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 531.

Where a trustee has made an improper further injury to the trust, is in the appointment by the court, upon the application of the beneficiary, of a receiver, who shall take temporary charge of the trust property under the direction of the court.¹ But the appointment of a receiver is an extreme measure and is seldom resorted to.²

e. THE RIGHT TO AN ACCOUNTING.—The beneficiary may demand of his trustee an accounting and the right to a personal and judicial examination into his conduct of the trust,³ and in some cases, after a settlement, he may claim the right to a restatement of the account and the payment of any balance found due upon such corrected statement.⁴

To this end he is entitled to an inspection of all books, vouchers and papers connected with the trust,⁵ unless there be a dispute as to whether the fiduciary relationship exists or not;⁶ and he may demand a full explanation of the accounts.⁷

f. FOLLOWING THE TRUST PROPERTY.—If the property has investment, the cestui que trust has the option of taking the fund and the profits during the whole period, subject to all the losses of the business, or taking the fund or legal interest thereon. Baker v. Disbrow, 18 Hun (N. Y.) 29, affirmed in 79 N. Y. 631.

1. See RECEIVERS, vol. 20, pp. 46, 47, 305. See also Perry on Trusts, §§ 818-820; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 982 et seq.; Chautauqua County Bank v. White, 6 N. Y. 237; 57 Am. Dec. 442; Gunn v. Blair, 9 Wis. 352; Anonymous, 12 Ves. 5; Middleton v. Dodswell, 13 Ves. 266; Howard v. Papera, 1 Madd. 142; Richards v. Perkins, 3 Y. & C. 299; Evans v. Coventry, 5 De G. M. & G. 911; Bainbrigge v. Blair, 3 Beav. 421; Everett v. Prythergch, 12 Sim. 367.

If the trust is endangered by the insolvency or bankruptcy of the trustee, a receiver may be appointed. See supra, this title, Who May Be a Trustee—Bankrupts and Insolvents. See also Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 982; Scott v. Becher, 4 Price 346; Mansfield v. Shaw, 3 Madd. 100; Havers v. Havers, Barn. 23; Gladdon v. Stoneman, 1 Madd. 143, note; Langley v. Hawk, 5 Madd. 46; In re Hopkins, 19 Ch. Div. 61.

A receiver may be appointed if the trustees are unable to agree on a course of conduct, or are unwilling to act together. Hart v. Denham, W. N. 1871, p. 2. See Swale v. Swale, 22 Beav. 584. Or if the trustee refuses to act, Wilson v. Russ, 17 Fla. 691; or if he dies, Wilson v. Russ, 17 Fla. 691.

The fact that one appointed trustee in a deed is insolvent and untrustworthy, will not defeat or invalidate the deed, but the court may appoint a receiver, and administer the trust according to the provisions of the deed. Cohn v. Ward, 32 W. Va. 34.

Pending proceedings for the removal of a trustee, a receiver may be put in charge if the emergency demand it. Calhoun v. King, 5 Ala. 523; Jones v. Dougherty, 10 Ga. 273; Poythress v. Poythress, 16 Ga. 406; Ogden v. Kip, 6 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 160. See also Rogers v. Ross, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 388; 8 Am. Dec. 575.

2. Middleton v. Dodswell, 13 Ves. 268; Barkley v. Reay, 2 Hare 306; Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, p. 984; Hathornwaite v. Russell, 2 Atk. 126; Browell v. Reed, 1 Hare 434. See RECEIVERS, vol. 20, p. 306.

3. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of Trustees—Accounting; Perry on Trusts, § 821.

4. Howard v. Patterson, 72 Me. 57.

5. Perry on Trusts, §§ 822, 823; Ottley v. Gilby, 8 Beav. 602; Newton v. Askew, 11 Beav. 152; Devaynes v. Robinson, 20 Beav. 42; Gray v. Haig, 20 Beav. 219; Wynne v. Humberston, 27 Beav. 421; Horton v. Brocklehurst, 29 Beav. 504; Talbott v. Marshfield, 2 D. & S. 285; Hardwicke v. Vernon, 14 Ves. 510; Airey v. Hall, 12 Jur. 1043; Smith v. Barnes, L. R., 1 Eq. 65; Bugden v. Tylee, 21 Beav. 545.

6. Perry on Trusts, § 823; Brown v. Oakshott, 12 Beav. 252; Devaynes v. Robinson, 20 Beav. 42; Wynne v. Humberston, 27 Beav. 421.

7. Kingsbury v. Powers, 131 Ill. 182.

wrongfully passed beyond the control of the trustee, by unauthorized sale or otherwise, it is the beneficiary's right to follow it wherever he can identify it and claim it on behalf of the trust. In the hands of any but an innocent holder of the property, the fiduciary character clings to it. It remains charged with the equitable interests of the beneficiary and subject to his equitable rights and demands.¹ And the same is true where it

1. Following Trust Property.—See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Confusion of Funds—Conversion; Perry on Trusts, § 828; Flint on Trusts, § 318; article from London Law Times upon "Improper Conversion of Trust Property—Right to Follow Property," Chic. Leg. News 285. Also, article by Samuel Williston on "The right to Follow Trust Property," in 2 Harvard Law Rev. 28; Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333; Yerger v. Jones, 16 How. (U. S.) 36; Veil v. Nutchel, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 105; May v. LeClaire, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 217; Duncan v. Jaudon, 15 Wall. (U. S.) 165; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 341; Bayne v. U. S., 93 U. S. 642; U. S. v. State Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 30; Central Nat. Bank v. Connecticut Mut. L. Ins. Co., 104 U. S. 54; Union Pac. R. Co. v. McAlpine, 129 U. S. 305; Jones v. Shaddock, 41 Ala. 262; Parker v. Jones, 67 Ala. 234; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141; Carey v. Brown, 62 Cal. 373; First Nat. Bank v. Hummel, 14 Colo. 259; 20 Am. St. Rep. 257; Martin v. Greer, 1 Ga. Dec. 109; Hargroves v. Batty, 19 Ga. 130; Bazemore v. Davis, 55 Ga. 504; Gilman v. Hamilton, 16 Ill. 225; Rusk v. Newell, 25 Ill. 211; School Trustees v. Kirwin, 25 Ill. 63; Atty. Gen'l v. Illinois Agr. College, 85 Ill. 516; McCormas v. Long, 85 Ind. 549; Gray v. Ulrich, 8 Kan. 112; Allen v. Russell, 78 Ky. 112; Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332; Chesterfield Mfg. Co. v. Dehon, 5 Pick. (Mass.) 7; 16 Am. Dec. 367; Mason v. Waite, 17 Mass. 560; Le Breton v. Peirce, 2 Allen (Mass.) 8; Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co., 36 Minn. 75; McLeod v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Miss. 99; Wood v. Stafford, 50 Miss. 370; St. Louis Union Soc. v. Mitchell, 26 Mo. App. 206; Coggswell v. Griffith, 23 Neb. 334; Bailey v. Inglee, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 278; Cheshire v. Cheshire, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 569; McLaughlin v. Fulton, 104 Pa. St. 161; Bomar v. Mullins, 4 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 80; Garrett v. Garrett, 1 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 96; Tur- ner v. Petigrew, 6 Humph. (Tenn.) 438; Vance v. Kirk, 29 W. Va. 344; In re Hallett's Estate, 13 Ch. Div. 753. See also Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 202; Henry County v. Winnebago Swamp Drainage Co., 52 Ill. 454.

Principle of Rule.—In Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332, the court, by Alvey, C. J., said: "The principle upon which trust funds may be traced, when attempted to be misapplied, or where they have been converted into other property, or become mixed with other funds belonging to the trustee or fiduciary, is a very plain one, and all the difficulty that is found to exist, is in matters of fact, and in identifying the fund. So long as a trust fund can be traced, the court will always attribute the ownership thereof to the cestui que trust, and will not allow the right to be defeated by the wrongful act of the trustee or fiduciary in mixing or confusing the trust fund with funds of his own, or even those of a third party. The true owner of a fund traced to the possession of another has a right to have it restored, not as a debt due and owing, but because it is his property wrongfully withheld from him. And it can make no manner of difference whether the fund be traced into a bank account, the possession of an individual, or into the hands of a firm composed of many individuals, if the essential facts are shown by which the identification of the fund can be established, and no superior rights of innocent third parties have intervened."

It was held in Re Greene's Estate (Surr. Ct.), 20 N. Y. Supp. 94, that if money comes into the hands of a person as a trust fund, and is deposited by him, together with other funds, in bank in his own name, and the trustee dies insolvent, leaving a larger sum than the amount of the trust fund to his credit, the beneficiary may follow the trust fund into the money left on deposit, and recover the amount thereof, as against the personal representatives of the trustee.

A father gave to his married daughter $3,000, which she loaned to her husband, who, as security therefor, mortgaged his land to the father. The land was sold under foreclosure, and the mortgagee became the purchaser, and afterward sold the land. In his will, after directing the payment of his debts, the father charged his daughter with cash advanced, $3,000. It was held, that the daughter had an equity to follow the proceeds of the mortgaged land, and was entitled to recover the value thereof from her father's estate. Lindsay v. Williams, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 475.

Property held in trust does not pass to the representatives of the trustees discharged of the trust, but, when it can be distinguished, inures to the benefit of the cestui que trust. Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 119; 7 Am. Dec. 478.

It is only when the trust fund can be traced and identified that the beneficiary will be allowed to follow it into the hands of third persons, and recover it from them in equity. Parker v. Jones, 67 Ala. 234.

When not Distinguishable—Rights of Creditors.—If the trustee has so appropriated it to his own use that it is indistinguishable from his own funds, his creditors are entitled to reach the trust money as his. Willett v. Stringer, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 152. Compare Kerr v. Blodgett, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 137; 25 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 303.

Instances of Who Are and Who Are not Innocent Holders.—Under this rule, no one is an innocent holder as against the cestui que trust, who acquires title from the trustee with notice of the trust. Kitchen v. Bradford, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 413; Jones v. Shaddock, 41 Ala. 262; Parker v. Jones, 67 Ala. 234; Bates v. Kelly, 80 Ala. 142; Hill v. Coolidge, 33 Ark. 626; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141; Eversdon v. Mayhew, 65 Cal. 163; Gilbert v. Sleeper, 71 Cal. 293; Barwick v. White, 2 Del. Ch. 284; Gale v. Harby, 20 Fla. 171; Kent v. Plumb, 57 Ga. 207; Planter's Bank v. Prater, 64 Ga. 609; Willis v. Foster, 65 Ga. 82; Carmichael v. Foster, 69 Ga. 372; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spaid, 99 Ill. 249; Aynesworth v. Haldeman, 2 Duv. (Ky.) 565; Joor v. Williams, 38 Miss. 546; McLeod v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Miss. 99; Minton v. Pickens, 24 S. Car. 592; Hurst v. Marshall, 75 Tex. 452. See also Wells v. Francis, 7 Colo. 396; Page v. Page, 8 N. H. 187; Dey v. Dey, 26 N. J. Eq. 182; Barksdale v. Finney, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 338.

One who acquires property with notice, either actual or constructive, that his grantor holds title as trustee, stands in his grantor's shoes, and holds the property charged with the trust. Jones v. Shaddock, 41 Ala. 262; Cavagnaro v. Don, 63 Cal. 227; Webster v. French, 11 Ill. 254; School Trustees v. Kirwin, 25 Ill. 62; Stewart v. Chadwick, 8 Iowa 463; Ryan v. Doyle, 31 Iowa 53; Tobin v. Helm, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 288; Hagthorp v. Hook, 1 Gill & J. (Md.) 270; Isom v. First Nat. Bank, 52 Miss. 902; Murray v. Ballou, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 566; Shepherd v. McEvers, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 136; 8 Am. Dec. 561; Coble v. Nonemaker, 78 Pa. St. 501; Pinson v. Ivey, 1 Yerg. (Tenn.) 296; Lincoln v. Purcell, 2 Head (Tenn.) 143; 73 Am. Dec. 196; Heth v. Richmond, etc., R. Co., 4 Gratt. (Va.) 482; 50 Am. Dec. 88. See also Barksdale v. Finney, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 338; Fast v. McPherson, 98 Ill. 496.

A court of equity will enforce a trust against all persons coming into possession of the trust property with notice of the trust, in the same manner and with like force and effect as against the original trustee. Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; Shibla v. Ely, 16 N. J. Eq. 181.

An individual creditor of an executor who receives the assets of a testator's estate in payment of his debt, with notice of their character and the relation of the debtor to the estate, may be required to pay them to the estate. Austin v. Willson, 31 Ind. 252.

Where a husband and wife convey the land of the wife by a deed absolute on its face, but really in trust for the wife, and the trustee, by the connivance of the husband, conveys to a stranger, who has no notice of the trust, the husband, afterward purchasing the property, will hold the same as trustee for his wife. Church v. Church, 25 Pa. St. 278.

One purchasing notes taken by a guardian for the sale of his ward's real estate, and made payable to him as guardian of A, B, and C, takes with notice of the trust, and acquires no title, if the sum received from the notes be misappropriated by the guardian. Strong v. Strauss, 40 Ohio St. 87.

It is no defense to a bill filed against the agent of a trustee, who received money arising from the sale of the trust property, made by collusion with him, to follow the funds in his hands, that he had paid the money over on liabilities incurred for the trustee. Bennett v. Merritt, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 263.

Where the committee of a lunatic assigned bonds belonging to the latter in payment of a personal debt, and the assignee had notice of the trust, the bonds were held subject to the trust in his hands, and he was held estopped to make any defense which could not be made by the assignor. Edmunds v. Venable, 1 Patt. & H. (Va.) 121.

A party knowingly receiving trust property in payment of his own claims against the trustee, is liable to account for the same to the beneficiary. Towle v. Mack, 2 Vt. 19. But see Swoope v. Trotter, 4 Port. (Ala.) 27.

One who receives property, knowing it to have been transferred by a trustee in disregard of the trust, takes it subject to the right of the trustee, as well as of the beneficiary, to reclaim possession. Zimmerman v. Kinkle, 108 N. Y. 282.

Where one, by mistake, acquires a legal title to real estate, knowing the equitable title to be in another, he holds as a trustee for the latter, and so would his grantee with notice. Smith v. Walser, 49 Mo. 250; Ryan v. Doyle, 31 Iowa 53.

Where an executor misapplies the assets of the estate by investing them in his own business, his partner, who has notice of the trust, becomes himself a trustee of the fund, and is liable in equity to the beneficiary. Trull v. Trull, 13 Allen (Mass.) 407.

Where school funds of a certain district were, without authority, deposited in a bank to the treasurer's individual account, but with notice to the banker that they were school funds, the latter became a trustee of the school district, and his insolvent estate in the hands of an assignee is subject to the repayment of such moneys in preference to all other creditors. And in such case the specific moneys need not be identified in the hands of the assignee. Boyer Independent Dist. v. King, 80 Iowa 497.

The holder of the equitable title to lands at the time they are conveyed by the holder of the legal title, may question the interest conveyed by such deed for the purpose of establishing the trust; and one purchasing with knowledge of the trust, takes no greater interest than his grantor had, and will hold as trustee for the equitable owner. Gray v. Ulrich, 8 Kan. 112.

Where land was conveyed by an absolute deed in trust for a married woman, and was afterward sold on execution against the trustee, it was held that, upon proof that the purchaser had notice of the trust and had agreed by parol to convey to the beneficiary upon being reimbursed, it would be ordered that the land should stand as security for the money paid by him. Pearson v. Daniel, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 360.

In Davenport Plow Co. v. Lamp, 80 Iowa 722; 20 Am. St. Rep. 442, the treasurer of one corporation was induced by the president of another to discount a note executed by it to the first-named corporation and to pay it the proceeds, which were thereupon used in its business under the promise of such president that the money should be paid by a certain time. The president knew that the treasurer with whom he was dealing had no right to act thus. It was held that the money advanced in this way became a trust fund in the hands of the company so receiving it, to be paid out, in the event of the company's insolvency, to the real owners, to the exclusion of other creditors of the company.

In Hollembaek v. More, 44 N. Y. Super. Ct. 107, one partner had contributed to the capital of a firm to which he belonged, certain funds which at the time were trust funds; but the other partners were ignorant of that fact. It was held, upon suit brought by the cestui que trust, that only the individual interest of the partner misapplying the trust funds could be held to answer to the demands of the beneficiary, and that this must be ascertained by an accounting and settlement as between the partners.

In Bunton v. King, 80 Iowa 506, it was held that township funds deposited by the clerk of the township in his own name in a bank which afterward failed, could be recovered from the assignee of the bank, where they were known to the bank to be trust funds.

If one standing in no fiduciary relation to another, appropriates trust funds of the latter, knowing them to be such, and purchases real estate therewith, equity will fasten a lien thereon, and sell it to satisfy the trust fund. Treadwell v. McKeon, 7 Baxt. (Tenn.) 445.

In Rusk v. Newell, 25 Ill. 211, Rusk sent money to Newell, to be by him delivered to the plaintiff's agent, to be applied to a specific purpose. Newell delivered the money to the agent and took his receipt for it. He then received from the agent the same money in payment of a debt due him from the agent. Here the identical money came into defendant's hands. He knew it was the plaintiff's money when he received it, and knew it was being misapplied when he received it from the agent to pay the agent's debt due to him. It was held that he was chargeable with the trust. See Mason v. Waite, 17 Mass. 558; Neely v. Rood, 54 Mich. 134; 52 Am. Rep. 802.

If the holder of land in trust conveys it to another by an absolute deed, who takes without notice of the trust, and it afterward passes through several owners to the first holder, he will hold it in trust as before. Church v. Church, 25 Pa. St. 278.

Whoever receives property, knowing it to be the subject of a trust, and to have been transferred by the trustee in violation of his duty, takes it, subject to the right, not only of the cestui que trust, but also of the trustee, to reclaim possession or recover for its conversion. Wetmore v. Porter, 92 N. Y. 76; Zimmerman v. Kinkle, 108 N. Y. 287.

The mere fact that one of the grantors in the deed absolute remained in possession of the property, is not sufficient to render effective a secret unrecorded trust between the grantor and grantee, as against subsequent bona fide creditors of the grantee. Hoffman v. Gosnell, 75 Md. 577.

Where a trustee, holding a legal title, mortgages the land without consideration, and the mortgagee assigns it of record to a bona fide assignee for value, the rights of such assignee being unaffected by the want of consideration between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, one who fails to record a prior trust agreement under which he has an interest in the land, must suffer the loss. Burgess v. Bragaw, 49 Minn. 462.

Presumption of Notice.—The use of the word "trustee" in the conveyance, or any recital which would put the purchaser of trust property upon inquiry, will create a presumption of notice against him. Brannon v. May, 42 Ind. 92; Howard Ins. Co. v. Halsey, 8 N. Y. 271; 59 Am. Dec. 478; Wilson v. McCullough, 23 Pa. St. 440; 62 Am. Dec. 347; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 389; 1 Am. Rep. 115; 97 Am. Dec. 107; Bancroft v. Consen, 13 Allen (Mass.) 50; Trull v. Trull, 13 Allen (Mass.)

407; Sturtevant v. Jacques, 14 Allen (Mass.) 523.

Whoever buys land, while there is a cestui que trust in possession, will be presumed to have had notice of the trust. Pell v. McElroy, 36 Cal. 268; Pritchard v. Brown, 4 N. H. 397; 17 Am. Dec. 434. But contra, see Scott v. Gallagher, 14 S. & R. (Pa.) 333; 16 Am. Dec. 508.

It has been held, however, that a purchaser of a legal title from a trustee must have positive, direct and express notice of the trust to affect the title. Yocum v. Morris, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 414; Conner v. Tuck, 11 Ala. 794.

One who purchases, bona fide and for value, from the trustee, without notice of the trust, will be protected, even as against the cestui que trust. Waring v. Lewis, 53 Ala. 630; Warren v. Harlow, 96 Cal. 298; Hathorn v. Maynard, 65 Ga. 168; Prevo v. Walters, 5 Ill. 35; Emonds v. Termehr, 60 Iowa 92; Carter v. Manufacturer's Nat. Bank, 71 Me. 448; 36 Am. Rep. 341; Wyse v. Dandridge, 35 Miss. 672; 72 Am. Dec. 149; Paul v. Fulton, 25 Mo. 156; Streitz v. Hartman, 26 Neb. 33; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; 11 Am. Dec. 441; Crocker v. Crocker, 31 N. Y. 507; 88 Am. Dec. 291; Christmas v. Mitchell, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 535; Thomson v. Gilliland, Add. (Pa.) 296; Lee v. Tiernan, Add. (Pa.) 348; Bracken v. Miller, 4 W. & S. (Pa.) 102; Hudnall v. Wilder, 4 McCord (S. Car.) 294; 17 Am. Dec. 744; Henderson v. Dodd, 1 Bailey Eq. (S. Car.) 138; Ex p. Williams, 18 S. Car. 299; Whale v. Booth, 4 T. R. 625.

Where one purchases from a trustee, for a fair price, certain lots belonging to the trust, which the trustee has power to sell under the deed, and without knowledge of any intended diversion of the sum paid from the purposes of the trust, he is not guilty of fraud in so doing, nor will he be liable to make good to the trust estate the amount afterward paid by it to repossess the lots, which meanwhile have passed into other hands. Pennsylvania Ins. Co. v. Austin, 42 Pa. St. 257.

Although a purchaser from a trustee may have known of the trust, yet if he also had notice that his grantor held the claim which bound the trust estate, and received a deed from the trustee, under authority of the chancellor, conveying a portion of the trust estate in equity, he would stand upon the same footing as an innocent purchaser. Iverson v. Saulsbury, 65 Ga. 724.

Where a conveyance from a trustee bears nothing upon its face to indicate that the sale is made in violation of the power contained in the deed of trust, one who subsequently purchases without actual notice of any irregularity in the trustee's sale, will be protected as an innocent purchaser. Streitz v. Hartman, 26 Neb. 33.

The objection that a trustee has purchased at his own sale is of no avail to impeach the title of one who has purchased from the trustee in good faith and for value. Farrar v. Payne, 73 Ill. 82.

An action will not lie on behalf of the beneficiaries of a trust fund against the surviving members of a firm, to charge them with trust funds invested by the trustee in land which he subsequently sold to the firm, where the evidence does not show that the firm had notice of the trust when it purchased the land. Morgan v. Johnson, 87 Ga. 383.

Where a wife refused to join her husband in a mortgage of land held by him in implied trust for her, to secure his debts, it was held that she could not quiet her title as against the mortgagee, unless he had notice of the trust. Her residence on the land with her husband and family would not be such notice. Paulus v. Latta, 93 Ind. 34.

An innocent purchaser from trustees, vested with the title as well as the power to sell, will be protected from the effect of irregularities in the compliance with the directions of the power, which might have been of consequence, if the power were not coupled with the title. Rowan v. Lamb, 4 Greene (Iowa) 468.

Where a trustee for a feme covert bought land with the trust fund, and allowed the beneficiary's husband to take the title thereto in his own name; and the said husband conveyed the land to a third party, who had advanced him money, and who had no knowledge or notice of the trust, and became his tenant, it was held that the beneficiary could not enforce the trust against said third party. McCaskill v. Lathrop, 63 Ga. 96.

Authority to third persons to transfer stock, expressing that it was given on receipt of full consideration, if coupled with a secret trust, does not charge the purchaser with the trust, unless he can be proven to have had knowledge of such trust. The breach of trust, if any, is chargeable to the persons having authority to transfer. Foster v. Ambler, 24 Fla. 519.

Where the cestui seeks to pursue trust funds invested by the trustee in land or other property, and title taken in his own name or in the name of a stranger with notice, it is wholly immaterial whether the money was paid at the time of the purchase or afterward. Whaley v. Whaley, 71 Ala. 159.

Where a trustee had misapplied the trust fund by using it or allowing it to be used in payment for real estate purchased and conveyed to a third person, who was not a bona fide purchaser for value without notice of the trust, the money, upon a suit by the cestui que trust, was allowed to be followed into the land purchased, and the land was held charged with the trust. Veile v. Blodgett, 49 Vt. 270.

Trust funds converted by a trustee to his own use may be followed by the beneficiary so long as he can identify them, whatever change of form they may have undergone, unless they have passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser for value; but trust funds of a third person converted by the treasurer of a corporation to his own use, and by him placed in the treasury of the corporation for value, in the usual course of business and without notice, may be recovered from the corporation in the same manner as from its treasurer. St. Louis Union Soc. v. Mitchell, 26 Mo. App. 206.

Identification Necessary.—But identification is essential, even with specific funds in trust. In re Janeway, 4 Nat. Bank. Reg. 100; In re Hosie, 7 Nat. Bank. Reg. 601; Bank of Commerce v. Russell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 215; Pharis v. Leachman, 20 Ala. 663; Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd, 38 Fed. Rep. 172; Portland, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Locke, 73 Me. 370; Fowler v. True, 76 Me. 43; Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332; Thompson's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 16. Except personally as against the trustee, however. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Confusion of Funds—Conversion; Perry on Trusts, § 828; Hall v. Otis, 77 Me. 122.

In Neely v. Rood, 54 Mich. 134; 52 Am. Rep. 802, the court, by Champlin, J., said: "It is essential to the assertion of a beneficial title in a trust fund that it can be clearly traced into the hands of the party to be charged, though no more than proof of substantial identity is required." The identical pieces of money need not be shown. School Trustees v. Kerwin, 25 Ill. 63.

In North Dakota Elevator Co. v. Clark (N. Dak. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 175, it is held that when the property of one person is mingled indistinguishably with the mass of property of the one receiving it, or when, as in case of money, it is paid out by him, the right to pursue it is lost, because identification is impossible. "Mere enrichment of the estate or extinguishment of debts will not make the owner of the property a preferred creditor." But compare Veil v. Mitchel, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 105; Van Alen v. American Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 1.

In Illinois Trust, etc., Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 858, an effort had been made by proceedings in equity to follow the trust funds where the real identification had been completely lost. The court, by Wallace, J. said: "The cestui que trust, under such circumstances, must be able to point out his fund, or the proceeds which are specifically derived from it, and trace it through its transformations, so as to show that it is not a fund or product to which all other creditors have an equal right to resort. From the nature of the fund, and the manner in which it was appropriated, that cannot be done here. Money ordinarily has no earmark; it is not ordinarily the subject of replevin or detinue. . . . Accordingly the cases hold that if a trustee has converted a trust fund into money and mingled the proceeds with his other moneys, so they are indistinguishable, the cestui que trust cannot follow his fund into the hands of an assignee in bankruptcy, or of an executor of such trustee, but must occupy the position of a general creditor of an estate." Citing Whitecomb v. Jacob, 1 Salk. 160; Trecothick v. Austin, 4 Mason (U. S.) 29; Ex p. Mordaunt, 3 D. & C. 351; Kip v. Bank of N. Y., 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 63; Bank of Commerce v. Russell, 2 Dill. (U. S.) 215. Compare Planter's Bank v. Prater, 64 Ga. 609. In this case the trustee conveyed trust lands by an absolute conveyance to A, to secure the trustee's negotiable notes for his individual indebtedness. The notes were transferred for value, before maturity, to a bank by delivery without indorsement, and judgment was taken on them by A for the use of the bank. Execution issued and was levied on the land, which had been reconveyed to the trustee for this purpose.

The bank knew nothing of the trust. Upon suit brought by the cestuis que trustent, the levy was enjoined.

In Thompson's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 16, the court, by Lewis, J., said: "Whenever a trust fund has been converted into another species of property, if its identity can be traced, it will be held, in its new form, liable to the rights of the cestui que trust. So long as it can be identified, either as the original property of the cestui que trust, or as the product of it, equity will follow it; and the right of reclamation attaches to it until detached by the superior equity of a bona fide purchaser, for a valuable consideration, without notice. The substitute for the original thing follows the nature of the thing itself so long as it can be ascertained to be such. But the right of pursuing it fails when the means of ascertainment fail. This is always the case when the subject-matter is turned into money and mixed and confounded in a general mass of property of the same description." See also Illinois Trust, etc., Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 858; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Johnston, 27 Fed. Rep. 244.

The rule seems to be well settled that the right to follow the trust fund fails as soon as its means of ascertainment and identification fail, and the courts have required strict proof of the identity of the fund or property in controversy, holding in Holmes v. Gilman, 138 N. Y. 369, that, "The right to follow and appropriate, ceases only when the means of ascertainment fail. It is a question of title." See Pharis v. Leachman, 20 Ala. 662; Goldsmith v. Stetson, 30 Ala. 164; Roache v. Caraffa, 85 Cal. 436; Neely v. Rood, 54 Mich. 134; 52 Am. Rep. 802; Phillips v. Overfield, 100 Mo. 466. See also In re Hosie, 7 Nat. Bank. Reg. 601; In re Coan, etc., Mfg. Co., 12 Nat. Bank. Reg. 203; North Dakota Elevator Co. v. Clark (N. Dak. 1892), 53 N. W. Rep. 175.

Preference as Between Trust Creditor and General Creditor.—In this connection the question as to whether a trust creditor, in the case of a debtor's insolvency, is entitled to a preference as against a general creditor or not, is an interesting one, and has often arisen in our courts. A leading case supporting the doctrine that a trust creditor is entitled to a preference, is that of McLeod v. Evans, 66 Wis. 401; 57 Am. Rep. 287, which was followed by the Wisconsin courts in Francis v. Evans, has gone into the possession of a mere volunteer.¹ So if a judgment

69 Wis. 115, and Bowers v. Evans, 71 Wis. 133.

In McLeod v. Evans, 66 Wis. 401; 57 Am. Rep. 287, the plaintiff had left with his banker, H., for collection, a draft upon a New York bank. H. sent the draft to a Chicago bank and received credit for the amount, and afterward made drafts upon such bank, which were cashed. Before payment to the plaintiff, H. made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors. At that time, nothing was due him from the Chicago bank. The court held that the proceeds of the draft were a trust fund in the hands of H., and that, as against other creditors, the plaintiff might enforce full payment from the assets in the hands of the assignee, although the trust fund could not be traced to any specific property. The decision was rendered by Cole, Chief Justice, and sustained by Justices Lamb and Orton, a dissenting opinion being rendered by Justices Taylor and Cassoday. These same judges dissented in the opinion in Francis v. Evans, 69 Wis. 115, and Bowers v. Evans, 71 Wis. 133, employing the following language: "It seems to us that the decision in McLeod v. Evans, 66 Wis. 401, goes further than any other well-considered adjudication of an appellate court. While we bow to the rule thus affirmed by the majority of the court as a binding authority, which must be followed while it remains, yet we do not concede the logic of the reasons given, nor the application of the authorities cited in support of it."

The Wisconsin rule thus announced by a divided bench, has been criticised by the supreme court of Massachusetts in Little v. Chadwick, 151 Mass. 109, and by the Texas court in Continental Nat. Bank v. Weems, 69 Tex. 489; 5 Am. St. Rep. 85, 93.

A better rule seems to be that announced in the leading New York case of Matter of Cavin v. Gleason, 105 N. Y. 256. In the case last named, upon an accounting in bankruptcy or insolvency, it is held that a trust creditor is not entitled to preference over general creditors of an insolvent, merely on the ground of the nature of the claim; and that to authorize such a preference, some specific, recognized equity founded on some agreement or relation of the debt to the assigned property, must be shown, which entitles the claim, according to equitable principles, to preferential payment. See also Atkinson v. Rochester Printing Co., 114 N. Y. 168; Holmes v. Gilman, 138 N. Y. 369; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141; Price v. Ralston, 2 Dall. (U. S.) 60; School Trustees v. Kirwin, 25 Ill. 63; Union Nat. Bank v. Goetz, 138 Ill. 127; Weatherell v. O'Brien, 140 Ill. 145; 33 Am. St. Rep. 221; Goodell v. Buck, 67 Me. 514; Portland, etc., Steamboat Co. v. Locke, 73 Me. 370; Mutual Accident Assoc. v. Jacobs, 141 Ill. 261; 33 Am. St. Rep. 302; Mills v. Post, 7 Mo. App. 519; Duguid v. Edwards, 32 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 254; Thompson's Appeal, 22 Pa. St. 16; Illinois Trust, etc., Bank v. First Nat. Bank, 15 Fed. Rep. 858; Illinois Trust, etc., Bank v. Smith, 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 275; Philadelphia Nat. Bank v. Dowd, 38 Fed. Rep. 172; Etna Powder Co. v. Hildebrand, Indiana Super. Ct., decided April 17th, 1894.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 828; Lee v. Simpson, 37 Fed. Rep. 12; Cobb v. Knight, 74 Me. 253; Barr v. Cabbage, 52 Mo. 404; Hazeltine v. Fournay, 120 Ill. 493; Lyford v. Thurston, 16 N. H. 399; Coble v. Nonemaker, 78 Pa. St. 501; Kennedy v. Baker, 59 Tex. 151; Pye v. George, 2 Salk. 680; Saunders v. Dehew, 2 Vern. 271; Mansell v. Mansell, 2 P. Wms. 679; Langton v. Anstrey, L. R., 2 Ch. 30; Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Ed. 219; Spurgeon v. Collier, 1 Ed. 55; Bourset v. Savage, L. R., 2 Eq. 134.

A volunteer to whom an estate in trust has been conveyed, is bound by the trust, although he had no notice of it, and if the grantee of such an estate for full value have notice of the trust, he is bound just as the grantor is bound. Sadler's Appeal, 87 Pa. St. 154.

Where a husband conveyed to his wife, instructing her that she was to convey to any one to whom he might sell, or in case he did not sell, then to him, a trust was created which equity would enforce against her heirs. Bartlett v. Bartlett, 15 Neb. 593.

To entitle the purchaser of trust property to protection, it must appear that the consideration was wholly or partially paid before notice of the trust. Paul v. Fulton, 25 Mo. 156.

Upon a parol promise by the wife to hold the devise in trust for their children, and convey to them so much as she creditor of the trustee has come into possession of the property, it still remains subject to the trust.¹

In a recent case, where the trustee had died seized of the legal title to trust lands, and his heirs, in ignorance of the trust and believing the property to be their own, had erected valuable improvements thereon, it was held that the cestui que trust who sought to charge the estate with the trust must reimburse the heirs their outlay in improvements, and pay the costs of suit and be held to a strict proof of his claim.²

It has even been said, that anyone coming into possession of trust property, whether by suit or otherwise, will do so subject to the trust, so far as the rights of the beneficiary are concerned.³ But this is too broad.

If a trustee has deposited his beneficiary's moneys in his own name in a bank to which he owes money, and the bank, in ignorance of the trust ownership, applies such deposit to the payment of his debt, such application will not stand, and the fund, if traced, may be reclaimed by the cestui que trust.⁴ Of course such an application made with notice of the equities will be set aside.⁵

Indeed, a standard author says that, "If the trust money or its substitute can be traced into the bank, the owner can claim it, if it is still there. It has been transformed into the shape of

should not use in her and their support, the decedent devised all his property to his wife, who took immediate possession. Subsequently, she conveyed a valuable portion to a stranger, who took without notice of the trust; and on her death devised and bequeathed another portion, and all the personalty to her second husband, who took possession of that, and also of the proceeds arising from the first conveyance. It was held that the children of the first husband could recover of the second husband a conveyance to them of the real estate, and compel him to account. Socher's Appeal, 104 Pa. St. 609.

1. Shryock v. Waggoner, 28 Pa. St. 430.

The rule that one who purchases from a trustee with notice of the trust shall be charged with the same trust in respect to the property as the trustee from whom he purchased, does not apply to public sales of trust estates in accordance with the provisions of the deed. Wood v. Augustine, 61 Mo. 46.

But it has been held that a purchaser at a sheriff's sale takes the land free from secret trusts of which no notice is given till after the acknowledgment of the sheriff's deed. Smith v. Painter, 5 S. & R. (Pa.) 223; 9 Am. Dec. 344.

2. Rines v. Bachelder, 62 Me. 95.

3. Coffee v. Crouch, 28 Mo. 106.

4. Morse on Banks and Banking (3d ed.), § 590, citing Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 332; Buttett v. First Nat. Bank, 38 Mich. 630. To the same effect, see Overseers of the Poor v. Bank of Va., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 544; 44 Am. Dec. 399; Veil v. Mitchel, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 105; Frith v. Cartland, 2 Hem. & Mil. 417; Baker v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 100 N. Y. 31; 53 Am. Rep. 150. See also Loring v. Brodie, 134 Mass. 453.

In Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372, the court, by Lord Justice Bruce, said: "When a trustee pays trust money into a bank to his credit, the account being a simple account with himself, not marked or distinguished in any other manner, the debt thus constituted from the bank to him is one which, as long as it remains due, belongs specifically to the trust, as much and as effectually as the money so paid would have done had it specifically been placed by the trustee in a particular repository and so remained; that is to say, if the specific debt shall be claimed on behalf of the cestuis que trustent, it must be deemed specifically theirs."

5. Holden v. New York, etc., Bank, 72 N. Y. 286.

a debt due the trustee, and is practically in the same position as substituted property actually in the hands of the trustee." The fund thus wrongfully deposited by the trustee is in a situation analogous to property that has been stolen, and may be followed by its owner wherever found.¹

If it has been converted into money, or exchanged for other property, the cestui que trust is at liberty to claim the thing received in exchange, if it can be identified, and the trust, if devested from the trust property in its original form, attaches to

1. Morse on Banks and Banking (3d ed.), § 590; Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372; In re Hallett's Estate, 13 Ch. Div. 696; Ingraham v. Maine Bank, 13 Mass. 208; Atlantic Bank v. Merchants' Bank, 10 Gray (Mass.) 548; Merrill v. Bank of Norfolk, 19 Pick. (Mass.) 32; Loring v. Brodie, 134 Mass. 453; Armour Cudahy Packing Co. v. First Nat. Bank (Miss. 1892), 11 So. Rep. 28; Van Alen v. American Nat. Bank, 52 N. Y. 1; Overseers of the Poor v. Bank of Va., 2 Gratt. (Va.) 544; 44 Am. Dec. 399. See also Eyrich v. Capital State Bank, 67 Miss. 60; Frazier v. Erie Bank, 8 W. & S. (Pa.) 18.

Where a commission agent used the specific proceeds of the sales of goods on consignment, and deposited other moneys to make up the amount so used, it was held that this deposit, being substituted for the original proceeds, became impressed with the trust and subject to the same equities. Baker v. New York Nat. Exch. Bank, 100 N. Y. 31; 53 Am. Rep. 150; People v. City Bank, 96 N. Y. 32.

In Vail v. Durant, 7 Allen (Mass.) 408; 83 Am. Dec. 695, the court, by Merrick, J., said: "If the defendants, upon the sale of the goods consigned, had taken a note therefor, and had retained possession of it until the proceedings in insolvency were commenced, the plaintiffs, upon relieving them from their liabilities, might have claimed and recovered the note as their own; and, therefore, as they had already realized the money, and as no suggestion had been made that it was kept separate, or could be identified or distinguished from their other moneys, it is impossible that the assignment of the debtors' whole estate, or that any part of the proceedings in insolvency, could operate as a misappropriation of it. . . . For the balance still in their hands, the plaintiffs may prove its amount as a debt due to them against the estate in insolvency."

In defining the peculiar relations existing between the factor and his principal, the court, in the above case, said: "In the usual and ordinary course of business, a factor does not and is not required to keep the money received upon the sale of goods of different consignors in separate and distinct parcels, but mingles all in a common mass, and with the like funds of his own from whatever source derived. In such case he becomes at once a debtor to his principal, and is liable to an action for the balance shown to be due by his account of sales."

In the recent case of Little v. Chadwick, 151 Mass. 109, the court, by Allen, J., said: "When trust money becomes so mixed up with the trustee's individual funds that it is impossible to trace and identify it as entering into some specific property, the trust ceases. The court will go as far as it can in thus tracing and following trust money; but when, as a matter of fact, it cannot be traced, the equitable right of the cestui que trust to follow it fails. Under the circumstances, if the trustee has become bankrupt, the court cannot say that the trust money is to be found somewhere in the general estate of the trustee that still remains; he may have lost it with property of his own, and in such case the cestui que trust can only come in and share with the general creditors. . . . There is no means of ascertaining, as a matter of fact, that the trust money, if it ever was trust money, is now represented by any property in the hands of the assignee."

The rule in Maine is not so broadly stated as it has been by the supreme court of Massachusetts. In Houghton v. Davenport, 74 Me. 590, it was held that the mere mingling of trust money by the trustee with his own funds, by depositing the different moneys in bank in his individual name, with nothing done by the banker to distinguish the trust money from the individual money, the property or money received, and the latter remains subject to the claims of the beneficiary.¹

does not necessarily prevent an identification of the trust fund. The court said: "Equity will disentangle the account and give to the cestui que trust the portion belonging to him."

1. Perry on Trusts, § 828; Yerger v. Jones, 16 How. (U. S.) 36; Piatt v. Oliver, 3 McLean (U. S.) 27; May v. LeClaire, 11 Wall. (U. S.) 217; Goldsmith v. Stetson, 30 Ala. 164; Cook v. Tullis, 18 Wall. (U. S.) 332; U. S. v. State Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 30; South Park Com's v. Kerr, 13 Fed. Rep. 502; Dow v. Berry, 18 Fed. Rep. 121; Wheat v. Moss, 16 Ark. 255; Dyer v. Jacoway, 42 Ark. 186; Elgin Lumber Co. v. Langman, 23 Ill. App. 250; Breit v. Yeaton, 101 Ill. 242; McCrory v. Foster, 1 Iowa 271; MacGregor v. MacGregor, 9 Iowa 65; Englar v. Offutt, 70 Md. 78; 14 Am. St. Rep. 332; Dows v. Kidder, 84 N. Y. 131; Causidiere v. Beers, 2 Keyes (N. Y.) 198; Cobb v. Dows, 10 N. Y. 341; Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co., 36 Minn. 75; Wood v. Stafford, 50 Miss. 370; Morrison v. Kinstra, 55 Miss. 71; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S. Dak. 388; Moffit v. McDonald, 11 Humph. (Tenn.) 457; Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372; Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 562; In re Hallett's Estate, 13 Ch. Div. 753. See also Martin v. Greer, 1 Ga. Dec. 109; Alwood v. Mansfield, 59 Ill. 496; Grange Mill Co. v. Western Assur. Co., 118 Ill. 396; Cheshire v. Cheshire, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 569.

So long as money, or other property held in trust, can be traced or identified, it belongs to the original owner if he elects to claim it, and equity will follow it through any number of transmutations, and preserve it for the owner, either in its original or its substituted form. Third Nat. Bank v. Stillwater Gas Co., 36 Minn. 75.

Where a husband converted chattels left to his wife for life, then to her children, into money, it was held that the children could pursue the money in the husband's hands. Hunter v. Yarborough, 92 N. Car. 68.

A beneficiary may follow the trust fund into lands purchased with it by the trustee, whether the contract of the purchase be executory or executed. Brothers v. Porter, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 106.

Where a trustee has borrowed money, and with it purchased other property, and added it to the trust, and repaid the borrowed money out of the proceeds and profits of the trust property, the property thus purchased will belong to the beneficiaries in the trust. Butler v. Hicks, 11 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 78.

Where, pending a suit against him for breach of trust, a trustee fraudulently sells the trust estate, and assigns the securities taken for the purchase-money, the beneficiary may, at his election, take the land or the securities. Murray v. Lylburn, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441.

In Covar v. Cantelou, 25 S. Car. 35, the testator bequeathed certain money in trust for A, and upon her death to be divided among "her children and their heirs forever." Under an order of court, a portion of this trust fund was invested in real estate, and thereafter, the real estate was sold on the petition of A and the trustee. The children were not parties to the proceeding. It was held that they might follow the funds into the land, and upon A's death, recover the land by a suit brought in their own names.

In Pennell v. Deffell, 4 De G. M. & G. 372, the court, by Lord Justice Turner, said: "As between the cestui que trust and trustee, and all parties claiming under the trustee, otherwise than by purchase for valuable consideration without notice, all property belonging to a trust, however much it may be changed or altered in its nature or character, and all the fruit of such property, whether in its original or in its altered state, continues to be subject to, or affected by, the trust." Approved by Lord Ellenborough in Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 562, and by Jessell, M. R., in In re Hallett's Estate, 13 Ch. Div. 753.

Property purchased with a fund which includes sums of money held under different trusts, the title thereto being taken as under one of the trusts only, is chargeable with the same trusts that attached to the fund, as against those who deal in it with a knowledge of its fiduciary character. Leake v. Watson, 58 Conn. 332.

If a trustee, after mingling trust money with his own, separates from

But the cestui que trust, who would claim the property so purchased, is held to a strict proof that the funds applied therefor were trust funds, unless the deed conveying the land recites the trust in some way.¹

The fund resulting from a sale of real estate under a power is treated as realty in equity,² unless it clearly appears that the settlor intended that it should be converted into and remain personalty.³

The cestui que trust is not bound to follow the trust property, for he has the alternative remedy of enforcing an individual liability against the trustee.⁴ The exercise of this right precludes his afterwards pursuing the fund. In other words, his remedy is an

the common fund a proper portion of it as the property of the beneficiary, and with such portion of the fund purchases real estate in his own name, the trust attaches to the money thus set apart, and to the real estate purchased therewith. Houghton v. Davenport, 74 Me. 590.

The indorsement of a note, which upon its face is payable to one person for the use of another, cannot impart to the indorsee a right to receive the money due thereon, for his own benefit; but the indorsement is a breach of trust on the part of the payee, which entitles the cestui que trust to assert his right to the proceeds of the note in a court of equity. Eldridge v. Turner, 11 Ala. 1049.

1. Roberts v. Broom, 1 Harr. (Del.) 57; Ferris v. Van Vechten, 73 N. Y. 113.

One who, by way of defense to a mortgage claim on property, pleads that the mortgagor had no authority to create the lien, the property being purchased with funds held by him as trustee, will be required to establish the latter fact by the clearest and most satisfactory proof. The mere report to the court, by the trustee, that the trust funds have been so invested, will not be considered sufficient to trace the trust funds into the property, if the trustee afterward asserts individual ownership therein. Suter v. Ives, 47 Md. 520.

2. Hovey v. Dary, 154 Mass. 7.

3. Craig v. Leslie, 3 Wheat. (U. S.) 563; Holland v. Cruft, 3 Gray (Mass.) 163; Hammond v. Putnam, 110 Mass. 232; Martin v. Sherman, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 341.

In Hammond v. Putnam, 110 Mass. 232, the court, by Morton, J., said: "Embarrassing cases have often arisen in which the testator has directed the conversion of real into personal, or personal into real estate, for certain purposes, which purposes in whole or in part, cannot be carried into effect. . . . But the general principle is applied in all the cases, that wherever the intention of the testator is clear to convert real into personal estate, the law will regard it as converted to that extent at the death of the testator, and he who takes under the will takes it with the character which the will has impressed upon it."

4. Oliver v. Piatt, 3 How. (U. S.) 333; Flagg v. Mann, 3 Sumn. (U. S.) 84; Lathrop v. Bampton, 31 Cal. 17; 89 Am. Dec. 141; Roberts v. Mansfield, 38 Ga. 452; Gray v. Perry, 51 Ga. 180; Bradley v. Luce, 99 Ill. 234; Long v. Fox, 100 Ill. 43; Breit v. Yeaton, 101 Ill. 242; Haxton v. McClaren, 132 Ind. 235; MacGregor v. MacGregor, 9 Iowa 65; Bartlett v. Hamilton, 46 Me. 435; School Dist. v. First Nat. Bank, 102 Mass. 174; McLeod v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Miss. 99; Isom v. First Nat. Bank, 52 Miss. 902; Calhoun v. Burnett, 40 Miss. 59; Barr v. Cabbage, 52 Mo. 404; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Freeman v. Cook, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 379; McAllister v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 536; Norman v. Cunningham, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 72; Hawkins v. Hawkins, 1 D. & S. 75.

But a third party may not, for his own protection, require the cestui que trust to pursue the proceeds of trust funds into other investments. Barr v. Cabbage, 52 Mo. 404.

The cestui que trust cannot both hold and enjoy the proceeds of the trust property, and at the same time recover the trust property itself from the one who paid full value therefor. Equity will give him no aid in such an effort. Bonner v. Holland, 68 Ga. 718.

alternative and not a cumulative one,¹ although the contrary has been held in one instance.² In any event, if a part of the purchase-money has been paid him, he cannot hold the trustee for conversion unless he is willing to refund.³ He may elect whether to claim the property thus purchased or to demand the repayment of the purchase-money.⁴

He may pursue the land in the purchaser's hands and demand a reconveyance upon payment of the purchase-money.⁵ And having recovered the property in this way, he would still have an action against the trustee for a reimbursement of the money thus advanced.

When the trustee has conveyed the trust property to an innocent holder for value, so as to put the property beyond the reach of the cestui que trust, the trustee must answer to the cestui que trust for the loss sustained.⁶

1. See Fowler v. Bowery Sav. Bank, 113 N. Y. 450; Fears v. Lynch, 28 Ga. 249.

A cestui que trust having elected to hold his trustee personally responsible for an improper investment of trust funds, and having obtained his decree accordingly, cannot then follow the property into the investment and hold that also. Barker v. Barker, 14 Wis. 131.

In Naltner v. Dolan, 108 Ind. 500; 58 Am. Rep. 61, the court, by Mitchell, J., said: "Whenever a trustee, unless properly authorized to do so, puts the fund into such a shape as to invest himself with a legal title to it, the cestui que trust has his election, either to treat the fund, according to the appearance of things, as the property of the trustee, and regard the latter as his debtor, or he may demand that the title be transferred to him. If a deposit is made in such manner as on the face of the books of the bank in which the deposit is made, to authorize the trustee, his assignee, or legal representative, to claim it as the fund of the depositor, the cestui que trust has the option to do likewise." To this proposition, that court cites the following cases: Merket v. Smith, 33 Kan. 66; School Dist. v. First Nat. Bank, 102 Mass. 174; Utica Ins. Co. v. Lynch, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 520; Morris v. Wallace, 3 Pa. St. 319; 45 Am. Dec. 642; Jackson v. Bank of U. S., 10 Pa. St. 61; McAllister v. Com., 30 Pa. St. 536.

If a trustee invest the trust funds in property, the cestui que trust may either take the property, or hold the trustee for the money. He may even have the property sold to purchase the fund, and charge the trustee with the deficit, if any. Cooper v. Cooper, 61 Miss. 676.

One who purchases trust property for a valuable consideration with notice of the trust, is held to be a trustee for the present beneficiary interested, and the cestui que trust may follow the property thus transferred, or may hold the trustee for the proceeds, or claim the property purchased by the trustee with the proceeds of the sale. Isom v. First Nat. Bank, 52 Miss. 902.

2. If a trustee has paid trust money without right to one who knows the facts, the beneficiary may pursue either or both. If the beneficiary pursues both, the trustee will be treated as surety of the person receiving the funds. Vance v. Kirk, 29 W. Va. 344.

3. A cestui que trust who has received an equivalent for his interest in trust property, cannot maintain an action against the trustee for conversion thereof, without tendering a return of such equivalent. Graves v. Pinchback, 47 Ark. 470.

4. Murray v. Lylburn, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 441; Kaufman v. Crawford, 9 W. & S. (Pa.) 134; 42 Am. Dec. 323. See also Blaisdell v. Stevens, 16 Vt. 179.

5. Tobin v. Helm, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 288.

6. Adams v. Lambard, 80 Cal. 426.

Where land is conveyed by deed absolute upon its face, but actually intended as a mortgage, and the grantee therein conveys the land to an innocent purchaser, the mortgagor can recover from the mortgagee the value of the land at the time of the trial, less

g. RIGHT TO REIMBURSEMENT.—The cestui que trust is entitled to reimbursement of the expenses which he has incurred in good faith in attempting to protect and preserve the trust estate, and he may require the trustee to repay him out of the income of the estate first, or in case the income fails, out of the capital.¹

h. OTHER RIGHTS.—The cestui que trust is entitled to a decree of court establishing the existence of the trust and declaring what are its limitations, as well as to a judicial construction of the instrument by which the trust is created.²

When the purposes of the trust have been accomplished, the cestui que trust may demand a conveyance to himself of the property, real and personal, and a decree of court declaring the trust at an end.³ And he may not be compelled to wait an unreasonable period of time before he is entitled to a decree establishing this right.⁴

He may appeal to the courts to set aside wrongful acts of the the debt, with interest. Boothe v. Feist, 80 Tex. 141.

Where the trustee of land has sold it to bona fide purchasers without notice of the trust, the beneficiaries, whose interest takes effect at the death of the trustee, he having had an estate for life, are entitled to recover from his estate the value of the land at the time of his death, excluding permanent improvements made since the sale. Norman v. Cunningham, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 63.

1. Taxes paid by a cestui que trust are a lien upon the land, and may be paid out of the trust fund. Gary v. May, 16 Ohio 66.

One of several cestuis que trustent, who, at the request of the trustee, furnished the necessary money to preserve the trust fund, is entitled to be reimbursed out of the fund for all sums so advanced. Frierson v. Branch, 30 Ark. 453; Rogers v. Vaughan, 31 Ark. 62.

2. See infra, this title, Procedure. See also, supra, Construction of Trusts; Walden v. Skinner, 101 U. S. 577; Patterson v. Pullman, 104 Ill. 80.

During his last illness and ten days before his death, the decedent executed and delivered a deed of certain of his real estate to his son A, upon A's parol agreement that the farm was to be held as a home for the family, consisting of twelve children besides A, who alone was of age, and divided among them when the youngest should come of age. The family continued thereafter to occupy the farm, paying the taxes and the interest on a mortgage thereon, and making permanent improvements. A neither promised nor paid any consideration, was never in possession of any of the farm, and never received any of the rent or profits thereof. It was held that, upon his repudiating the trust and claiming to be the sole owner, one of the children could maintain an action to have him adjudged a trustee, and to compel him to convey to them their respective shares in the farm. Moyer v. Moyer, 21 Hun (N. Y.) 67.

A cestui que trust, having a vested interest, though not a right to immediate enjoyment of the trust fund, may file a bill to have the trusts declared, or to remove the trustee for misconduct. Cooper v. Day, 1 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 26.

Where the administratrix of her husband took a deed of a burial lot, paid for with the funds of the estate, to herself, it was held, upon a bill filed by three of her six children, that she was compellable to execute a declaration of trust in favor of all, subject to her legal interest. Stewart's Appeal, 81* Pa. St. 323.

But compare Baylies v. Payson, 5 Allen (Mass.) 473, where it is said that a bill in equity does not lie merely for the purpose of declaring a trust, even though the defendant denies the existence of the trust; but if he is about to leave the country, the trust may be declared, and the bill retained for further direction.

3. See infra, this title, Procedure; also, infra, this title, Termination of the Trust.

4. It was held in McDonald v.

trustee so long as property rights of innocent third parties have not vested.¹ Thus, it has been held that a lease made on terms unfavorable to the trust, and in violation of the duties imposed on the trustee, will be set aside and the execution of a new one ordered in compliance with the terms of the trust.² If the trustee, by collusion with a tenant in possession, has conspired to defeat the rights of persons entitled to a reversionary interest by fraudulently obtaining a decree, the decree will be vacated.³

The beneficiary under a deed of trust may purchase at a sale made in pursuance of the trust as effectually as any creditor may purchase the property of his debtor at a judicial sale, and the trustee may bid for the beneficiary at his instance, without impairing the validity of the sale.⁴

XVII. RIGHTS AND LIABILITIES OF THIRD PARTIES.—Those who deal with a trustee upon the faith of the trust estate which he represents, are bound at their peril to know the extent of the trustee's powers.⁵ It is only when they have had no notice of the

McDonald, 92 Ala. 537, that where the complaint was not filed until eight years after the death of the testatrix, and the assets largely exceeded the debts, that the creditors could not, by unnecessarily delaying their collections, nor could the trustee, by neglecting to discharge obligations which it was in his power to meet, indefinitely postpone the assertion by the cestuis que trustent of their rights and interests in the property.

1. See supra, this title, Sales by the Trustee—Setting the Sale Aside.

2. Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123.

3. Wright v. Miller, 8 N. Y. 9; 59 Am. Dec. 438.

4. Felton v. LeBreton, 92 Cal. 457.

He may purchase as freely as a third person, but he does not become a trustee for parties interested, without a repayment to him of the purchase-money. Walker v. Brungard, 13 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 723.

5. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Following the Trust Property; Owen v. Reed, 27 Ark. 122; Gunnell v. Cockerill, 79 Ill. 79; Fesmire's Estate, 134 Pa. St. 67; 19 Am. St. Rep. 676; Vernon v. Board of Police, 47 Miss. 181.

If a trustee holds land under a power to sell only upon the happening of a certain event, which is made a condition precedent to a conveyance, one who purchases from him must ascertain at his peril whether this condition has been fulfilled. And this is so, although the deed contains a recital that the condition has been performed. So, where the trustees had power of sale, to be exercised only in case there should be a deficiency of income for certain purposes, if conveyed, reciting this condition and a deficiency under it. In the absence of proof of such deficiency, it was held that their conveyance was void. Griswold v. Perry, 7 Lans. (N. Y.) 98.

A purchaser under a trust deed containing a power of sale, is charged with notice of any defects and irregularities that may attend the sale. He is bound to know whether the sale was made upon proper notice, and at a time and in the manner required by the power contained in the deed. But as to later and remote purchasers, the rule is different. If there is nothing upon the face of the deed, indicating that the sale was made in violation of the power contained in the deed of trust, a subsequent purchaser, who has no actual notice of any irregularity in the trustee's sale, will be protected as an innocent purchaser. Gunnell v. Cockerill, 79 Ill. 79.

One who knows that he is dealing with trust funds, is held to a knowledge of the character of the trust, whether he advise himself of its precise nature or not. Gale v. Harby, 20 Fla. 171.

Where the grantor in a deed of trust of personal property is to retain possession until default, a sale by him afterward passes only his right of possession, and the vendee acquires no right adverse to the rights of the trustee. And a sale by the trustee, under the deed, is not the sale of a mere chose in trust, either actual or constructive, that they are to be protected in the possession of trust property, or in the enjoyment of rights acquired through dealings with the trustee.¹

Under the rule that a trustee purchasing at his own sale takes the property charged with the trust just as before, one who buys of such trustee thereafter is presumed to be cognizant of his grantor's wrongdoing, and cannot claim title as an innocent holder.² The purchaser from one who has purchased with notice of the trustee's breach of trust in the application of the proceeds of the sale is not to be charged with the notice of his vendor, if himself innocent of such breach.³

As we have seen, the trustee's application of trust funds to the payment of his own debts or in any way to his own use, is highly improper. A creditor receiving trust funds thus misapplied, or anyone coming into the possession of trust property with a knowledge of its character, stands in the trustee's shoes, and must account as trustee for everything so received.⁴

action, and passes the property to his vendee, who may maintain an action in his own name to recover the property. Foster v. Goree, 5 Ala. 424.

Under 1 N. Y. Rev. Stat. 729, § 60, a cestui que trust may bring a bill in equity against his trustee, who has executed a lease with an inadequate rent, under a power to lease only at the best procurable rent, to compel him to make a new lease at a full rent, regardless of the old lease. Griffen v. Ford, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 123.

A double responsibility rests upon a trustee in dealing with one whom he knows to be also a trustee, as any dealings between them in wrong of the latter's trust, render them both responsible in equity. Heath v. Waters, 40 Mich. 457.

1. A bona fide purchaser from the trustee will be protected from the demands of the cestui que trust. If he has no knowledge, either actual or constructive, of the trustee's wrong, he cannot be liable for it. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary.

2. Winter v. Truax, 87 Mich. 324; 24 Am. St. Rep. 160.

3. Claiborne v. Holland, 88 Va. 1046.

4. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary; Jaudon v. National City Bank, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Hyde Park, 101 Ill. 595; 40 Am. Rep. 218; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spaulds, 99 Ill. 249; Cain v. Cox, 23 W. Va. 594; Keane v. Roberts, 4 Madd. 357; In re Gross, L. R., 6 Ch. 632.

Where a trustee has wrongfully sold the trust property to himself, a purchaser from him, with notice of the fraud, is a participator in the breach of trust, and incurs a like liability with the fraudulent trustee. Barksdale v. Finney, 14 Gratt. (Va.) 338.

One who sells land to a trustee, taking therefor trust money and a mortgage for a part of the purchase-price, being thus a party to a breach of trust, must, on foreclosing, account for the trust money, before applying the proceeds of the foreclosure to the satisfaction of his mortgage. Bomar v. Gist, 25 S. Car. 340.

One who held certain shares of corporate stock in trust, obtained a loan from a bank, pledging these shares as security for the debt. The stock certificates indicated the trust upon their face, and bore the name of the cestui que trust. The trustee, finding himself unable to repay the sum borrowed, directed the bank to sell the stock. This the bank did, reimbursing itself out of the proceeds. The bank was held liable to the trust for the amount of the stock, the trustee having meantime become insolvent. Jaudon v. National City Bank, 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 430.

In Johns v. Williams, 66 Miss. 350, it was held that cestuis que trustent might maintain an action for the cancellation of a lease executed by their trustee in satisfaction of his private debt to the lessee.

A testamentary trustee who held the estate for the testator's children, wrongfully executed a deed of trust of land to secure a loan made to him individually, and afterward, in his account as guardian, took credit for the amount. Suit was brought by the wards to cancel the deed of trust, and it was held that they would not be required to refund to the purchaser under the deed of trust. Price v. Estill, 87 Mo. 378.

Before a stranger to a trust fund can be charged as a trustee, by reason of being a party to the misapplication of the funds, the fund being used in the payment of a private debt of the original trustee, it must appear, not only that the person sought to be charged knew that the fund was a trust fund, but also that the debt was, at the time of its payment, of such a nature that the fund could not lawfully be used to pay it. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Hyde Park, 101 Ill. 595; 40 Am. Rep. 220.

In the case last cited, a municipal treasurer borrowed from a bank, professedly to pay warrants in anticipation of the collection of taxes, and gave the bank his individual note secured by collaterals. The money was placed to his credit as treasurer, a large portion was drawn out on his checks as treasurer, and the sums thus used he repaid to the bank with money which had come in from the collection of taxes. It was held that the acceptance of such payment by the bank did not render it liable to the town, as for money received from a trustee in breach of his trust. Fifth Nat. Bank v. Hyde Park, 101 Ill. 595; 40 Am. Rep. 218.

A mortgage given in misapplication of trust funds was also in part security of a guardian and his ward, who had notice of the misapplication. It was held not enforceable, even for the benefit of the ward to the extent of the sum due her. Dunham v. Milhous, 70 Ala. 506.

Ignorance of the Trust Excuses.—A, who held stock upon a secret trust, dealt with it as his own, assigning it to B, who in turn transferred it to C, neither B nor C having any notice, actual or constructive, of the trust, and it was held that the beneficiaries could not be heard to object to the transfers. Borland v. Clark, 26 Kan. 349.

Extent of Notice Required Under the Rule—What Constitutes.—Though the delivery of a gift, together with a deed, to a father for the benefit of the daughter, vests the title in the daughter, third parties are not chargeable with notice of her title, where the property is retained in the possession and control of the father in apparent right of ownership. Lewis v. Castleman, 27 Tex. 407.

Where creditors of the husband take a mortgage executed by the wife, her trustee, and the husband, of the wife's trust property, they are chargeable with notice of the conditions on which, by the trust deed, the wife may convey. Swift v. Castle, 23 Ill. 132.

A trustee, to secure his personal indebtedness to A, transferred, as collateral, an overdue mortgage note belonging to the trust estate. A knew nothing of the trust. It was held that, while A might not have been chargeable with notice, had the note not been past due, the fact that the note was overdue rendered him chargeable. Turner v. Hoyle, 95 Mo. 337.

A took a mortgage, which was recorded, in which he was described as "trustee as aforesaid." He borrowed money of B, B knowing that the money was for A's personal use, and assigned the mortgage to B as security, erasing the words "trustee as aforesaid." The note accompanying the mortgage, and which was assigned with it, made no mention of A's being trustee. B did not examine the record, and his attention was not attracted to the words "trustee as aforesaid," and he had no actual knowledge that A was trustee. It was held that B was, nevertheless, chargeable with notice of the fact. Smith v. Burgess, 133 Mass. 511.

A, who owned bonds, deposited them with a trust company, taking a non-negotiable receipt in the name of her son as "trustee." She authorized her son to pledge the receipt for a certain sum specified on his own account, but he pledged it for a larger sum. It was held that the person to whom it was pledged could only hold it for the sum named by A, the use of the word "trustee" being sufficient to put the pledgee upon inquiry. Swan v. Produce Bank, 24 Hun (N. Y.) 277.

Where a trustee was authorized by the court to make a sale of certain land and simultaneously invest the purchase-money in a mortgage on the same land, and he sold for cash, it was held that a subsequent purchaser was chargeable with notice of the terms of the order, and that the lien for the purchase-money was not lost by the execution of the deed by the trustee. Dickinson v. Worthington, 4 Hughes (U. S.) 430.

So, if the one dealing with the trustee knows that he is about to misapply the proceeds of the transaction, he deals at his peril; the rule being that the innocent purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the proceeds of the sale, while the purchaser with notice of the contemplated wrong is bound by reason of that knowledge, and takes the property subject to all equities.¹

An executrix who was a life-tenant, under the will, of certain stock of the estate, assigned such stock as collateral security for the indebtedness of some of the remainder-men. It was held that such assignment was an abuse of the trust, and the assignees who received the stock, as stock of the estate standing in the name of the testator, were bound to ascertain whether the executrix had the right so to transfer the stock. Failing to do so, they could not claim protection as holders in good faith and without notice. Prall v. Hamil, 28 N. J. Eq. 66. See also Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 382; 1 Am. Rep. 115; Dey v. Dey, 26 N. J. Eq. 182; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; 11 Am. Dec. 441; Pendleton v. Fay, 2 Paige (N. Y.) 202.

One who was trustee of a land company with power to sell, and also as a stockholder in the company, beneficially interested in the land, executed a deed describing himself as trustee, and the land as a part of the town which his trust deed proposed should be laid off on the property of the company, and for a full description referred to a plat of the town then on file. It was held that this showed that he was executing the deed as trustee, and was not merely conveying his beneficial interest. Hannibal, etc., R. Co. v. Green, 68 Mo. 169.

1. Wright v. Zeigler, 1 Ga. 324; 44 Am. Dec. 66; Hutchins v. State Bank, 12 Met. (Mass.) 421; Shaw v. Spencer, 100 Mass. 392; 1 Am. Rep. 121; Foster v. Dey, 27 N. J. Eq. 600; Prall v. Hamil, 28 N. J. Eq. 66; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; 11 Am. Dec. 441.

Although a deed of trust authorizes the trustee to raise money on a mortgage of the trust property, one who lends money with knowledge of the intention of the trustee to apply it to his own use, takes but a voidable title under the mortgage given to him as security. Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Spaide, 99 Ill. 249.

The purchaser is bound to see to the proper application of the purchase-money, where money arising from the sale of lands by a trustee, is required to be used for a definite and limited purpose. St. Mary's Church v. Stockton, 8 N. J. Eq. 520.

The purchaser of promissory notes executed to trustees, and indorsed by them as trustees, must see to the application of the purchase-money. Jackson v. Davis, 4 MacArthur (D. C.) 334.

Where the trust under which property is held, prohibits the trustee from selling or mortgaging it, except for the benefit of the cestui que trust, one who purchases from the trustee or accepts a mortgage from him, will be required to look to the application of the purchase-money or the proceeds of the mortgage. But, where the trustee holds the property in trust for his wife and her heirs, the fee-simple is hers in equity, and the conveyance in which they both join, whether by deed or mortgage, will be held to be executed in compliance with the trust, and imposes upon the purchaser or mortgagee no duty in reference to the application of the proceeds. Wagner v. Blanchet, 27 N. J. Eq. 356.

Without notice or knowledge of the intended misapplication of the proceeds, he is not liable; nor is he bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. Dawson v. Ramser, 58 Ala. 573; Carpenter v. McBride, 3 Fla. 292; 52 Am. Dec. 382; Fifth Nat. Bank v. Hyde Park, 101 Ill. 595; 40 Am. Rep. 220; Cherry v. Greene, 115 Ill. 591; Norman v. Towne, 130 Mass. 52; Mason v. Bank of Commerce, 90 Mo. 452; Hunt v. State Bank, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 60; Redheimer v. Pyron, Spear's Eq. (S. Car.) 134. See also Jones v. Clark, 25 Gratt. (Va.) 656; Rutledge v. Smith, 1 Busb. Eq. (N. Car.) 283; Colt v. Lasnier, 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 342; Franklin Sav. Bank v. Taylor, 131 Ill. 376.

One purchasing at a sale made under a decree of court, is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. Coombs v. Jordan, 3 Bland (Md.) 284.

Where executors were authorized to sell to pay debts, "if in their opinion it should become necessary," a purchaser,

The courts have even held that under certain circumstances the one who deals with a trustee as purchaser or in a similar capacity, must supervise the trustee's subsequent disposal of the purchase-money and answer for its misapplication, whether he be a party to the wrong or not.¹

acting in good faith, is not bound to see that there was a necessity, or that the purchase-money is properly applied. Davis v. Christian, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 11.

The purchaser of land made in trust to secure a debt, is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money. Gardner v. Armstrong, 31 Mo. 535. And see Conover v. Stothoff, 38 N. J. Eq. 55.

The purchaser of land is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money, where the will directs a sale and investment of the proceeds in protective property. Keister v. Scott, 61 Md. 507.

A bona fide purchaser is not bound to see to the application of the purchase-money of land directed to be sold at private or public sale, and the proceeds held in trust. Nicholls v. Peak, 12 N. J. Eq. 69.

Where land was granted in trust to a wife for life with remainder to her husband, with a provision for resale and reinvestment, it was held that a purchaser was not bound to see to the due application of the proceeds. Lining v. Peyton, 2 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 375.

Where a testator directed his executors to sell land and retain the proceeds, the interest on which they were to pay annually to A during her life, and the principal after her death to her children, a bona fide purchaser from the executors, who had paid the purchase-money, was held not bound to see that it was applied to the purpose of the trust. Hauser v. Shaw, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 357.

A testator gave to his wife a life estate in the residue of his property. In another clause of his will, she was appointed executrix, "with full power to transfer any real estate that she may deem proper." It was held that her power to sell not being qualified, and the application of the purchase-money not having to be made until her death, the purchasers were under no obligation to see to its application. John v. Barnes, 21 W. Va. 498.

Under a devise of an estate charged with the payment of an annuity, with power in the devisee "to sell and convey any of my real property which may be to the interest of my estate," it was held that no duty devolved upon a purchaser to see to the application of the purchase-money to the payment of the annuity. [Hinton, J., dissenting.] Hughes v. Tabb, 78 Va. 313.

Where A bought county land on credit of the county commissioner, and in good faith, before the expiration of the credit, paid drafts drawn on him by the commissioner, it was held that he was not bound to see to the application of the money so paid. Jacks v. State, 44 Ark. 61.

Bank officers are not chargeable with knowledge that a depositor is committing fraud upon a trust estate. Nor are they bound to inquire, simply because a depositor draws upon a trust account payable to himself, and transfers funds from a trust account to his own private account; nor is the bank bound to see to the application of a loan properly made to such depositor upon the security of a trust estate, the declared purpose of the borrower being legal and proper, and there being nothing which should excite the suspicion of the bank officers in the matter. Goodwin v. American Bank, 48 Conn. 550.

A grantor conveyed to his wife for her use for life, a deed, providing that the property conveyed should be used by the grantor's children and by the grantee as a home, and divided among the children upon her death, with power in her "at any time in her discretion to sell and convey the said property by deed, provided the proceeds of such sale are invested in other real estate for the uses expressed." It was held that a bona fide purchaser from the wife would acquire a good title, and not be required to see to the application of the proceeds. Guill v. Northern, 67 Ga. 345.

1. Where property held in trust for a wife is sold, it is the duty of both the trustee and the purchaser to see that the fund is paid over to the trustee, and reinvested as directed by the terms of the trust; and if the purchaser contracts with the husband, and pays him the purchase-money, in violation of the provisions of the deed, and upon the written authority of the wife the trustee conveys to him the title, such sale or conveyance is a fraud upon the power, and a breach of trust, and upon application of the wife will be set aside. Cardwell v. Cheatham, 2 Head (Tenn.) 14. See also Colesbury v. Dart, 61 Ga. 625; Forbes v. Peacock, 12 Sim. 521; Lloyd v. Baldwin, 1 Ves. 173.

XVIII. WAIVER AND ESTOPPEL.—By waiver and estoppel the cestui que trust may forfeit his right to an enforcement of the trust in court. Long-continued acquiescence in the trustee's misconduct or questionable conduct,¹ where the cestui que trust has slept on his rights, open approval of such misconduct at the time,² or subsequent ratification thereof,³ may estop him in a court of equity from demanding relief against his trustee.

1. Hume v. Beale, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 336; Villines v. Norfleet, 2 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 167; Ames Iron Works v. West, 24 Fed. Rep. 313; Williams v. First Presbyterian Soc., 1 Ohio St. 478; Mulford v. Minch, 11 N. J. Eq. 16; 64 Am. Dec. 472; Follansbe v. Kilbreth, 17 Ill. 522; 65 Am. Dec. 691; Dublin's Case, 38 N. H. 459. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Buying at His Own Sale; see supra, this title, Statute of Limitations—Laches—Lapse of Time. Compare Gisborn v. Charter Oak L. Ins. Co., 142 U. S. 326.

It does not lie in the mouth of a cestui que trust, while competent to judge of his own interests, to complain of acts as breaches of trust, which were occasioned by his own neglect or misrepresentations. Vreeland v. Van Horn, 17 N. J. Eq. 137.

Acquiescence for a long time in an improper sale and purchase by a trustee, will disable the cestui que trust from coming into equity to set it aside. Mitchell v. Berry, 1 Metc. (Ky.) 602.

Where trust funds were fraudulently used by a trustee to purchase stock in a railroad company, and said company was afterward consolidated with another, and the new company issued and sold bonds, it was held that bona fide holders of said bonds had a better equity against the property of the railroad company than the beneficial owner of the trust funds, who, being aware of their misappropriation, suffered the trustee to retain possession of the stock, and acquiesced in and promoted the sale of the bonds. North Carolina R. Co. v. Drew, 3 Woods (U. S.) 691.

2. Crutchfield v. Haynes, 14 Ala. 49;

22 Ala. 83; Colbert v. Daniel, 32 Ala. 322; Martin v. Clark, 116 Ill. 654; Schenck v. Ellingwood, 3 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 175; Spencer v. Hawkins, 4 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 288; Waring v. Purcell, 1 Hill Eq. (S. Car.) 202; Booth v. Booth, 1 Beav. 126; Fyler v. Fyler, 3 Beav. 550; Griffiths v. Porter, 25 Beav. 236; White v. White, 5 Ves. 555; Brice v. Stokes, 11 Ves. 319; Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 336; Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64; Ryder v. Bickerton, 3 Swanst. 80, n; Mayer v. Gould, 1 Atk. 615; Smith v. French, 2 Atk. 243; Nail v. Punter, 5 Sim. 555; Fellows v. Mitchell, 1 P. Wms. 81; In re Chertsey Market, 6 Price 280; Byrchall v. Bradford, 6 Madd. 235.

Where the beneficiaries are empowered by an act to consent to, or withhold their consent from, a mortgage of their estate, they will be held by their consent to have concluded their own rights. Magraw v. Pennock, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 89.

The rule that one purchasing property of a trustee with notice of the trust shall be charged with the same trust as the trustee from whom he purchased, has no application where the trustee conveys to the beneficiaries themselves, with the consent of the creator of the trust and the owner of any equitable interest remaining after the trust. Storrs v. Flint, 46 N. Y. Super. Ct. 498.

It is the general rule that one purchasing land of a trustee with constructive or actual notice of a resulting trust therein, becomes a trustee; but where the purchase is made with the assent, and at the request of the beneficiaries, this rule does not apply. Page v. Page, 8 N. H. 187.

Where money in the hands of a trustee has been applied, with the consent of the beneficiaries, to the legitimate purposes for which it was designed, the holder cannot recover it from the trustees, although the use to which it was applied was an unlawful one. Verona v. Peckham, 66 Barb. (N. Y.) 103.

3. See Marberry v. Ehlen, 72 Md. 206; 20 Am. St. Rep. 467.

An offer of the cestui que trust to accept a settlement of the controversy, does not affect his right to assert the trust.¹

The cestui que trust's ratification of the trustee's unauthorized act, or his acquiescence therein, will operate as an estoppel only where he was aware of all the material facts of the transaction which in any way affect the ratification,² and only where he was sui juris.³

The general principles of the law of waiver and estoppel apply to the administration of trusts and control both beneficiary and trustee.⁴

But a trustee who has purchased at his own sale and relies upon the acquiescence of the cestui que trust to confirm his title under

Though a beneficiary may have confirmed her trustee's unlawful acts, he must show, in order to estop her from holding him liable, that she acted on full information, without false suggestion or reservation on his part, and that she was so aware of the law as to impeach the transaction in a court of equity. Luers v. Brunjes, 5 Redf. (N. Y.) 32.

A beneficiary agreeing in a judicial proceeding that a trustee, under a lost deed, had power to sell, cannot, after a sale, deny that the power existed. Jones v. Hudson, 23 S. Car. 494.

In Pope v. Farnsworth, 146 Mass. 339, the court, by Holmes, J., said: "There is no illegality in a cestui que trust authorizing an act which otherwise would be a breach of trust toward himself, or in his releasing, or agreeing to hold harmless, his trustee for such an act after it is done."

1. Mathis v. Stufflebeam, 94 Ill. 481.

2. See supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Accounting—Settlement and Release; Gilman, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill. 426; Cope v. Clarke, 18 W. R. 279; Buckeridge v. Glasse, Cr. & Ph. 135.

3. 2 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), §849.

4. See ESTOPPEL, vol. 7, p. 1; WAIVER; Davis v. Bowmar, 55 Miss. 671; Crocker v. Crocker, 31 N. Y. 507; 88 Am. Dec. 291; Butterfield v. Cowing, 112 N. Y. 486.

The acceptance of a deed from a trustee to his cestui que trust, reciting that all the personal assets of the trust estate had been previously transferred to the latter, and conveying to her the real estate, will estop the beneficiary from an action against the trustee for account. Miller v. Simonton, 5 S. Car. 20.

A party who insists that land was bought for him in the name of another, who loaned the money at usurious rates, must acquaint innocent purchasers with the knowledge of such facts, and if he has been ejected from the premises without setting up such facts in his defense, as a notice to others, and has abandoned the premises, declaring an intention to forego all claim thereto, he cannot have an equitable right to pursue subsequent purchasers and recover the land. Ferguson v. Talmadge, 20 Ill. 581; Talmadge v. Kirk, 20 Ill. 220.

Where there had been a change of trustees for the payment of debts, with the assent of the debtor, it was held that a bill by the debtor against the original trustee, for an account of the trust property, could not be sustained. Mitchell v. Lenox, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 428.

Where property, conveyed to a trustee for the security of the surety of the grantor, is sold by the trustee, and the proceeds applied to the purposes of the trust, with the consent of the grantor and the beneficiary, it will be presumed to have been rightly applied. Couch v. Couch, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 160.

If in the answer to a bill to enforce a trust, there are admissions from which the court can execute the trust, so that complainants are not under the necessity of resorting to parol proof of the trust, such admissions will exclude the defendants from the benefit of the statute, unless insisted on in the answer. Dean v. Dean, 9 N. J. Eq. 425.

A trustee appointed to sell property under a decree in chancery, and to dispose of the proceeds in accordance with any future decree, and who gives bond accordingly, cannot, in a suit against him upon the bond, for not obeying such decree of disposition, question the corthe purchase, is charged with the burden of proving such notice to the cestui que trust as amounts to distinct information and acquiescence after the communication of such information.¹

If, while assuming to act as trustee, he misapplies the trust moneys, he will not be heard to claim that he was not legally a trustee.²

XIX. PROCEDURE—1. In General.—The subject of procedure, as affecting the execution of trusts, has been touched upon and, to some extent, covered in the earlier volumes of this work under titles treating of equity, equity pleading, and kindred subjects.³ There is no distinctive practice peculiar to the administration of trusts,⁴ and the general rules governing chancery practice and pleading, apply to the procedure in matters of this nature. This department of equitable jurisprudence is intimately related to many of the other branches of that great system of the law, such as fraud, marshalling assets, the establishment of equitable liens, specific performance, injunction, accounts, and receivership.

2. Jurisdiction.—The enforcement of trusts and of many of the rights incident thereto is, of necessity, altogether within the jurisdiction of courts of equity; indeed, it is difficult to conceive of a case directly involving the administration of a trust of which a court of common law could properly take cognizance. The execution and enforcement of trusts and trust obligations, the adjustment of disputed rights under them, the investigation and settlement of accounts between parties in confidential relations, the establishing of the existence of a fiduciary relationship, are questions which fall naturally within the primary and exclusive jurisdiction of the chancery courts.⁵ rectness of either decree. Richardson v. State, 2 Gill (Md.) 439.

A testamentary trustee is estopped to refuse to account to his beneficiary, on the ground that the will made him an executor also, when he has taken possession of the real estate as well as the personalty, and failed to render an account as executor. Wooden v. Kerr, 91 Mich. 188.

A trustee who has appeared in a legal proceeding and gone into the investigation on the merits, will not be heard thereafter to object that an action and not a petition is the proper remedy for the beneficiary to compel the payment of the amount of the improper investment. Matter of Foster's Will, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 387.

1. Miles v. Wheeler, 43 Ill. 123.

2. 2 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 846; Rackham v. Suddall, 16 Sim. 297; Pearce v. Pearce, 22 Beav. 248; Hope v. Liddell, 21 Beav. 183; Hennessey v. Bray, 33 Beav. 96; Derbishire v. Home,

3 De G. M. & G. 80; Life Assoc., etc., v. Siddall, 3 De G. F. & J. 58.

3. See EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 715; EQUITY PLEADINGS, vol. 6, p. 724.

4. See Matter of Foster's Will, 15 Hun (N. Y.) 387.

5. U. S. v. Gillespie, 9 Fed. Rep. 74; Haverstick v. Trudel, 51 Cal. 431; Aguisola v. Arnaz, 51 Cal. 438; Norton v. Hixon, 25 Ill. 371; 79 Am. Dec. 338; Maryland Fire Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 242; 89 Am. Dec. 779; Dorsey v. Garey, 30 Md. 489; McCartney v. Bostwick, 32 N. Y. 53. See also Cooper v. McClun, 16 Ill. 435; Hopkins v. Granger, 52 Ill. 502; Whitman v. Fisher, 74 Ill. 147; Davis v. Hamlin, 108 Ill. 39; 48 Am. Dec. 541; Weaver v. Fisher, 110 Ill. 146; Reese v. Wallace, 113 Ill. 589; Sturgeon v. Burrall, 1 Ill. App. 537; Stokes v. Frazier, 72 Ill. 428.

B bought with the money of A a parcel of land, and took a deed to it in his own name. He then made a declaration of trust, setting forth that he held the land for A's benefit, although he afterward conveyed it without A's knowledge to A's wife. It was held that A could not maintain an action of law against B for a breach of the trust, but must seek relief in equity. Norton v. Ray, 139 Mass. 230.

The plaintiff deeded his farm to the defendant to secure a debt, the defendant to hold the farm until the debt was paid. In an action to recover the value of the property and its products, the plaintiff charged in his bill that the trustee had wrongfully sold the property, and the produce grown upon it. It was held that inasmuch as the complaint charged the defendant as trustee, the plaintiff could not be heard to say that the trust was never open, nor that active trust relationship never existed. His remedy was in equity and not at law. Jasper v. Hazen, 1 N. Dak. 75.

Trusts are within the jurisdiction of the courts of equity, and the remedies connected with trusts are so closely identified with equitable procedure and practice, that no departure from the practice pursued in those courts can be permitted, unless authorized by statute, or by some special rule of court. Ledyard's Appeal, 51 Mich. 623.

Whether a trustee has an equitable right to convey, is a question purely of equitable jurisdiction, and one which a court of law cannot entertain. Canoy v. Troutman, 7 Ired. (N. Car.) 155.

Property, the title of which has been made fraudulently to another by the real purchaser, in secret trust for himself, cannot, at law, be subjected to the purchaser's debts, but must be pursued in a court of equity. Morris v. Rippey, 4 Jones (N. Car.) 533. See also Wallace v. Smith, 2 Handy (Ohio) 78.

A court of law will not notice a resulting trust. Thompson v. Peake, 7 Rich. (S. Car.) 353.

A cestui que trust cannot maintain an action at law against a trustee, while the trust is still open; his only remedy is by a bill in equity. Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377.

A court of equity would maintain the cestui que trust in the possession and use of the property against the trustee's claim, but the court of law, regarding only the legal title, could not enforce this right. Presley v. Stribling, 24 Miss. 527.

Trusts do not come within the jurisdiction of a court of law, and the judgment against a trust, in a suit against the administrator by the next of kin, does not act as a bar to a suit in the court of equity. Blue v. Patterson, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 457.

Where an administrator or executor refuses to call on the trustee of an estate, the beneficial interest in which is alleged to be in his testator or intestate, equity alone supplies a remedy for the default. Green v. Collins, 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 139.

Where a trust results to the debtor in the surplus of chattels assigned for the payment of debts, it can be reached only in equity. McDermutt v. Strong, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 687.

Where an executor, administrator, or trustee purchases the estate which he himself sells, the purchase cannot be avoided at law, except for actual fraud; the remedy is found in equity. Yeackel v. Litchfield, 13 Allen (Mass.) 417; 90 Am. Dec. 207.

There is no adequate remedy against a board of trustees for violating a trust by quo warranto brought by a private individual. That tries the right only, and gives no sufficient relief for such breach. The remedy lies only in a court of chancery. Dart v. Houston, 22 Ga. 506.

In Mississippi, if the testamentary trusts are such as to require equitable interference, the fact that they are created by will is no bar to the jurisdiction of equity. The fact that the probate court cannot give full relief in case of such trust, gives jurisdiction to the court of equity. Wade v. American Colonization Soc., 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 663; 45 Am. Dec. 324.

A trustee, as such, is, in general, to be sued only in equity. But, choosing to bind himself by a personal covenant, he is liable at law for a breach of such covenant, just as any other person would be, even though he adds "as trustee" to his signature. Duvall v. Craig, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 45.

The beneficiary who seeks to hold the trustee for negligence, must sue in equity, not at law. Hukill v. Page, 6 Biss. (U. S.) 183.

A court of equity will take jurisdiction, where a bank has sued its cashier for misappropriation of money in violation of his duty. The relation of the cestui que trust and trustee existing between them is sufficient to give jurisdiction. Merchants' Bank v. Jeffrey, 21 W. Va. 504. But compare Appeal of McMullen, 130 Pa. St. 370, to the contrary.

It is peculiarly the province of the chancery court to give relief where a trustee, for the benefit of creditors, commits an error, or acts in bad faith in the administration of trusts. Goncelier v. Foret, 4 Minn. 13.

The courts of chancery of Ohio are vested with jurisdiction of testamentary trusts for the benefit of the poor. Landis v. Wooden, 1 Ohio St. 160.

A court of equity has the same jurisdiction over security trusts, that it ordinarily possesses and exercises over other trust estates. Van Houten v. McKelway, 17 N. J. Eq. 126.

Equity has jurisdiction in cases of breach of trusts of an official character. Norton v. Hixon, 25 Ill. 371; 79 Am. Dec. 338.

Equity has an inherent jurisdiction over trusts for charitable purposes, such as building churches. Hopkins v. Upshur, 20 Tex. 89; 70 Am. Dec. 375.

Questions involving the administration of trusts, are matters of original and special equity jurisdiction; thus, in Congdon v. Cahoon, 48 Vt. 49, where the deeds of trust created, made the defendants trustees of expressed trusts in favor of several persons, and imposed special duties upon them in relation to the trust property, and provided that, in a certain event, it should go on in equal shares to all the beneficiaries, it was held that one of the beneficiaries could not, upon the happening of the event, maintain an action in assumpsit, against the trustees for her share, but that she must seek relief in chancery, for there the rights of law could be ascertained and settled.

The supreme court has jurisdiction over implied as well as over expressed trusts, in cases where the courts of law afford no adequate remedy. Wright v. Dame, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 55.

A suit against a bank for improper disposition of a special deposit, which had been made by the plaintiff's agent, is to charge the defendant with a breach of trust, and therefore is of equitable cognizance. Manhattan Bank v. Walker, 130 U. S. 257.

A devised estate charged with payments of the debts of the testator, is a trust fund, and may be reached in equity. Rochester v. Buford, 5 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 32.

Where a trust is clearly defined, and there exists a trustee capable of holding the property and executing the trust, equity has jurisdiction by its inherent authority. McIntire Poor School v. Zanesville, etc., Canal Co., 9 Ohio 203.

Where the legal title to property is vested in a naked trustee, the matter, as between the trustee and the cestui que trust, is peculiarly within the province of the court of chancery. Brown v. Wright, 4 Yerg. (Tenn.) 57.

The enforcement of a specific execution of a trust, declared by parol in relation to real property, if plain and unambiguous in its terms, and established by satisfactory evidence, comes within the jurisdiction of the court of equity. Haywood v. Ensley, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 460.

Equity always has jurisdiction to enforce a trust, and for this purpose may appeal to the conscience of the trustee, and the ability to establish a trust by other evidence, does not impair the jurisdiction of the court to enforce it. Coates v. Woodworth, 15 Ill. 654.

The jurisdiction of a court of chancery over a trust, to enforce it, and prevent further abuse of it by removal of the delinquent trustee, is not to be doubted. Lasley v. Lasley, 1 Duv. (Ky.) 117.

It is peculiarly within the jurisdiction of a court of chancery to enforce trusts, upon the application of persons interested, and in general when it becomes necessary to appoint a trustee to prevent the failure of a trust, and to execute the same. Callis v. Ridout, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 1.

The jurisdiction of chancery over trusts can be taken away, only by showing a complete execution of the trust. Jordan v. Jordan, 2 L. Repos. (N. Car.) 292.

The Georgia Code, § 1970, provides that upon the rendition of a judgment upon a mortgage note, the grantee may record a deed of the land to the defendant, and then the land may be sold to satisfy such judgment, which shall have priority over all other judgments against the defendants.

It was held in Thomas v. American Freehold Land, etc., Co., 47 Fed. Rep. 550, that such a proceeding must be brought in equity, and not in a federal court of law. Following New England Mortgage Security Co. v. Gay, 33 Fed. Rep. 636, and Alexander v. Scotland Mortgage Co., 47 Fed. Rep. 131.

Upon the death of a testamentary trustee, his successor in the trust cannot hold the decedent's administrator liable in an action at law, but must call him to account for the trust fund in a court

The disposition of trust funds is within the jurisdiction of equity,¹ as well as the prevention of a diversion of the trust fund.²

The remedy for a breach of trust in the application of moneys is by a bill in equity, and not by an action at law for the recovery of the money.³

The rule which limits the jurisdiction of courts of equity to cases where there is no adequate remedy at law, does not, speaking generally, apply to the case of a trust, as there equity has a natural and primary jurisdiction, superadded to any legal rights that the suitor may have, and concurrent with them.⁴ This of equity. Curtis v. Smith, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 537.

During his lifetime, the testator gave his note to the complainant, with the understanding that the testator's wife would pay it out of her inheritance from him. It was held that the enforcement of this trust was by an equitable proceeding, rather than by an action at law. Buckingham v. Clark, 61 Conn. 204.

Where debts are, by will, made a charge on real estate, equity will assume jurisdiction, on the ground of trust, without prior action by the probate court, trust being an original ground of equity jurisdiction. Harris v. Douglas, 64 Ill. 466.

Corporate assets being a trust fund, the forum for its enforcement is a court of equity, and this is especially true where they constitute a joint trust after paying all its creditors. Foster v. Mullanphy Planing Mill Co., 92 Mo. 79.

Where a trustee has received funds belonging to a testamentary trust, the jurisdiction to order an accounting is in a court of chancery, and not in a probate court. McBride v. McIntyre, 91 Mich. 406.

When, after the dedication of land as a public park, the owner, in violation of the trust, attempts to reclaim it, mortgaging it and otherwise asserting ownership, the remedy of the municipality, and persons who have purchased lots in faith of the dedication, is in equity. Maywood Co. v. Maywood, 17 Ill. App. 253; 118 Ill. 61.

1. Pacific R. Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 277; John Crossley Sons v. New Orleans, 20 Fed. Rep. 352; Stokes v. Frazier, 72 Ill. 428; Ryder v. Sisson, 7 R. I. 341.

A court of equity has jurisdiction in matters of account; first, where there is a fiduciary relation between the parties; second, where the account is so complicated that it cannot be conveniently taken in an action of law. Pacific R. Co. v. Atlantic, etc., R. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 277, citing Fowle v. Lawrason, 5 Pet. (U. S.) 495; Mitchell v. Great Works Milling, etc. Co., 2 Story (U. S.) 648; Badger v. McNamara, 123 Mass. 117; O'Conner v. Spaight, 1 Sch. & Lef. 305.

2. Aurora v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 19 Ill. App. 360; 119 Ill. 246.

3. Bureau County v. Thompson, 39 Ill. 566.

4. McC Campbell v. Brown, 48 Fed. Rep. 795; Coates v. Woodworth, 13 Ill. 654; Brunnenmeyer v. Buhre, 32 Ill. 183; Howell v. Moores, 127 Ill. 67; Hubbard v. U. S. Mortgage Co., 14 Ill. App. 40; First Congregational Soc. v. Trustees, etc., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 148; Henderson v. Hoke, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 138; Hall v. Harris, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 289.

Thus, under the Kentucky Act requiring trustees to give bond, and authorizing suit thereon for any breach of duty, the party aggrieved is not limited to his remedy upon the bond, but may sue in equity for an accounting. Laurel County Ct. v. Laurel County Seminary (Ky. 1892), 20 S. W. Rep. 258.

It is no bar to a bill in equity to enforce a trust, that an action at law, for money had and received, might be sustained. McCrea v. Purmort, 16 Wend. (N. Y.) 460; 30 Am. Dec. 103; New York Ins. Co. v. Roulet, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 505.

The enforcement of a pure trust comes within the original equity jurisdiction, and does not depend upon a condition that the beneficiary has exhausted his remedy by judgment, and execution returned unsatisfied against his debtor. Sweeny v. Sheridan, 37 N. Y. Super. Ct. 587.

A testamentary trustee may maintain a bill in equity for the possession of lands devised to him for the use of rule may be subject to modification where the statute confers equity jurisdiction only where the remedy at law is not plain, adequate, and complete.¹

Equity will assume no authority where it appears that the trust is being properly administered.²

Occasionally a right may spring out of a trust relationship, of which, at the most, the trust itself is but an incident and not an essential feature, as where the controversy is over a simple legal demand and the parties to it happen to occupy a fiduciary position toward one another. The mere fact that the property involved is trust property, or that one of the disputants is a trustee or a beneficiary in some trust which is not actually in question in the controversy, will not oust the common-law courts of their proper power of adjudication.³

It is not necessarily a ground of equitable jurisdiction that a confidence has been reposed. Thus, the giving of credit on this those entitled to the beneficial interest in them, although he might have brought ejectment at law. Harrison v. Rowan, 4 Wash. (U. S.) 202.

1. Maury v. Mason, 8 Port. (Ala.) 217; Kimball v. Moody, 27 Ala. 130.

The Massachusetts rule limits the equitable jurisdiction to cases where the parties cannot have a plain, adequate, and complete remedy at common law. Wright v. Dame, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 55; Frue v. Loring, 120 Mass. 507.

In Taylor v. Turner, 87 Ill. 296, it was held that there was no equitable jurisdiction in a case of bailment to a factor in trust to sell, upon his refusal to pay over the proceeds to the person entitled, as upon the ground of trust, the legal remedy being ample.

When a trustee, in two characters, has the means of committing fraud as trustee and purchaser both, a court of equity will interfere, and not compel the party to wait until the mischief is done. But where there is an adequate remedy at law, courts of equity will not interpose. Powles v. Dilley, 9 Gill (Md.) 222.

2. Myers v. School Trustees, 21 Ill. App. 223.

3. If the trustee chooses to bind himself by a personal covenant, he is liable at law for a breach thereof, even though he described himself in the covenant as trustee. Duvall v. Craig, 2 Wheat. (U. S.) 45. See generally, Hall v. Bryan, 50 Md. 194; Frue v. Loring, 120 Mass. 507.

The mere circumstance that a trust is created on certain property, does not give a court of chancery jurisdiction to settle disputes arising with regard to the title. Colburn v. Broughton, 9 Ala. 351.

A trustee is not allowed to come into chancery to collect purely legal demands, when a remedy at law is adequate, specific, and perfect. Kimball v. Moody, 27 Ala. 130.

For injury done to trust property by a stranger, the trustee's remedy is at law, and not in equity. Meridith v. Hickman, 1 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 242.

Where property conveyed in trust is seized and sold on execution, at the instance of a party not claiming under the trust, a bill in equity will not lie by the trustees or beneficiary against the purchasers, to recover the property; their remedy is at law. Sheppards v. Turpin, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 373; Marriott v. Givens, 8 Ala. 694; Bissell v. Lindsay, 9 Ala. 162.

If a trustee who has power to sell, but not to mortgage, mortgages the trust estate, the remedy of any one who claims, either in his own right or as trustee, under the beneficiary, is at law, and not in equity. Peabody v. Harvard College, 10 Gray (Mass.) 283.

Accounts.—In Frue v. Loring, 120 Mass. 507, the court, by Colt, J., said, in denial of the equitable jurisdiction: "Nor can this bill be maintained under the jurisdiction given to this court in suits upon accounts, when the nature of the account is such that it can not be conveniently and properly adjusted and settled in an action at law. It is not shown by sufficient distinct allegations that there is any particular theory will not become the basis of equitable jurisdiction;¹ nor will equity assume jurisdiction where one merely holds money which of right belongs to another, and there is no duty except to pay it over.² The nature and extent of the trust cannot be inquired into collaterally in an action at law,³ nor can the acts of a trustee de facto be questioned collaterally.⁴

It is a familiar rule of equity that jurisdiction once acquired is retained by the court until entire justice may be done to all parties. So the stricter rules of law are not recognized where they would tend to limit the jurisdiction inequitably. And rights apparently unconnected and foreign are oftentimes adjusted by the chancellor, if his assumption of jurisdiction in this fashion will prevent a multiplicity of suits and in the end facilitate justice.⁵

difficulty in ascertaining the true state of the account between the parties.

It is said that courts of equity will decline to take jurisdiction under this head where the accounts are all on one side; or where there is a single matter on the side of the plaintiff and mere set-offs on the other side, and no discovery is sought." Citing Locke v. Bennett, 7 Cush. (Mass.) 449.

A party who, in ignorance of the trust, furnishes goods to a trustee to carry on a trust business, which is improved thereby, may, under Georgia Code, 3377, recover his debt out of the trust estate in an action at law. Moore v. Lampkin, 63 Ga. 748.

The mere fact that one loaning money takes a note payable to a feme covert, in trust for himself, will not invest a court of equity with the jurisdiction of a suit by his executor against the debtor and the husband and wife, there being no allegation in the bill that husband or wife interpose any impediments to a recovery at law by suit in their name. Rowland v. Logan, 11 Ala. 663.

An action for money had and received, lies by a beneficiary against his trustee, where the money should be paid over on demand. Derome v. Vose, 140 Mass. 575.

The interposition of a court of equity is not necessary, where a trust fund has been misapplied. The beneficiary may follow it at law as far as he can trace it. U. S. v. State Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 30.

Where the president of a bank has misappropriated the funds of the bank, he is not a trustee in the sense that a court of equity will have jurisdiction over a suit against him for the misappropriation of the funds. Warner v. McMullin, 131 Pa. St. 370.

But in Merchants' Bank v. Jeffries, 21 W. Va. 504, it was held that in a suit by a bank against its cashier for a wrongful use of its funds, equity had jurisdiction growing out of the relation between the cashier and the plaintiff bank.

An action at law will lie for the recovery of money held under a parol trust, when the trust has been performed so far that nothing remains to be done by the trustee but to distribute the money. Chase v. Perley, 148 Mass. 289.

The jurisdiction of equity, as to trusts, ought to be confined to cases of controlling legal rights, vested and remaining in trustees, created as such in some proper mode, and should not be extended to all cases of abused confidence. Ashley v. Denton, 1 Litt. (Ky.) 86.

A bill for relief cannot be brought in equity against an agent, under the head of a trust, where the agency is wholly closed, and no duty remains to be done by the agent. Baker v. Biddle, Baldw. (U. S.) 394.

Where the trust is completely executed, and the balance remaining in the trustee's hands is a sum certain, an action will lie at law against him for money had and received. McLaughlin v. Swann, 18 How. (U. S.) 217.

1. Steele v. Clark, 77 Ill. 471.

2. Hindman v. Aledo, 6 Ill. App. 436.

So held in Douglass v. Martin, 103 Ill. 25, where the trust sought to be enforced arose out of the deposit of money to be paid over to an attorney, upon condition that he procure the discharge of a third person from arrest; otherwise to be returned to the depositor. The remedy is at law.

3. Hall v. Bryan, 50 Md. 194.

4. Hodgdon v. Shannon, 44 N. H. 572.

5. Norris v. Hassler, 22 Fed. Rep. 401.

As a rule, courts of equity have no extra-territorial jurisdiction, that is to say, they will not assume jurisdiction where all the parties, as well as the trust property, are beyond the limits of the state.¹ But after the court has first acquired jurisdiction of a

And see Duncan v. Grafflin, 26 N. J. Eq. 228.

A court of chancery may adjust in a single suit the rights of all the parties who complain of violation of trusts growing out of the same transaction, when an inquiry into one involves an investigation of the others. Cleghorn v. Love, 24 Ga. 590.

Trusts between the same parties were created by three different instruments, by the first and second of which the trustee was to receive the rents and profits of the real estate and the personal property, and by the last the trustee was to supply to the cestui que trust necessary board and maintenance. It was held that these instruments contained only one transaction, and could not well be effectually closed up by separate suits, one in reference to the real and another to the personal estate; and as a single action for this purpose would lie if both the parties were alive, there was no good reason why it should not be brought in the names of the personal representatives and heirs-at-law of the beneficiary against the trustee's representatives; that is, his widow and heirs-at-law. Nor is it a valid objection to this mode of proceeding that it asks a conveyance of the real estate acquired by the trustee to the parties entitled thereto; this being only a result which follows an accounting for the profits and rents of the real estate, and not an independent cause of action. Richtmyer v. Richtmyer, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 55.

A trustee to whom a debtor's property has been conveyed in trust for the payment of all debts, not specifying them, cannot as a rule bring suit against a particular judgment creditor, who holds a lien on part of the land, to ascertain whether this particular judgment has been paid in whole or in part. In order to avoid multiplicity of suits, however, he may in a proper case proceed as by a creditor's bill to ascertain all liens, etc. Ambler v. Leach, 15 W. Va. 677.

1. Lines v. Lines, 142 Pa. St. 149; 24 Am. St. Rep. 487.

In McCullough v. McCullough, 44 N. J. Eq. 313, the trustees resided in Minnesota, but were appointed in New Jersey and required to account in New Jersey. The cestuis que trustent resided respectively in New Jersey and in states distant from Minnesota. Proceedings were instituted by the trustees asking instructions as to investments. The court, by McGill, Chancellor, said: "The courts of a state, within which a trustee must account, should hesitate to sanction an investment upon the security of lands that are not within their own jurisdiction, not merely because in such case they will be left without proper facilities to obtain accurate and satisfactory information concerning the investment, but also because they will lose direct control of the fund itself. Where the trustee is without the jurisdiction, it becomes more important that the fund should be within it, for otherwise the courts may find themselves stripped, not only of power to properly investigate the condition of the trust, but also of power to enforce their decrees. . . . In the case under consideration, the trustees reside and have the trust funds in a state distant from the state of the courts to which they must account, and distant from the residences of their cestuis que trustent. The continuance of such a condition of affairs must be condemned. If it remains, the happening of circumstances may readily be imagined that may not only put the beneficiaries of the trust to great annoyance, disadvantage, and expense, but also render our courts powerless to do them material service." The courts will not direct nor approve an investment of trust funds out of the jurisdiction, unless such investment is plainly authorized by the instrument creating the trust, Gray v. Lynch, 8 Gill (Md.) 403; Amory v. Green, 13 Allen (Mass.) 413; Brown v. French, 125 Mass. 410; 28 Am. Rep. 254; Hogan v. DePeyster, 20 Barb. (N. Y.) 100; Rush's Estate, 12 Pa. St. 375; Coltrane v. Worrell, 30 Gratt. (Va.) 434; Lamar v. Nicou, 112 U. S. 452; Stuart v. Stuart, 3 Beav. 430; Miles' Will, 27 Beav. 579; Bethell v. Abraham, L. R., 17 Eq. 24; or unless such investment is allowed by statute. Ex p. Paule, 1 Phil. 570; Brackenbury's Trust, 31 L. T. N. S. 79; Kirkpatrick's Trust, 15 Jur. 91; Ex p. French, 7 Sim.

part of the trust estate, it is entitled to administer the whole of it, even though a portion lies within the domain of another court.¹

If a suit has been prematurely brought, the court will not entertain jurisdiction, but will allow the bill to be dismissed without prejudice.²

3. Parties³—a. WHO MAY SUE.—Only those who have some substantial interest in the administration of the trust are entitled to bring suit to enforce it or to establish rights arising under it. To this end a stranger has no standing in a court of equity.⁴

510; Norris v. Wright, 14 Beav. 291. But compare Wilcox v. Morrison, 9 Lea (Tenn.) 699. In this case the settlor, the trustee, and the cestui que trust all resided in Virginia, in which state the real estate conveyed was also situated. A judgment in a Tennessee court was embraced in the trust, and when the rest of the trust fund had been disposed of, the settlor filed his bill in the Tennessee court of chancery, seeking to have the trust executed to the trustee's account. It was held that the Tennessee court had jurisdiction.

A bill in chancery may be entertained in Kentucky against one who is an administrator in another state, and has received "rents accruing since the death of the intestate." Where the heirs are infants and reside in Kentucky, he will be considered as trustee. Atchison v. Lindsey, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 86.

1. Owens v. Ohio Cent. R. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 10. In this case the court, by Jackson, J., said: "But one question remains unnoticed, and that is, can this court extend its jurisdiction over the defendant company's property beyond its geographical or territorial jurisdiction? This is a trust estate, and must be administered as an entirety for the protection of all concerned. It is well settled that the court that first takes jurisdiction of a part of a trust estate has the legal right to administer upon the whole. It follows that this court, having prior jurisdiction over that portion of the trust estate found in this circuit, by reason of the jurisdiction thus acquired has the right to administer upon that portion of the trust estate lying between the Ohio River and Corning, Ohio."

2. So held where, owing to a pending suit and other circumstances, the time was not ripe for the relations of the trustee to his beneficiaries to be passed upon, or for a settlement to be compelled. Albright v. Oyster, 22 Fed. Rep. 628.

In Nichols v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 146, where persons interested in a mine agreed in writing that one of them was to have the "sole, absolute, and untrammelled control" of their respective interests, with authority to distribute them from time to time, as he should deem best, provided he reserved some interest to the parties; and to spend the money contributed by those interested according to his best judgment, in order to serve their interests, a bill brought in equity within six months after the agreement, to compel the holder of the various shares to convey to the plaintiff the share he was entitled to, being held premature, was dismissed.

3. See a discussion of this branch of the subject in EQUITY PLEADINGS, vol. 6, pp. 750-751; PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 552.

4. Perry on Trusts, § 873; White v. Haynes, 33 Ind. 540; Tucker v. Palmer, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 47.

A stranger to a deed of trust cannot be heard to complain of informalities and irregularities in the execution of the powers conferred by it. Marston v. Rowe, 43 Ala. 271.

In a suit in the nature of a bill in equity to enforce a trust, it appeared that the plaintiff had no direct interest whatever in the enforcement of the trust, but that there was merely a possibility that in case of its enforcement, the plaintiff might become a beneficiary of the trust. It was held that this was not a sufficient interest on the part of the plaintiff to support the suit. Female Assoc. v. Beekman, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 565.

By the terms of a will it was provided that a trustee should hold certain property for the benefit of the children of complainants and of the wife of the trustee, until the death of the last survivor of complainants and the wife, at which time it should be divided equally among the said children or their rep-

The trustee, where he is willing to take the necessary step, is the only proper plaintiff in suits instituted for the protection or preservation of the trust property.¹ Such suits, if brought at the representatives. Complainants filed their bill against the trustee, alleging waste, mismanagement, and his insolvency, and praying an injunction and the appointment of a receiver. It was held that complainants had no interest in the property covered by the testator's will, and hence could not sue; also that, should the children for whose benefit the trust was created be made parties, the court should interfere to protect the trust property for their benefit. Hayles v. Farmer, 58 Ga. 324.

1. As to the power of the trustee to sue, see supra, this title, Powers, Duties, and Liabilities of the Trustee—Scope and Limitations. See also PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 552 et seq.

The trustee of an express trust may sue in his own name. Merchants' Bank v. McClelland, 9 Colo. 608; Clark v. Fosdick, 118 N. Y. 7; 16 Am. St. Rep. 733; Lake v. Albert, 37 Minn. 453; Wolcott v. Standley, 62 Ind. 198. See Hawes on Parties to Actions, § 32, and cases cited; Wetmore v. Hegeman, 88 N. Y. 69; Winters v. Rush, 34 Cal. 136; Harney v. Dutcher, 15 Mo. 89; 55 Am. Dec. 131; Pearce v. Twichell, 41 Miss. 344; Weaver v. Wabash, etc., Canal, 28 Ind. 112.

Who Is "Trustee of an Express Trust."

—A person with whom or in whose name a contract is made for the benefit of another, is a "trustee of an express trust." So held where ostensible partners sued without joining dormant partners in the action. Platt v. Iron Exch. Bank, 83 Wis. 358.

Citizens appointed at a town meeting to collect money subscribed for the use of the town, and who apply it to public purposes, are "trustees of an express trust," within the meaning of the Indiana statute, and may sue in their own names for such money. Dix v. Akers, 30 Ind. 431.

But one who contracts merely as the agent of another, and has no personal interest in the contract, is not the "trustee of an express trust" within the meaning of this statute, and cannot as such sue in his own name. Rawlings v. Fuller, 31 Ind. 255.

In Ryan v. Bibb, 46 Ala. 323, a husband who had received from his wife's guardian, funds belonging to the wife, and appropriated them to the purchase of real estate to be held by him in his own name, made a bona fide conveyance of this property to a trustee for his wife's use. It was held that the trustee's interest in the property was sufficient to enable him to maintain trover for its conversion.

Trustees appointed under a law of another state to take charge of the assets, collect the debts, etc., of a dissolved corporation, are allowed to bring suit against its debtors in Louisiana. Planters' Bank v. Bass, 2 La. Ann. 430.

A trustee appointed by the orphans' court, in place of a deceased trustee, may maintain an action for money had and received by a third person for the benefit of the trust estate, though the money was received before his appointment. Budd v. Hiler, 27 N. J. L. 43.

The charter of the Planters' Bank at Natchez created the commissioners of the sinking fund trustees of the fund, and empowered them to loan the same on interest, and to maintain suits for the recovery of the same; but it was held that in such actions, they must allege that they are sinking-fund commissioners, and that they are incumbents of the office, and entitled by law to act as such commissioners. Sinking Fund Commissioners v. Walker, 6 How. (Miss.) 143.

While a trustee, who has wrongfully mortgaged trust property, is liable to the cestui que trust for the loss sustained thereby, even though in the honest belief that he was acting for the best, yet he has such a pecuniary interest as will authorize him to bring a suit to restrain a statutory foreclosure of the mortgage. Brown v. Cherry, 56 Barb. (N. Y.) 635; 38 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 352; 38 Am. Dec. 433.

In a suit by the trustee of an express trust, it is not necessary that the name of the beneficiary should appear in the caption. Phillips v. Ward, 51 Mo. 295.

A trustee may maintain an action of assumpsit for money had and received for rent of the beneficiary collected and in the hands of his agent. Beardslee v. Horton, 3 Mich. 560.

Trustees holding deeds for cestuis que trustent are vested with such an interest as will enable them to enforce the agreement on which the deed was instance of the beneficiary, are, nevertheless, brought in the name of the trustee, and in most cases with his consent, or in conjunction with him.¹

A bill brought by the cestui que trust in his own name is not founded. Moale v. Buchanan, 11 Gill & J. (Md.) 314.

A trustee, in a trust deed made in another state, may follow the trust property to Texas and enforce the trust by suit without making the beneficiaries parties. Givens v. Davenport, 8 Tex. 451.

At law, a trustee is, for all purposes, vested with a fee simple, and may bring suit for an injury to the estate without reference to the interest of the cestui que trust. Mordecai v. Parker, 3 Dev. (N. Car.) 425.

Trustees may maintain detinue for trust estates. Baker v. Washington, 5 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 142.

Whether a survivor of several trustees can or cannot execute alone all the duties and powers of the trust, he may yet maintain a suit in his name. Richeson v. Ryan, 15 Ill. 13.

Where promissory notes are made payable to A and B, trustees by appointment of the court, or to their successors in trust, a successor in the trust is not able to maintain an action on the notes in his own name, but must sue in the name of A and B. Ingersoll v. Cooper, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 426.

Where a husband had incumbered his real estate by an ante-nuptial decree, his widow, who was administratrix of his estate, was held to possess such an interest in the land so incumbered as to entitle her to institute proceedings in a court of equity to restrain the administrator of the deceased trustee from intermeddling with it or with the trusts connected with it. Ready v. Hamm, 46 Miss. 422.

In Paget v. Pease, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 290, it was held (Macomber, J., dissenting) that a trustee who held the legal title to the reversionary interest, was the proper plaintiff in an action for its protection, and certainly a necessary party to the proceeding in the absence of a special showing to the contrary.

Where a debtor conveys personal property to a trustee to secure to the creditor the payment of a debt, and a person gets possession of the property and applies it to his own use, the beneficiary can maintain no action at law in his own name against the parties so converting it; the trustee must bring the action. Poage v. Bell, 8 Leigh (Va.) 604.

Trustees for the payment of legacies and debts may sustain a suit, either as plaintiffs or defendants, without bringing before the court the creditors or legatees for whom they are trustees, and the decision of the court, when fairly obtained, will bind the rights of the creditors and legatees against the trustees. Miles v. Davis, 19 Mo. 408.

A trustee entitled to the rents and profits of the trust property may sue therefor in his own name. Ponder v. McGruder, 42 Ga. 242.

A note to A and B, as trustees of a corporation, must be sued in their names as such, and not in the name of the corporation. Binney v. Plumley, 5 Vt. 500; 26 Am. Dec. 313.

One trustee may by an action call upon his co-trustee to account. Vose v. Galpen, 18 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 96; Bartlett v. Hatch, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 461.

1. A trustee may either bring suit in his own name or in conjunction with his cestui que trust. Harris v. McBane, 66 N. Car. 334.

A trustee and a cestui que trust may unite in a bill for the recovery of the trust estate. Jennings v. Davis, 5 Dana (Ky.) 127.

It is unnecessary, in order to enable the cestui que trust to maintain a suit in the name of the trustee, that the trustee should expressly authorize the suit. Chambersberg Ins. Co. v. Smith, 11 Pa. St. 120.

Where an action is to be brought for funds deposited in a bank by a trustee against the personal representatives of the depositor, it may be carried on with the cestui que trust's consent and by the trustee appointed to succeed the depositor, though the beneficiary could have sued in her own name. Macy v. Williams, 55 Hun (N. Y.) 489.

A claim against an executor for the recovery of property left in trust by his testator can only be presented by the trustee and not by the cestuis que trust-ent or their guardian. Richardson v. Frederitze, 35 Mo. 266.

Where a township trustee loans money of the town and takes a note therefor, bad on demurrer because so brought, where it appears in the bill that the trustee has acquired an adverse interest and has been made a defendant.¹ Where there is more than one trustee, all should join.² But the failure of one to join in the suit will not deprive the others of their right of action.³ Where one of the trustees has committed a breach of trust, his co-trustees may sue to restore the property, without the cestuis que trustent being made parties to the suit.⁴

If the trustee be merely nominally in charge of the trust property, the general rule forbids his litigating matters in his own name relating to the trust without joining with him all who are beneficially interested. But this rule has its exceptions and modifications.⁵

Where the party named as trustee in the trust deed seeks to payable to himself, the town cannot bring an action on the note. Robins v. Dishon, 19 Ind. 204.

The trustee, as the holder of a legal title to the reversionary interest, is the proper party to bring an action to protect it, and, in the absence of special circumstances, it cannot be said that he is not a necessary party. Macomber, J., dissenting; Paget v. Pease, 23 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 290; 17 Civ. Pro. Rep. (N. Y.) 324.

Upon suit being instituted, under the Burnt Records Statute of Illinois, to establish title to real estate, the trustee may sue with the consent of the beneficiary without making him a party. Harding v. Fuller, 141 Ill. 308.

A cestui que trust may sue at law in the name of the trustee, whenever necessary for the protection of the trust property, and the trustee can neither release the right of action, nor dismiss the suit, although he may ask indemnity against costs. Somerville v. Johnson, 36 N. J. Eq. 211.

If the trustee refuses to bring suit in a proper case, the beneficiary may sue. Owens v. Ohio Cent. R. Co., 20 Fed. Rep. 10.

1. Webb v. Vermont, etc., R. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 793.

Generally, as to the trustee's power to sue, see Ryan v. Bibb, 46 Ala. 323; O'Neill v. Henderson, 15 Ark. 235; 60 Am. Dec. 568; Worthy v. Johnson, 10 Ga. 358; 54 Am. Dec. 393; Leach v. Thomas, 27 Ill. 457; Governor v. Woodworth, 63 Ill. 254; Kirkpatrick v. Clark, 132 Ill. 342; 22 Am. St. Rep. 531; Bardstown, etc., R. Co. v. Metcalfe, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 199; 81 Am. Dec. 541; Lahy v. Holland, 8 Gill (Md.) 445; 50 Am. Dec. 705; Harney v. Dutcher, 15 Mo. 89; 55 Am. Dec. 131; Corning v. Greene, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 33; Beach v. Beach, 14 Vt. 28; 39 Am. Dec. 204; Oatman v. Barney, 46 Vt. 594.

2. Perry on Trusts, § 885; Holland v. Baker, 3 Hare 68; Thatcher v. Candee, 4 Abb. App. Dec. (N. Y.) 387.

3. Where certain assets were assigned to trustees, and among them a note made by three persons, one of them being one of the trustees, it was held that the payment of the note could be enforced in equity at the suit of the other trustees. Faulkner v. Thompson, 14 Ark. 478.

The survivor of several co-trustees may maintain a suit alone, where the right of action survives, whether he can alone execute all the duties of the trust or not. Richeson v. Ryan, 15 Ill. 13.

4. Perry on Trusts, § 884; Wood v. Brown, 34 N. Y. 337; McGregor v. McGregor, 35 N. Y. 218.

5. Stillwell v. McNeely, 2 N. J. Eq. 305; Willink v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 4 N. J. Eq. 377; Malin v. Malin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 238.

Where a bill filed by trustees seeks the sale of land vested in them in trust, and they have not a present absolute power of disposition over their estate, according to the terms of the trust, their cestuis are necessary parties. Smith v. Gaines, 39 N. J. Eq. 545.

A cestui que trust, after reaching her majority, can maintain an action in her own name, for waste to her premises, without the legal title being conveyed to her, even though there is a provision in the trust deed that they shall be conveyed to her. Wyant v. Dieffenderfer, 2 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 334.

In Willink v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., recover the subject-matter thereof, he may do so in his individual capacity without describing himself in the bill as trustee.¹

And under the Missouri statute permitting the trustee of an express trust to bring suit in his own name, one who is made the payee of a note, as trustee for another, may sue upon the note in his own name after the cestui que trust has died, if no administrator has been appointed.²

Where the beneficiaries are so numerous that it would not be practicable to make them all parties to the proceeding, the trustee may sue in his own name without joining with him all the cestuis que trustent.³

Suits for the possession of real estate are properly brought by the party entitled to the possession, whether he be trustee or cestui que trust. Thus, the trustee holding the legal title to the land is the proper plaintiff to maintain trespass thereon.⁴ But the 4 N. J. Eq. 377, the court said: "The undeniable general rule in equity is, that a nominal trustee cannot bring a suit in his own name alone, but must associate with it the names of the persons having the beneficial interest. The cases cited on the argument fully establish this proposition, and it will be seen by the case of Stillwell v. McNeely, 2 N. J. Eq. 305, that the rule is recognized in this court; but it is there stated that the court will hold, as they certainly must, a discretionary power to dispense with that necessity, in cases of great inconvenience, or where unnecessary expense would be incurred. In Van Vechten v. Terry, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 197, on a bill for foreclosure, a nominal trustee was held to be a sufficient party defendant, because the real owners were two hundred and fifty. This was to avoid expense." And in this case the court, on the ground of convenience and expediency, held that the nominal trustee could sue alone on behalf of all parties in interest.

In Smith v. Gaines, 39 N. J. Eq. 545, the court, by Runyon, Chancellor, said: "The general rule as to parties in cases of trust is, that in suits respecting the trust property, brought either by or against the trustees, the cestuis que trustent are necessary parties. Many exceptions have been made to this rule, some for convenience, some for the reason that, by the terms of the trust, or from the nature of the suit, the trustees themselves represented the cestuis que trustent. On this latter ground, it has been laid down that where the only object of the suit is to transfer the trust property into the hands of the trustees, the cestuis que trustent need not be parties, but if the existence or enjoyment of it is affected by the prayer of the suit, then they should be. Even to the rule, in this restricted form, there are numerous exceptions. . . . Courts of equity exercise a large discretion in the matter, guided sometimes by slight circumstances, and taking care, on the one hand, that justice shall not be defeated through the impracticability of bringing in all persons interested in the issue, and, on the other hand, that the rights of individuals shall not be determined when they are neither heard nor represented. . . . It was held in Lloyd v. Smith, 13 Sim. 457, that where a bill seeks the sale of the real estate vested in trustees by devise, and they have not a present, absolute power of disposition over it, according to the terms of the trust, they do not fully represent the cestuis que trustent, and the latter are necessary parties. This doctrine governs the present case. The trustees have not a present power to sell either the life estate or the remainder, nor to consent to the sale thereof, and their prayer for such a sale is an attempt to override, or at least modify, the terms of their trust. In such an effort, of course, they do not represent the cestuis que trustent, and the latter are entitled to be heard on the question whether it shall succeed. They are, therefore, necessary parties."

1. Bromley v. Mitchell, 155 Mass. 509.

2. Beck v. Haas, 111 Mo. 264.

3. Bardstown, etc., R. Co. v. Metcalfe, 4 Metc. (Ky.) 199; 81 Am. Dec. 541. See also Van Vechten v. Terry, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 197; Willink v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 4 N. J. Eq. 397.

4. Hawes on Parties to Actions, §

cestui que trust, if entitled to the possession, may in his own name sue a stranger therefor,¹ or he may sue the trustee in ejectment.²

Suits to compel the proper execution of the trust may be instituted by the beneficiary,³ as the one most interested, or, in rare cases, by the settlor.⁴ It has been held that the settlor has no

32; Burns v. Sanderson, 13 Fla. 384; Cox v. Walker, 26 Me. 512; Siemers v. Schrader, 88 Mo. 23. But see Morrow v. Odom, 14 S. Car. 623.

A party who holds the legal title to property, coupled with a trust for his co-complainants, may confess the trust, and unite with the parties holding the equity in a bill for the recovery of the property. Marble v. Whaley, 33 Miss. 157.

A cestui que trust cannot bring an action of ejectment against his trustee, unless a surrender of the legal estate is fairly to be presumed; but the trustee can maintain the action against the beneficiary, whose only remedy in such case is by an injunction. Brown v. Combs, 29 N. J. L. 36.

Illinois Revised Statutes, ch. 30, § 3, provides that where the trustee holds under a deed "to the use, confidence, and trust" of another, the title shall be in the cestui que trust. In United Brethren Church v. First M. E. Church, 138 Ill. 608, the conveyance was to A, B and C, "trustees of the U. B. Church, . . . their successors in office and assigns," to have and to hold "to their successors and assigns forever." This was held to vest the title in the trustees individually and not in the church; and a suit in ejectment against a stranger should be brought in their names.

1. Hawes on Parties to Actions, § 32; Sedgwick & Wait on Trial of Title to Land, § 223; Howard v. Snelling, 28 Ga. 474; Glover v. Stamps, 73 Ga. 209; 54 Am. Rep. 870.

2. Where the cestuis que trustent are entitled as such to the possession of land, and are ousted of it, they may maintain ejectment to recover it. School Directors v. Dunkleberger, 6 Pa. St. 29.

A cestui que trust, after the purpose of the deed has been satisfied, may maintain ejectment on a demise in his own name, though the legal estate is still vested in the trustee. But it will be presumed that the trustee has surrendered his estate, if there has been a satisfaction of the purposes of the trust, or the beneficial occupation in the estate by his possessors leads to a supposition that a conveyance for the legal estate has been made to the parties beneficially interested in whom the trust is a plain one, and the court of equity will compel the trustees to make a conveyance. Doggett v. Hart, 5 Fla. 215; 58 Am. Dec. 464.

3. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary. See also PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 651; Cubberly v. Cubberly, 33 N. J. Eq. 82, 591.

Where a trustee violates his duty, any of the parties interested may call him to account in a court of equity. Tucker v. Palmer, 3 Brev. (S. Car.) 47.

Where property is conveyed, without consideration, in trust, the cestui que trust may maintain a bill to enforce the trust against the trustee who has accepted it. Fogg v. Middleton, Riley Eq. (S. Car.) 193; Baker v. Evans, 1 Winst. Eq. (N. Car.) 109; Chapman v. Wilbur, 4 Oregon 362.

4. One who claims to have deeded land in trust to be conveyed as a gift to a person named, and that his grantee deeded it to another, is a proper plaintiff to insist that his grantee execute the trust. Abbott v. Gregory, 39 Mich. 68.

If a grant is made for a limited and defined purpose, the grantor has such an interest as enables him to insist, in a court of equity, upon the execution of the trust as originally declared and accepted. Warren v. Lyons City, 22 Iowa 351.

Strong v. Doty, 32 Wis. 381, was a suit by one of the grantors in a trust deed to enforce an execution of the trust or forfeit the property. The facts were as follows: Complainant and others conveyed land to trustees and their successors in office forever, in trust, to erect thereon a church for the use of the members of the Methodist Church, according to the rules and discipline of the general conference, and, further, that they should at all times, forever afterwards, permit the ministers of that denomination to preach therein. The trustees built a church building and continued its use for purposes of worship for thirty years right to maintain a suit merely to obtain a construction of the trust deed,¹ that privilege being confined to the trustee and the cestui que trust. Where there are both immediate and remote beneficiaries, the latter may seek relief in equity, so long as they have an interest in the administration of the trust which the court's decree may affect.² But where their interest is so remote that it cannot be reached by the decree of the court, they cannot, it seems, be permitted to sue. Thus, a cestui que trust, with an interest in remainder or reversion, has no right to apply to a court of equity for an order affecting only the present income of the trust estate; for to this fund the life tenant alone would be entitled.³

In the event of the death of the beneficiary, the trust may be enforced at the suit of his heirs at law, if it concerns real property, or of his personal representative, if the trust relates to personalty.⁴

An action for an accounting or a settlement is properly brought by any beneficiary in interest, and such beneficiary may sue on his own behalf or on behalf of all the cestuis que trustent.⁵

It is not necessary that all the cestuis que trustent join in the suit where their number is so great that it would be impracticable for and then abandoned it, selling the lot and building to parties who converted it into a blacksmith shop. It was held that the title did not revert, and that although equity, at suit of the parties interested, might compel a due execution of the trust, the complainant, who was not shown to be a member of the M. E. Church, or to have any more interest than the general public in the execution of the trust, could not maintain an action for that purpose, on the ground that he was one of the original grantors.

1. Levy v. Hart, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 248.

2. Clarke v. Deveau, 1 S. Car. 172.

3. One who has no present title to the beneficial estate cannot sue to compel a trustee to convey his legal title, provided the legal title when so conveyed will inure to another, who is the present beneficial owner. Widdicombe v. Childers, 84 Mo. 382.

4. Ware v. Galveston City Co., 111 U. S. 170; Seymour v. Freer, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 202.

5. A cestui que trust, after the death of the party who declared the trust, may bring a suit in his own name against the trustee, if the latter refuses to pay over. Tritt v. Crotzer, 13 Pa. St. 451.

Where profits and interests come into the hands of a trustee, and are not accounted for at the cestui que trust's death, who has a life interest in the trust fund, the cestui que trust's administrator is entitled to an account. Brown v. Ricks, 30 Ga. 777.

A cestui que trust arrived of age may bring suit for his share of the fund, without joining minors entitled to similar shares. Hitchcock v. Linsly, 17 Hun (N. Y.) 556.

A bill filed by a part of the cestuis que trustent, to recover the trust estate from one tortiously holding it, and to get a trustee appointed to execute the trust, should not be dismissed for want of equity. Howard v. Gilbert, 39 Ala. 726.

In a suit for the removal of a trustee, under Minnesota Comp. Stat. 384, § 26, all the persons interested in the trust are not compelled to join in the action. Goncelier v. Foret, 4 Minn. 13.

In a suit by one of three beneficiaries against the trustee, calling for an accounting and the payment of his third interest, the entire fund may not be distributed. Zimmerman v. Frailey, 70 Md. 561.

One who has no actual present title to a beneficial estate, cannot sue to compel a conveyance from the trustee of the legal estate; while in a case where each beneficiary is entitled to the aliquot part of an ascertained and definite trust fund, each may sue for his part without making the other beneficiaries parties. Hubbard v. Burrell, 41 Wis. 365.

The rule is otherwise where the amount of the trust fund itself must be all to appear. A few may sue for all,¹ or a portion of the parties in interest may be sued as representatives of all.² Any substantial beneficial interest will entitle the possessor to sue in his own name to compel the administration of the trust.³

b. WHO ARE NECESSARY PARTIES AND WHO ARE NOT.—To all suits and actions involving the administration of trusts, trustee and beneficiary are necessary parties.⁴ If there are two or more trustees, all must be joined, if all are to be bound by the determined by an accounting in the action. Eldredge v. Putnam, 46 Wis. 205.

1. Perry on Trusts, § 885; Smart v. Bradstock, 7 Beav. 500; Bromley v. Smith, 1 Sim. 8; Preston v. Grand, etc., Dock Co., 11 Sim. 327; Lloyd v. Loaring, 6 Ves. 773; Cockburn v. Thompson, 16 Ves. 321; Taylor v. Salmon, 4 M. & C. 134; Hickens v. Congreve, 4 Russ. 562; Walworth v. Holt, 4 Myl. & C. 619; Manning v. Thesiger, 1 S. & S. 106; Weld v. Bonham, 2 S. & S. 91; Atty. Gen'l v. Heelis, 2 Sim. 67; Bateman v. Margerison, 6 Hare 496. But compare Harrison v. Stewartson, 2 Hare 533, where there were twenty-one beneficiaries and all were required to appear. And Rathbone v. Stocking, 2 Barb. (N. Y.) 135, where it was held that where several persons are interested in a trust fund, in unequal proportions, no action at law will lie by either party for his share until a distribution has been made, and the proportion of each, and his right thereto, ascertained and settled.

2. Perry on Trusts, § 885; Adair v. New River Co., 11 Ves. 429; London v. Richmond, 2 Vern. 421; Meux v. Maltby, 2 Swanst. 277; Milbank v. Collier, 1 Coll. 237; Harvey v. Harvey, 4 Beav. 215; Bunnett v. Foster, 7 Beav. 540.

The beneficiary has a right of action in chancery to compel the specific performance of a contract made by a third person with the trustee for the purchase of land conveyed by the deed of trust, and he may make the trustee and the purchaser of the land and the settlor in the deed of trust parties defendant, although, as a rule, the proper procedure would require the trustee and the beneficiary to unite in bringing suit. Fleming v. Holt, 12 W. Va. 143.

3. Where A gave land for the use of all religious denominations professing the Christian faith, upon which a house for public worship was built by individuals of the different denominations, it was held that any cestui que trust having an interest in the use, might maintain proceedings in equity to compel a performance of the trust according to the intent of the donor. Baptist Church v. Presbyterian Church, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 635.

When suit is brought to compel an accounting by the trustees, the real owner of shares obtained by fraud from the trustees by a nominal owner, is a proper plaintiff, although such real owner has not complied with the trust agreement, compliance by the nominal owner accruing to the benefit of the real owner. Hazard v. Dillon, 34 Fed. Rep. 485.

Under the Delaware procedure, the eldest male heir of a deceased trustee is the proper plaintiff in a suit in ejectment to recover the land claimed under the trust. McMullen v. Lank, 4 Houst. (Del.) 648.

A special and express trust, created by the appropriation of a lot for burial purposes by a cemetery association, and the appropriation of the surplus means of the association solely to charitable uses, are objects which will be upheld, and a performance of the trust enforced in equity on the application of any member of the association, where there has been an abuse of the trust. Hullman v. Honcomp, 5 Ohio St. 237.

4. See EQUITY PLEADING, vol. 6, pp. 750, 751; PARTIES TO ACTIONS, vol. 17, p. 651. For exceptions to the rule, see Moore v. Hood, 9 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 311; 70 Am. Dec. 210.

The Trustee a Necessary Party.—In a bill brought by a beneficiary for the recovery of an amount alleged to be due him, the trustee is a necessary party in order that the decree may bind his legal interest. Carter v. Jones, 5 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 196; 49 Am. Dec. 425.

A trustee is a necessary party to a suit in regard to a trust estate, and naming him in the bill without serving papers on him does not make him a party. Cassidy v. McDaniel, 18 Mon. (Ky.) 519.

decree of the court.¹ And all cestuis que trustent must be before the court either as suitors or defendants,² unless the party

Where a suit is brought to enforce a trust, the trustee, though a minor, is a necessary party, and it cannot be maintained against the guardian of such minor alone. Wakefield v. Marr, 65 Me. 341.

The court cannot take jurisdiction of the legal title to trust property without making the trustee a party. Phipps v. Tarpley, 26 Miss. 597.

To subject trust property, at law, to the payment of a debt for which it may be liable, the mode indicated by the Georgia Code, § 3301 et seq., must be followed, and the trustee, or if none, then the beneficiary, must be made a party defendant. Brown v. Tucker, 47 Ga. 485.

To a suit brought by a stranger to defeat the trust, a trustee with general powers and important duties in relation to the trust, is a necessary party. McArthur v. Scott, 113 U. S. 340.

If the trust is an active one, and the title is in the trustee for the use of a married woman or a minor, the trustee is a necessary party to a suit to divest the beneficiary's interests. O'Hara v. McConnell, 93 U. S. 150.

A conveyed personal property to B, in trust to sell and pay the claim of C. In a suit by C to foreclose the deed of trust, praying judgment for the amount due and for the sale of the property, it was held that the trustee should be made a party. Tucker v. Silver, 9 Iowa 261.

Trustee and Beneficiary.—Both the trustee and the beneficiaries must be parties to a proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien against the trust property. Columbia Bldg., etc., Co. v. Taylor, 25 Ill. App. 429.

In suits affecting the trust property, whether brought by the trustee or against him, the beneficiaries, as well as the trustee, must generally be made parties. Carey v. Brown, 92 U. S. 171.

In a suit by a trustee for any matter concerning the performance of the trust, the cestui que trust must be made a party. Burney v. Spear, 17 Ga. 223; Hall v. Harris, 11 Tex. 300.

In suits in equity respecting trust property, the cestui que trust is a necessary party. Day v. Wetherby, 29 Wis. 363.

Where a trust deed gave Jones possession and use of a tract of land for life, it was held that the trustee could not, in Jones' life, recover from a railroad company a strip thereof granted to it by Jones for a road-bed, until Jones' right of possession had been adjudged forfeited. This could only be done in a case to which he should be made a party. Tutt v. Port Royal, etc., R. Co., 20 S. Car. 110.

1. All the Trustees.—Perry on Trusts, § 876; Heath v. Erie R. Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 347; Hutchinson v. Ayres, 117 Ill. 558; Lexington v. McConnell, 3 A. K. Marsh. (Ky.) 224; Munch v. Cockerell, 8 Sim. 210; Tarleton v. Hornby, 1 Y. & C. 336; Humberstone v. Chase, 2 Y. & C. 213; Perry v. Knott, 4 Beav. 179; Priestman v. Tyn-dall, 24 Beav. 244; Rehden v. Wesley, 29 Beav. 215; Fletcher v. Green, 33 Beav. 513; Willie v. Ellice, 6 Hare 505; In re Chertsey Market, 6 Price 278.

The court will not decline jurisdiction of a suit to foreclose a mortgage executed to secure canal bonds, because one of five trustees cannot be made a party, if the other four are before the court. Stewart v. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co., 4 Hughes (U. S.) 41.

A renouncing trustee is not a necessary party to a suit against a co-trustee for mismanagement, by the latter, of the trust estate. Earle v. Earle, 48 N. Y. Super. Ct. 18.

2. Beneficiaries to be Made Parties.—Every person interested in a trust estate should be made a party in a suit for its administration. Elam v. Garrard, 25 Ga. 557.

The cestui que trust must be made a party, and if there are more than one, all are necessary, if it is practicable to join them in the suit. Boyden v. Part-ridge, 2 Gray (Mass.) 190; Lauriat v. Stratton, 11 Fed. Rep. 107; First Nat. Bank v. Crafts, 145 Mass. 444; Lyman, Petitioner, 11 R. I. 157; Holland v. Baker, 3 Hare 68. See Ridgeway v. Potter, 114 Ill. 457.

Cestuis que trustent should, in general, be made parties to a bill of equity which affects their interests. Piatt v. Oliver, 2 McLean (U. S.) 267.

In a suit against the trustees to have a purchase of the trust estate by them declared to be for the benefit of the beneficiaries, the latter must all be joined in the suit. Campbell v. John-son, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 148.

All the parties interested should be joined in a suit to subject the trust fund to the satisfaction of a judgment at law. Helm v. Hardin, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 231.

A creditor seeking to carry into effect an assignment in trust for the creditors' benefit, and to obtain his share of the trust fund, must make all the creditors parties, or he must sue for himself and the other creditors, who may come in and satisfy their demands. Bryant v. Russell, 23 Pick. (Mass.) 508; Haughton v. Davis, 23 Me. 28.

A trustee is not allowed to proceed to vindicate the title intrusted to him from an adverse claim by a bill of equity, without making a cestui que trust a party. Blake v. Allman, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 407; Reed v. Reed, 16 N. J. Eq. 248.

A beneficiary, who was entitled to a fractional share of the income of an estate in the hands of a trustee, sued the trustee for an accounting, in order that the complainant's share of the income might be ascertained. It was held that the cestuis que trustent entitled to the remainder of the net income should have been joined in the suit, so that, by binding them by the accounting, future litigation and accountings might be prevented, and the trustee might safely execute the decree in favor of the complainant. Speakman v. Tatem, 45 N. J. Eq. 388.

Where an action is brought against a trustee for a distributive share of an estate which he is bound to divide among different persons, and the proportionate share of each has not yet been ascertained, all such persons must be joined in the action. General Mut. Ins. Co. v. Benson, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 168.

A bill in equity averred that the plaintiff was executor of the estate of B, who was executor and trustee of the estate of C, a citizen of Georgia, a portion of which consisted of certain stock of a Pennsylvania coal company, and prayed that this stock be transferred to A, and the dividends be paid to A. The answer admitted these averments to be true, but prayed that the cestuis que trustent be made parties to the bill, and that copies of the wills and letters testamentary be produced. It was held that a decree directing such transfer and payment, without first granting the company's prayer, was error. Lehigh Coal, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 499.

The doctrine that, where a breach of trust is charged, and where no other general rule or order of the court interferes, and the facts demand a contribution or a recovery over, all persons who should be before the court to enable it to make a full and final judgment, are necessary parties, has not been abrogated by the New York Code. Sherman v. Parish, 53 N. Y. 483.

Where a trustee is called upon to account for the trust moneys, all the cestuis que trustent should be made parties to the suit, that there may be a single accounting, and that all parties interested in it may be bound by it. Speakman v. Tatem, 45 N. J. Eq. 388; Hamm v. Stevens, 1 Vern. 110; Vanderpool v. Davenport, 3 N. J. Eq. 122.

A modification of the rule has been noted elsewhere in this article, and is as follows: Where one of several cestuis que trustent entitled to a certain aliquot share of a certain sum seeks to recover from the trustee his share of that sum, he need not make the owners of the remaining shares parties to the suit. Speakman v. Tatem, 45 N. J. Eq. 388; Hubbard v. Burrell, 41 Wis. 365; Hares v. Stringer, 15 Beav. 206; Marryatt v. Maryatt, 23 L. J. Ch. N. S. 876; Hughson v. Cookson, 31 Y. & C. 578; Hunt v. Peacock, 11 Jur. 555; Smith v. Snow, 3 Madd. 10; Hutchinson v. Townsend, 2 Keen 675; Perry v. Knott, 5 Beav. 293; Platt v. Oliver, 2 McLean (U. S.) 307; Van Wart v. Price, 14 Abb. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 4, note; Hauenstein v. Kull, 59 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 24; General Mut. Ins. Co. v. Benson, 5 Duer (N. Y.) 168; Wing v. Bull, 38 Hun (N. Y.) 291; Power v. Hathaway, 43 Barb. (N. Y.) 214.

Where a breach of trust is alleged, all the cestuis que trustent must be joined, even though their respective interests are fixed. Lanaghan v. Smith, 2 Phill. 301; Williams v. Powell, 2 Phill. 329; Munch v. Cockerell, 8 Sim. 231; Kellaway v. Johnson, 5 Beav. 319; Ling v. Colman, 10 Beav. 370; Hall v. Austin, 2 Coll. 570.

Where a bill is filed for an account, and to execute a trust created by a deed absolute on its face, but really executed upon trust to pay the grantor's debts, and then for his family's use and benefit, his widow and heirs must be joined in the suit, as should also all persons whose interests are involved in the issue, or who would be affected by the decree. Pence v. Pence, 13 N. J. Eq. 257.

A person seeking to enforce a claim seeking relief sues authoritatively on behalf of all the beneficiaries.¹

The heirs and personal representatives of the trustee,² the heirs and personal representatives of a deceased beneficiary,³ the heirs for necessities against the trust property of a mother and her children, if he seeks a sale of any part of the trust property, must join both the mother and children, if both are cestuis que trustent. Prewett v. Lamb, 36 Miss. 495.

Where the amount of a trust fund for the creditors is not fixed, and an account must be taken to fix it, all the cestuis que trustent must be joined either as plaintiffs or defendants, and the Act of Congress of Feb. 28th, 1839, does not enable the court to proceed without them, to make a decree distributing parts of the fund to those entitled to them in severalty. Green v. Sisson, 2 Curt. (U. S.) 171.

A trustee held stock belonging to several persons to whom advances had been made on it by the plaintiff; two of the stockholders refused to pay the advances. A bill filed against them and the trustee, was held insufficient for not making other stockholders parties. Jamison v. Stewart, 14 Phila. (Pa.) 134.

In an action for relief against a mortgage held by the trustee, the cestuis que trustent should be made parties. Clemson v. Elder, 9 Iowa 272.

In a bill to enjoin a trustee from asserting his title or conveying it away, or to compel him to convey it to one to whom the beneficiary has transferred his interest, the beneficiary is a necessary party. Richards v. Richards, 9 Gray (Mass.) 313.

A bill in equity to restrain a misapplication of a fund held by a corporation in trust, cannot be brought against the trustees appointed by the corporation to hold and manage the fund, unless the corporation is made a party to the bill. Tibbails v. Bidwell, 1 Gray (Mass.) 399.

Where three out of four trustees of church property, executed notes for the church's debt, and one of them paid the notes, and the latter's executor filed a bill against two other trustees to have a lien declared upon the church property in his favor on account of the money paid, it was held that the fourth trustee should be made a party, and also the members of the church beneficiaries of the trust. Headrick v. Ruble, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 15.

A court of equity will decree the specific performance by a trustee of a contract, when such contract conforms to the law of his trust and his duty as to the improvement of the trust property, and where the party with whom the contract is made has performed his part. Where the specific performance of such a contract is sought, affecting to a great extent the interests of the cestuis que trustent, they should be parties to the suit. Trustees, etc. v. Gleason, 15 Fla. 384.

In a proceeding to enforce a mechanic's lien upon trust property, both trustee and beneficiary should be made parties. See MECHANICS' LIENS, vol. 15, p. 167.

1. Where the parties to a trust deed are so numerous that it is an utter impossibility to bring them all before the court, the cause may proceed, if a sufficient number are parties on each side to sustain the controversy. U. S. Bank v. Huth, 4 B. Mon. (Ky.) 423.

2. Greenleaf v. Queen, 1 Pet. (U. S.) 138; Skiles v. Switzer, 11 Ill. 533; In re Abbott's Petition, 55 Me. 580; Plumley v. Plumley, 8 N. J. Eq. 511; Williamson v. Wickersham, 3 Coldw. (Tenn.) 52.

Land was conveyed to A in trust to permit B to enjoy it for life, and at B's death to convey the land to her children then living, and to the children of those deceased. On B's death the trust was held to be not executed, so that, in an action for partition, A being dead, A's heir was a necessary party. Huckabee v. Newton, 23 S. Car. 291.

In a suit to declare a resulting trust in land purchased with the plaintiff's money, the deed being taken in the name of the purchaser, an heir of the deceased purchaser was held to be a necessary party. Freeman v. Russell, 40 Ark. 56.

But in Hawley v. Ross, 7 Paige (N. Y.) 103, it was held that upon the death of the trustee of a bond for the benefit of the obligor's children, since the revision of the statutes, the personal representatives of the trustee had no interest in the appointment of a new trustee.

3. Kelly v. Karsner, 72 Ala. 106; Covington, etc., R. Co. v. Bowler, 9 Bush (Ky.) 468.

Where a misappropriated trust fund is composed in part of personal prop-and representatives of the testator, where the trust is testamentary in its nature,¹ the debtors of a judgment debtor in a proceeding in chancery to confiscate or garnishee their debts,² are, under certain circumstances, necessary parties. And, generally speaking, all persons whose rights or interests under the peculiar circumstances of the case are liable to be affected by such a decree as the chancellor has power to award, should be joined as parties.³

And where the trustee is charged with having converted the estate to his own use by wrongfully conspiring with a third person, erty, the heirs and the administrator of a deceased cestui que trust should be made parties in an action to recover the same; and where the trust property is partly real and partly personal, the heirs and the legal representatives of all the beneficiaries may join in one action to recover the whole. Butler v. Lawson, 72 Mo. 227.

1. Allen v. Simons, 1 Curt. (U. S.) 122.

Where a bill is filed in behalf of a devisee, against the trustees of the testator's estate, praying in general terms for an account of the estate and effects of the testator and of every part thereof, without confining the prayer to the estate which has come to the hands of the trustee as such, the personal representatives of the testator should be joined in the suit. Sherman v. Burnham, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 403.

2. Barrett v. Reid, Wright (Ohio) 700.

3. Property was conveyed to a trustee, the proceeds to be applied first, to free the maker and the indorser from their liability upon a promissory note, the balance to be accounted for to the grantor. Upon a suit in equity against the trustee by the grantor, it was held that the maker and indorser of the note were necessary parties. Fish v. Berkey, 10 Minn. 199.

A, who had been guardian of B, brought his bill against C, his successor in that office, for an alleged balance. Upon C's filing a cross-bill alleging a balance to be due to B, it was held that B should have been a party to the suit. Campbell v. Williams, 3 T. B. Mon. (Ky.) 122.

If A places C's money in the hands of B to purchase land for C's benefit, on a refusal by B to convey the land thus purchased to C, a bill of equity to enforce such trust must be brought in the name of C, and A cannot devise the land thus purchased, so as to enable D, the devisee, to compel a conveyance to himself; and if D claims a conveyance from B under a transfer of C's equitable right, C must be a party to the bill. Culbertson v. Matson, 11 Mo. 493.

Where a deed of trust is allowed to stand in the way of younger judgment liens, after the debts secured by it have become due, a court of equity, at a suit of the judgment creditor, if the rents and profits of the property will not satisfy the liens in five years, will direct a sale of the property, and not merely of the equity of redemption. Laidley v. Hinchman, 3 W. Va. 423.

All the trust creditors should be parties to such a suit. Laidley v. Hinchman, 3 W. Va. 423.

If an assignee in insolvency, by leave of court, sells the estate of his assignor, and acting through third persons becomes the purchaser, and thereafter manages the estate for his own benefit and for the benefit of other persons, the court will require that the persons interested with the assignee in the purchase, be made parties to a suit brought to compel him to account for the profits made by him after the sale. First Nat. Bank v. Crafts, 145 Mass. 444.

A bill filed for an account of the residue of the testator's estate, directed by his will to remain in the hands of his executors for a period of twenty years after his decease, in trust, for his children and grandchildren, and at the end of that time to be divided between them, is demurrable for want of parties, unless all persons interested in the trust property are made parties to the bill, or those omitted are unknown or out of the jurisdiction, or have been fully accounted with, and such excuse for not joining them is stated in the bill. D'Wolf v. D'Wolf, 4 R. I. 450. And see generally Richardson v. Richardson, 83 Mich. 653.

Upon a bill for the appointment of a new trustee, all persons beneficially it is proper to sue both the trustee and the confederate, for they are jointly liable and may be sued jointly in the county where either resides.¹

The following have been held, under the circumstances of the case, not to be necessary parties: A former trustee who has been divested of all title and interest in the trust estate,² the heirs of a trustee,³ his personal representatives or the sureties upon his bond,⁴ the trustee himself, in a suit where a debtor, to secure a debt, had assigned a judgment in trust for one of two co-sureties for him, and the other surety sues to apply the judgment to the debt,⁵ the cestui que trust in certain contingencies,⁶ interested should be made parties. Regan v. West, 115 Ill. 603.

To a bill filed to establish a trust in the case of lands held by a decedent in fee, the widow and her husband by a second marriage, are necessary parties. Bailey v. West, 41 Ill. 290.

1. Shivers v. Palmer, 14 Ga. 342.

One who participates with a trustee in the misappropriation of trust funds, renders himself liable to the cestui que trust, Georgia Code, § 3151, expressly so providing, and he may be sued jointly with the trustee, or separately. Bigham v. Coleman, 71 Ga. 176.

2. Hubbell v. Hubbell, 22 Ohio St. 208.

3. Where lands held in trust were devised by the trustee to his executor, to be sold and converted into personal property, it was held, in a suit against the executor and the purchaser to establish the trust, that the heirs of the trustee need not be parties. Paul v. Fulton, 25 Mo. 156.

The heirs of a deceased trustee are not necessary parties to a bill in equity to enforce a trust, where the land in which it is claimed, has been duly sold by the administrator of his estate under license from the probate court. Bates v. Hurd, 65 Me. 180.

4. The administrator of a deceased trustee, is not a necessary party to a bill to declare and enforce the trust against the heirs. Hallesy v. Jackson, 66 Ill. 139.

Where a bill of equity is brought to compel the delivery to a trustee of a trust estate, pledged by his deceased predecessor as a security for money lent him for his private use, it is unnecessary to join, as defendants, the beneficiaries or the widow, or legal or personal representatives of the former trustee, or the sureties on his bond. Ashton v. Atlantic Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 217.

5. Kerns v. Chambers, 3 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 576.

6. See White v. Haynes, 33 Ind. 540; Miles v. Davis, 19 Mo. 408; Coe v. Beckwith, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 339.

Where an executor files a bill to execute the trusts declared by the will, the cestuis que trustent need not be made parties. Beal v. Crafton, 5 Ga. 301.

In a suit by a trustee to reduce the trust funds into his possession, the cestuis que trustent are not necessary parties. Adams v. Bradley, 12 Mich. 346; Morey v. Forsyth, Walk. (Mich.) 465; Cook v. Wheeler, Harr. (Mich.) 443.

A bill in equity by a creditor against a trustee, to subject the resulting trust arising after the cestuis que trustent named in the trust deed are satisfied, need not make such cestuis que trustent parties. Corner v. Stevenson, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 95.

A party claiming an interest in a conveyance under a parol declaration of trust, evidenced by parol only, is not a necessary party to a suit to avoid the conveyance, as such a trust could not be enforced. Whelan v. Whelan, 3 Cow. (N. Y.) 537.

In a suit by a creditor against his debtor and an assignee of the property of such debtor in trust, to avoid the assignment as fraudulent, it is not necessary to make the cestuis que trustent under the assignment parties. Wakeman v. Grover, 4 Paige (N. Y.) 23; Willett v. Stringer, 17 Abb. Pr. (N. Y.) 152. To the contrary, see Stout v. Higbee, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 632.

A guardian contracted to pay the mother of his wards a certain sum for their support, and in a suit by the widow to set off the sum against a judgment held by the guardian against her, it was held that the wards were not necessary parties. Lindsey v. Stevens, 5 Dana (Ky.) 104.

Where a bill was filed by a trustee of particularly remote beneficiaries possessing no present vested interest,¹ and even the trustee.²

Others who are unnecessary parties are instanced in the notes.³

a feme covert, impeaching a mortgage made by the cestui que trust, and claiming the right to redeem, and praying for a settlement of accounts between the cestui que trust and the mortgagee, such settlement was made, and a full opportunity was given the cestui que trust to controvert the pretensions of the appellee, and a full defense was made, it was held that it was not necessary, in such a suit, to make the cestui que trust a formal party. Woodson v. Perkins, 5 Gratt. (Va.) 345.

Where a fund was raised by a town acting as a parish, to be held by trustees for the minister's support, and the parish in whom the right to the fund vested, voted that the income thereof should be paid to their minister as part of his salary, and brought a bill against the trustees on their refusal to pay it over, it was held that the minister was rightly joined as a plaintiff, and that the town was not a necessary party to the suit. First Congregational Soc. v. Trustees, etc., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 148.

Where A and B assigned property to C in trust to pay the debts of the former firm of A & D, and certain debts of A & B, and to pay the surplus to the order of A & B, and A & B gave an order on C payable out of the surplus to E, and C accepted it, and E filed a bill against C alone for an account of the fund and to have the surplus applied to satisfy the order, it was held that neither A & B, nor A & D, nor any other of the cestuis que trustent need be joined as parties, as the trustee represented all the interests of all the parties. Buck v. Pennybacker, 4 Leigh (Va.) 5.

Where a trustee sues merely to get possession of the trust property from a third party, the beneficiary is not a necessary party to the suit. Hickox v. Elliott, 22 Fed. Rep. 13; 10 Sawy. (U. S.) 415.

If the trustee represents his cestuis que trustent in all things relating to the trust property, they need not be made parties to a proceeding against him to enforce or defeat the trust. Kerrison v. Stewart, 93 U. S. 155.

In a suit brought against a trustee to set aside a trust deed, a cestui que trust need not be made a party defendant, although he may, in the discretion of the court, be permitted to voluntarily appear and defend. Winslow v. Minnesota, etc., R. Co., 4 Minn. 313; 77 Am. Dec. 519.

The cestuis que trustent are not necessary parties to a suit for a debt incurred by the trustee in the management of the trust, and for which he is personally liable. Connally v. Lyons, 82 Tex. 664; 27 Am. St. Rep. 935. Nor to a suit brought to set aside a trust deed for fraud. Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169.

1. Stevens v. Melcher, 6 N. Y. Supp. 811; 53 Hun (N. Y.) 636.

Where application is made for the sale of trust property, the life tenants being all living and made parties, and the remainder-men being uncertain, the latter are not necessary parties. Schley v. Brown, 70 Ga. 64.

2. In a suit to sequester the shares of trustees who have been wasting the trust estate, a part trustee, who is not entitled to any portion of the income of the trust, need not be joined as a party to the proceeding, where no decree is made against the general property of any trustee or beneficiary, but a decree is made merely to regulate the temporary disposition of the trust fund. Raynes v. Raynes, 54 N. H. 201.

3. Where a bill is brought to convert into a trustee a purchaser, who has taken a conveyance to himself, absolute on its face, alleging as a part of the parol trust, that a portion of the property was to be reconveyed to the daughters of the plaintiff upon their marriage, no consideration moving between the defendant and the daughters, neither they nor their husbands need be made parties plaintiff, and neither of them is incompetent to testify for the plaintiff by reason of interest. Lamb v. Pigford, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 195.

A cestui que trust may call the trustee to account, without making those persons parties with whom the trustee, in breach of his duty, has seen fit to divide the fund. He may, however, make such persons parties. Felton v. Long, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 224.

In an action by the trustee of a fund for the benefit of creditors deposited in the hands of a third person, for instructions as to the administration of the

Whatever binds the trustee in any proceeding which he begins and carries on in good faith, to enforce a trust, to which the beneficiaries are not actual parties, binds them.¹

c. WHO ARE PROPER PARTIES DEFENDANT.—Anyone may properly be made a party whose interest in the matter before the court is such that the decree of the court may, either immediately or remotely, affect it.²

4. Pleading.—To this branch of the subject the general princi-trust, neither the sheriff who holds a warrant of attachment against the depositor, nor the depository of the fund, need be made parties, where the plaintiff in the attachment suit has been made a party. Coe v. Beckwith, 31 Barb. (N. Y.) 339.

A claim for services rendered to a trust estate cannot be enforced against a person because of his subsequent receipt of a portion of such estate, under the provisions of the will creating it; and such person need not be made a party to an action against the trustees to recover for such services. Stanton v. King, 8 Hun (N. Y.) 4.

A bill may be brought by the cestui que trust against the representative of one trustee who had the exclusive possession of the property, without making the representatives of the other trustee parties to the suit, where no account is prayed against the latter. Fleming v. Gilmer, 35 Ala. 62.

Generally, both the trustee and cestui que trust should be parties; but where the trusteeship is a naked trust, and there is no trustee, it seems that the whole interest is before the court, and that a decree may be rendered, particularly if the proceeding be in rem. Sprague v. Tyson, 44 Ala. 338.

Where an action has been brought to compel the heirs of a deceased testator to convey land to a testamentary trustee, in order that its provisions may be performed, the legatees whose interests it is not sought to affect, are not necessary parties. Nor are persons not in esse necessary parties, if those in esse whose interests are the same, are made parties. Regan v. West, 115 Ill. 603.

An heir at law is not a necessary party to a suit brought against his ancestor's legal representative, for the recovery of loss sustained by a violation of trust of the ancestor as executor, although he is a proper party. McCartin v. Traphagen, 43 N. J. Eq. 323; Darsheimer v. Rorback, 23 N. J. Eq. 46.

In an equitable suit by an assignee in bankruptcy, to obtain possession of property transferred by the bankrupt to the defendant in trust for the wife and children of the bankrupt, it is not necessary to make the wife and children parties. Vetterlein v. Barnes, 124 U. S. 169.

A, who was one of the next of kin contesting a will, asked of B, a contestant, authority to undertake the collection of B's share, A to pay the cost of the suit, and retain one-half of the amount recovered, promising to divide his own half with his brothers and sisters, whom he represented to be poor and needy. The arrangement was made, and a sum of money recovered, but A refused to divide with his brothers and sisters. It was held that they might maintain a suit in equity upon A's promise in their behalf, and that B was not a necessary party to the bill. Cubberly v. Cubberly, 33 N. J. Eq. 82, 591.

In an action to enforce a trust, an intermediate grantee is not a necessary party. Ryan v. O'Connor, 41 Ohio St. 368.

1. Richter v. Jerome, 123 U. S. 233.

2. See PARTIES TO ACTION, vol. 17, p. 651. See generally Ward v. Funsten, 86 Va. 359; Weaver v. Van Akin, 77 Mich. 588.

In a bill by a feme covert to get the control of property held by the executor of a trustee under an ante-nuptial settlement, the children in remainder should be made defendants. Fleming v. Gilmore, 35 Ala. 62.

Where a trust was created for the purposes of trade, and debts were incurred in the prosecution of the trust, for which, by the terms of the deed, the trust property was liable, it was held that the trustee was a proper party to an action for the enforcement of the payment of the debts out of the fund, and that he might be joined after the judgment was reversed, for want of proper parties. Stevenson v. Matthews, 9 Pa. St. 316.

A trustee to sell property, who has ples governing equity pleading apply.¹ It is necessary that all parties in interest be before the court,² and that the bill set out with certainty the facts requisite to identify the property sought to be affected by the trust.³ And a bill that fails to bring in the necessary parties or identify the trust property is demurrable.

In drawing a bill against the trustee, the pleader must bear in mind that there is a presumption that the trustee has performed his full duty, and he must set out specifically all facts necessary to rebut this presumption.⁴

Besides this presumption in favor of good faith and faithful discharge of duty on the part of the trustee,⁵ the legality of the creation of the trust⁶ will also be presumed, until the contrary is shown.

Where the perversion of a trust is charged, everything will be presumed to have been consistent with the trust, which the bill does not show to have been inconsistent with it.⁷

Where the complainant is seeking to establish the existence of a trust, he must aver all the facts which are needed to clearly show its existence, for no necessary fact will be taken for granted, advertised it for sale, being a mere agent of the cestui que trust, and having no interest in the controversy, is a proper party to a bill filed to enjoin the sale on the ground of a fraudulent combination between the cestui que trust and another person, to defraud the complainant of his rights. Everett v. Winn, 1 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 67.

Under the prayer for general relief in a bill of equity alleging the decease of the grantor of a deed of trust, the non-payment of the debt, and the flight of the trustee from the country, it is proper to make the administrator a party, compel a settlement of his accounts, and appoint a new trustee. Woods v. Fisher, 3 W. Va. 536.

Where a suit is brought to enforce a trust deed executed by a defaulting official for the benefit of the territory and of the county, the territory, the county, and the trustees are all proper parties plaintiff. Territory v. Golding, 3 Utah 39.

As to when the trustee and not the beneficiary is a proper party to a proceeding to condemn land, see State v. Easton, etc., R. Co., 36 N. J. L. 181.

1. See EQUITY PLEADING, vol. 6, p. 750.

2. See supra, this title, Parties.

3. Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 333; Howard v. Fay, 138 Mass. 104.

A petition that seeks to recover land by reason of a trust, must charge it with certainty. Brace v. Reid, 3 Greene (Iowa) 422.

4. Flint on Trusts and Trustees, § 332; Matcubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157; McGinn v. Shaeffer, 7 Watts (Pa.) 412; Dial v. Dial, 21 Tex. 529; Atty. Gen'l v. Norwich, 2 Myl. & C. 406.

Under a bill in equity, a trustee is not to be held accountable for any neglect or violation of duty, not charged in the bill. Smith v. Smith, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 281; Page v. Olcott, 28 Vt. 465.

5. See Massachusetts Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. Boggs, 121 Ill. 119. Compare Munn v. Burges, 70 Ill. 604.

Upon a suit to enforce a trust, fraud will not be presumed, but must be charged in the pleadings if counted on. Link v. Link, 90 N. Car. 235.

But in the investigation of a charge of fraud between parties in fiduciary relations, it has been held that less evidence will be required to establish fraud, than where the question of fraud arises between persons not occupying that position. Keaton v. McGwier, 24 Ga. 217.

6. The courts will presume that a trust in lands was legally created, unless the contrary appears, and a bill to enforce it need not aver that it was created by a deed or otherwise, unless the trust is denied in the answer, in which case it must be proved by competent evidence. Whiting v. Gould, 2 Wis. 552.

7. Happy v. Morton, 33 Ill. 398; Foss v. Harbottle, 2 Hare 502.

outside of those established by the well-known judicial presumptions just mentioned.¹

Cases illustrating what averments are sufficient or necessary to constitute a good complaint, are cited below.²

1. See Courvoisier v. Bouvier, 3 Neb. 55; Hansen v. Berthelsen, 19 Neb. 433.

A bill for the establishment of a trust in property supposed to have been purchased with trust funds, must allege that fact. Danforth v. Herbert, 33 Ala. 497.

For the maintenance of a bill in equity, it is not sufficient to allege merely that a conveyance of land by absolute deed was in fact in trust, but it should be shown that the conveyance was in trust expressly or by implication, and if by implication, such facts should be stated as would clearly show it to be such. Rowell v. Freese, 23 Me. 182.

A bill to compel the delivery to a trustee of trust funds pledged by his deceased predecessor, as security for money lent to him for his private use, must allege that the lender knew that the property which was pledged, was trust property, and that the money was lent for such private use. Ashton v. Atlantic Bank, 3 Allen (Mass.) 217.

A bill seeking to enforce the execution of a trust in the name of a mere volunteer and for his benefit, must allege a declaration of the trust in his favor. Compton v. Vasser, 19 Ala. 259.

Where the facts appearing in a suit to execute a trust, tend to show a covinous purpose in the creation of the trust, such purpose will not be noticed without a direct averment thereof in the pleadings. Hudgins v. White, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 575.

It is not necessary for one who seeks to enforce a resulting or presumptive trust to show, by appropriate averments, that it belongs under some one of the classes mentioned in the Kentucky Revised Statutes, ch. 80, § 22. Graves v. Graves, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 167.

A complaint which merely alleged that lands were conveyed to a husband in 1831, four years after his marriage, and that the consideration was paid by the wife, out of her own estate, is an insufficient averment of a resulting trust. Joyce v. Haines, 33 N. J. Eq. 99.

In a suit for the recovery of an alleged half interest in land formerly held in trust for the plaintiff, the complaint was demurrable, in that it did not show that the defendants, who derived title from the alleged trustee, were not bona fide purchasers with notice of the plaintiff's claim. De Mares v. Gilpin, 15 Colo. 76.

Where a bill seeks to convert a purchaser of personal property, who takes the absolute conveyance to himself, into a trustee for another, on the ground that the purchase was made with the latter's money, or where it seeks to correct a deed of land, absolute on its face, by having it declared to be only a mortgage, it must be alleged and proved that the redemption clause, or declaration of trust, was omitted, by reason of mistake, ignorance, fraud, or undue advantage, and the alleged intention of the parties that such conveyances should not be absolute, must be established, not merely by parol proof of the declarations of the purchasers to that effect, but by proof of circumstances and facts, dehors the deeds, inconsistent with the idea of an absolute purchase. Clement v. Clement, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 184; Briggs v. Morris, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 193; Taylor v. Taylor, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 246.

Where the petition does not set forth a case of trust, nor seek relief on that account, it does not present a case of equity jurisdiction on the ground of trust. Claussen v. Lafrenz, 4 Greene (Iowa) 224.

2. Felix v. Patrick, 145 U. S. 317; Veal v. Veal, 89 Ky. 314; Walton v. Stewart, 61 Hun (N. Y.) 625; 129 N. Y. 667; Muller v. Buyck, 12 Mont. 354.

The bill of a trustee of an express trust which shows on its face that the plaintiff is not the real party in interest, should show for whose benefit he sues. Holladay v. Davis, 5 Oregon 40.

In sc. fa. against a trustee, it is unnecessary to allege that the defendant was adjudged trustee. Bickford v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 21 Pick. (Mass.) 109.

The averments in a bill that X laid out money belonging to himself and Y and Z in the purchase of land for their common use; of an agreement that X and Y should be owners in fee, and tenants in common, each of a moiety; that Z should have her wood from the land; and that a deed was taken to X, are sufficient to raise a trust. Dow v. Jewell, 18 N. H. 340; 45 Am. Dec. 371.

A party who comes into chancery, and claims a right as a substituted trustee under the testator's will, should allege in his bill the necessary facts, to show that a vacancy had occurred, which authorized his appointment; and also to show that he had been legally appointed as such trustee. Cruger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314.

The requisites of a complaint sufficient to enforce a trust, where the beneficiary was dead and part of the heirs resided beyond the jurisdiction, were stated in Chamberlain v. Lancey, 60 Me. 230.

A charge in the complaint of the plaintiff bank that about $10,000 of the bank funds and assets were diverted, and converted by its president and cashier into the property of the defendant corporation, of which such bank officers were also the principal officers, with the further averment that the property of the defendant rested substantially upon the funds and assets of the bank, is sufficient, on general demurrer, to impress a trust on such corporate property in favor of the bank, when such funds and assets had been acquired by the defendant, with notice. Farmers', etc., Bank v. Kimball Milling Co., 1 S. Dak. 388.

A general allegation that the defendant acted fraudulently and in bad faith, is sufficient. Nichols v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 146.

Bill Held Sufficient.—In an action to enforce a trust in a mining claim under a verbal agreement between the parties, the complaint sufficiently alleges the performance of conditions on the plaintiff's part, where it states "that plaintiff has performed all and singular his agreements and covenants with defendant." Maritz v. Lavelle, 77 Cal. 10; 11 Am. St. Rep. 220.

A complaint alleged that a conveyance of real estate was made to the defendant "without consideration, and upon the parol condition and understanding between the grantor and herself that she should hold an undivided half of it in trust for G, and after the grantor's death should sell it and give half the proceeds to G." A demurrer, on the ground that the agreement of the grantee was alleged to be by parol, should be overruled, as the grantee, having received the benefit, could be compelled to perform the agreement. Todd v. Munson, 53 Conn. 579.

A petition of a cestui que trust, which alleges that the trustee is in possession of the trust estate, and refuses to pay over the profits thereof or the principal, but is applying the same to his own benefit, discloses a good cause of action, for which equity will grant relief, even under a general prayer, although the specific relief prayed for may not be granted. Dial v. Dial, 21 Tex. 529.

A plaintiff's bill averred that the defendants jointly agreed that each should hold in trust for the plaintiff, shares of stock, until the dividends should amount to the price of the shares; and that one defendant sold such shares to his co-defendant. This states a cause of action, although not enough to call for a specific account. Magaaran v. Tiffany, 62 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 251.

In a suit to enforce a trust on which a conveyance, absolute on its face, was made, the bill need not recite that the terms of the trust were omitted from the deed by fraud or mistake, the suit not being to reform the deed. Link v. Link, 90 N. Car. 235.

The failure to aver that the trustee did not really think it was best for his children that he should ignore his trust obligation in their behalf, is not a sufficient ground of demurrer. McDonald v. McDonald, 92 Ala. 537.

The complaint alleged that property was devised in trust for the complainant and another, to be conveyed at a certain time to the beneficiaries; that the complainant was induced, through the trustee's fraud, to convey her interest to her co-beneficiary, without consideration; that the trustee had made no conveyance of said property to either of the beneficiaries; that the co-beneficiary was refusing to reconvey to the complainant, or to join in an action against the trustee; and prayed that the deed to the co-beneficiary be declared void, and the property be conveyed to the beneficiaries according to the provisions of the will. Demurrer for want of equity was overruled. Weaver v. Van Akin, 77 Mich. 588.

A bill alleged the plaintiff to be the equitable owner of land, that the trustees were dead, and their heirs either unknown to her or non-residents. The plaintiff asked for an injunction restraining the city from opening a street through the land, and prayed for the appointment of a trustee to protect the

The facts required to establish the jurisdiction must appear in the bill.¹ If the plaintiff sues as "trustee," he must allege facts showing that he is trustee.²

While the courts will suffer considerable freedom in the preparation and amendment of pleadings, it has been held that the bill of complaint cannot be so far amended, after the evidence is all in, as to entirely alter the theory of the suit.³

5. Evidence.—Evidence which will establish the existence of a trust must be clear, full, and convincing.⁴ If the trust has its origin in a writing, it cannot be proven by parol, unless a sufficient excuse be forthcoming for failure to produce the writing, and the parol proof adduced be unequivocal and conclusive.⁵

legal title. It was held that the bill was sufficient. Forsyth v. Wheeling, 19 W. Va. 318.

Bill Held Insufficient.—A general averment of fraud or bad faith is not sufficient. Nichols v. Rogers, 139 Mass. 146.

A trust to sell land for a price satisfactory to the parties, under the supervision of the plaintiff, cannot be enforced, where the bill does not aver that an opportunity had ever occurred to sell for a satisfactory price, or that the plaintiff had ever exercised his supervision and control with a view to effect the sale. Shultz v. McLean (Cal. 1890), 25 Pac. Rep. 427, 430.

In an action brought by a child for the recovery of property which has been sold by its father, before he can be allowed to prove that his father has defrauded him of his legitimate by simulated sales of his property, simulation must be averred in the petition, and a simple averment that the defendant knowingly and wrongfully detains from the plaintiff, without any legal right, lands which the plaintiff had inherited from his father, will be insufficient. McQueen v. Sandel, 15 La. Ann. 140.

A bill in equity which was filed by the heirs-at-law of a decedent, seeking to hold the defendant a trustee for their benefit of the legal title to a certain piece of land to which (they alleged) their ancestor had a pre-emption right at the time of his decease, and to which the defendant, by fraudulently colluding with one of the heirs afterward secured a patent, was held defective on demurrer, because it did not allege, first, that the time limited by the act of Congress for their ancestor to make his entry had not expired at the time of the defendant's entry on the land; second, that the complainants were able and willing to enter the land, if the defendant had not entered, or that they were prevented from doing so by his entry; third, a tender of the money expended by the defendant in making the entry, or a readiness and willingness upon the part of the complainants to repay it. Martin v. Tension, 26 Ala. 738.

1. The jurisdiction of a court of chancery cannot be invoked by a cestui que trust, in asserting a legal title, without alleging that the trustee had refused the use of his name in an action at law. Doggett v. Hart, 5 Fla. 215; 58 Am. Dec. 464.

2. Wilson v. Polk County, 112 Mo. 126.

3. Lewark v. Carter, 117 Ind. 206; 10 Am. St. Rep. 40.

4. See generally, under this heading, supra, this title, Creation of Trusts; McVey v. Parker, 64 Ala. 493; Parker v. Pierce, 16 Iowa 227; Bradley v. Bradley, 21 Iowa 480; Cuming v. Robins, 39 N. J. Eq. 46.

One who seeks to charge another as trustee for his benefit, must be held to a clear proof of the trust. Clarke v. Quackenbos, 27 Ill. 260; Quackenbos v. Clarke, 27 Ill. 290. Compare Wachter v. Blowney, 104 Ill. 610; Schneider v. Becker, 125 Ill. 109.

Where A filed a bill against B's heirs, for a deed of a part of a lot of land purchased in B's name, with money alleged to be furnished by A, and the bill was not sworn to, and was denied on oath in the answer, and there being no memorandum of an agreement, and the only evidence in support of the bill being declarations of B, which were rebutted by proof of possession by the deceased for two years without claim, and of frequent acts of ownership upon the whole lot, it was held that the bill was properly dismissed. Testament v. Perkins, 3 Greene (Iowa) 209.

5. McVey v. Parker, 64 Ala. 493.

And unless the trust arises on the face of the deed itself, proof thereof must be clear and conclusive.¹

While a trust in lands created by parol must, in an attempt to enforce the trust, be manifested by a writing duly signed, it is competent, after the trust has terminated by a conveyance of the property by the trustee, to prove the trust by parol evidence.²

A trust will not be implied by law nor presumed, except in cases where it is supported by strong circumstances showing that a trust was intended by the parties.³

Cases illustrating the sufficiency of evidence to establish the existence of a trust relationship, are given below.⁴

1. McVey v. Parker, 64 Ala. 493; Olive v. Dougherty, 3 Greene (Iowa) 371.

Where the answer denies a trust, such trust must be proved by legal and competent testimony, although the Statute of Frauds is not set up as a defense to the trust, by the answer. Whyte v. Arthur, 17 N. J. Eq. 521.

In a suit against a bank receiver for dividends upon a debt for a deposit in the name of "S, Trustee," the mere statement of the depositor that the money deposited belonged to his daughter, taken in connection with a showing that she was the owner of property of which "S" had the charge, and from which the deposit might have been derived, is not sufficiently clear and conclusive to enable the daughter to recover, in the absence of a showing that the fund so deposited was derived from her property. Sowles v. Witters, 35 Fed. Rep. 463.

2. Silvers v. Potter, 48 N. J. Eq. 539.

3. Brace v. Reid, 3 Greene (Iowa) 422.

4. Where the complaint seeks to establish an express trust in the proceeds of a promissory note, proof of the intention to create a trust which was never executed, is not sufficient to sustain the complaint. Lanternman v. Abernathy, 47 Ill. 437.

If the answer is evasive and unsatisfactory, and it appears that the defendant has conveyed a large portion of the property according to the terms of the alleged trust, and taken receipts, and done other acts inconsistent with an absolute conveyance, and that the plaintiff was weak in intellect and liable to be controlled by the defendant, and was in fact deceived by him as to the nature of the conveyance, the trust will be declared by a court of equity, and the defendant will be held to an account. Lamb v. Pigford, 1 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 195.

Upon a suit brought to enforce a reconveyance of land deeded nearly forty years before, and of which the plaintiff and his grantor had been in continuous possession all of this time, except for the first three years, the testimony of one witness was that he saw certain papers executed at and about the time of the conveyance, and that he understood them to be a deed and a bond to reconvey, and another witness testified to having seen the bond. The bond could not be found, and there was evidence which tended to show that the consideration of the deed was only one-ninth of the value of the land. It was held that a trust was sufficiently established to justify a granting of the relief sought. Orviss v. Dunn, 34 Fed. Rep. 683.

A plaintiff seeking to establish a trust in his own favor in land held by the defendant, is not obliged to show a paramount title against all the world; it is sufficient to establish that the defendant stands in the relation of a trustee to him. Leakey v. Gunter, 25 Tex. 400.

Parol evidence is insufficient to prove a trust made seventeen years before a suit brought to enforce it, and eleven years after the death of the alleged trustee, when other rights have attached. Emerick v. Emerick, 3 Grant's Cas. (Pa.) 295.

Where a will, valid on its face, conveys real estate to trustees in trust, and the objects of the trust are clearly defined, and are not at the time the will takes effect illegal, a perfect legal title is vested in the trustees, and where ejectment is brought by them against a stranger and intruder, without color or claim of title adverse to that of the plaintiffs, the latter cannot be required

The burden of proof falls on the party who seeks to establish a trust in conflict with the legal title.¹

A trust in personal property may be proven by parol.²

Parol evidence is admissible to establish a resulting trust, even though the trustee deny under oath; for the Statute of Frauds exempts such trusts from its provisions. But the proof must be clear and strong.³

Parol testimony to establish a resulting trust should be ac-in the first instance to make any further proof of title than to prove the execution of the will. They are not bound to show who are cestuis que trustent. Cumberland v. Graves, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 595.

Where the claim is made that a decedent held land upon a resulting trust, the testimony of a single witness as to declarations made to him by the deceased, will hardly suffice to establish such a trust, unless the testimony embraces other matters, and no attempt is made to rebut it when witnesses are accessible who know the facts. Grace v. Hanks, 57 Tex. 14.

1. Harris v. Stone, 15 Iowa 273; Shepard v. Pratt, 32 Iowa 296.

Where a bill is filed for the enforcement of an express trust, alleged to have been created by the defendant's agreement to receive and collect claims, for the security of a demand due the firm of I. G. & Co., proof of an agreement made by the debtor of I. G. & Co. with the defendant, that the latter should receive and collect certain claims, and should pay the proceeds either to the debtor himself, or to three firms, of which I. G. & Co. was one, does not sustain the averments of the bill. Paulding v. Lee, 20 Ala. 753.

2. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119; Martin v. Greer, 1 Ga. Dec. 109; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377; Chase v. Perley, 148 Mass. 289; Hooper v. Holmes, 11 N. J. Eq. 122; Pitney v. Bolton, 45 N. J. Eq. 639; Lord v. Lowry, 1 Bailey Ch. (S. Car.) 510.

3. Browne on Statute of Frauds, § 83; Reed on Statute of Frauds, § 971; 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1035; 1 Greenl. on Ev., § 266; Lofton v. Sterrett, 23 Fla. 565; Coates v. Woodworth, 13 Ill. 654; Nichols v. Thornton, 16 Ill. 113; Krauth v. Thiele, 45 N. J. Eq. 407; Chenoweth v. Lewis, 9 Oregon 150; White v. Sheldon, 4 Nev. 280.

A resulting trust may be proved by parol, even in opposition to the denial of the answer of the trustee; but the proof must be clear, and be received with great caution. Blair v. Bass, 4 Blackf. (Ind.) 539; Jennison v. Graves, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 441; Page v. Page, 8 N. H. 187; Snelling v. Utterback, 1 Bibb (Ky.) 609; 4 Am. Dec. 661; Letcher v. Letcher, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 590; Pugh v. Bell, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 399; Dis-mukes v. Terry, Walk. (Miss.) 197; Larkins v. Rhodes, 5 Port. (Ala.) 195; Peebles v. Reading, 8 S. & R. (Pa.) 484; Botsford v. Burr, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 405; Jenkins v. Eldridge, 3 Story (U. S.) 181; Corprew v. Arthur, 15 Ala. 525; Poulet v. Johnson, 25 Ga. 403; Enos v. Hunter, 9 Ill. 211; Nichols v. Thornton, 16 Ill. 113; Collins v. Smith, 18 Ill. 160; Clarke v. Quackenbos, 27 Ill. 260; Brown v. Pitney, 39 Ill. 468; Elliott v. Armstrong, 2 Blackf. (Ind.) 198; Fausler v. Jones, 7 Ind. 277; Noel v. Noel, 1 Iowa 423; Brace v. Reid, 3 Iowa 422; Bryant v. Hendricks, 5 Iowa 256; MacGregor v. Gardner, 14 Iowa 326; Cooper v. Skeel, 14 Iowa 578; Childs v. Griswold, 19 Iowa 362; Kin-cell v. Feldman, 22 Iowa 363; Monroe v. Graves, 23 Iowa 597; Hickey v. Young, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 1; Carey v. Callan, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 44; Buck v. Pike, 11 Me. 9; Baker v. Vining, 30 Me. 121; 50 Am. Dec. 617; Faringer v. Ramsay, 2 Md. 365; Greer v. Baughman, 13 Md. 257; Brawner v. Staup, 21 Md. 328; White v. Sheldon, 4 Nev. 280; Pritchard v. Brown, 4 N. H. 397; 17 Am. Dec. 434; Jackson v. Feller, 2 Wend. (N. Y.) 465; Harrison v. Mc-Mennomy, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 251; Swinburne v. Swinburne, 28 N. Y. 568; Reid v. Fitch, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 399; Foy v. Foy, 2 Hayw. (N. Car.) 131; Stall v. Cincinnati, 16 Ohio St. 169; Byers v. Wackman, 16 Ohio St. 440; Wetherell v. Hamilton, 15 Pa. St. 195; Lloyd v. Carter, 17 Pa. St. 216; McBarron v. Glass, 30 Pa. St. 133; Holder v. Nunnely, 2 Coldw. (Tenn.) 288; Grooms v. Rust, 27 Tex. 231; Wallace v. Bowens, 28 Vt. 638; Lehman v. Lewis, cepted with extreme caution, and should be clear and such as goes distinctly to prove the facts necessary to create such resulting interest.¹ The party seeking to establish it has the burden of proof, and must produce evidence which is clear, satisfactory, and conclusive.²

Parol evidence to establish a trust is not regarded with favor, and must be clear, satisfactory, and conclusive.³ An express trust cannot be proven by parol.⁴

Parol evidence will be admitted to show that a purchase made in the name of one was a joint purchase at the cost of more than the one and for the benefit of all,⁵ or that the consideration for a 62 Ala. 129; Bayles v. Baxter, 22 Cal. 575; Church v. Sterling, 16 Conn. 400; Alexander v. Alexander, 46 Ga. 283; Franklin v. Colley, 10 Kan. 260; Marsh v. Davis, 33 Kan. 326; Dryden v. Hanway, 31 Md. 254; 100 Am. Dec. 61; Blodgett v. Hildreth, 103 Mass. 486; Felch v. Hooper, 119 Mass. 52; Cloud v. Ivie, 28 Mo. 578; Johnson v. Quarles, 46 Mo. 423; Hopkinson v. Dumas, 42 N. H. 296; Hanff v. Howard, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 440; Sandford v. Weeden, 2 Heisk. (Tenn.) 71; Nixon's Appeal, 63 Pa. St. 282; Phelps v. Seely, 22 Gratt. (Va.) 589; Whiting v. Gould, 2 Wis. 552; Thomas v. Chicago, 55 Ill. 403; Mahoney v. Mahoney, 65 Ill. 406; St. Patrick's Catholic Church v. Daly, 116 Ill. 76.

Parol evidence may be admitted in a court of chancery, for the purpose of showing what the transaction is in all its details, out of which a trust results by operation of law. Rogan v. Walker, 1 Wis. 527.

A resulting trust may be proved against a person claiming by descent, by the ancestor's parol admissions. Harder v. Harder, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 17.

A resulting trust arising by implication of law out of external facts and circumstances, and not out of any agreement of the parties, may be established or defeated by extrinsic evidence. Donlin v. Bradley, 119 Ill. 412.

For the establishment of a resulting trust in favor of the husband or his heirs, in real estate purchased by the wife, the evidence that the money used in the purchase was his, must be decisive and clear, though it may be by parol, and where the husband permits such a purchase, and the title to be taken by the wife, a presumption is raised as between them, and as between her and the heirs of the husband, that it was intended as an advancement and provision for her. Sunderland v. Sunderland, 19 Iowa 325.

Where the deed recites a money consideration, though it is but of a small amount, parol evidence to establish a resulting trust is not admissible. Russ v. Mebius, 16 Cal. 350.

1. Noel v. Noel, 1 Iowa 423.

Where a trust is set up under a parol agreement, years after its alleged creation, and long after the parties thereto have died, very strict proof is necessary, and the relief granted is only upon the most satisfactory evidence. Nelson v. Worrall, 20 Iowa 469.

2. Green v. Dietrich, 114 Ill. 636; Corder v. Corder, 124 Ill. 229.

And not by loose and random conversations. Robinson v. Robinson, 22 Iowa 427; Maple v. Nelson, 31 Iowa 322; Green v. Dietrich, 114 Ill. 636.

3. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119; Lantry v. Lantry, 51 Ill. 458; 2 Am. Rep. 310; MacGregor v. Gardner, 14 Iowa 326; Childs v. Griswold, 19 Iowa 362; Sunderland v. Sunderland, 19 Iowa 325; Nelson v. Worrall, 20 Iowa 469; Monroe v. Graves, 23 Iowa 597; Shepard v. Pratt, 32 Iowa 296; Peters v. Jones, 35 Iowa 512; Trout v. Trout, 44 Iowa 471; Burns v. Byrne, 45 Iowa 285.

4. Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310.

Where by a deed absolute, land has been conveyed to the ancestor, for which the heirs have parted with nothing, parol evidence is not admissible to show that the conveyance was made to him under the express agreement that he should have merely a life estate, and transmit the land to certain of his heirs upon his death. Stonehill v. Swartz, 129 Ind. 310. See also Mohn v. Mohn, 112 Ind. 285; Thomas v. Merry, 113 Ind. 83.

5. Powell v. Monson, etc., Mfg. Co., 3 Mason (U. S.) 347. See Letcher v. Letcher, 4 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 590.

purchase was in fact paid by some person other than the person named in the deed or conveyance as grantee.¹

Parol evidence is admissible to show that the deed purporting to have been made for a certain named consideration, was in fact made without consideration, and that the grantee held the lands in trust for the grantor.²

Where a charge of conversion is made against one occupying a fiduciary position, it has been held proper to introduce the tax assessment lists to show an increase in the personalty of the trustee during the period of the alleged conversion.³

It has been held competent to show the financial condition of the purchaser, where the question in suit is whether the purchase was made with trust funds, or by the purchaser with his own money.⁴ Evidence will be heard to show that a deed absolute on its face was given in trust for the grantor.⁵

The Statute of Frauds requires written evidence of the existence of the trust sought to be enforced, if it relate to lands, but does not forbid the parol creation of a trust.⁶

1. Parol evidence is admissible to prove that a sheriff's deed, absolute on its face, was taken by the grantee, under an agreement to hold the property in trust for a third party. Smith v. Eckford (Tex. 1891), 18 S. W. Rep. 210.

Where the consideration in a deed is expressed to be paid by the grantee, verbal evidence is nevertheless admissible to show the payment thereof by a third person, for the purpose of establishing a resulting trust in his favor. Livermore v. Aldrich, 5 Cush. (Mass.) 431; De Peyster v. Gould, 3 N. J. Eq. 474; 29 Am. Dec. 723; Page v. Page, 8 N. H. 187; Dismukes v. Terry, Walk. (Miss.) 197; Dickenson v. Dickenson, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 279. To the contrary, Philbrook v. Delano, 29 Me. 410; Groesbeck v. Seeley, 13 Mich. 329.

Where S, to save patent expenses, conveyed by an absolute deed, without payment of any money consideration, one-half of unpatented land to H, his brother-in-law, who owned the other half, it was held in an action of trespass by a grantee of H's executor, that parol evidence was admissible to show that the conveyance was made to obtain a patent for the whole in one, and to establish a trust for S. Lingenfelter v. Ritchey, 58 Pa. St. 485; 98 Am. Dec. 308.

2. Ryan v. O'Connor, 41 Ohio St. 368.

3. Haxton v. McClaren, 132 Ind. 235.

4. Gale v. Harby, 20 Fla. 171. Compare, however, Rankin v. Harper, 23

Mo. 579, where it was held that, in a case in which a resulting trust in land was asserted, on the ground that the conveyance was taken in fraud of the creditors of the supposed cestui que trust, evidence of his pecuniary circumstances, three years after he directed the conveyance, would not be received.

5. Evidence aliunde is admissible to show that a deed, absolute on its face, was given in trust for the grantee to sell the premises conveyed, and apply the proceeds in payment of a debt due from the grantor. Hopkins v. Watts, 27 Ga. 490. But compare Sturtevant v. Sturtevant, 20 N. Y. 39, and Clagett v. Hall, 9 Gill & J. (Md.) 80, where it is held that in the absence of allegations of fraud or mistake, an absolute conveyance cannot be made out to be in trust, by parol evidence. Thus, one whose grantee has sold the land, is precluded from showing a resulting trust, and recovering the price of the land.

6. See supra, this title, Creation of Trusts; 1 Greenl. on Ev., § 266; 2 Whart. on Ev., §§ 903, 1034; Rathbun v. Rathbun, 6 Barb. (N. Y.) 98; Norton v. Mallory, 63 N. Y. 434; Kinsey v. Bennett, 37 S. Car. 319.

Parol evidence of a secret trust, and of a contract to convey land, is inadmissible under the Statute of Frauds; but, independent of the statute, the evidence will not avail against the denial of the alleged trustee and vendor.

A trust may be proved by circumstantial evidence,¹ by admissions in the pleadings made either explicitly or by implication by the party sought to be charged,² or by his admissions elsewhere made.³

The trustee can make no admissions to the prejudice of the estate or of the beneficiary.⁴

Subsequent declarations of the trustee are competent evidence to establish a trust.⁵

Declarations made by the grantor are admissible, if made at the time the trust was created and while the grantor still retained an interest in the property.⁶ Declarations of a purpose to create Chiles v. Woodson, 2 Bibb (Ky.) 71; Barbin v. Gaspard, 15 La. Ann. 539.

1. Lamb v. Girtman, 26 Ga. 625; Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377.

Where the plaintiff alleges an express trust, he is bound to prove it, as averred. It may be proved by circumstances, and the court will look to the then existing circumstances, to see the intention of the parties. Gunter v. Janes, 9 Cal. 643.

A single witness' evidence, unsupported by corroborating circumstances, stating the defendant's admission of facts denied in the answer, is insufficient to establish an express trust. Miller v. Thatcher, 9 Tex. 482; 40 Am. Dec. 172. See Hall v. Layton, 16 Tex. 262.

2. A letter from the trustee to the cestui que trust admitting the existence of the trust, is evidence in an action between the cestui que trust and a party (a volunteer) to whom the trustee afterward conveyed, and supported by evidence of similar declarations of the trustee, is sufficient to establish the trust. Massey v. Massey, 20 Tex. 134.

A deceased trustee's admissions, particularly if corroborated, are sufficient to establish a trust based upon a negative fact, as the non-payment of the purchase-money by the trustee to his vendors, the alleged beneficiaries. Van Dever v. Freeman, 20 Tex. 333; 70 Am. Dec. 391.

A grantee's admission in an absolute deed that it was intended as a trust deed, made in his answer to a bill against him for the enforcement of the trust, was sufficient evidence to establish the trust under the Statute of Frauds, although he denied that he ever accepted it or interfered with the trust estate. Maccubbin v. Cromwell, 7 Gill & J. (Md.) 157.

A parol trust in land may be proved by admissions contained in the trustee's answer under oath. McVay v. McVay, 43 N. J. Eq. 47.

3. The declarations of one under oath, that he gave money as a gift, and had no interest in the land purchased with it, may be given as proof to bar his claims to a resulting trust in such land. Graves v. Graves, 3 Metc. (Ky.) 167.

In a suit to enforce a trust created by parol, it is proper for the complainant to interpose any evidence of acts or words of the defendant, which tends to show a recognition by him of the trust. Chase v. Perley, 148 Mass. 289.

4. Thomas v. Bowman, 30 Ill. 84; Bragg v. Geddes, 93 Ill. 39.

5. Smith v. McElyea, 68 Tex. 70. But not sufficient. Williams v. Lowe, 4 Neb. 392.

The purchaser of land in his own name, but as agent or trustee of another, to whom he afterward conveys, is a witness to prove the trust. Brown v. Downing, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 494.

The declarations of one, while holding the legal title to an estate, are admissible to show that he is merely trustee against those claiming under him, though such person is alive and within reach of the process of the court. Giblehouse v. Stong, 3 Rawle (Pa.) 437.

6. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119; Price v. Kane, 112 Mo. 412.

On the question for whose benefit a trust was created, the declarations of the grantor made before the conveyance, are competent evidence, as are the subsequent declarations and acts of the trustee, and of those who hold under deeds from him. The grantor's declarations, made after the execution of the deed, are not, however, competent on the question of his intent in making it. Smith v. McElyea, 68 Tex. 70.

a trust, not carried out, are of no value ; nor are direct promises to that effect which do not amount to a contract.¹

Trusts provable by parol may be disproved by parol.²

Under the familiar rule of evidence, however, parol evidence will not be admitted to vary the terms of a trust created in writing.³

The legality of the trust and the faithful performance of the trust by the trustee being presumed,⁴ the burden of proof is on the party who seeks to show the contrary. Payments made by the trustee to the beneficiary will be presumed to be payments on account of income from the trust estate, in the absence of a showing to the contrary.⁵

These presumptions make only a prima facie case for the trustee, however, for his statement of accounts will not be accepted as conclusive in his favor.⁶

1. Allen v. Withrow, 110 U. S. 119.

2. 2 Whart. on Ev., § 1035.

The presumption of a trust, raised by parol evidence, may be repelled by parol. Smith v. Howell, 11 N. J. Eq. 349; Botsford v. Burr, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 405; Page v. Page, 8 N. H. 187; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Edwards v. Edwards, 39 Pa. St. 369.

3. Gainus v. Cannon, 42 Ark. 503; Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 195; Lake v. Freer, 11 Ill. App. 576; Steere v. Steere, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 1; 9 Am. Dec. 256; Taylor v. Baldwin, 10 Barb. (N. Y.) 585; Richards v. Crocker, 20 N. Y. Supp. 954; 66 Hun (N. Y.) 629; Dickenson v. Dickenson, 2 Murph. (N. Car.) 279; Lloyd v. Inglis, 1 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 333; Harris v. Barnett, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 323; Lewis v. Lewis, 2 Ch. R. 77; Finch's Case, 4 Inst. 86; Childers v. Childers, 3 K. & J. 310; 1 De G. & J. 482; Fordyce v. Willis, 3 Bro. C. C. 587; Leman v. Whitley, 4 Russ. 423.

But parol evidence may be heard where the trust was discretionary, to prove how that discretion was exercised. Simms v. Smith, 11 Ga. 195.

But the trustee, who is the lessor of the plaintiff, has been held to be a competent witness to show that the real trust is different from the one apparent in the conveyance. Drum v. Simpson, 6 Binn. (Pa.) 478; 6 Am. Dec. 490.

The recitals in the declaration of the trust will estop the trustee to show that in fact it was executed at a time other than that of which it bears date. Russell v. Peyton, 4 Ill. App. 473.

A trustee is not competent to prove that the deed of trust was never intended to have any operation for the purposes therein expressed. Wilson v. Wilson, 1 Desaus. Eq. (S. Car.) 219.

In Price v. Kane, 112 Mo. 412, it was held that where a husband had conveyed land in trust for his wife, reserving no power of revocation, parol evidence of the wife's declaration that the property was her husband's, and that she would reconvey it to him whenever he asked it, is not sufficient to establish a trust in such property in his favor.

4. See supra, this title, Pleading.

A trustee cannot be surcharged upon evidence of witnesses that the property ought to have yielded more than it did, where no evidence exists as to particulars, and there is evidence that the rents demanded were at reasonable prices, and that everything received had been accounted for, and the property considerably improved under his management. Moore's Appeal, 10 Pa. St. 435.

5. Woodard v. Wright, 82 Cal. 202.

6. Baker v. Williamson, 4 Pa. St. 456.

In a suit involving a title to land in Texas, it was held that a decree rendered by a court of chancery of another state was admissible to show the nature and terms of the trust under which money was transferred to a trustee in Texas to be invested. Wallace v. Campbell, 53 Tex. 229.

In a controversy between a trustee and a cestui que trust, it was held proper to admit in evidence a transcript of the settlement of the trustee's accounts made before a court of the county, in which the deed of trust

Cases illustrating the competency of evidence under peculiar circumstances, are cited below.¹

6. Costs.—It is not possible to lay down any rules of general was recorded. McAfee v. Balden, 6 Bush (Ky.) 537.

1. In Luco v. DeToro, 91 Cal. 405, A, who was the owner of the equitable interest in unpatented lands, employed an attorney to procure a patent for the same for the person through whom A claimed title, and promised the attorney a certain portion of the land in the event of his success. The attorney transferred his interest in the trust which A held for him, and in a suit by the assignee against A's personal representative to recover the attorney's interest, it was contended by the defendant that both the attorney and his assignee had abandoned the contract. It was held that evidence was admissible which tended to show that, until the procurement of the patent, the assignee continued to expend on it sums of money for that purpose.

A trustee may not prove by parol the amount of costs expended by him in receiving trust property. Gates v. Hunter, 13 Mo. 511.

Where the plaintiff had given in evidence what was alleged to be an express trust, executed by the holder of the legal title, the defendant's evidence explanatory of the transaction out of which the alleged trust arose, as to the intention of the parties and the terms and effects of the trust, was held to be admissible; as was also evidence that the purchaser under whom the plaintiff claimed had no title in the land (of which notice was given before the sale), that he had made no payment, nor offer of payment, of his share of the purchase-money, and that he had by parol waived all his right on account of the purchase. Deltzler v. Mishler, 37 Pa. St. 82.

If, while a suit in equity is pending relating to property assigned in trust, sales are made after the committee's report and before its acceptance, varying the state of the accounts between the parties, on a final hearing before the court evidence of such sale is admissible. Kendall v. New England Carpet Co., 13 Conn. 383.

Where certain land was deeded to a certain person under a parol contract that he should reconvey one-half of the land, and he mortgaged the land, and afterward, upon the institution of a suit to foreclose, executed a declaration in writing of the trust, it was held that such declaration was valid, and in proof of the trust was admissible in evidence in the foreclosure suit in behalf of the cestui que trust. Sime v. Howard, 4 Nev. 473.

The plaintiff brought suit to recover land which he had purchased at a judicial sale. The defendant asserted an equity attaching to the estate by virtue of a definite agreement that plaintiff would buy the land for defendant and reconvey to him, upon being repaid the sum bid with accrued interest. It was held competent, after the admissions of evidence of such an agreement, to show that there was a general impression among the bystanders at the sale that such was the understanding, and that there was no competition in consequence among the bidders, and that evidence was also admissible to corroborate defendant's statement as to what the actual agreement was. Cheek v. Watson, 85 N. Car. 195.

By his bill of complaint, a cestui que trust sought to hold the maker of a promissory note belonging to a trust estate, liable for deductions from the amount due thereon allowed by the trustee, on the ground of collusion between the trustee and the maker. It was held that the maker of the note might introduce evidence to show the good faith of the trustee, as well as evidence that he had no notice of the trustee's fraudulent intention. Maynard v. Cleveland, 76 Ga. 62.

In an action to have a party declared a trustee, and to compel him, as such, to convey land claimed to have been acquired by him from a third party as trustee of the party making complaint, the latter party may not introduce testimony as to whether he knew that the other was about to make the purchase. Branson v. Caruthers, 49 Cal. 375.

In an action for the recovery of money alleged to have been received by the defendant in trust, if complainant introduces no direct evidence of any contract or conditions under which the money was received, but relies upon circumstances, the defendant may testify to the purpose for which he supposed the money was given him, and application, which may be said to govern courts of equity in their jurisdiction over trusts in reference to the awarding of costs; this is a matter within the discretion of the court, and generally the exercise of this discretion cannot be reviewed upon appeal.¹

A general rule, however, may be stated to be, that a trustee who is acting within the line of his duty and in good faith appears before the court as the party to a suit, whether instituted by himself or against him, will be held exempt from the payment of costs out of his personal income, and any costs incurred by him under such circumstances will be repaid out of the trust fund under the order of the court having jurisdiction in the premises, or by the cestui que trust.²

Subject to the reasonable discretion of the court in awarding the understanding with which he received it. Davis v. Coburn, 128 Mass. 377.

In an action for the recovery of property conveyed in trust to secure debts, evidence that the debts had been "paid or nearly so," was properly rejected. Poole v. Adkisson, 1 Dana (Ky.) 110.

In Barry v. Lambert, 98 N. Y. 300; 50 Am. Rep. 677, it appeared that a bond and mortgage had been executed to defendant and M as executors for $8,000, $6,000 of this sum belonged to the estate, and the balance was loaned by the plaintiff to M. In an action brought by plaintiff to enforce a trust in the bond and mortgage for this loan, it was held competent to admit M's declaration made soon after the loan, when she was in feeble health and anticipating an early death, to the effect that she had received the loan, and that plaintiff was to have an interest in the mortgage as security therefor, and that it was her intention to execute a written acknowledgment to that effect; and this was considered a good and sufficient declaration of trust.

1. Taylor v. Root, 48 N. Y. 687; Gray v. Dougherty, 25 Cal. 266; State v. Tolan, 33 N. J. L. 195. See also COSTS, vol. 4, pp. 317, 322. The plaintiff may be charged with costs. Armstrong v. Zane's Heirs, 12 Ohio St. 287; Coleman v. Ross, 46 Pa. St. 180.

Costs, in equity actions, are not a matter of course, but always in the discretion of the court, and hence to entitle either party to them it is necessary that the court should expressly allow them. Kreitz v. Frost, 55 Barb. (N. Y.) 474.

2. Lowrie's Appeal, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 373; Graver's Appeal, 50 Pa. St. 189; Callender v. Keystone Mut. Life

Ins. Co., 23 Pa. St. 471; Bendall v. Bendall, 24 Ala. 295; 60 Am. Dec. 469; Morton v. Barrett, 22 Me. 257; 39 Am. Dec. 575; Bliss v. American Bible Soc., 2 Allen (Mass.) 334; Minuse v. Cox, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 451; 9 Am. Dec. 313; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 473; Hosack v. Rogers, 9 Paige (N. Y.) 463; Hall v. Hallet, 1 Cox 141; Norris v. Norris, 1 Cox 183; Sammes v. Rickman, 2 Ves. Jr. 38; Rashley v. Masters, 1 Ves. Jr. 201; Roche v. Hart, 11 Ves. 58; Taylor v. Glanville, 3 Madd. 176.

The rule is stated more broadly by Lewin, and by Flint in his American notes to Lewin on Trusts, as follows: "The general rule is that a trustee shall have his costs of suit awarded to him at the hearing, either out of the trust estate or to be paid by his cestui que trust." 2 Lewin on Trusts and Trustees (Am. ed. of 1888), pp. 985, 987.

In a proceeding to obtain the instruction of the court as to the mode of executing the trust, see Trotter v. Blocker, 6 Port. (Ala.) 269; Jones v. Stockett, 2 Bland (Md.) 409.

A testamentary provision, made for carrying trusts into effect, embraces the costs of a suit in relation to such trusts. Stagg v. Beekman, 2 Edw. (N. Y.) 89.

As a rule, a testamentary trustee who abandons the trust for his own convenience, is chargeable with the expense of all proceedings necessary to obtain his discharge from the trust. If, however, independently of his resignation and withdrawal, an account should be filed at about the same time, he may be allowed the costs strictly pertinent to the accounting. Brautigam v. Escher, 2 Dem. (N. Y.) 269.

If the suit is brought upon a contract entered into by the testator or in-costs according to the circumstances of the particular case at bar, the unsuccessful party is, as a general rule, held for the costs;¹ but this rule is not enforced as strictly against a trustee as against others, for he will be protected as long as he acts with reasonable diligence and care.²

The trustee who acts in bad faith, or who is in the wrong through carelessness, will be charged with whatever costs his misconduct or negligence has occasioned.³

Where a trustee appears before the court for the purpose of obtaining an order for the reimbursement of his expenses, and testate, or for a wrong done in his lifetime, the executors or administrators are not liable for costs. Justices v. Haygood, 20 Ga. 847; Jamison v. Lindsay, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 79; Roosevelt v. Ellithorp, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 415.

1. Westley v. Williamson, 2 Moll. 458; Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Ed. 251; Dunlop v. Hubbard, 19 Ves. 205; Hill v. Mague, 2 Moll. 46; Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. Jr. 326.

2. A trustee holding, as such, an award for his cestui, of damages for land taken to widen streets, cannot be made to account for costs, though not successful in maintaining his cestui que trust's right to the whole of the award against her tenant of the premises taken, who claimed a part of it. Coutant v. Catlin, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 485.

The Georgia practice as to appeals by trustees without paying costs, etc., where the judgment is against the estate, is discussed in Sawyer v. Cheney, 59 Ga. 368.

3. Warbass v. Armstrong, 10 N. J. Eq. 263; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; McCarter's Estate, 94 N. Y. 558; Chamberlin v. Estey, 55 Vt. 378; Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. 137; Franklin v. Frith, 3 Bro. C. C. 433; Seers v. Hind, 1 Ves. 294; Pietz v. Stace, 4 Ves. 620.

In determining whether a case of fraud is made out against a trustee, such as, under Gen. Statutes of New Hampshire, ch. 230, § 43, will render him liable for costs, although not chargeable as trustee, the court may act either upon the finding of the jury, or upon its own view of the evidence. Kent v. Hutchins, 50 N. H. 92.

Trustees will not generally be allowed the costs consequent upon their separate defenses, unless some of them have a beneficial interest, or there is some special reason for their severance. Gaunt v. Taylor, 2 Beav. 346; 4 Jur.

166; Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158; Tarback v. Woodcock, 3 Beav. 289; Hodson v. Cash, 1 Jur. N. S. 864; Course v. Humphrey, 26 Beav. 402; 5 Jur. N. S. 615; Prince v. Hine, 27 Beav. 345; Atty. Gen'l v. Wyville, 28 Beav. 464.

An executor or administrator failing in an unjust claim, is personally liable to the defendants for costs. Show v. Conway, 7 Pa. St. 136. And see Muntorf v. Muntorf, 2 Rawle (Pa.) 180; Harrison v. Warner, 1 Blackf. (Ind.) 385.

If the suit is groundless or vexatious, Roosevelt v. Ellithorp, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 415, or rendered necessary by the trustee's mere caprice or obstinacy, he may be charged with the costs personally. Brinton's Estate, 10 Pa. St. 408; Lathrop v. Smalley, 23 N. J. Eq. 192; Smith v. Bolden, 33 Beav. 266; Jones v. Lewis, 1 Cox 199.

If a trustee has mingled the trust fund with his own money, and not accounted for the full sum due from him, he will not be allowed his costs in a bill filed by him to obtain a discharge from further execution of the trust. Bogle v. Bogle, 3 Allen (Mass.) 158.

If the amount found due a trustee is much less than the sum claimed, he may be decreed to pay the costs. Atty. Gen'l v. Brewers Co., 1 P. Wms. 376.

If a trustee willfully misstates his accounts, he will be charged with costs. Sheppard v. Smith, 2 Bro. P. C. 372; Flannagan v. Nolan, 1 Moll. 86. And so, if he has kept them in a careless or confused manner, Norbury v. Calbeck, 2 Moll. 461; or keeps the beneficiary from a correct knowledge of them by chicanery in his answer, Avery v. Osborne, Barn. 349; Reech v. Kennegal, 1 Ves. 123; or refuses to account at all, he will be charged with costs. Boynton v. Richardson, 31 Beav. 340; Wroe v. Seed, 4 Gif. 425; Kemp v. Burn, 4 Gif. 348.

A trustee holding property in trust compensation for services rendered, he may properly ask that the costs be taxed against the estate and not against himself,¹ but not where the proceeding involves matters of purely personal interest to the trustee.² Where a trustee is entitled to costs out of the fund, they will be taxed as between solicitor and client.³

7. The Decree.—Inasmuch as a court of equity enforces its orders against the person rather than the thing in controversy, its decree is operative so long as the parties to be controlled by it are within reach of the arm of the court. Equity acts upon the conscience; hence, a trustee within the jurisdiction of the court can be compelled to perform acts in relation to property which lies beyond the territory over which the court has authority.⁴ But a trustee appointed by a foreign court, or acting under authority therefrom, is amenable to that court alone, and cannot be controlled by a local court, merely because he resides within the territorial jurisdiction thereof.⁵

As has been said elsewhere in this article, the court, having for a married woman, who refuses to convey the legal title to a purchaser from the husband and wife, and answers a bill seeking a conveyance, resisting the relief sought, so far identifies himself with the cause of his co-defendants as to make himself liable to a decree for costs. Knowles v. Knowles, 86 Ill. 1.

Under Wisconsin Revised Statutes (1858), § 49, ch. 133, an administrator is not personally liable for costs in an action brought by him in his representative capacity for a conversion of a part of the estate, whether such conversion occurred before or after the death of his intestate, unless he has been guilty of mismanagement or bad faith in maintaining the action. Knox v. Bigelow, 15 Wis. 415.

1. Trustees v. Greenough, 105 U. S. 527.

In a proceeding by a trustee for a settlement and compensation for services, where the only issue found against him concerns the amount claimed for services, all costs should be adjudged in his favor, except such as pertain to that issue only. Lape v. Jones (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 658.

2. Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 62.

While it is a general rule that the costs of the accounting fall upon the trust estate, this rule does not apply where the trustee, to suit his own ends and his own convenience, refuses to continue with the trust. Matter of Edwards, 10 Daly (N. Y.) 68.

3. McKim v. Handy, 4 Md. Ch. 228;

Mohun v. Mohun, 1 Swanst. 201; Saunders v. Saunders, 3 Jur. N. S. 727; Moore v. Frowd, 3 Myl. & C. 49.

4. Trustee's Removal from the State.—Where the instrument creating a trust provides "that if a trustee named shall refuse or become unable to execute the trust according to the true intent and meaning thereof," certain persons named shall "have power under his or their hands and seals to appoint some other person to do the same," the trustee, by his removal from the state, does not become unable to execute the trust, nor is such removal to be construed as a refusal by him to perform the trust. Bonner v. Lessley, 61 Miss. 392.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has jurisdiction to force a trustee, a resident of that state, to convey the legal title to lands lying in other states, and held by him in trust. Vaughn v. Barclay, 6 Whart. (Pa.) 392.

Where a bill is filed to execute a testamentary trust, and a partition of land lying in various counties and chancery districts, is necessary, in execution of that trust, a court of chancery acquires, by a personal service of all the parties in interest, jurisdiction to divide such lands, without regard to their location; and an equity court, sitting in any district in which a part of said lands lie, may make partition of them, according to the provisions of the Tennessee Act of 1827 and 1829. Todd v. Cannon, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 512.

5. Curtis v. Smith, 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 550; Campbell v. Sheldon, 13 Pick.

once assumed jurisdiction of the parties and the subject-matter, will retain control for the purpose of accomplishing justice between the parties.¹ This is true in many cases where the several acts of the court might alone be beyond its power to perform. But no general rule can be laid down which will set limitations to the power of the chancellor in matters relating to trusts. Individual cases, with their varying circumstances and facts, fall within the sound discretion of the court sitting in equity, and it is not possible to formulate any rules which shall control the exercise of this judicial discretion. Generally speaking, the court has power to enforce, against all parties to a valid trust, the performance of all duties imposed upon them by the provisions of (Mass.) 8; Campbell v. Wallace, 10 Gray (Mass.) 162; Chase v. Chase, 2 Allen (Mass.) 104; Smith v. Mutual Ins. Co., 14 Allen (Mass.) 342; Curtis v. Smith, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 9.

Where the decree of a court of one state creates a trust, the court of another state has no jurisdiction to enforce such a trust on behalf of the beneficiary or his creditors, even though the trustee personally resides in the latter state, but has given no bond and filed no inventory in the state where he was appointed. Jenkins v. Lester, 131 Mass. 355. See also Leland v. Smith, 131 Mass. 358, note.

1. McLaughlin v. Van Keuren, 21 N. J. Eq. 379; Speakman v. Tatem, 45 N. J. Eq. 388.

If a note given to an administrator for the purchase-money of decedent's personal estate is transferred by the administrator, in payment of his own debt, a subsequent administrator (the first having resigned his office) may file a bill to enjoin the collection of the note by the assignee; and the chancery court, having entertained jurisdiction to assist in the execution of the trust imposed on the administrator, and to prevent a multiplicity of suits, may grant relief, and order the note to be given up to the acting administrator. Scott v. Searles, 7 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 498; 45 Am. Dec. 317.

In Phillips v. Phillips, 50 Mo. 603, a father had conveyed most of his land by absolute deed of gift to his son. Parol evidence was introduced showing that the father relied upon this son not to "defraud his brother and sister." The grantee, the deeds being lost, brought suit for a decree establishing his title, one of the cestuis que trustent being a minor. The court held that the minor must be protected, and that its decree would be withheld until satisfactory provision was made for the protection of the minor's interests.

Where a trust attached to a particular legal estate in the defendant is established by the plaintiff, and the defendant sets up a distinct legal title, the court will decide between the two legal titles. Henderson v. Hoke, 1 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 119.

The court will, in its discretion, grant such a decree as to it seems right under the circumstances. Thus, where a trust fund is in danger of being converted to the injury of any claimant having a present or future fixed title thereto, a court of chancery may direct such fund to be administered in such a manner as, in its discretion, shall best secure the objects and purposes of the trust. Tappan v. Ricamio, 16 N. J. Eq. 89.

Equity may direct the conversion of a trust fund from personal property into real estate, when for the interest of the cestui que trust, and not in conflict with the will. Ex p. Jordan, 4 Del. Ch. 615.

Where infant cestuis que trustent under a trust deed conveyed to their mother 1,500 acres of land, which was sold for taxes, and purchased from the estate by one who agreed that their parents might repurchase 1,400 acres thereof for $1,500, filed a bill in equity showing themselves unable either to redeem or repurchase except by sale of a portion, it was held that the chancery court might elect between a sale of the portion necessary or an extension of the contract of repurchase, as might be most advantageous to the plaintiff. Johns v. Smith, 56 Miss. 727.

Where a testator left to his executors a fund, the income of which was to be applied for the use of the legatee, his wife and family, during his life, and he the trust, to determine the construction of the instrument creating the trust, and fix its bounds and limitations, and instruct the trustee in his execution of it.

The court is generally bound by the terms of the instrument of trust, so long as they are legal and enforceable; but conditions may arise under which the court may with propriety go counter to the direct requirements of the trust instrument.¹

Thus, it will correct any mistake that may have been made in the execution of the instrument creating the trust, reform the instrument itself and enforce the provisions which it may deem beneficial or equitable, modifying those which in its judgment would, if strictly enforced, tend to work hardship or injustice.²

became so intemperate as to be unfit to receive it, the orphans' court, upon petition presented, ordered that a portion of the income should be paid to the wife for the benefit of the family. It was held that such a decree was not error. Noble's Appeal, 39 Pa. St. 425.

In Meddis v. Bull (Ky. 1892), 18 S. W. Rep. 6, a testator created certain trusts, whereby his widow was to receive an annuity, the payment of the same being secured by a lien upon all estate and property not specifically devised. The residuary estate embraced much unproductive land. The will conferred upon the original trustee and executor the power to sell this unproductive real estate, but denied this power to his successors. The original trustee resigned. The estate chargeable with the widow's annuity did not produce a sufficient income to pay it. It was held that the court had the power to order the sale of the unproductive lands, invest the proceeds in other property from which a profit might be derived to help pay the widow's annuity, and thus save the body of the estate to the remainder-men.

A married woman, who, by the terms of a trust, is entitled to an annuity for her sole and separate use, the corpus of the trust fund being secured for her children, may look to the actual produce of the fund for her annuity. If the trustee, with her co-operation and approval, has carried on the trust farm and produced supplies for her support and for the conduct of the farm, it is within the power of a court of equity to sanction what he has done, appoint a receiver and take possession of the farm, and decree that a part of the future net income year by year be applied to the satisfaction of accumulated indebtedness owing to creditors for supplies so furnished. Robert v. Tift, 60 Ga. 566.

1. The court may order the sale of unproductive property if the cestuis que trustent are destitute, even though no power of sale be conferred by the terms of the trust. Voris v. Sloan, 68 Ill. 588. Compare Curtiss v. Brown, 29 Ill. 201.

In the exercise by the court of the power to dispose of the trust estate otherwise than in the manner provided in the deed of trust, the court should proceed with great caution. It is the court's duty to put itself in the position of the creator of the trust, and act as he would have done had he anticipated the existing contingency. Curtiss v. Brown, 29 Ill. 201.

Courts of equity have power, in cases of necessity, to order a disposition of trust estates, which is not in accordance with the provisions of the trust deed. Curtiss v. Brown, 29 Ill. 201.

A court of equity has power, when a proper case is made, to order trustees to anticipate the time of payment under a will, so far as it may appear necessary for the maintenance of the devisees, the testator's children. Rhoads v. Rhoads, 43 Ill. 239.

2. Finlayson v. Finlayson, 17 Oregon 347; 11 Am. St. Rep. 836.

Reformation.—It is within the power of the court, under a prayer for general relief in an action, to set aside a trust deed, to reform the same, and create a permanent trust according to the real interest of the parties. Riddle v. Cutter, 49 Iowa 547.

Where the legal title to real estate has been invested in a trustee to hold and convey the same to other parties for certain purposes, and the intention of the parties cannot be carried out, because, by an oversight, the legal title had been conveyed to an infant, a

Whatever is necessary for the preservation of the subject-matter, or the protection of the rights of the cestui que trust, will be done, whether contemplated in the instrument of trust or not.¹

XX. TERMINATION OF THE TRUST.—A trust may be brought to an end, first, by operation of law; second, by its own limitations; third, by the act of the parties.

1. By Operation of Law.—As has been seen, the trust will continue no longer than the legitimate purposes contemplated in its creation require. Artificial estates are not favored by the courts. It is only when the trust requires the performance of some active duty by the trustee, or the preservation of some contingent or residuary interest or estate that the trust once created will be kept alive.²

Under certain limitations, a trust may be terminated by lapse of time,³ or by the decree of a court of competent jurisdiction. But a decree declaring a trust terminated is only permissible when the parties in interest have all consented thereto, or the purposes of the trust have been substantially accomplished.⁴

2. By Its Own Limitations.—Seldom, if ever, is a trust perpetual. The failure of beneficiaries, the complete fulfillment of every court of equity will set aside such a conveyance. Hawthorn v. Root, 6 Bush (Ky.) 501.

1. Where a trust fund in the custody of the court is about to be wasted or misapplied, the court should prevent it. Thomas v. Morgan County, 59 Ill. 479. See also Moore v. School Trustees, 19 Ill. 83.

If a trustee turns the trust property over to the custody of one who neglects to care for it properly, a court of equity will interfere to protect the property from waste. Heyman v. Kelly, 1 Nev. 180.

2. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

3. See supra, this title, Statute of Limitations—Laches—Lapse of Time.

4. Thompson v. Ballard, 70 Md. 10; Bowditch v. Andrew, 8 Allen (Mass.) 339; Inches v. Hill, 106 Mass. 577; Sears v. Choate, 146 Mass. 395; 4 Am. St. Rep. 320; Norris v. Thomson, 19 N. J. Eq. 314; Short v. Willson, 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 33; In re Thompson's Estate, 10 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 472; In re Seipe's Estate, 11 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 27.

Where the whole object and purpose of a trust have been accomplished, the interests created under it have all vested, the parties request it and the trustee consents, a court of equity may decree the determination of the trust. Bowditch v. Andrew, 8 Allen (Mass.) 339. See also Smith v. Harrington, 4

Allen (Mass.) 566; Inches v. Hill, 106 Mass. 575; Stone, Petitioner, 138 Mass. 476; Gannon v. Ruffin, 151 Mass. 204.

The court will not decree a trust to be at an end, where its purposes have not been accomplished and the interests have not yet all vested. Brandenburg v. Thorndike, 139 Mass. 102.

It was held in Taylor v. Taylor, 9 R. I. 119, that the trustee holding under a naked trust could be compelled to convey to the beneficiary. And such a decree was entered in Kay v. Scates, 37 Pa. St. 31; 78 Am. Dec. 399. In the latter case the court, by Strong, J., said: "In Rush v. Lewis, 21 Pa. St. 72, and Kuhn v. Newman, 26 Pa. St. 227, this court refused to decree a conveyance from the nominal trustee, in cases where the legal estate was held to be executed in the cestui que trust by force of law, on the ground that there was no necessity for it. Yet the nominal trust beclouds the title, and embarrasses the rights of alienation, which belong to the true owner. We think it better, therefore, to decree a conveyance, and such is the practice of courts of chancery, where the purposes of a trust once existing have been accomplished."

Unless it is so provided in the creation of the trust, a trustee does not possess the right to continue to hold the trust interest in himself, and a conveyance of it to the beneficiary may be contemplated purpose, or the disappearance or destruction of the property held in trust, must of necessity put an end to the existence of the trust.

The mere change of the character of the trust property will not terminate the trust. The trust will attach to the product or substitute of the article or property originally subject to the trust, and will cease only when the means of identification fail.¹

The term for which the trust will continue is generally fixed by the instrument creating the trust, and the mode of effecting a termination of it is, in many instances, provided by the settlor therein. Thus, a trust with power of alienation is forever ended by the execution and delivery of a conveyance under that power.² And a trust "to sell land for the benefit of creditors" ceases when the indebtedness for which the security was given has been legally discharged.³

3. By the Act of the Parties—a. BY THE SETTLOR—REVOCA-TION—REVOCA-TION OF TRUSTS FOR CREDITORS.—There is little, if any, authority of weight to support the proposition occasionally contended for, that a voluntary trust once fairly created can be revoked, in the absence of a clause in the instrument reserving this power to the settlor,⁴ or of evidence showing that the enforced by a court of equity. Stewart v. Chadwick, 8 Iowa 463.

In Sears v. Choate, 146 Mass. 395; 4 Am. St. Rep. 320, the court, by Morton, C. J., said: "There is no doubt of the power and duty of the court to decree the termination of a trust, where all its objects and purposes have been accomplished, where the interests under it have all vested, and where all parties beneficially interested desire its termination."

Where the beneficiary sues in equity to compel his trustee to convey the legal title to him, he may recover the rents and profits which the trustee has received to his use while in possession of the land. Hill v. Cooper, 8 Oregon 255.

Land was conveyed in trust for the grantor's wife, with power to appoint. Upon the grantor's death, the trustee was directed to convey to her; upon her death without having made an appointment, to the party entitled by the law of the state. She died without having exercised the power. The grantor was held to be entitled to a reconveyance, and it was held that the wife's heirs had no claim to the land. Bond v. Moore, 90 N. Car. 239.

On the other hand, under the operation of the New York statutes, a different rule prevails in that state. In Lent v. Howard, 89 N. Y. 181, the court, by Andrews, C. J., said: "There are authorities that hold that it is in the power of a court of equity to decree the determination of unexecuted trusts, where the parties beneficially interested unite in the application. Smith v. Harrington, 4 Allen (Mass.) 566; Perry on Trusts, § 920, and cases cited. Whatever view may be taken of the general jurisdiction of courts of equity, in the absence of any statutory or legislative policy, to abrogate continuing trusts, created for the purpose of providing a sure support for the widow or children of a testator, or other beneficiary, the indestructibility of such trusts here, by judicial decree, results, we think, from the inalienable character impressed upon them by statute."

Where by its provisions a trust has terminated on the death of the beneficiary, and the fund has never been invested in any specific property, the personal representative of the beneficiary may recover the fund. Lynde v. Davenport, 57 Vt. 597.

1. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary—Following the Trust Property; Phillips v. Overfield, 160 Mo. 466.

2. Thatcher v. St. Andrew's Church, 37 Mich. 264.

3. Selden v. Vermilyea, 3 N. Y. 525.

4. See supra, this title, Nature of the Trustee's Estate.

A trust voluntarily and fairly created cannot be revoked by the settlor, unless the power of revocation has been reserved in the instrument of trust. Light v. Scott, 88 Ill. 239; Cobb v. Knight, 74 Me. 253; Smith v. Darby, 39 Md. 278; Taylor v. Henry, 48 Md. 561; 30 Am. Rep. 486; Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293; Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Salisbury v. Bigelow, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 183; Sherwood v. Andrews, 2 Allen (Mass.) 79; Dennison v. Goehring, 7 Pa. St. 175; 47 Am. Dec. 505; Ritter's Appeal, 59 Pa. St. 9; Tolar v. Tolar, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 460; 18 Am. Dec. 598; Dawson v. Dawson, 1 Dev. Eq. (N. Car.) 93, 396; 18 Am. Dec. 573; Brookbank v. Brookbank, 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 168; Villers v. Beaumont, 1 Vern. 464; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 23, pl. 3; Bale v. Newton, 1 Vern. 464; 1 Eq. Cas. Abr. 24, pl. 6; Broughton v. Broughton, 1 Atk. 625; Petre v. Espinasee, 2 Myl. & K. 496; Bill v. Cureton, 2 Myl. & K. 503; Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238; Newton v. Askew, 11 Beav. 145; Smith v. Lyne, 2 Y. & C. 345; Paterson v. Murphy, 11 Hare 88; Paul v. Paul, L. R., 19 Ch. Div. 47; In re Way's Trust, 10 Jur. 837; 2 De G. J. & S. 365; Kilpin v. Kilpin, 1 Myl. & K. 531; Addington v. Cann, 3 Atk. 151.

An executed voluntary settlement, understandingly made and not affected by fraud, accident, or mistake, is valid and binding, and beyond the power of alteration, unless the power of revocation is reserved. Sargent v. Baldwin, 60 Vt. 17.

In Baltimore v. Williams, 6 Md. 235, the court, by Eccleston, J., said: "We think that, unless under some peculiar circumstances, when a deed conveys lands in trust for such uses as are declared or set out in a will already made, neither the deed or the will is revocable, if no power of revocation is reserved in the deed. And when a deed conveys lands in trust for such uses as the grantor may afterwards appoint by will or deed, if the appointment be by will, then the will may be revoked and new uses declared. But if this power is executed by such an instrument as may properly be considered a deed, and not a testamentary paper, then the appointment cannot be revoked, provided the deed executing the power reserves no authority to revoke."

In Stone v. King, 7 R. I. 358; 84 Am. Dec. 557, the court, by Ames, C.

J., said: "The party who makes a voluntary deed, whether of real or personal estate, without reserving the power of altering or revoking it, has no right to disturb it, and as against himself it is valid and binding, both in equity and at law." Bunn v. Winthrop, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 329; Bristor v. Tasker, 135 Pa. St. 110; 20 Am. St. Rep. 853; Sargent v. Baldwin, 60 Vt. 17.

In Theband v. Schermerhorn, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 200, it was held that a married woman who has deliberately created a valid trust upon her property, cannot recall it, nor can the trustee, by his act, terminate the trust; and a conveyance by the trustee to her of the trust property carries with it the trust, and the supreme court has no power to extinguish it.

In Souverbye v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 240, the court, by Chancellor Kent, said: "A voluntary settlement fairly made is always binding in equity upon the grantor, unless there be clear and decisive proof that he never parted nor intended to part with the possession of the deed; even if he retains it, the weight of authority is decidedly in favor of its validity, unless there be other circumstances besides the mere fact of his retaining it, to show that it was not intended to be absolute." See also Shrader v. Bonker, 65 Barb. (N. Y.) 615; Brinckerhoff v. Lawrence, 2 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 406; Dempsey v. Tylee, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 96.

In Salisbury v. Bigelow, 20 Pick. (Mass.) 174, Wilde, J., in delivering the opinion, says: "It seems to be a well-settled principle of equity that when a voluntary settlement is fairly made, it cannot be annulled by the settlor, unless a power of revocation be reserved for that purpose."

In Souverbye v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 240, the court, by Chancellor Kent, in announcing this proposition, reviews the leading English authorities in support of the doctrine, citing with approval the following cases: Clavering v. Clavering, 2 Vern. 473; Lady Hudson's Case, 1 Bro. P. C. 122; Boughton v. Boughton, 1 Atk. 625; Johnson v. Smith, 1 Ves. 314; Villers v. Beaumont, 1 Vern. 100; Bale v. Newton, 1 Vern. 464.

In Clavering v. Clavering, 2 Vern. 473, a voluntary deed of settlement in trust, always kept by the grantor in his custody, never published, and found among his papers after his death, was held to control as against a subsequent settlement.

In Lady Hudson's Case, 1 Bro. P. C. 122, a father became displeased with his son, and had made an additional jointure on his wife, but kept it in his power; being afterward reconciled to his son, before his death, he canceled the additional jointure. Upon a suit brought after his death by the wife, the deed of jointure was held to be binding.

In Cotton v. King, 2 P. Wms. 358, a mother made a voluntary settlement in trust for her children, and delivered the duplicate deeds into the hands of her attorney and agent, "with the strict charge that he should not part with them," and no person was privy to the transaction. This settlement was held not to be binding.

In Falk v. Turner, 101 Mass. 494, the plaintiff, a married woman, brought suit to set aside a deed of trust, by which, before her marriage, she had conveyed all her property to the defendant, a trustee, for her exclusive benefit during her life, notwithstanding any marriage which she might contract; the trust to be terminable at any time when, in the opinion of the trustee, it should be for the best interest of the plaintiff to bring it to an end. But if it should continue until after the plaintiff's death, then the trust to be subject to her appointment by will, or, in default of such appointment, to be paid to her children then living, and the issue of any deceased children in equal shares, she being, at the time of executing the deed, a widow with minor children. The court, by Chapman, C. J., in deciding that the plaintiff had no right to terminate the trust, said: "The bill avers that she now desires to regain the possession and management of the property, and has the ability to manage it. Nothing appears in the case to raise a doubt as to her ability, either at present, or when she made the deed. But the ability of the cestui que trust to manage the property, or his desire to do so, has never been recognized as a ground for setting aside a trust. . . . Looking into the terms of the deed, we can find nothing unfair or unreasonable, which would authorize a court of equity to interfere within the principle stated in Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293. However desirable it may be on grounds of expediency that the present relations of the parties should cease to exist, no ground is established on which a court of equity can interfere." See also Viney v. Abbott, 109 Mass. 300; Sewall v. Roberts, 115 Mass. 272; Thurston, Petitioner, 154 Mass. 506.

Where a trust deed has been actually delivered to the grantee, the rights of the cestui que trust attach at once, and the effect of the delivery cannot be impaired by any mental reservation on the part of the grantor, or any oral condition repugnant to the terms of the deed attaching to the delivery. Wallace v. Berdell, 97 N. Y. 13.

In Skipwith v. Cunningham, 8 Leigh (Va.) 271; 31 Am. Dec. 642, the court, by Tucker, J., said: "The instant a legal title becomes vested in the trustee, a trust arises on behalf of those in whose favor it is declared, provided there be a sufficient consideration to sustain it, and from that moment, it is beyond the power of the grantor. He cannot revoke it, nor can he even extinguish it by getting a reconveyance; for no act of the trustee can affect the rights of the cestui que trust. If, indeed, one cestui que trust renounces the trust, then it either inures solely to the benefit of the rest, or, if there be no others, it results to the grantor; but until the renunciation is made, or implied from circumstances to be made, the trust continues."

An assignee, for the benefit of creditors, converted a portion of his assignor's assets to his own use, and afterward placed choses in action belonging to himself in an envelope indorsed with the name of the assignor, and a statement to the effect that the property inclosed should take the place of that misappropriated. This was construed to be a declaration of trust in favor of the estate assigned, which could not be revoked by the executor of such assignee. Jones v. Byland, 23 Wkly. Law Bull. 151.

Where a married woman and her husband, by a deed which contained no power of revocation, conveyed certain property to a trustee, to pay the income to her for her sole and separate use for life, and after her death to grant and convey the property to her son by a former husband, it was held, on the joint application of herself, her husband, and the ultimate beneficiary, that the court could not order a cancellation of the deed of trust, and the subject thereof, or any part of the same, to be transferred to the ultimate beneficiary; and that she, being under disability, would be protected from the undue influence which might have been brought to bear by her husband to destroy the trust created for her use. Twining's Appeal, 97 Pa. St. 36.

After a deed of trust has once taken effect, it is irrevocable, and its operations cannot be affected by any subsequent act of the grantor in exercising control over the property conveyed, or any omission on the part of the trustee to perform the duties of the trust. Compare Wallace v. Berdell, 97 N. Y. 13; Fisher v. Hall, 41 N. Y. 416; McLean v. Button, 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 450.

Where a husband had conveyed land by deed to his wife in trust for the husband's benefit during his life, and thereafter, the land to be sold, and the proceeds divided among his widow, if she survived him, and their children or grandchildren, it was held that the husband and wife could not revoke this trust and substitute for it another, so as to in any way affect the rights of the children and grandchildren. Gulick v. Gulick, 39 N. J. Eq. 401.

An improvident father conveyed his property in trust for his children to a trustee, C., who was to hold only until another could be agreed upon, when the scope and duration of the trust were to be fully settled and expressed; but C. died before the permanent trust was declared, and no provision was made for revocation. It was held that equity would not set the deed aside. Riddle v. Cutter, 49 Iowa 547.

If a married woman, in order to place her property beyond her husband's interference or control, voluntarily conveys it, without reserving any power of revocation, to the trustee to hold in trust for her during life, and upon her death according to her appointment by will, and fails to make such an appointment for her issue, her children have a beneficial interest in the trust fund, and she is not entitled, without such children's consent, to have the trust terminated, even after obtaining a divorce from her husband. Thurston, Petitioner, 154 Mass. 596.

In Twining v. Girard L. Assur., etc., Co., 14 Phila. (Pa.) 74, A and his wife delivered to a trustee a sum of money for the benefit of the wife, during her life, then to T. While A's wife was still living, T brought suit to have the money paid over to him at once by the trustee, A and his wife consenting. No power of revocation had been reserved, and it was held that T's bill should be dismissed.

An agreement constituting a declaration of trust is not revocable at the instance of the party competent to make it, merely because some of the cestui que trustent who joined in an instrument were minors, or under the disability of marriage at the time of its execution. Cressman's Appeal, 42 Pa. St. 147; 82 Am. Dec. 498.

A voluntary deed of trust was delivered by the grantor to a trustee, who communicated this fact to the cestui que trust and promised to have the deed recorded, but, to avoid executing the trust, the trustee afterwards returned the deed to the grantor, who destroyed it. This was held to be a complete delivery to the cestui que trust. Stone v. King, 7 R. I. 358; 84 Am. Dec. 557.

In Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227, the court, by Bigelow, J., said: "It is certainly true that a court of chancery will lend no assistance toward perfecting a voluntary agreement for the creation of a trust, nor regard it as binding so long as it remains executory. But it is equally true that if such an agreement or contract be executed by a conveyance of property in trust, so that nothing remains to be done by the donor or grantor to complete the transfer of title, the relation of trustee and cestui que trust is deemed to be established, and the equitable rights and interests arising out of the conveyance, though made without consideration, will be enforced in chancery." To the same effect, see Ellison v. Ellison, 6 Ves. 656; Pulvertoft v. Pulvertoft, 18 Ves. 84; Ex p. Pye, 18 Ves. 140; Fortescue v. Barnett, 3 Myl. & K. 36; Wheatley v. Purr, 1 Keen 551; Blakely v. Brady, 2 D. & W. 311; Brown v. Cavendish, 1 J. & L. 637; Kekewich v. Manning, 1 De G. M. & G. 176.

Where a grantor has created a trust to protect her property against incumbrance or sale by herself, the trust will not be set aside merely because she has reserved no power of revocation. Parker v. Allen (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 265.

In Keyes v. Carleton, 141 Mass. 45; 55 Am. Rep. 446, a married woman, for the purpose of putting her real estate beyond the influence of her husband, conveyed it to a trustee in trust for her benefit for life, and after her death, to her children. She brought suit, upon her husband's death, to have the trust set aside, and the court refused her petition. In this case, the court, by Morton, C. J., said: "In the case before us, the plaintiff, acting deliberately and under the advice of counsel, executed the deed of settlement, and there is no pretense of any fraud, collusion, or undue influence. The deed contains no power of revocation, and it is clear that the power of revocation was intentionally omitted. As first drafted, the deed created a dry trust in favor of the settlor, which probably could have been revoked by her at any time; but if she had retained a power of revocation, it would have defeated one of the principal objects of the settlement, which was to protect her from the threats, or importunities, or influence of her husband, and therefore the deed was altered to its present form. Both parties understood that she was not to have the power to revoke it. . . . The most that can be said is, that she did not, at the time she executed the deed, anticipate or have in her mind what would be its legal effect in the contingency of her husband's dying before her. She did not, at the time, think of this contingency; but this is not a mistake which will justify setting aside a settlement, especially when it is not shown that, if this contingency had been in her mind, she would have made a deed in any respect different. . . . We are of opinion that the plaintiff does not show sufficient cause for setting aside the settlement, voluntarily and fairly made by her."

The deposit of money in the hands of three persons, to be held in trust for the depositor's minor son, with the agreement that the trustee shall retain it for a certain length of time at a specified rate of interest, and in the meantime prepare a deed of trust, creates a complete trust, and leaves no power in the depositor to dispose of the money for his own benefit. Sherwood v. Andrews, 2 Allen (Mass.) 79.

Want of Legal Advice.—The fact that a person making a voluntary settlement did not have independent legal advice, will not warrant the setting aside of the trust, unless the beneficiary stood in some fiduciary capacity to the donor, or the trustee was benefited thereby. So held, in case of a conveyance by a drunkard in trust for the support of his family. Riddle v. Cutter, 49 Iowa 547.

In Hildreth v. Eliot, 8 Pick. (Mass.) 293, suit was brought to set aside a voluntary settlement, the circumstances attending the creation of the settlement being as follows: Plaintiff, who was about to be married, had put her property in the hands of her father as trustee, to be held in trust by him, or by any other trustee to be appointed by a judge of probate, for her separate use, without being liable to the debts or control of any husband she might have during the trust, and the income to be paid her during life, and the residue to be conveyed to her surviving children. She thereupon married, her husband died, and she married again, having children by her second husband. The father died, leaving several children; the judge of probate refused to appoint a new trustee; the court refused her application to set aside the settlement and ordered the appointment of a new trustee.

A deed which conveys land in trust for the support of the grantor out of the income and profits, and provides that upon his death the property shall descend to his legal representatives, cannot be revoked. Ewing v. Warner, 47 Minn. 446; Ewing v. Jones, 130 Ind. 247.

In Sayre v. Weil, 94 Ala. 466, the defendant had deposited in a bank certain funds to the credit of himself as trustee for certain named children. His testimony was that he had deposited the money there "for the last ten or fifteen years as a gift to those children." It was held that the trust was irrevocable, and the naked legal title remained in the defendant.

In Ewing v. Warner, 47 Minn. 446, the settlor had conveyed land to a trustee in trust for his heirs, to whom it was to descend upon his death. Subsequently, for the express purpose of terminating the trust, the trustee reconveyed to the settlor, and the court held that the execution of the original trust deed created a vested estate in the settlor's heirs, which could not be destroyed, either by a revocation by the grantor, or a breach of trust by the trustee, and hence, that the deed of reconveyance was invalid.

A voluntary conveyance was accepted by the grantee by a declaration of trust reciting that the conveyance had been made in trust and accepted, and agreeing to execute the same according to the terms of the settlor's will, which was executed on the same day. By this will, the settlor, after declaring the trust to take effect after his death, to which the declaration of instrument of trust was executed in ignorance of its effect or under mistake, duress, or fraud.¹

The courts will not imply a right to revoke a trust simply from acceptance of the trust by the grantee referred, expressly stated that "said trust property so conveyed as aforesaid, forms no portion of my estate herein by this my last will disposed." It was held that the conveyance was not a part of the will, liable to be annulled by its revocation. Kopp v. Gunther, 95 Cal. 63.

Ward v. Lant, Prec. in Ch. 182, was a case in which a father executed a voluntary bond to his daughter, unconditionally and payable immediately, but retained it in his possession. It was proved to have been his intention that no use should be made of it, and that it was only to protect him from taxes. It was set aside.

1. It has been held, however, that the omission of the power of revocation, through mistake or misunderstanding, will not deprive the grantor of that power, though he is able to set aside that mistake. Thus, where both parties to a trust instrument were under the impression that it was revocable, and the power of revocation was omitted by mistake, the courts held that the trust might be brought to an end. See Aylesworth v. Whitcomb, 12 R. I. 298; Garnsey v. Mundy, 24 N. J. Eq. 243.

Where a voluntary settlement or trust, in favor of a third person, is perfectly created, no power of revocation having been reserved, it cannot be revoked without the consent of all the parties in interest, nor will it be set aside, in the absence of fraud, mistake, or undue influence. 1 Perry on Trusts, § 104; Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 463; 51 Am. Dec. 428. See note to Oakley v. Hibbard, 44 Am. Dec. 428.

The principal case is cited and approved in the following cases: Smith v. Turrentine, 8 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 101; Baggarly v. Gaither, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 82; Stimpson v. Fries, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 160; Potts v. Blackwell, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 67; Wiswall v. Potts, 5 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 189; Dixon v. Page, 63 N. Car. 605; Hogan v. Strayhorn, 65 N. Car. 285. See 90 Am. Dec. 507-509 for other citations.

It was held in Riddle v. Cutler, 49 Iowa 547, that the omission from the trust deed of any power of revocation did not render the trust void or voidable, where it appeared that it was the intention to make it irrevocable at the option of the donor, it appearing, also, that the deed was for the donor's benefit and that the donor was not capable of managing his property.

A trust will not be set aside on the mere ground that a direction in the trust deed as to the disposition of the settlor's property after her death, was not explained to her, and that she supposed it to be subject to subsequent modification, as a testamentary provision would be; but the deed will be reformed so as to correctly express the intention of the grantor. Parker v. Allen (Supreme Ct.), 14 N. Y. Supp. 265.

In Kerr v. Couper, 5 Del. Ch. 507, a voluntary deed of trust containing no power of revocation, executed by a young man, whereby he parted with all control over his real estate on the trust that the trustees pay over to him the rents and profits, was annulled, and a reconveyance made to the grantor direct, it appearing that the grantor had executed the deed in ignorance of its effect.

It was held in Rick's Appeal, 105 Pa. St. 528, that a voluntary settlement of property for the benefit of the settlor for life, and after his death to strangers to the consideration, may be revoked at will by the settlor, even though he has reserved no power of revocation; and especially where the settlement was made in ignorance of the law and the facts.

In Frederick's Appeal, 52 Pa. St. 338; 91 Am. Dec. 159, the court held that a purely voluntary deed of trust intended to promote the grantor's convenience and protect his interests, and which passed no present interest to others, may be revoked at will, even in the absence of a power of revocation.

If a deed of trust is drawn and executed under an evident misapprehension of facts and circumstances, equity will afford relief by a decree that the deed be canceled and a new one executed, by a master appointed for that purpose. Ginschio v. Ley, 1 Phila. (Pa.) 383.

In Gibbes v. New York L. Ins., etc., Co., 67 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.)

207, the court held, at the suit of the grantor in a trust deed, that the deed to her property, executed at the written request of the trustee, must be set aside, it appearing at the time it was executed, that she was in poor health, without proper advice, and with no knowledge that the settlement was irrevocable.

In Garnsey v. Mundy, 24 N. J. Eq. 243, the complainant, Sarah M. Garnsey, had conveyed to her mother certain property under the advice of certain relatives, given to her honestly and in good faith; but the full effect of the instrument was not understood by the grantor, and its execution was improvidently done. The court said: "She and they (her advisors), were alike under an erroneous impression as to the effect of it. From the operation of such conveyance, made under such circumstances, equity will relieve the complainants. The rigidity of the ancient doctrine, that a voluntary settlement not obtained by fraud is binding on the settlor, and will not be set aside in equity, although the settlor has not reserved a power of revocation, has been relaxed by modern decisions. . . . Recent cases have narrowed the doctrine, and have held not only that the absence of a power of revocation throws on the person seeking to uphold the settlement, the burden of proving that such a power was intentionally excluded by the settlor, and that, in the absence of such proof, the settlement may be set aside, but that equity will set aside the settlement on the application of the settlor, where it appears that he did not intend to make it irrevocable, or where the settlement would be unreasonable or improvident for the lack of provision for revocation. In Everitt v. Everitt, L. R., 10 Eq. 405, a case almost precisely similar in its facts to that under consideration, a voluntary settlement was set aside on the application of the donor. The court said: 'It is very difficult indeed for any voluntary settlement, made by a young lady so soon after she attains twenty-one, to stand, if she afterwards changes her mind, and wishes to get rid of the fetters which she has been advised to put upon herself.' . . . Forshaw v. Welsby, 30 Beav. 243, was a case where a voluntary settlement was made by one in extremis, on his family. It contained no power of revocation in case of the settlor's recovery. On his recovery it was set aside on his application, on the ground that it was not executed with the intention that it should be operative in case of his recovery from his illness." The opinion closes with the statement of the court that it is satisfied from the testimony "that the deed was not the pure, voluntary, well-understood act of the grantor's mind, but was unadvised and improvident and contrary to the intention of all of them. The fact that the infant children of the grantor are beneficiaries under the deed will not prevent the court from setting it aside."

In Russell's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 269, a feme sole, in contemplation of marriage, made a deed of settlement with the consent of her betrothed, and under the advice of counsel, thereby conveying the bulk of her estate in trust, the income to be hers during life, and after her death, the estate to be conveyed to her children as she might thereafter determine by will, excepting such part thereof as she might devise to her husband. Under this trust, in the event she left no issue, the property was to be conveyed to her brother and sisters or their issue, as she might determine by will; if she should leave no will, one-half of the income was to go to her husband for life, and one-half to her children; but if she left no issue, or leaving any, they should die in infancy without issue, then the estate was to be conveyed to her brother and sisters in fee. No power of revocation was reserved in the deed, and the grantor did not understand that her power of appointment was limited to her brother and sisters, but believed, if she survived her husband, she could, under this deed of trust, dispose of her estate as she pleased. She gave no instructions upon these two points. She survived her husband, who died without issue. It was held that, while mere neglect of counsel to advise the insertion in the deed of the power of revocation would not authorize the court to set the deed aside, yet the omission of this power being, under the circumstances, a mistake, and the instrument being without consideration except as to the husband, the grantor was entitled to have the trust revoked, and receive from the trustee a reconveyance.

In Ewing v. Wilson, 132 Ind. 223, a son, upon coming of age, conveyed to his father all his property for the express consideration of $600, to be held in trust for himself for life, and the remainder to his personal representa-

the omission to reserve such right in a deed,¹ although such omission is prima facie evidence of a mistake;² but the failure to reserve to the grantor this power of revocation is a circumstance which will be considered by the courts in connection with the other circumstances of the case, as tending to show that the deed creating the trust was improvidently executed.³

If it appears from the circumstances of the particular case that tives. There was no actual consideration for the deed. The son was inexperienced in business, intemperate, and easily influenced; the father was a man of wealth, large experience and force of character. Afterward the father reconveyed the property to the son, who conveyed it to bona fide purchasers, and died. The court held that the deed of trust was unconscionable, and was revoked by the reconveyance from the father to the son. In this case, the court, by Elliott, C. J., said: "If a controversy were waged between the trustee and the creator of the trust, there would be no debatable question, for the rights of the trustee, if any he ever had, are irretrievably gone. . . . We assume with undoubting confidence that the trustee never acquired a permanent and indefeasible right to the donor's property, and that when he executed the deed in reconveying the property, he did what it was his plain duty to do." In the same case, the court goes on to say: "The rule, as it has long existed, and as affirmed by the courts of England and America, is this: Where there is a voluntary gift of the entire estate of the donor, a reservation of the principal beneficial interest by him, and no power of revocation, the instrument will be held ineffective as against its author, unless it appears that there was an intention to make the donation irrevocable." Quoting from Mr. Bispham, the court says: "But where the deliberate intent to make such a gift does not appear, and where no motive for such a gift is shown, the absence of a power of revocation is prima facie evidence of the mistake. The rule is the same when the motive has failed." Citing, to this point, Bispham's Eq. 107; Aylesworth v. Whitcomb, 12 R. I. 208; Es p. Angell, 13 R. I. 630. And the court quotes with approval from Coutts v. Acworth, L. R., 8 Eq. 558: "The party taking a benefit under a voluntary settlement or gift, containing no power of revocation, has the burden thrown upon him of proving a distinct intention on the part of the donor to make the gift irrevocable; but where the circumstances are such that the donor ought to be advised to retain the power of revocation, it is the duty of the solicitor to insist upon the insertion of such a power, and the want of it will in general be fatal to the deed."

1. See Fellow's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 470.

Even though the grantor reserves a life estate. Fellow's Appeal, 93 Pa. St. 470.

2. In the absence of a certain intent to make the gift irrevocable, the omission of the power to revoke is prima facie evidence of a mistake, and casts the burden of supporting the settlement upon the party claiming thereunder. Russell's Appeal, 75 Pa. St. 269; 31 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 125; Coutts v. Acworth, L. R., 8 Eq. 558. The parties relying upon such deed must prove that the settlor was properly advised when he executed it, that he thoroughly understood the effect of omitting the power, and that he intended it to be excluded from the settlement. Hall v. Hall, L. R., 14 Eq. 365. The omission to reserve such power has been held, in the absence of evidence of a motive, sufficient to set the deed aside. Everitt v. Everitt, L. R., 10 Eq. 405; Huguenin v. Basely, 14 Ves. 273.

In Miskey's Appeal, 107 Pa. St. 611, a voluntary deed of trust was set aside because it contained no power of revocation, and there was no proof of a distinct intention to make the gift irrevocable.

In Hall v. Hall, L. R., 8 Ch. 430, the court said: "The absence of a power of revocation in a voluntary deed, not impeached by any undue influence, is of course material, where it proves that the settlor did not intend to make an irrevocable settlement, or where the settlement is of such a nature, or was made under such circumstances as to be unreasonable and improvident, unless created with the power of revocation."

3. In Toker v. Toker, 3 De G. J. & S. 487, the court said: "The absence of the power of revocation is a circum-

the settlor's intention was not to make a deed irrevocable, his intention, so far as it can be determined, will control, and upon his application in a proper case, the trust will be set aside.¹

As a settlor cannot directly revoke a trust which he has voluntarily created, neither can he revoke it indirectly; he cannot alter its terms or provisions by attempting to make a subsequent settlement either by deed or will, unless he has reserved this power to himself in the original instrument of trust.²

He may, however, make a subsequent deed of trust for the stance to be taken into question, the importance of which is largely determined by the other circumstances of each case." See Henshall v. Fereday, 29 L. T. N. S. 46; Cook v. Lamotte, 15 Beav. 234; Wollaston v. Tribe, L. R., 9 Eq. 44.

In Nightingale v. Nightingale, 13 R. I. 113, suit was brought in 1880 by a married woman to set aside a trust deed which, before her marriage in 1851, she had executed to a trustee in trust to pay her income, to make sales at her request, and to reconvey to her after her husband's death, or to her heirs and devisees after her death. It was held that she was sufficiently protected by the statutes then in existence, and that the property should be reconveyed to her, and discharged of the trust.

1. Forshaw v. Welsby, 30 Beav. 243; Ex p. Angell, 13 R. I. 637; Everitt v. Everitt, L. R., 10 Eq. 405; Garnsey v. Mundy, 24 N. J. Eq. 243.

Where a single woman, not in contemplation of marriage, executed a trust deed which contained no power of revocation, in which she conveyed her property in trust to pay the income to her for life, and at her death in trust for her appointees, or, in default of appointment, in trust for her heirs, this was held to create a passive trust which she might revoke at any time, and demand a reconveyance, particularly where it appeared that there was no intention of making the gift irrevocable, and that the deed was executed without the advice of counsel and upon the assurances by the contingent beneficiaries, that it could be revoked, and that the only purposes of its execution had been accomplished. Bristol v. Tasker, 135 Pa. St. 110; 20 Am. St. Rep. 853. See also Dodson v. Ball, 60 Pa. St. 492; 100 Am. Dec. 586; Yarnall's Appeal, 70 Pa. St. 335.

2. Lewin on Trusts and Trustees, § 18, p. 104; Perry on Trusts, § 104;

McDonald v. Starkey, 42 Ill. 442; Sewall v. Roberts, 115 Mass. 262; Nearpass v. Newman, 106 N. Y. 47; Souverbye v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 256; Dickerson's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 198; 2 Am. St. Rep. 547; Sargent v. Baldwin, 60 Vt. 17; Rycroft v. Christy, 3 Beav. 238; Newton v. Askew, 11 Beav. 145.

A son conveyed to his mother all the estate which he inherited from his father, and received from her an agreement to reconvey when he paid to her an indebtedness of a specified amount. She thereafter kept a strict and detailed account of the property and its income, and regularly paid her son the net income. She repeatedly spoke of it in her letters to him as his property; but she willed it to another to hold in trust for her son. There was no account of any indebtedness of the son to his mother, and no evidence of any save the paper she gave him when she received from him the conveyance. It was held that the mother held the property in trust for the son, and that the trust terminated at her death. She could not delegate it, nor by devise continue it. Hinckley v. Hinckley, 79 Me. 320.

One who has created a trust for his own use for life, with remainder over to his children, can do nothing, while in possession, to impair the remainder. Nor, unless he has expressly reserved the power, can he revoke the remainder and declare new uses. Aubuchon v. Bender, 44 Mo. 560. Compare Dean v. Adler, 30 Md. 147.

If a grantor conveys his property to a trustee, the income to be the grantee's for life, and after his death, to his wife, and after the death of both, to his executor, to be divided equally among the grantor's children, no power of revocation being retained by the grantor, this property will not pass by his will, nor by an assignment executed by one of his children, conveying after the father's purpose of enlarging the trust estate and substituting a new trustee, so long as his later disposition is not materially inconsistent with the former settlement.¹

The right of revocation or reversion may legally be reserved without affecting the validity of the trust,² and if it is not exercised during the grantor's lifetime, the trust will continue in force after his death as fully as if no such power had been reserved.³ The right to revoke, if reserved, may be exercised by a formal act of revocation, or the exercise of the right may be implied from the conduct of the settlor.⁴

So far as the power of the grantor over the property held in death "all my interest of whatever name under the description in the estate, real or personal, of my father, and of my share thereof under the will of my father, together with all income, benefit and advantages thereof accrued or to accrue." Belknap v. Belknap, 128 Mass. 14.

Where a father delivered to his son in trust certain notes to be collected, and part of the proceeds to be paid to his daughter, and the son accepted the trust, the notes passed beyond the control of the father, and could not be affected by his will making a different disposition of them. Haxton v. McClaren, 132 Ind. 235.

1. Rife's Appeal, 110 Pa. St. 232.

2. Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227; Dickerson's Appeal, 115 Pa. St. 198; 2 Am. St. Rep. 547; Lines v. Lines, 142 Pa. St. 149; 24 Am. St. Rep. 487.

3. A woman who owned land in fee simple, subject to her father's estate by the curtesy, conveyed the same in trust for him for life, with full power to sell, and the remainder, after the father's death, to her own use, free from the control of any husband she might marry, with power of appointment by will, and, in default, to her heirs in the maternal line; both parties to have the power to revoke any or all the trusts created by the deed, "and thereupon to resettle and reconvey the trust property then remaining upon such other and different trusts . . . as to them shall seem meet." This deed not having been executed in immediate contemplation of the grantor's marriage, it was held that it was inoperative to create a separate use trust, and that its revocation, in proper form, without declaring new uses, was valid, and operated to restore to the grantor her original fee-simple estate, subject to her father's curtesy, and that their deed conveyed a good title, free from the trusts of the former deed. Yard v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 131 Pa. St. 205.

In Stone v. Hackett, 12 Gray (Mass.) 227, the court, by Bigelow, J., said: "A power of revocation is perfectly consistent with the creation of a valid trust. It does not, in any degree, affect the legal title to the property. That passes to the donee, and remains vested for the purposes of the trust, notwithstanding the existence of the right to revoke it. If this right is never exercised according to the terms in which it is reserved, until after the death of the donee, it can have no effect on the validity of the trusts or the right of the trustee to hold the property." See Barlow v. Loomis, 19 Fed. Rep. 677.

A power of revocation or reversion may be reserved, though the first use be in fee. So, where the grantor conveyed real estate in fee to a trustee in trust for the sole and separate use of the grantor's wife, with authority for her to sell and reinvest for the same use, the property to revert to the grantor if she died before him, it was held that on such death with conveyance, the property reverted to the husband. Pollard v. Union Nat. Bank, 4 Mo. App. 408.

Where a father gave all his personal property to his son on certain trusts, the son agreeing to reconvey on request, it was held that while the transfer was not valid as a gift inter vivos, it was good as a trust, and that the donor having died without revoking it, his administrator could not recover the property, beyond a sum sufficient to pay the debts and expenses of administration. Rosenburg v. Rosenberg, 40 Hun (N. Y.) 91.

4. A and his wife conveyed certain property in trust for themselves, the trust is concerned, there is no difference between ordinary trust conveyances and deeds of assignments in trust for the benefit of creditors. The moment a deed of assignment has been delivered and the assignee has accepted, the trust relation of trustee and cestui que trust commences. It is not necessary that the creditors under an assignment accept the trust, in order that the relation may exist. Control over the debtor's property has passed out of him altogether, and a trust thus created cannot be revoked, either directly or indirectly, so long as there are debts to be paid under the terms of the assignment.¹

While the rule is as has been stated, it is subject to modifications under varying circumstances, and has by no means been accepted by all the courts. Thus, in England, deeds of assignment for the benefit of creditors may be revoked at the pleasure of the debtor, unless the creditors are in some way made privy to the conveyance and have accepted its benefits.²

deed containing a clause reserving the right to revoke the trusts. It was held that the execution of mortgages upon the property worked such revocation, although in the mortgages no reference was made to the power. Gaither v. Williams, 57 Md. 625.

1. See Ward v. Lewis, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 521; Sevier v. McWhorter, 27 Miss. 442; Walker v. Crowder, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 485; Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 463; 51 Am. Dec. 428; Messonnier v. Kauman, 3 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 3; Hall v. Denison, 17 Vt. 318. See also notes to Oakley v. Hibbard, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 674; 44 Am. Dec. 426.

Where an assignment for creditors has taken effect, it cannot be revoked by the debtor himself without the consent of the assignee, unless the creditors also assent. Es p. Conway, 4 Ark. 359; Forbes v. Scannell, 13 Cal. 242; Browne v. Chamberlain, 9 Fla. 479; Scull v. Reeves, 3 N. J. Eq. 131; 29 Am. Dec. 703; Alpaugh v. Roberson, 27 N. J. Eq. 96; Shepherd v. McEvers, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 136; 8 Am. Dec. 561; Briggs v. Davis, 20 N. Y. 15; 75 Am. Dec. 363; Sheldon v. Smith, 28 Barb. (N. Y.) 593; Bell v. Holford, 1 Duer (N. Y.) 78; Walker v. Crowder, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 485; Ingram v. Kirkpatrick, 6 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 463; 51 Am. Dec. 428; Stimpson v. Fries, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 159; Klapp v. Shirk, 13 Pa. St. 589; Hall v. Denison, 17 Vt. 318; Golden's Appeal (Pa.), 3 East Rep. 313.

If a debtor convey, by deed, all his property, both real and personal, to a trustee, in trust that he will, first, make the grantor a reasonable allowance for the comfortable support and maintenance of his family, and the education of his children; second, that he will pay all the grantor's debts, and the debts incurred in the execution of the trust; and third, that he will then convey the legal title to the property undisposed of to the grantor's children; and he delivers the deed, as also the possession of the property, to the trustee, who accepts the trust, the trusts in favor of the grantor's creditors and children become perfect, and cannot be afterward devested or revoked by any act of the grantor or trustee. Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219.

Securities delivered under the provisions of a trust deed, will not be decreed to be delivered at the mere will of the grantor. Vreeland v. Van Horn, 17 N. J. Eq. 137.

Where a firm made a trust deed for the benefit of its creditors, which was duly registered, and afterward made a second deed revoking the first, it was held that the rights of the parties to the first deed became fixed and vested by its execution and registration, subject to the election of the beneficiaries as to whether they would accept or reject its provisions, and that the firm had no power to revoke it. Furman v. Fisher, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 626; 94 Am. Dec. 210.

2. Walwyn v. Coutts, 3 Sim. 14; 3 Mer. 707; Garrard v. Londerdale, 3 Sim. 1; Wilding v. Richards, 1 Coll. 659; 14 L. J. N. S. Ch. 211; Acton v. Woodgate, 2 M. & K. 495; 3 L. J. Eq. N. S. 83.

It has been held that if a deed of assignment is made hastily, and at a time when the creditor is actually solvent, and can readily meet his obligations, it may be recalled.¹

It seems to be settled, however, that after the creditors have been notified and have accepted the benefits of the assignment, it cannot be revoked.²

If a creditor refuses to accept the terms of the assignment, the grantor may revoke it.³

b. BY THE TRUSTEE.—The trustee cannot, by his own act alone, bring the trust to an end. He cannot divest himself of the trust by simply withdrawing from it with the assent of the grantor, even though the latter is a beneficiary, if there are other beneficiaries who do not consent, or, being infants, cannot consent,⁴ or if any legitimate purpose contemplated in the creation of the trust remains unfulfilled.⁵

Nor will the trust cease so long as the property charged therewith is in the hands of persons who have acquired it with knowledge of its fiduciary character. Trust property passing into the hands of innocent holders escapes the trust, as we have seen,⁶

Where the creditors have been made a party to the deed of assignment, the deed cannot be revoked under the English decision. See Mackinnon v. Stewart, 20 L. J. N. S. Ch. 52.

1. See Oakley v. Hibbard, 1 Pin. (Wis.) 674; 44 Am. Dec. 425.

2. See Petrikín v. Davis, 1 Morris (Iowa) 296; Ward v. Lewis, 4 Pick. (Mass.) 518; Jones v. Dougherty, 10 Ga. 274; Mills v. Argall, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 577.

3. Gibson v. Chedic, 1 Nev. 497; 90 Am. Dec. 503.

4. Andrews v. Hobson, 23 Ala. 219; Henderson v. Sherman, 47 Mich. 267; Matter of Jones, 4 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 615; Cruiger v. Halliday, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 314; Gilchrist v. Stevenson, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 9; Brennan v. Wilson, 71 N. Y. 502; Skipwith v. Cunningham, 8 Leigh (Va.) 271; 31 Am. Dec. 642.

It was held in Isham v. Delaware, etc., R. Co., 11 N. J. Eq. 227, that a deed of trust conveying land for the benefit of three persons, and their children yet unborn, could not be revoked, although the trustee and all the cestuis que trustent in being, united to reconvey the land to the settlor free from the trust.

E. conveyed land to a trustee, in trust for his heirs, to whom it was to descend upon his death; the plaintiff, his heir, being then en ventre sa mere. Afterward the trustee, for the expressed purpose of terminating the trust, reconveyed to E. It was held that upon the execution of the trust deed, a future vested estate in the heirs of E. was created, which could not be destroyed, either by a revocation by the grantor, or a violation of the trust by the trustee, or both, and that the deed of reconveyance, being in contravention of the trust, was void. Ewing v. Warner, 47 Minn. 446.

If a trust has once been created and accepted, the grantor cannot revoke it without the consent of all the beneficiaries. Hellman v. McWilliams, 70 Cal. 449.

The trustee will not be divested of the legal estate by any arrangement made to pass the property to the beneficiaries, while one of the beneficiaries is a minor. Jones v. McNeil, 1 Bailey (S. Car.) 235.

A trust cannot be revoked, nor a trust estate applied to other purposes, unless the beneficiary has dissented from the trust. Stockard v. Stockard, 7 Humph. (Tenn.) 303; 46 Am. Dec. 79; Saylors v. Saylors, 3 Heisk. (Tenn.) 531.

5. If a trustee, without the direction of the beneficiary, disposes of and releases the trust property before the purposes of the trust are performed, it does not release in equity the lien on the property. Wolfe v. Bate, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 208.

6. See supra, this title, Rights and Remedies of the Beneficiary.

but the trustee who reacquires it, at once restores its trust nature by coming into ownership or possession.¹

Nor can he free the property of its trust character by an omission or refusal to perform the duties imposed upon him in relation thereto.² Neither will his death terminate the trust; for the death of the trustee vests the trust in the court.³

c. BY THE BENEFICIARY.—The united consent of all the parties in interest will, in most cases, justify a decree terminating the trust. It is necessary, however, that the purposes of the trust be held sacred,⁴ that the beneficiaries so consenting be all sui juris,⁵ and that no interest, however remote, be left out of consideration.⁶

If the parties in interest may legally unite to allow the rendition of a decree terminating the trust, there is no valid reason why they may not unite, if they are all sui juris, in a deed or in a contract, or by conduct constituting a contract, to the same effect. But it is by no means certain that an executory trust can be brought to an end altogether by the act of the parties.⁷

1. See Church v. Ruland, 64 Pa. St. 432.

2. Where lands have been conveyed to a trustee to pay debts, the deed of trust limiting his power to sell at a specified time, the mere neglect of the trustee to sell within the time limited, will not divest the lands of the trust. Smith v. Kinney, 33 Tex. 283.

A debtor who conveys his property in trust for the payment of his debts, by that act appropriates it to that specific purpose, and if the trustee neglects or refuses to carry out and perform that purpose, a court of equity will compel him to do so. National Park Bank v. Halle, 30 Ill. App. 17.

The mere neglect of a trustee to sell property conveyed to him by the grantor, cannot defeat the object of the trust. Cowling v. Douglass, 4 Ala. 206.

3. Dyer v. Leach, 91 Cal. 191.

4. If the court has power with the beneficiary's consent to terminate a trust for his maintenance and support for life, it nevertheless has no power to do so merely on evidence that he has released all claim to the fund, in a proceeding to which he is not a party, no investigation being had as to the circumstances under which this release was obtained, and no security being required for his protection in the event he should come to want in the future. Sumner v. Newton, 64 Wis. 210.

5. If the share of a feme covert in the estate of her deceased father, has been vested by a decree of court in a trustee for her sole and separate use, under "An act to protect the rights of married women," which act provides that a married woman, for whom property has been settled under its provisions, has the right to dispose of any such property, real or personal, by will, the trust is not terminated by the death of the woman's husband and her remarriage, and the trustee has the sole right to sue to recover property which is the subject of the trust. Parish v. Balkum, 40 Ala. 285.

6. A deed of trust cannot be released by a part of the grantees only. Barcroft v. Lessieur, 48 Mo. 418.

7. It was held, in Huckabee v. Billingsley, 16 Ala. 414; 50 Am. Dec. 183, that the execution by the trustee to the settlor of a quit-claim deed, reinvests the latter with the legal estate.

In Ormsby v. Dumesnil, 91 Ky. 601, a married woman had conveyed her property to a trustee in trust for her sole use for life, "and after her death for that of her children, or survivors or survivor" thereafter, all of the children being of full age and uniting with the trustee to reconvey the property to the settlor. It was held that by this conveyance from the trustee and the beneficiaries, the settlor reacquired the absolute title in fee simple to the property discharged from the trust created by her first deed.

If a trustee, after the death of the beneficiary, assigns the trust estate to the latter's executor or administrator, who accepts the assignment, it will operate as a discharge of the trust,

TRUSTS (CORPORATE).—See TRADE COMBINATIONS AND CORPORATE TRUSTS, vol. 26, p. 229.

TRUTH.—See note 1.

TUGS.—See TOWAGE; TUGS AND TOWS, vol. 26, p. 80.

TUITION.—See note 2.

TUMBLING.—See note 3.

TUMULT.—See note 4.

TUMULTUOUS.—See note 5.

TURBARY.—(See also COMMON, vol. 3, p. 346; MOSSES, vol. 15, p. 886; PROFITS À PRENDRE, vol. 19, p. 259).—A right to dig turf in another's land.⁶

TURN-OUT.—Turn-out is defined as "a short side track on a railroad which may be occupied by one train while another is passing on the main track; a siding."⁷ although it is made in terms, to the use of the executor or administrator in his individual capacity. Dawes v. Boylston, 9 Mass. 337; 6 Am. Dec. 72.

The holder of certain judgments transferred them in trust for certain purposes, the residue to be held upon such trust as the judgment debtor might appoint, and upon the failure of the judgment debtor to make any such appointment, then in trust to pay the income to him free from the liens or demands of any of his present creditors. The transfer reserved a power to revoke the trust. Afterward the judgment creditor assigned the judgment to the judgment debtor. It was held that this act terminated the trust, and that the judgments vested in the debtor absolutely, and could not be interposed as against his creditors and mortgagees. Carter v. Hough, 86 Va. 668.

A holding certain money and slaves in trust for his sister, appropriated the money and the proceeds of the sale of the slaves in purchasing land in Mis-souri, and removing his sister and her family to the place, and afterward conveyed the estate to her and her children, in satisfaction of the trust, and it was occupied by and divided among them. It was held that the trust was thereby discharged. Hickman v. Wood, 30 Mo. 199.

1. Truth.—As distinguished from "fact" when applied to pleading, see FACT, vol. 7, p. 658.

2. In State v. University of Wisconsin, 54 Wis. 159, it was held that the word "tuition," as used in a statute exempting residents of the state from the payment of "fees for tuition" in the university, meant that no student should be required to pay anything for instruction or teaching in the university; but did not include the incidental expenses for heating, lighting public halls, etc.

3. Whether an entertainment, see ENTERTAINMENT, vol. 6, p. 650.

4. That the word is substantially the same as brawl, see BRAWLS, vol. 2, p. 515.

5. In an indictment, under a statute providing for the punishment of one who breaks the public peace "by tumultuous and offensive carriage," the first count charged "tumultuous" but not "offensive" carriage. The court animadverted upon the count and distinguished tumultuous from offensive thus: "A man's carriage might, conceivably, be 'tumultuous,' as in the noisy expression of joy over some great national good or achievement, and yet be the opposite of 'offensive,' and tend to spread rejoicing and good will rather than to disturb or break the public peace, in the true sense of that term." State v. Archibald, 59 Vt. 548.

6. Tyringham's Case, 4 Rep. 36b; O'Hare v. Fahy, 10 N. C. L. Rep. 318. It cannot be dug for sale. Valentine v. Penny, Noy 145; Hayward v. Canning-ton, 1 Sid. 354. It does not give the right to take green grass for making grass plots, etc. Wilson v. Willes, 7 East 121.

7. Webster's Dict., followed in Appeal of River Front R. Co. (Pa. 1890), 19 Atl. Rep. 356, in which case it was held that siding and turn-out were synonymous.

TURNPIKES.—(See also STREETS and SIDEWALKS, vol. 24, p. 1.)

- I. Definition and History, 324.
- II. Public Highway, 325.
- III. General Rights, 326.
 - 1. To Use Public Highway, 326.
 - 2. Title to the Soil of the Road, 326.
 - a. During Use by the Company, 326.
 - b. After the Franchise has Expired, 327.
 - (1) If the Company Has Only an Easement, 327.
 - (2) If the Land is Owned in Fee, 327.
- IV. Power to Erect Tollhouse, 328.
- V. Change of Grade After Road Is Established, 329.
- VI. Right to Aid from Taxation, 330.
- VII. Location of Gates, 332.
 - 1. Location Within City Limits, 332.
 - 2. Right to Change Location, 333.
- VIII. Toll, 333.
 - 1. Definition and Origin, 333.
 - 2. Payment, 334.
 - a. How Collected, 334.
 - b. Full Toll Can Be Charged, 336.
 - c. Waiver and Commutation of Toll, 336.
 - d. Penalty for Failure to Pay Toll, 336.
 - e. Gate Can Be Closed if Toll Is not Paid, 337.
 - f. Defense to Action for Toll, 337.
 - 3. Exemption from Toll, 338.
 - 4. Shun-pikes, 340.
- IX. Repair, 341.
 - 1. Duty to Keep in Repair, 341.
 - 2. Penalty for Failure, 341.
 - 3. Repair by Municipality, 342.
- X. Liability for Negligence, 344.

I. DEFINITION AND HISTORY.—A turnpike road is a road across which turnpike gates are erected and tolls taken, which gates or bars, originally called "turns," were first constructed about the middle of the last century. Certain individuals, with a view to the repair of particular roads, subscribed among themselves for that purpose, and erected gates upon the roads, taking tolls from those who passed through them. These were violently opposed at first, and petitions were presented to Parliament against them, and acts were passed for their regulation. This was the origin of turnpikes. The distinctive mark of a turnpike road is the right of turning back anyone who refuses to pay toll.¹

It is not necessarily made of stones, as usually understood by the term. A plank road and a gravel road are properly included in the term turnpike without special mention.²

1. Northam Bridge, etc., Co. v. London, etc., R. Co., 6 M. & W. 428; State v. Haight, 30 N. J. L. 448; Haight v. State, 32 N. J. L. 451; Neff v. Mooresville, etc., Gravel Road Co., 66 Ind. 279. See HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 362.

A turnpike road is a highway in which the public have a qualified easement; that is, the right to pass and repass upon the payment of a certain toll established by law. Heyward v. Mayor, etc., of New York, 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 492.

A turnpike may be defined as a road owned by a private corporation or individuals, over which the public have a common right of passage upon the payment of toll. Elliott on Roads and Streets (1890), p. 53.

2. Craig v. People, 47 Ill. 487; Neff v. Mooresville, etc., Gravel Road Co., 66 Ind. 279.

A plank road constructed by a private company and under legislative authority, and dedicated to public travel, with gates erected thereon for the collection of tolls as a condition of such travel, may properly be termed a turnpike road, without regard to the material of which the surface of the road may be composed. State v. Haight, 30 N. J. L. 447; Haight v. State, 32 N. J. L. 449.

II. PUBLIC HIGHWAY.—A turnpike is a public highway differing neither in the responsibility for its proper maintenance nor in any other particular, from an ordinary highway.¹ It derives its powers from its charter,² and may condemn land for the construction of its road.³

No additional burden is imposed by changing a public highway into a toll road. The change is not in the character of the servitude, but in the mode of sustaining the highway; in the one case it is sustained by taxes, in the other by tolls.⁴

1. In Com. v. Wilkinson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 175; 26 Am. Dec. 654, the leading case on this subject, Shaw, C. J., says: "We think that a turnpike road is a public highway established by public authority for public use, and is to be regarded as a public easement, and not as private property. The only difference between this and a common highway is, that instead of being made at the public expense in the first instance, it is authorized and laid out by public authority, and made at the expense of individuals in the first instance; and the cost of construction and maintenance is reimbursed by a toll, levied by public authority for the purpose. Every traveler has the same right to use it, paying the toll established by law, as he would have to use any other public highway." And see Murray v. Berkshire Co., 12 Met. (Mass.) 455; Parker v. New Brunswick, 32 N. J. L. 548; Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 81; Haight v. State, 32 N. J. L. 451; Benedict v. Goit, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 459; Central Bridge Corp. v. Lowell, 15 Gray (Mass.) 106; Newbury Turnpike Corp. v. Eastern R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 327; Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490; Angell on Highways (1886), §§ 38-40; HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 364.

The forfeiture of the charter of the turnpike company, and the consequent abandonment of the road, do not affect its existence as a public highway, which should thenceforth be maintained in good order by the municipality within which it is located. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 583.

Plank roads are public highways, differing from the common highways in the mode of construction and taking of tolls, on the payment of which latter, travelers have the same right to use them as they have to use other highways. Craig v. People, 47 Ill. 487.

The easement is vested in the public in substantially the same manner as that of a highway, and upon the resumption of the franchise of the turnpike company by the sovereign power, the public easement in the road is left disburdened of the tolls, but otherwise unaffected. State v. Main, 27 Conn. 641; 71 Am. Dec. 89.

2. A turnpike company cannot extend its road beyond the limits of its charter, nor can such a claim be established by user. Pontiac, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Hilton, 69 Mich. 115; Detroit v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 12 Mich. 333; Grand Rapids Bridge Co. v. Prange, 35 Mich. 400; 24 Am. Rep. 585.

In Pontiac, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Hilton, 69 Mich. 115, it was held that the power granted to a plank road company in its charter to construct its road from a certain village, did not authorize it to extend the road for about three-quarters of a mile within the limits of the village.

But under the Pennsylvania Act, June 4th, 1879 (P. L., p. 91), authorizing the court of common pleas to amend the charters of turnpike companies, they may be amended so as to extend the limits of the turnpike. Com. v. Philadelphia, etc., Turnpike Co., 12 Pa. Co. Ct. Rep. 275; 2 Pa. Dist. Rep. 10.

3. A county authorized by the Tennessee Acts 1883, ch. 167, to construct a turnpike, may proceed to condemn land for the road under Tennessee Code, § 1326 providing that any corporation authorized by law to construct any railway, turnpike, etc., may take real estate for the purpose. Knox County v. Kennedy 92 Tenn. 1; 20 S. W. Rep. 311.

4. Carter v. Clark, 89 Ind. 238; Benedict v. Goit, 3 Barb. (N. Y.) 459; Walker v. Caywood, 31 N. Y. 51; Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76; Douglass v. Boonsborough, etc., Co., 22 Md. 219; Callison v. Hedrick, 15 Gratt. (Va.) 244; Nolensville Turn-

The obstruction of a turnpike is a public nuisance,¹ for which indictment will lie.² But neglect to open a road to the full width is no bar to so opening it when necessary.³

III. GENERAL RIGHTS—1. To Use Public Highway.—A turnpike company has the right to lay out its road upon an ancient highway, provided such power is given to it by the legislature,⁴ and the town then ceases to be liable to keep it in repair.⁵ But the power thus given will be strictly construed, and a charter authorizing a turnpike company to locate a road on any part of a public highway where necessary to do so, does not authorize it to appropriate the whole course of the highway.⁶

2. Title to the Soil of the Road—a. DURING USE BY THE COMPANY.—The title to the soil, however, remains in the owners of the adjoining land, the easement only is transferred to the turnpike company, subject to the right of the public to use the road upon payment of the toll.⁷ The turnpike company cannot dig up and remove the earth or gravel for any use or purpose without compensation first being made to the owners of the land over pike Co. v. Baker, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 315; Panton Turnpike Co. v. Bishop, 11 Vt. 198; Chagrin Falls, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Cane, 2 Ohio St. 419.

1. Newburyport Turnpike Corp. v. Eastern R. Co., 23 Pick. (Mass.) 327; Northern Central R. Co. v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 300; Murray v. Berkshire Co., 12 Met. (Mass.) 455; Willis v. Farley, 24 Cal. 490. See HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 412.

2. Com. v. Wilkinson, 16 Pick. (Mass.) 175; 26 Am. Dec. 654; Northern Central R. Co. v. Com., 90 Pa. St. 300. See NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 962.

3. Walker v. Caywood, 31 N. Y. 51; Com. v. King, 13 Met. (Mass.) 115; Harrow v. State, 1 Greene (Iowa) 439; Angell on Highways (1886) 232.

4. Panton Turnpike Co. v. Bishop, 11 Vt. 198; People v. Com'rs of Milton, 37 N. Y. 360; State v. Lake, 8 Nev. 276; Atty. Gen'l v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 2 Mich. 138; Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Fisher, 4 Mich. 38; Groff's Appeal, 128 Pa. St. 621; State v. Hampton, 2 N. H. 22; Chagrin Falls, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Cane, 2 Ohio St. 419.

But a public highway cannot be so located as to take a turnpike road from its owners. Fowler v. Pratt, 11 Vt. 369.

5. State v. Hampton, 2 N. H. 22; Nolensville Turnpike Co. v. Baker, 4 Humph. (Tenn.) 315.

6. Com'rs of Roads v. Griffin, etc., Plank Road Co., 9 Ga. 475. But under a grant, in a charter to a turnpike company, of a right to establish their road on "the nearest and most practicable route," it has been held that it had a right to occupy the ground on which an old road had been laid out. Nolensville Turnpike Co. v. Baker, 9 Ga. 315.

Where the charter specified the termini of the road, but was silent as to the intermediate route, it was held that it could not appropriate an existing public highway between the termini to avoid the necessity of acquiring a new route through private property. Groff v. Bird-in-Hand Turnpike Co., 128 Pa. St. 621; aff'd on reargument, in 144 Pa. St. 150.

7. Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76; Proprietors of Locks v. Nassau R. Co., 104 Mass. 1. The owners of the soil may maintain trespass against anyone for plowing up the land, unless it is done by direction of the turnpike corporation for the purpose of mending the road. Robins v. Boiman, 1 Pick. (Mass.) 122. The title to the soil is not changed by the transfer of the road from the public to the corporation, but remains in the owner of the adjoining land to have the same use and enjoyment of it as before. The right of way is transferred to the company, to hold while they work the road and keep it in good repair, subject to the right of the public to use the road upon paying the tolls established by law. Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76. The company acquires no more than an easement in land belonging to the state, but otherwise if the land belongs to individuals, which the road passes,¹ but it may make such excavations as may be necessary in the grading of the road.²

b. AFTER THE FRANCHISE HAS EXPIRED—(1) If the Company Has Only an Easement.—There is some conflict of opinion as to the ownership of a toll road after the franchise for its construction has expired. While some courts hold that the title remains in the turnpike company, the weight of authority seems to be that, upon the termination of the franchise, the title vests in the public, the ground for this view being that the franchise to take toll is a species of taxation and is intended to reimburse the owners of the road the expense of constructing it, and that having accepted the franchise for that purpose, there is no hardship in holding that upon its termination the road reverts to the people.³

(2) If the Land is Owned in Fee.—If, however, the land over which the road is constructed is owned in fee by the turnpike and the company is empowered to purchase land and hold it forever. Per Cowan, J., in Seneca Road Co. v. Auburn, etc., R. Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 170.

1. Turner v. Rising Sun, etc., Turnpike Co., 71 Ind. 547. The company cannot take the herbage, and the owner of the soil over which it is laid out may maintain trespass against a servant of the turnpike road for so doing. Adams v. Emerson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 57.

2. The grant for a gravel road necessarily implies the right to make such changes in the surface of the highway as will make it fit for the purpose for which the statute intended the corporation should take it. Carter v. Clark, 89 Ind. 238, distinguishing Turner v. Rising Sun, etc., Turnpike Co., 71 Ind. 547. To accomplish the purpose of its incorporation, a turnpike company may dig up and move from place to place within the limits laid out for the road, any earth, sand, or gravel, and may dig and cut up sods of turf. Per Wilde, J., in Adams v. Emerson, 6 Pick. (Mass.) 57.

3. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co. v. Com., 104 Pa. St. 583; State v. Lake, 8 Nev. 276; State v. Curry, 6 Nev. 75; State v. Dayton, etc., Toll Road Co., 10 Nev. 155. And the only interest the company has in it, is the right and power to collect tolls as a compensation for building it. Wood v. Truckee Turnpike Co., 24 Cal. 474; Craig v. People, 47 Ill. 487. The consideration for the building for the political corporation is the franchise granted the building corporation. Police Jury v. Bridge Co., 44 La. Ann. 137.

While a turnpike company exists, it has the fee in the soil of the road, but when it ceases to exist the title must, ex necessitate, vest in some one else, and it would seem reasonable that it should revert to the original owner. Heyward v. Mayor, etc., of N. Y., 8 Barb. (N. Y.) 492; Hooker v. Utica, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 12 Wend. (N. Y.) 371.

In State v. Passaic, 42 N. J. L. 524, Reed, J., said: "The use as a street by the citizens of a municipality within which it lies, of a turnpike or plank road, gives it the character of a street, to the degree that its existence as such cannot be questioned by any party other than the company which owns the turnpike or plank road." See also State v. Mayor, etc., of Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. 441; Jersey City v. State, 30 N. J. L. 521; State v. Atlantic City, 34 N. J. L. 99; State v. New Brunswick, 30 N. J. L. 395.

The road becomes a public highway by dedication at the time of its construction, subject to the right of the company to collect tolls for the period prescribed by statute, and at the termination of such period neither the company nor its stockholders have any interest in the road for which they are entitled to compensation. McMullin v. Leitch, 83 Cal. 239.

There can be no dedication of a way to the public for a limited time, certain or uncertain; if dedicated at all, it must be in perpetuity. Neither can the public, by non-user, release their rights. Dawes v. Hawkins, 8 C. B. N. S. 857; 98 E. C. L. 847.

Where an act established a road as a company, some courts hold that the public does not have an unrestricted right of passage upon the termination of the franchise of the company,¹ but the weight of authority seems to be that a presumption of dedication to public use is paramount, even in this case—that the landowners have received full compensation when the road was taken, and the turnpike company has received its compensation in the tolls collected.² And an injunction will lie to prevent the closing of the road.³

IV. POWER TO ERECT TOLLHOUSE.—A turnpike company can, in general, do all things necessary or convenient for the enjoyment of its franchise, and may, therefore, erect a tollhouse upon the road for the convenience of its gate keeper,⁴ but it has no public highway forever, and gave a turnpike company authority to collect tolls for thirty-nine years, it was held that the company could not surrender its right to collect tolls to the county commissioners; it must be made in some way authorized by law; nor would an abandonment of its franchises work a discontinuance of the highway. State v. Western N. Car. R. Co., 95 N. Car. 602.

A toll bridge becomes a public highway when the license to take tolls expires. The right to take tolls for a specified number of years was the consideration granted by the public to the bridge company, for placing the bridge on the highway, and the former owners have, upon the expiration of the license, no more right to remove the bridge than the owners of a turnpike have to tear it up after the franchise to take tolls has ceased. Kansas v. Lawrence Bridge Co., 22 Kan. 438.

One who lays out a road over his land and permits the public to use it on payment of tolls, thereby dedicates it as a public highway and no formal acceptance by the public is necessary, California Code, § 2619, providing that when the franchise of a toll road has expired, the road becomes a public highway and the owners cannot claim compensation. People v. Davidson (Cal. 1889), 21 Pac. Rep. 538. The fact that tolls are demanded, and that the public only uses the road upon condition of paying tolls, does not affect the question of tolls. Blood v. Woods, 95 Cal. 78.

1. People v. Newburgh, etc., Plank Road Co., 86 N. Y. 1; Heath v. Baramore, 50 N. Y. 302.

2. Craig v. People, 47 Ill. 487; State v. Maine, 27 Conn. 641; 71 Am. Dec. 89; Central Bridge Corp. v. Lowell, 15 Gray (Mass.) 106.

3. Craig v. People, 47 Ill. 487.

4. Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76; Tucker v. Tower, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 109; Ridge Turnpike Co. v. Stover, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 378; Ridge Turnpike Co. v. Stover, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 548. Sergeant, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in this last case, said: "We are of the opinion that although not expressly mentioned, it is a power that necessarily flows from the provisions of the act of incorporation. It is not easy to see how the business of collecting tolls and performing other duties at the gates could be conveniently conducted without houses for the accommodation of the toll gatherers. The company are expressly authorized and required to appoint toll gatherers to tend at the gates, to collect and receive the tolls appointed, and their constant attendance at all hours, and at all seasons, is indispensable for the accommodation of the public in passing over the road; and this cannot be properly done without houses there to shelter them and their families. It is true the company has the power to purchase ground adjoining the road from the owners, but it would not be so convenient for travelers and the public to have toll gatherers' residences remote from the road, and the ground might be refused or set at an exorbitant price, and, moreover would be a needless expense, for gates cannot be erected without obstructing the road by a fence or bar across so as to compel travelers to turn up and pass through the gates, and that portion might as well, so far as respects use of the summer roads, be occupied by a building as by a fence or bar."

In Tucker v. Tower, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 109, it is said, that all things necessary for making the tollhouse a comfortable dwelling for toll gatherers, may be right to appropriate land outside of the road for such purpose in the absence of express authority, or a necessity therefor.¹ And the right to erect tollhouses must be so exercised as not to occasion unnecessary injury to the adjoining landowners.² The right of the company to build a tollhouse within the road for the occupation of its toll gatherers, does not justify it in renting it for other purposes unconnected with the road.³ Where a company erected a tollhouse partly on the land of another, under a license in consideration of user of the road by such owner, and abandoned the house as a tollhouse, and removed the gate, it was held to be a nuisance both on the road and on the land, and might be removed by anyone injured.⁴

V. CHANGE OF GRADE AFTER ROAD IS ESTABLISHED.—As to whether a turnpike company may be required by the municipal authorities to change the grade of its road to conform to the grade of the city streets after having once established it, is an open question. But it would seem that whenever necessity or public safety requires a change in the grade of the road at points where it crosses the streets of a city or town, the company must make it.⁵ But the general authority of a municipal corporation lawfully done, such as cutting down trees, digging a cellar, well, etc.

The decisions are not unanimous, however; a few cases holding that a turnpike company cannot erect a tollhouse upon its road without making compensation to the abutting owner. But the rule, as set forth in the text, certainly seems to have both reason and authority on its side. See Danville, etc., Gravel Co. v. Campbell, 87 Ind. 57; Strattan v. Elliott, 83 Ind. 425; Thompson v. Androscoggin Bridge, 5 Me. 62.

In Perkins v. Moorestown, etc., Turnpike Co., 48 N. J. Eq. 499, it is held that the construction of a tollhouse within the lines of the highway, without the consent of the abutting owner, is the imposition of an additional servitude which will be restrained. And it seems that the case of Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76, was reversed in the court of errors and appeals on the very point that the right to erect tollgates and collect tolls did not carry with it the right to erect a house for the gatekeeper, though the decision does not appear in the reports. See State v. Laverack, 34 N. J. L. 208; Perkins v. Moorestown, etc., Turnpike Co., 48 N. J. Eq. 499; Freeholders v. Red Bank, 18 N. J. Eq. 94; Wuesthoff v. Seymour, 22 N. J. Eq. 66; Halsey v. Rapid Transit St. R. Co., 47 N. J. Eq. 380.

1. Kemper v. Cincinnati, etc., Turn- pike Co., 11 Ohio 392. In this case it is said, that the right to maintain tollhouses is undoubted, but the right to place them on any other land than that devoted to the road, is not conferred by the express terms of the charter, nor is any necessity shown or believed to exist for subjecting other property to this purpose. And see, to the same effect, Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Detroit, 81 Mich. 562.

2. Wright v. Carter, 27 N. J. L. 76; Strattan v. Elliott, 83 Ind. 425; Danville, etc., Gravel Road Co. v. Campbell, 87 Ind. 57; Thompson v. Androscoggin Bridge, 5 Me. 62.

3. Fisher v. Coyle, 3 Watts (Pa.) 407; Ridge Turnpike Co. v. Stover, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 548; Ridge Turnpike Co. v. Stover, 6 W. & S. (Pa.) 378. In this last case it is said that in order to determine whether the house erected within the limits of the road be authorized, and the occupation of it be still lawful, it is only necessary to ascertain whether it was built for a tollhouse, and is still used by the company for that purpose.

4. Lancaster Turnpike Co. v. Rogers, 2 Pa. St. 114.

5. See Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 59, where the authors of that work say: "In our judgment, a corporation which has a double character, such as a railroad or turnpike company, acquires its rights subject to the higher and domi-

to vacate, alter, or relay streets, gives it no power to alter a road owned by a turnpike company.¹

VI. RIGHT TO AID FROM TAXATION.—It is settled by the decisions of the courts of last resort of the United States, and of almost all of the individual states, that the legislature has the right to authorize counties and municipal corporations to tax themselves to raise funds to aid railroad or turnpike companies by investing in their stock or bonds. This doctrine has been frequently attacked by text-book writers, but still remains the law of the land. And not only is the right to invest in stocks or bonds sustained, but the right to make absolute donations is also strongly maintained.²

nant right of public necessity, and whenever public safety or necessity requires a change in the grade of a turnpike, at points where it crosses the streets of a city or town, the company must make it. This is substantially the rule with respect to railroads, and we are unable to perceive any reason why it does not fully apply to turnpikes."

The municipality has jurisdiction over its streets for regulating, grading, and paving them, and over that part of a turnpike road within the city limits, and used as a street, as one of those streets; but it has no right to regulate or grade the street so as to injure the turnpike or interfere with its chartered rights. State v. New Brunswick, 30 N. J. L. 397; State v. New Brunswick, 32 N. J. L. 548; Chambersburg v. Manko, 39 N. J. L. 500.

1. Quinn v. Patterson, 27 N. J. L. 35.

2. As early as 1837, the question was settled, or at least decided, by a court of last resort in Virginia. Goodin v. Crumps, 8 Leigh (Va.) 120. See also Harrison v. Holland, 3 Gratt. (Va.) 247 (a navigation case); Langhorne v. Robinson, 20 Gratt. (Va.) 661.

In 1843, in Connecticut, Bridgeport v. Housatonic R. Co., 15 Conn. 475. See also Society for Savings v. New London, 29 Conn. 174; Douglas v. Chatham, 41 Conn. 211.

In 1846, in Pennsylvania, Harvey v. Lloyd, 3 Pa. St. 331. See also Com. v. McWilliams, 11 Pa. St. 62 (a turnpike case); the great case of Sharpless v. Philadelphia, 21 Pa. St. 147; 59 Am. Dec. 759; Moers v. Reading, 21 Pa. St. 188; Com. v. Allegheny County, 32 Pa. St. 218; Com. v. Pittsburgh, 41 Pa. St. 278; Com. v. Perkins, 43 Pa. St. 400.

In Tennessee, in 1848, Nichol v. Nashville, 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 271. See also Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. David- son County, 1 Sneed (Tenn.) 637; Hord v. Rogetsville, etc., R. Co., 3 Head (Tenn.) 208; Byrd v. Ralston, 3 Head (Tenn.) 477; Campbell County v. Knoxville, etc., R. Co., 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 598.

In Kentucky, in 1849, Talbot v. Dent, 9 B. Mon. (Ky.) 526. See also Justices, etc. v. Paris, etc., River Turnpike Co., 11 B. Mon. (Ky.) 143; Slack v. Maysville, etc., R. Co., 13 B. Mon. (Ky.) 1; Maddox v. Graham, 2 Metc. (Ky.) 56; Shelby County v. Cumberland, etc., R. Co., 8 Bush (Ky.) 209.

In Illinois, in 1851, Ryder v. Alton, etc., R. Co., 13 Ill. 516. See also Prettyman v. Tazewell County, 19 Ill. 406; 71 Am. Dec. 230; Robertson v. Rockford, 21 Ill. 451; Johnson v. Stark County, 24 Ill. 75; Perkins v. Lewis, 24 Ill. 208; Butler v. Dunham, 27 Ill. 474; Clarke v. Hancock County, 27 Ill. 305; Piatt v. People, 29 Ill. 54; Keithsburg v. Frick, 34 Ill. 405; Quincy, etc., R. Co. v. Morris, 84 Ill. 410.

In Florida, in 1852, Cotton v. Leon County, 6 Fla. 610; Columbia County v. King, 13 Fla. 451.

In Ohio, in 1852, Cincinnati, etc., R. Co. v. Clinton County, 1 Ohio St. 77; Steubenville, etc., R. Co. v. North Tp., 1 Ohio St. 105. See also Cass v. Dillon, 2 Ohio St. 607; Thompson v. Kelly, 2 Ohio St. 647; State v. Van Horne, 7 Ohio St. 327; State v. Union Tp., 8 Ohio St. 394; State v. Hancock County, 12 Ohio St. 596; Knox County v. Nichols, 14 Ohio St. 260; State v. Perrysburg, 14 Ohio St. 472; State v. Goshen Tp., 14 Ohio St. 599; Walker v. Cincinnati, 21 Ohio St. 14; 8 Am. Rep. 24.

In Louisiana, in 1853, Police Jury v. McDonogh, 8 La. Ann. 341. See also New Orleans v. Graible, 9 La. Ann. 562; Parker v. Scogin, 11 La. Ann. 629; Vicksburg, etc., R. Co. v. Ouachita, 11 La. Ann. 649.

In Iowa, in 1853, Dubuque v. Dubuque, etc., R. Co., 4 Greene (Iowa) 1. See also State v. Bissell, 4 Greene (Iowa) 328; Clapp v. Cedar County, 5 Iowa 15; Ring v. Johnson County, 6 Iowa 265; McMillen v. Boyles, 6 Iowa 304; McMillen v. Lee County, 6 Iowa 391; Whittaker v. Johnson County, 10 Iowa 161; Bonnifield v. Bidwell, 32 Iowa 149.

In Alabama, in 1854, Stein v. Mobile, 24 Ala. 591. See also Wetumpka v. Winter, 29 Ala. 651 (a plank-road case); Gibbons v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 36 Ala. 410; Fielder v. Montgomery, etc., R. Co., 51 Ala. 178.

In Mississippi, in about the year 1854, Strickland v. Mississippi Cent. R. Co., not reported, but referred to in the case of Williams v. Cammack, 27 Miss. 224; 61 Am. Dec. 508; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. McDonald, 53 Miss. 240.

In North Carolina, in 1855, Taylor v. Newberne, 2 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 141 (a navigation case). See also Caldwell v. Burke County, 4 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 323; Hill v. Forsythe County, 67 N. Car. 368.

In Missouri, in 1856, St. Louis v. Alexander, 23 Mo. 483. See also Flagg v. Palmyra, 33 Mo. 440; St. Joseph, etc., R. Co. v. Buchanan County, 39 Mo. 485; Osage Valley R. Co. v. Morgan County, 53 Mo. 156.

In New York in 1857, Grant v. Courter, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 232; Benson v. Albany, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 248; Clarke v. Rochester, 24 Barb. (N. Y.) 446. See also Bank of Rome v. Rome, 18 N. Y. 38; Gould v. Venice, 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 442; Starin v. Genoa, 23 N. Y. 439; Clarke v. Rochester, 28 N. Y. 605; People v. Mitchell, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 208; People v. Mitchell, 35 N. Y. 551.

In South Carolina, in 1857, State v. Charleston, 10 Rich. (S. Car.) 491.

In Georgia, in 1857, Winn v. Macon, 21 Ga. 275; Powers v. Dougherty County, 23 Ga. 65.

In Indiana, in 1857, Aurora v. West, 9 Ind. 74. See also Evansville, etc., R. Co. v. Evansville, 15 Ind. 395; Bartholomew County v. Bright, 18 Ind. 93; Aurora v. West, 22 Ind. 88; 85 Am. Dec. 413; Lafayette, etc., R. Co. v. Geiger, 34 Ind. 185.

In Wisconsin, in 1859, Clark v. Janesville, 10 Wis. 136. Also see Bushnell v. Beloit, 10 Wis. 195; Oleson v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 36 Wis. 383; Bound v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 45 Wis. 546.

In California, in 1859, Pattison v. Yuba County, 13 Cal. 175; also Hobart v. Butte County, 17 Cal. 23; Robinson v. Bidwell, 22 Cal. 379; French v. Teschemaker, 24 Cal. 518; People v. Coon, 25 Cal. 635; People v. San Francisco, 27 Cal. 655; Stockton, etc., R. Co. v. Stockton, 41 Cal. 147.

In Maine, in 1860, Augusta Bank v. Augusta, 49 Me. 507.

In Kansas, in 1864, Burnes v. Atchison, 2 Kan. 454; Atchison v. Butcher, 3 Kan. 104; Leavenworth County v. Miller, 7 Kan. 479; 12 Am. Rep. 425.

In West Virginia, in 1865, Goshorn v. Ohio County, 1 W. Va. 308.

In Texas, in 1866, San Antonio v. Jones, 28 Tex. 19; San Antonio v. Gould, 34 Tex. 49.

In Nevada, in 1869, Gibson v. Mason, 5 Nev. 283.

In Vermont, in 1870, Danville v. Montpelier, etc., R. Co., 43 Vt. 144.

In Minnesota, Davidson v. Ramsey County, 18 Minn. 482.

In the United States Supreme Court in 1858, Knox County v. Aspinwall, 21 How. (U. S.) 539; Knox County v. Wallace, 21 How. (U. S.) 547. See also Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 381; Bissell v. Jeffersonville, 24 How. (U. S.) 287; Amey v. Alleghany City, 24 How. (U. S.) 365; Knox County v. Aspinwall, 24 How. (U. S.) 376; Woods v. Lawrence County, 1 Black (U. S.) 386; Moran v. Miami County, 2 Black (U. S.) 722; Mercer County v. Hackett, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 83; Gelpecke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175 (a leading case); Seybert v. Pittsburgh, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 272; Van Hostrup v. Madison City, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Meyer v. Muscatine, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 384; Sheboygan County v. Parker, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 93; Havemeyer v. Iowa County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 294; Thomson v. Lee County, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 327; Rogers v. Burlington, 3 Wall. (U. S.) 654; Mitchell v. Burlington, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 270; Larned v. Burlington, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 275; Van Hoffman v. Quincy, 4 Wall. (U. S.) 535; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 166; Weber v. Lee County, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 210; U. S. v. Keokuk, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 514; Riggs v. Johnson County, 6 Wall. (U. S.) 518; Lee County v. Rogers, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 181; Kenosha v. Lamson, 9 Wall. (U. S.) 477.

In Iowa, however, the courts at one time decided that such acts were unconstitutional. State v. Wapello County, 13 Iowa 388; Chamberlain v.

VII. LOCATION OF GATES—1. Location Within City Limits.—A turnpike company has the right to establish and maintain gates and collect tolls from all passing through, save those who are exempt; and it may maintain its gates within the limits of a city, provided they were established before the city limits embraced Burlington, 19 Iowa 395; McClure v. Owen, 26 Iowa 243. But the Supreme Court of the United States has overruled all these decisions, Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 175, and the cases subsequent to it. The leading case of Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Iowa 28; 1 Am. Rep. 215, was virtually overruled by Stewart v. Polk County, 30 Iowa 10; 1 Am. Rep. 238; King v. Willson, 1 Dill. (U. S.) 555.

Donations.—A distinction has been made by some courts, however, between subscriptions and donations, and there are four decisions against the validity of donations. Sweet v. Hulbert, 51 Barb. (N. Y.) 312; Hanson v. Vernon, 27 Iowa 28; 1 Am. Rep. 215; Whiting v. Sheboygan, etc., R. Co., 25 Wis. 167; 3 Am. Rep. 30; People v. Salem, 20 Mich. 452; 4 Am. Rep. 400. The first is not by a court of last resort, the second has been overruled, and the other two still stand, but are subject to the disapproval of the Supreme Court of the United States.

In Leavenworth County v. Miller, 7 Kan. 479, Valentine, J., said: "While there is an obvious distinction between subscriptions and donations, still we do not suppose that the Wisconsin and Michigan decisions are founded entirely upon the doctrine that donations to railroad companies are illegal, simply because they are donations. The power of governments and governmental organizations to make donations has been exercised ever since governments were instituted and we presume always will be. Swords, banners, and all other mementoes for meritorious conduct have always been, and, we suppose, always will be, donated by governments and municipal organizations. Money and land were donated to General LaFayette in 1824 by the general government. Millions of dollars and millions of acres of land have been donated to the soldiers of the republic since its organization. Homesteads are given to actual settlers; and many million acres of the public lands have been donated to railroad companies by the general government. . . .

And, if the right to make county and municipal subscriptions to railroad companies is founded on no other power except the power of taxation, we admit it has no foundation whatever, and must of course fall. But on the other hand, if it be conceded that every other objection to the making of said subscriptions is removed—that nothing else stands in the way—that everything else is favorable—that the right of the government is otherwise perfect—then everything is virtually conceded, for the power of taxation (or the want of such power) can never be in the way of the exercise of any of the other powers of government, but must always, when necessary, contribute thereto. Whenever the government can act at all, it can resort to the power of taxation, if necessary, to make its action effective. And, although the government has no right to interfere in private affairs at all, yet whenever the public interest, the public honor, the public gratitude, or public charity requires it, the government may resort to its sovereign power of taxation without limit, until its interest, its honor, its gratitude, or charity is entirely satisfied. Then it is that the power of the government and the power of the legislature, acting for the government, becomes unbounded; for the courts, whose duty it is simply to expound and declare the law have no scales by which to determine the amount of the public interest, the amount of the public honor, the amount of the public gratitude, or the amount of the public charity, which will support and sustain taxation. This duty rests upon another branch of the government—the legislature; and it rests wholly in their discretion."

This distinction between a donation and an investment is not recognized by the United States courts, and both are put upon the same basis. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Otoe County, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 667; Queensbury v. Culver, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 83; Olcott v. Fond du Lac County, 16 Wall. (U. S.) 678; New Buffalo v. Cambria Iron Co., 105 U. S. 73.

them.¹ But if the city limits be established, it will require a very clear grant of power to authorize a turnpike company to erect gates within the city.²

2. Right to Change Location.—A turnpike company, under a general act allowing it to erect gates and receive toll, may, from time to time, alter the location of such gates, and there can be no prescriptive right in the public to have the gates remain in any particular place; and it may increase their number, provided they are not placed in any position prohibited by the charter.³

Some courts, have, however, ruled that after the gates have been once located they cannot be changed. Most of these cases rest either on a special charter, or on a provision in the charter giving the company the right "to erect and establish" gates, and this being construed to give the power to do so but once.⁴

VIII. TOLL—1. Definition and Origin.—Toll is a tribute or custom paid for passage, not for carriage—always something taken for a liberty or privilege, not for a service.⁵ The right to exact toll is usually acquired by legislative grant, though it may be

1. Chope v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 37 Mich. 195; 26 Am. Rep. 512; Atty. Gen'l v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 2 Mich. 138; Corporation of St. Catherine v. Gardiner, 21 Up. Can. C. P. 190, affirming 20 Up. Can. C. P. 107; Conestoga, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Lancaster, 151 Pa. St. 543; 31 W. N. C. 146.

A charter forbidding the erection of tollgates within the city limits, does not oblige the company to remove gates brought within the limits of a city by their subsequent extension. Detroit v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 43 Mich. 140; Detroit v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 12 Mich. 333.

A provision in the charter of the company empowering it to collect tolls by suit, does not warrant the removal of the gate by the city; the remedy is intended only to enable the company to collect tolls from persons avoiding the gate after using the road. Conestoga, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Lancaster, 151 Pa. St. 543; 31 W. N. C. 146.

In Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413, it was held that where a turnpike company holds under the general plank-road law of the state and the highway on which a tollgate is located becomes annexed to an incorporated city, the right to maintain the gate is terminated; it being considered that the company accepted its charter upon the implied understanding that the right to use the highway for a toll road should give way as to such part thereof as might afterward become subjected to the control and government of an incorporated city.

2. Stormfeltz v. Manor Turnpike Co., 13 Pa. St. 555.

3. Fowler v. Pratt, 11 Vt. 369; Cheshire Turnpike Co. v. Stevens, 10 N. H. 133; Farmers Turnpike Co. v. Coventry, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 389; Chope v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 37 Mich. 195; 26 Am. Rep. 512; Somerville v. O'Neill, 114 Mass. 353; Barber v. Rorabeck, 36 Mich. 399; Atty. Gen'l v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 2 Mich. 138.

It has power to change the location of gates and erect new ones unless specially restricted. Detroit v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 12 Mich. 333.

When the president and directors of a company are authorized by statute to change the location of any of its gates, they cannot, if acting in good faith, be restrained, at the suit of the stockholders, from exercising such power and selling the abandoned tollhouse. Bardstown, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Rodman (Ky. 1890), 13 S. W. Rep. 917.

4. Griffen v. House, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 397; State v. Norwalk, etc., Turnpike Co., 10 Conn. 157; Hartford, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Hosmer, 12 Conn. 361; Hartford, etc., Turnpike Corp. v. Baker, 17 Pick. (Mass.) 432; Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413.

5. Boyle v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 54 Pa. St. 314, where it is said that no one supposes that tolls taken by a turnpike company or canal company derived from prescription,¹ and the amount exacted may be subject to state regulation.² The grant of a franchise to collect tolls on a particular road does not, by implication, prohibit the construction of roads parallel to the one vested with the franchise.³

2. Payment—a. HOW COLLECTED.—The decisions as to the respective rights of turnpike companies and the individual, in regard to the payment of tolls, are somewhat contradictory. A number of authorities hold that the law will not imply a promise to pay tolls from the mere use of a turnpike, but that they must be collected at the gates and cannot be recovered by a suit unless an agreement to pay is alleged and proved.⁴ Again, it has been include charges for transportation, or that they are anything more than an excise demanded and paid for the privilege of using the way. And see, to the same effect, Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Sly, 65 Pa. St. 210.

Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 68, defines toll to be a price paid for the privilege of passage over a road open to the public.

1. Toll is of two kinds: toll traverse and toll thorough. Toll thorough is in the highway, but toll traverse is for passing over another's land, yet it seems if a highway be in a city or town, toll thorough may be by prescription. Toll traverse may be by prescription or grant, but toll thorough cannot be by either prescription or grant. Pelham v. Pickersgill, 1 T. R. 660; Fitzherbert's Nature Brevium, 518 N; Truman v. Walgam, 2 Wils. 296; Paton Turnpike Co. v. Bishop, 11 Vt. 198.

But in Fales v. Whiting, 7 Pick. (Mass.) 232, it was said that there had been no actual existence of the road for a period long enough to establish a prescriptive right to take toll, if such right could, by any length of time, be established.

For the right to collect toll claimed by prescription, a consideration must be shown, which is usually to keep the road or bridge in repair. Pelham v. Pickersgill, 1 T. R. 660; Warren v. Pridaux, 1 Mod. 104; Harpurt v. Wills, 1 Mod. 47.

Toll thorough cannot be prescribed for without showing a consideration, but toll traverse may. Truman v. Walgam, 2 Wils. 296; Yarmouth v. Eaton, 3 Burr. 1402.

In Pelham v. Pickersgill, 1 T. R. 660, it was held that if a person claiming a toll for passage over a highway can show that the liberty of passing, and taking of toll for such passage, are both immemorial, and that the soil and tolls were, before the time of legal memory, in the same hands, though severed since, it shall be presumed that the soil was originally granted to the public in consideration of the toll, and such original grant is a good consideration to support the demand.

Penalty for Collecting Excessive Toll.

—Penalties are often provided for the collection of excessive toll, but where a plaintiff at one time paid for driving over the bridge at various times prior to the payment, it was held that only one penalty was incurred under Pennsylvania Act, 1874 (P. L. 73), p. 31, cl. 3, although the account embraced many items of overcharge. Porter v. Dawson Bridge Co., 157 Pa. St. 367.

2. The charter may exempt the turnpike company from state regulations of its tolls, but if subject to state regulations, the courts will not consider the question whether the tolls provided by the legislature are reasonable. Covington, etc., Turnpike Road Co. v. Sandford (Ky. 1893), 20 S. W. Rep. 1031.

The fact that the tolls are under the supervision of the county commissioners does not affect the right of the county to tax the road. East Park Toll Road Co. v. Edwards (Colo. App. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 549.

3. Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 11 Pet. (U. S.) 420; Bartram v. Central Turnpike Co., 25 Cal. 283.

4. Russell v. Muldrugs Hill, etc., Turnpike Co., 13 Bush (Ky.) 307; Huntington, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Brown, 2 P. & W. (Pa.) 462.

The law will imply no promise to pay for the use of a turnpike road where a statutory remedy is given through the medium of toll. Dorman v. Turnpike Co., 3 Watts (Pa.) 128; Chestnut Hill Turnpike Co. v. Martin, 12 Pa. St. 361. To found an action at law for the held that the authority given to turnpike companies to stop and detain travelers until the tolls are paid is merely a cumulative remedy; ¹ that an agreement to pay will be implied from the use of the road, ² and that assumpsit will lie for the toll without any demand from the company, ³ or agreement proved; ⁴ and this, even though the traveler deny his liability and refuse to pay. ⁵

b. FULL TOLL CAN BE CHARGED.—A turnpike company is authorized to charge toll for the full distance between its gates without regard to the actual distance traveled, ⁶ and the toll may, recovery of such debts, an express undertaking to pay is necessary, Beeler v. Turnpike Co., 14 Pa. St. 164; and in the absence of an express contract, and where the means of enforcing payment is given by the act of incorporation, the statutory remedy is exclusive of all others. Kidder v. Boom County, 24 Pa. St. 196.

The only method by which the company can collect its toll, is by receiving it at the gates. If a person travels the whole extent between the gates ever so often, but does not pass the gate, no toll can be exacted of him. Central Turnpike Co. v. Vandusen, 10 Vt. 197. He is not liable for tolls if he does not pass the gate, or pass around it in order to avoid the payment of toll, and then re-enter and travel the road. Lexington, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Red, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 30; Lincoln Ave., etc., Gravel Road Co. v. Daun, 79 Ill. 299. And see Kennedy v. Crum (Ky. 1894), 26 S. W. Rep. 190.

In Chestnut Hill Turnpike Co. v. Martin, 12 Pa. St. 361, Bell, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Experience has taught that it is best for all parties to confine turnpike companies to the summary mode of collecting their tolls usually provided by the several acts incorporating them, and that the inconveniences and injuries which it was suggested in the argument might flow from this rule, are seldom felt in practice. Against the use of fraud or force, the law affords ample protection, and the fullest enjoyment of their privileges is not, in any degree, jeopardized by denying them the right to sustain civil actions in cases like the present. But were they thus subjected to some chance of injury, it were better so than to accord to them the power of harassing travelers by petty suits."

Special Provision in Charter.—There may be a special provision in the charter of the company authorizing it to collect tolls by means of suit.

Conastoga, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Lancaster, 151 Pa. St. 543.

1. Chesley v. Smith, 1 N. H. 20; Bear Camp River Co. v. Woodward, 2 Me. 404.

2. New Albany, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Lewis, 49 Ind. 161; Petterson v. Indianapolis, etc., Plank Road Co., 56 Ind. 20; Stults v. Brunswick Turnpike Co., 48 N. J. L. 596.

A turnpike company need not even erect gates. In Nicholson v. Williamstown Turnpike Co., 28 N. J. L. 143, Ogden, J., said: "The law creates the duty for the traveler to pay the legal toll, irrespective of the aids which it gives the company for enforcing the performance of the duty. There is an implied promise upon the part of those who are subject to the exaction, when they enter upon and travel a turnpike road, that they will pay the toll which the charter of the company authorizes to be exacted."

3. Newport v. Saunders, 3 B. & Ad. 411; 23 E. C. L. 108; Nicholson v. Williamstown Turnpike Co., 28 N. J. L. 143; Chesley v. Smith, 1 N. H. 20.

4. Seward v. Baker, 1 T. R. 616; Exeter v. Trimlet, 2 Wills. 95; Peacock v. Harris, 10 East 104; Yarmouth v. Eaton, 3 Burr. 1402; Chesley v. Smith, 1 N. H. 20; Bear Camp River Co. v. Woodman, 2 Me. 404; Newburgh, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Belknap, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 33; Medford Turnpike Co. v. Torrey, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 538; New Albany, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Lewis, 49 Ind. 161; Ayres v. Turnpike Co., 9 N. J. L. 33.

In Bear Camp River Co. v. Woodman, 2 Me. 404, the statute gave the company the right to "demand and recover" the tolls.

5. The right to receive the tolls arises from the use of the road, and the duty to pay is not the less imperative because the defendant himself supposed he was not liable, and refused to pay. Proprietors of Turnpike Road v. Taylor, 6 N. H. 499.

6. Mallery v. Austin, 7 Barb. (N.

in some instances, be demanded in advance.¹ But there is a conflict of authority as to whether it is necessary for a gate to be passed in order to make the toll payable.²

c. WAIVER AND COMMUTATION OF TOLL.—The right to collect toll may be waived or commuted by contract under ordinary circumstances,³ but a company should not make unjust or unfair discriminations any more than a common carrier should.⁴

d. PENALTY FOR FAILURE TO PAY TOLL.—For passing through a tollgate without paying toll a penalty is usually pro-

Y.) 627; People v. Kingston, etc., Turnpike Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 193; Stuart v. Rich, 1 Cal. (N. Y.) 182. In this last case, Kent, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The idea that the company must vary the toll at every ten-mile gate on the suggestion that a person has used the road for a less distance than ten miles, is inadmissible, because impracticable. The toll gatherer has no means of knowing whether the traveler has rode ten miles, or a less distance, previous to his arrival at the gate. If this suggestion was allowed to be a ground of reduction of toll, it would open a door to the greatest imposition and fraud upon the company."

1. Rives v. Wood (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 131.

The turnpike company can make reasonable regulations for its own protection, such as requiring a traveler who pays toll beyond the next gate to present a ticket at the gate to show what he has paid. State v. Brumfiel, 83 Ind. 136.

2. The following cases hold the traveler liable for toll, even if no gate is passed: Morton Gravel Road Co. v. Wysong, 51 Ind. 4; Hunter v. Burnsville Turnpike Co., 56 Ind. 213; Fitch v. Lothrop, 2 Root (Conn.) 524.

On the other side are: Lexington, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Redd, 2 B. Mon. (Ky.) 30; Buncombe Turnpike Co. v. Mills, 10 Ired. (N. Car.) 30.

3. The tolls may be commuted for an annual sum, providing the charter does not forbid it, and it is done with an honest purpose. Com. v. Allegheny Bridge Co., 20 Pa. St. 185. And see Delaware, etc., Canal Co. v. Pennsylvania Coal Co., 21 Pa. St. 131; Adams v. Fort Gaines, 80 Ga. 85.

In Com. v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 43 Pa. St. 295, it was held that an agreement between a canal company and a coal company providing for a rate of toll to be ascertained by the market price of coal in every year, instead of fixed tolls to be collected at the locks according to the charter, was valid, as the canal company had the right to commute its tolls, and no public grievance was involved. Nor was it a valid objection that, on account of the uncertainty of the toll, the company could not always know how much to demand of others and could not thus do equal justice to all, where there was no evidence that the public or any private person had suffered wrong thereby.

In Park v. Richmond, etc., Turnpike Co. (Ky. 1888), 9 S. W. Rep. 423, a parol contract by which the plaintiff sold land to a turnpike company, in consideration of the right for himself and family to pass perpetually through certain gates free of charge, was held valid.

But an agreement between a turnpike company and individuals, that if they withdraw their opposition to an act touching the company's interest, they should pass over the road toll free, is against sound policy and void. Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264.

4. In Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 71, it is said that, "A turnpike company would, as we suppose, have no right to unjustly discriminate in favor of individuals so as to give them undue advantages over competitors, under pretext of relieving them from the payment of toll, or by reducing it below the legal rate. The principle which applies to common carriers ought to apply to turnpike corporations. The reason for the application of the principle is as strong in the one case as in the other, and public policy forbids either a common carrier or a turnpike corporation from making a discrimination that will enable one citizen to secure undue advantage over another."

vided, which can be recovered by an action at law,¹ but the penalty must be fixed by an act of assembly, a mere by-law of the turnpike company having no validity.² It has been held that the penalty cannot be collected if the individual merely rides through the gate without force, but this would probably depend on the wording of the statute.³

e. GATE CAN BE CLOSED IF TOLL IS NOT PAID.—A turnpike company may close its gates against a traveler, liable to pay toll, who attempts to pass without payment;⁴ and one who forcibly saws open the gate and passes through is guilty of malicious trespass.⁵ But if the gate be unlawfully across the road, it is a nuisance which the traveler may abate without subjecting himself to an action.⁶

f. DEFENSE TO ACTION FOR TOLL.—In an action brought to recover toll, the defendant may not question the regularity of the organization of the turnpike company, nor may he aver a belief that the gate is illegal,⁷ but he may show that the franchise has been repealed or surrendered, or has expired by limitation.⁸

1. Morton Gravel Road Co. v. Wysong, 51 Ind. 4. But the company cannot collect a penalty for forcibly passing a gate which it had no right to maintain; and when suing for a penalty, the burden is on the company of proving the existence of such a state of facts as entitles it to its enforcement; any testimony tending to disprove the existence of such facts, being admissible in defense of the action. Pontiac, etc., Plank Road Co. v. North Hilton, 69 Mich. 115.

2. In Wayne Pike Co. v. Bosworth, 91 Ind. 210, it was held that a gravel road company had no power, under an act allowing it to enact by-laws, and providing a penalty for anyone violating the same, to fix a greater penalty for the non-payment of tolls than a sum fixed by law.

A by-law enacted by the directors of a company regulating the payment of tolls and prescribing a penalty for a violation of the by-law, is invalid. Morton Gravel Road Co. v. Wysong, 51 Ind. 4.

3. Columbia Turnpike Co. v. Woodworth, 2 Cal. (N. Y.) 97.

In Green Mountain Turnpike Co. v. Hemmingway, 2 Vt. 512, it was held that a person exempted from the payment of toll, does not incur the penalty by refusing to pay, and forcibly passing the gate without notifying the toll gatherer of his exemption. He may open the gate himself, so that he does not commit a breach of the peace. Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264.

Demanding a written receipt and threatening litigation, thereby inducing a tollgate keeper to allow one to pass without paying toll, is not an offense against the General Statutes of Kentucky imposing a penalty for defrauding by going around a tollgate, or otherwise evading the payment of toll. Rives v. Wood (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 131.

4. In Bock v. State, 50 Ind. 281, it is said that the statute authorizing the company to erect tollgates, by necessary implication gives it the power to close them against all travelers who are liable, but who refuse to pay toll. See Green Mt. Turnpike Co. v. Hemmingway, 2 Vt. 512; Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264.

5. Bock v. State, 50 Ind. 281. In Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264, it is said that a person who is not liable to pay toll, has a right to open the gate and pass, so that he does not commit a breach of the peace; and if he breaks the peace, although the law will inflict punishment upon him, it will not impose the statutory penalty.

6. Adams v. Beach, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 272; Hart v. Albany, 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 589; 24 Am. Dec. 165; Pontiac, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Hilton, 69 Mich. 115; James v. Hayward, Cro. Ch. 184.

7. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Mahoney, 68 Mich. 265; Hunter v. Burnsville, etc., Co., 56 Ind. 213.

8. People v. Manhattan Co., 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 382. But not that it

He may also show that the road is not in proper repair in those cases in which the good order of the road is made one of the conditions upon which the company is allowed to collect toll.¹ But in some cases this latter defense is not admissible.²

3. Exemption from Toll.—Exemption from toll is usually created by special statute and is granted for various reasons, such as "ordinary domestic business of family concerns," "going to or from church," "the inhabitants of a village," "going to or from mills," "purposes of husbandry;" particular kinds of vehicles are sometimes exempt.³ These exemptions are always construed most has been forfeited. Adams v. Beach, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 271.

1. State v. Huggins, 47 Ind. 586; Western Plank Road Co. v. Central Union Teleph. Co., 116 Ind. 229; State v. Flannagan, 67 Ind. 140.

2. Stults v. East Brunswick, etc., Turnpike Co., 48 N. J. L. 596; Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Mahoney, 68 Mich. 265; Canal Street Gravel Road Co. v. Paas, 95 Mich. 372.

3. There are many cases upon exemption, depending upon the particular terms of the exemption, or the special circumstances of the case to which reference can be made. Those in relation to particular kinds of vehicles: Pardee v. Blanchard, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 442; Moss v. Moore, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 128; Merrick v. Phelps, 5 Conn. 465; Middlesex Turnpike Co. v. Freeman, 14 Conn. 85; Housatonic Turnpike Co. v. Frink, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 443; Turnpike Co. v. Newland, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 463; Cincinnati, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Neil, 9 Ham. (Ohio) 11; Mahon v. New York Cent. R. Co., 24 N. Y. 658.

Going to or from mills: Chestney v. Coon, 8 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 150; Bates v. Sutherland, 15 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 510.

In favor of husbandry: Cumings v. Waring, 39 Barb. (N. Y.) 630; Rex v. Adams, 6 M. & S. 52; Harrison v. James, 2 Chitty 547; King v. Gough, 2 Chitty 655; Pratt v. Brown, 8 C. & P. 244; Chambers v. Eaves, 2 Campb. 393; Harrison v. Brough, 6 Term. 706; Stevens v. Duffts, 4 Burr. 2258; Camden, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Fowler, 24 N. J. L. 205; Nicholson v. Williamstown, etc., Turnpike Co., 28 N. J. L. 142.

Going to church: Lewis v. Hammond, 2 B. & Ald. 206.

Ordinary domestic business of family concerns: Green Mountain Turnpike Co. v. Hemmenway, 2 Vt. 512; Centre Turnpike Co. v. Smith, 12 Vt.

212; Kent v. Newburyport Turnpike Co., 4 Pick. (Mass.) 388; Medford Turnpike Co. v. Torrey, 2 Pick. (Mass.) 538; Proprietors of Second Turnpike v. Taylor, 6 N. H. 499; Newburgh, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Belknap, 17 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 33; Nicholson v. Williamstown Turnpike Co., 23 N. J. L. 143.

The act imposing tolls upon "coaches and chariots, and other four-wheeled pleasure carriages" includes the stage coaches used for the conveyance of the mail or passengers. Cincinnati Turnpike Co. v. Neil, 9 Ohio 11.

A one-horse wagon with a single fixed seat and two full-grown persons sitting thereon, is a wagon, but not a loaded wagon. Merrick v. Phelps, 5 Conn. 465.

A one-horse wagon with a spring seat and panel sides, used only for carrying persons, is a "pleasure carriage" within the meaning of the charter of a turnpike company, and is liable for toll. Moss v. Moore, 18 Johns. (N. Y.) 128. But a light one-horse wagon, with a framed box and swelled sides, painted in imitation of panel work, a crooked bolster, and a chair seat with wooden springs, in which are two passengers, a trunk, a box, a bag of oats, and a bottle, is not a "chair or pleasure carriage with one horse." Pardee v. Blanchard, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 442.

Where an act provided for certain toll to be paid "for each coach, chariot, and phaeton, or other four-wheeled spring carriage," it was held that the term "coach" was not controlled by the words, "other four-wheeled spring carriage," and that a stage coach, the top of which was suspended on thorough braces attached to four-braced iron jacks, was a coach within the provision of the statute. Housatonic, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Frink, 15 Pick. (Mass.) 443.

strongly against the company;¹ thus, an act exempting carts loaded with manure, also exempts them when empty going for manure.² Those in relation to husbandry are also favorably looked upon,³ and an exemption from toll "going to and from mills" includes saw as well as grist mills.⁴ But the reason for the exemption must be bona fide; a person going to a blacksmith shop to pay for work previously done is not exempt under an act relieving from toll those "going to and from a blacksmith shop to which they usually resort,"⁵ nor is he exempt if he carries goods to market and stops at the shop on his return to have work done.⁶ A privilege given to the inhabitants of a certain village of half toll on going to and returning from market, is not good on the return trip if the goods of others are carried.⁷

A person carrying the United States mail under contract is subject to the same toll as anyone else,⁸ but owing to the act of Congress prohibiting the obstruction of the mails, a tollgate keeper is not authorized in stopping the mail carrier for non-payment of toll; his only redress is by suit.⁹

4. Shun-pikes.—A road intended to furnish a way of evading a tollgate and constructed for that particular purpose is called a

1. Where a vehicle is within the general description of vehicles subject to a certain toll, and also embraced by a specific description of vehicles subject to a less toll, the latter is to determine the amount of toll. Middlesex Turnpike Co. v. Freeman, 14 Conn. 85.

Although the statute speaks in the singular number, and mentions "his" horses, carriages, etc., yet the exemption extends to any firm or copartnership sending "their" horses, teams, etc., or to any person sending his servants or children. Passumpsic Turnpike Co. v. Langdon, 6 Vt. 546. An act exempting "all persons drawing firewood for family use" was held to extend as well to a person drawing his firewood at one time, with the assistance of his neighbors and others hired for the purpose, as if he himself drew but one load a day. Wooster v. Van Vechten, 10 Johns. (N. Y.) 467.

2. Harrison v. James, 2 Chitty 547.

3. Hickinbotham v. Perkins, 3 Moore 185.

4. Hearsey v. Pruyn, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 179.

5. Stratton v. Herrick, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 356.

6. Stratton v. Hubbel, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 357.

7. Hearsay v. Boyd, 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 183; Passumpsic Turnpike Co. v. Langdon, 6 Vt. 546. Nor does an exemption of persons going to and from the mill with grain and flour for family use, apply to a wagon loaded with other articles and some grain or flour. Bates v. Sutherland, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 510.

8. Derby Turnpike Co. v. Parks, 10 Conn. 522; Newland v. Buncombe Turnpike Co., 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 372; Turnpike Co. v. Newland, 4 Dev. (N. Car.) 463; Dickey v. Maysville, etc., Turnpike Co., 7 Dana (Ky.) 113; Proctor v. Crozier, 6 B. Mon. (Ky.) 269.

9. Hopkins v. Stockton, 2 W. & S. (Pa.) 163, Sergeant, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "Is it reasonable to infer, although the legislature have not said so, that they intended, when they passed the Act of 1836, that these tolls on the mail stages should be enforced by stopping the mail stages at the tollgates, in case the right of the state to levy should be contested? We think not; and the reason which operates upon us is, that knowingly and willfully to obstruct the passage of the mail, is an offense made penal by act of Congress. The State of Pennsylvania, in levying a disputable toll, would hardly authorize a proceeding which might bring its toll gatherers within the penalty of an act of Congress, where there was no necessity for doing so, as the tolls could be recovered by suit, and when, if the act of Assembly were unconstitutional, it would furnish no defense to the tollgatherers for obstructing the mails under it."

"shun-pike."¹ While the construction of roads in the vicinity of a turnpike established by charter, will not be permitted where intended to diminish the profits of such turnpike, and may be enjoined,² yet a community in the neighborhood of a turnpike will not be restrained from the construction of roads obviously

1. Elliott on Roads and Streets (1890), p. 74; Cheshire Turnpike v. Stevens, 10 N. H. 133.

2. Newburgh, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101; Croton Turnpike Co. v. Ryder, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 611; Gates v. McDaniels, 2 Stew. (Ala.) 111.

If the injury to the turnpike is great, without producing a corresponding public advantage, the new road will be considered a nuisance and ordered closed. Hall v. Ragsdale, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 259.

A temporary injunction will not be dissolved on an answer denying that the road was intended merely as a shun-pike, the quo animo being immaterial if the fact exists, and this although the proposed road does not intercept the turnpike at all. White's Creek Turnpike Co. v. Davidson County, 3 Tenn. Ch. 396.

In Franklin, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Maury County Court, 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 342, it was held that county courts have no power to order the opening of a road intercepting a chartered turnpike road so as to enable a traveler to evade the payment of toll, and that if it makes such an order and the road is opened, the court of chancery will order it to be closed as a violation of chartered rights.

In Newburgh, etc., Turnpike Road v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101, the Chancellor said: "It is a principle of the common law, that if one had a ferry by prescription, and another erected a ferry so near it as to draw away its custom, it was a nuisance for which the injured party had his remedy by action. The same law and remedy were applied to the case of a fair or market, in which an individual had a freehold interest, if another fair or market was erected or used within its vicinity. The same doctrine applies to any exclusive privilege created by statute; all such privileges come within the equity and reason of the principle; no rival road, bridge, ferry or other establishment of a similar kind, and for like purposes, can be tolerated so near to the other as materially to affect or take away its custom. It operates as a fraud upon the grant, and goes to defeat it. The consideration by which individuals are invited to expend money upon great and expensive and hazardous public works, as roads and bridges, and to become bound to keep them in constant and good repair, is the grant to an exclusive toll. This right, thus purchased for a valuable consideration, cannot be taken away by direct or indirect means, devised for the purpose, both of which are equally unlawful."

In Auburn, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Douglass, 9 N. Y. 444, reversing 12 Barb. (N. Y.) 553, and disapproving Croton Turnpike Co. v. Ryder, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 611, and Newburgh v. Miller, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 101, it was held that a plank-road company was not entitled to an injunction restraining an adjoining landowner from opening a way over his own lands by the use of which travelers might avoid one of its tollgates; that the company, having no legal right to restrict the owner in the legal use of his own property, it was immaterial what might be his motives in the matter. Selden, J., in delivering the opinion of the court in this case, said: "It may be added that the Plank Road Acts give to the corporation in cases of this kind a remedy against those who avail themselves of the facilities afforded by the adjoining proprietors. Every traveler upon a plank road who passes around or avoids the gates of the company, for the purpose of evading the payment of toll, subjects himself to a penalty at the suit of the corporation. If this remedy be not sufficient, it is for the legislature to provide some other. The courts cannot with propriety be called upon, however strong the apparent equity of the case, to adopt the novel principle that the motives with which a man conducts his own business, or deals with his own property, may be inquired into, in order to hold him responsible for the consequences to another, when he has violated no law nor any established legal right of the party injured."

demanding by the situation of the country and the wants of the neighborhood.¹

If the officials of a town lay out a highway around a turnpike gate for the purpose of enabling those who travel on the road to evade the payment of toll, they are liable to the company in damages.²

IX. REPAIR—1. Duty to Keep in Repair.—The same general rules as to the responsibility for the proper maintenance of highways to keep them safe for all ordinary travel, and the same duty to prevent their obstruction, apply to turnpikes. The same defenses and the same rights, as to removing obstructions, exist in the one case as in the other.³ This liability of the company to keep the road in repair extends to all parts of the road over which it appears to have control, such as bridges forming part of its way, unless direct notice is given to the traveler as to the ownership of the bridge.⁴ It is not an insurer of the safety of its road, however, but is only bound to use ordinary care and diligence in keeping it in repair.⁵

2. Penalty for Failure.—If a turnpike company does not keep

1. Hall v. Ragsdale, 4 Stew. & P. (Ala.) 252; Charles River Bridge Co. v. Warren River Bridge Co., 11 Pet. (U. S.) 420.

In Crawfordsville, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Smith, 89 Ind. 290, it was held that a gravel-road company, organized under the general laws of Indiana, could not prevent by injunction the construction of another competing line of turnpike, which was to be made free from tolls.

In Nashville Bridge Co. v. Shelby, 10 Yerg. (Tenn.) 280, it was held that if a public bridge was sufficient at all times to permit transportation freely and without delay for all persons and effects, the mere fact that a ferry at, or near, the bridge would produce competition and thereby reduce the tolls of the bridge below the amount allowed by law, was not such a "public convenience" as would authorize the county courts to establish the ferry.

2. Cheshire Turnpike v. Stevens, 10 N. H. 133.

3. See HIGHWAYS, vol. 9, p. 378; STREETS, vol. 24, p. 1.

4. Where a bridge upon a turnpike road becomes unsafe from the gradual decay of the timbers, and there is no open or visible danger in passing, the owners of the road are responsible for the sufficiency of the bridge so long as they continue to take toll and keep the road open to the public, although notice is given to those who pass that there is danger. Randall v. Proprietors of Cheshire Turnpike, 6 N. H. 147.

The defendants are bound to bestow ordinary care and diligence in the construction and preservation of their bridges. They are not responsible for accidents, if those accidents do not arise from the want of this ordinary care and skill. Townsend v. Susquehanna Turnpike Road, 6 Johns. (N. Y.) 90. And see BRIDGES, vol. 2, p. 540.

5. Talmadge v. Zanesville County, 17 Ohio 197; Parnaly v. Lancaster, 11 Ad. & El. 223.

It is bound to bestow ordinary care and diligence in the construction of its bridges and in keeping them in repair, but is not responsible for accidents which do not arise from its neglect or want of ordinary care and skill. Townsend v. Susquehanna Turnpike Co., 7 Johns. (N. Y.) 90.

It is bound to keep its road in a state of ordinary safety for the use of travelers day and night so far as it can be done by ordinary diligence. The same diligence is required which is demanded of towns to insure the safety of travelers upon the highway, and turnpike companies, as well as towns, are primarily liable to the traveler. Matthews v. Winooski Turnpike Co., 24 Vt. 480.

It is the duty of the proprietor of a toll bridge to exercise ordinary care in keeping it in safe condition for travel; but he is not bound to go beyond this, and a charge imposing an additional its road in a reasonably safe condition for public travel, it is liable in damages to any one injured,¹ and also, under some statutes, it forfeits the right to collect toll.² In some states it even forfeits its franchise,³ while in still others, it may be subjected to a fine for every week the road is left in a defective condition.⁴

3. Repair by Municipality.—When a turnpike is within the limits of a city, it would seem that the municipality may, under its general police power, require the road to be kept in repair, but its liability would not extend to the point of liability in damages for omission to do so.⁵ It cannot repair the turnpike and assess the obligation upon him is error. Tift v. Jones, 74 Ga. 469.

Upon the trial of an indictment for failure to keep its road in repair, proof by the company that it had no funds with which to repair the road, is not a valid defense. Waterford, etc., Turnpike Co. v. People, 9 Barb. (N. Y.) 161.

1. People v. Plymouth Turnpike Co., 32 Mich. 248; Riddle v. Proprietors of Locks, etc., 7 Mass. 169; Bartlett v. Crozier, 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 250; Russell v. Men of Devon, 2 T. R. 671; Lynn v. Turner, Cowp. 86; Born v. Allegheny, etc., Plank Road Co., 101 Pa. St. 334; Norristown v. Moyer, 67 Pa. St. 355; Goshen Turnpike Co. v. Sears, 7 Conn. 86; Frankfort Bridge Co. v. Williams, 9 Dana (Ky.) 403; Noyes v. White River Turnpike Co., 11 Vt. 531; Randall v. Proprietors of Cheshire Turnpike, 6 N. H. 147; Com. v. Worcester, etc., R. Co., 3 Pick. (Mass.) 327; State v. Wayne County, 1 Hawks (N. Car.) 451; State v. Patton, 4 Ired. (N. Car.) 16; Baltimore v. Cassell, 66 Md. 419; Brookville County v. Pumphrey, 59 Ind. 78; Wayne, etc., Co. v. Henry, 5 Ind. 286; Carver v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 61 Mich. 584; Zuc-carrello v. Nashville County, 3 Baxt. (Tenn.) 364.

But not where the party injured is guilty of contributory negligence. Haven v. Pittsburg, etc., Bridge Co., 151 Pa. St. 620; 31 W. N. C. 191. The question as to the plaintiff's contributory negligence is usually for the jury. Carver v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 69 Mich. 616; Baltimore, etc., Turnpike Road v. State, 71 Md. 573.

The question whether the road is unsafe and dangerous to travelers, and the company is guilty of negligence, is for the jury. Carver v. Detroit, etc., Plank Road Co., 69 Mich. 616; Baltimore, etc., Turnpike Road v. State, 71 Md. 573.

Expert evidence is inadmissible. Brown v. Cape Girardeau, etc., Plank Road Co., 89 Mo. 152.

Evidence that there has been no complaint as to the condition of the road during the thirty years the witness has been president of the company, is inadmissible. Baltimore, etc., Turnpike Road v. State, 71 Md. 573.

2. It is also usually provided in the statutes governing turnpike companies, that if the road is not kept in repair, the company cannot collect tolls, and a method is provided by which, upon the decree of the proper authorities, varying in each locality, that the gates shall be thrown open and so remain until the road is put into proper condition. The public is not bound to this alone, but may proceed by information against the company. People v. Hillsdale Turnpike Road, 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 254.

Under Ontario Rev. St., ch. 159, as amended by 53 Vict., ch. 42, it may, on the report of an engineer that its road is out of repair, be restrained from the collection of tolls. Atty. Gen'l v. Vaughan Road Co., 21 Can. S. C. R. 631.

3. Under Kentucky Gen. St., ch. 110, § 8, if a turnpike company is convicted of allowing its road to get out of repair, its franchise may be adjudged forfeited; but the court must adjudge it forfeited, the fact of conviction alone being insufficient. Kennedy v. Crum (Ky. 1894), 26 S. W. Rep. 190.

4. Francis v. Weaver (Md.), 25 Atl. Rep. 413.

5. McCain v. State, 62 Ala. 138. In State v. New Brunswick, 32 N. J. L. 548, Beasley, C. J., said: "There does not appear to be any good reason why such roads should not be held to be subject, when they lie in cities, to the regulation, in a manner not inconsistent with their use as turnpikes, of such local authority."

costs to the abutting owners ;¹ but if the work is done in the performance of its general duty to keep its streets in repair, it may recover the amount expended from the company, provided it is not in excess of the sum necessary to be expended to keep the road in the condition required by the company's charter.² And it has been held that the use of a turnpike or plank road as a street by the citizens of the municipality within which it lies, gives it the character of a street to the degree that its existence as such cannot be questioned by one other than the company owning the road.³

And in State v. New Brunswick, 30 N. J. L. 377, it was said, that a city had, for police purposes, authority to make such municipal regulations as to it appeared expedient, but had no power to require a turnpike company to grade its road or to repair it.

1. A plank road is private property, and not a public street in any proper sense; and the power to purchase or condemn it is usually a different power from that to improve a public street, and the laws relative to the improvement of streets cannot be applied to a plank road. Wilson v. Allegheny City, 79 Pa. St. 272.

A city cannot, under an authority to extend and widen certain streets, widen a turnpike road within its limits, and assess the costs on the abutting owners. Breen v. Alleghany, 85 Pa. St. 214.

But in State v. New Brunswick, 30 N. J. L. 395, it was held that a turnpike road was practically one of the streets of the city, notwithstanding the fact that toll was collected by the company for passing over it, and that if, in the judgment of the city, its health, comfort, or prosperity required it, it might order the street to be regulated, graded, and paved at the expense of the owners or occupants of the lots fronting on it, and it was no excuse for the owners to say that the rights of the turnpike company were infringed; that the improvement was presumed to be for the benefit of the owners and to increase the intrinsic value of their lots, and there was no injustice in requiring them to pay the expense of an improvement, which was to contribute to their enjoyment and to promote their interests; and that there was no vested right in the owners of adjacent lands to require the turnpike company to bear that expense, nor to have the road continued at its original grade.

See State v. New Brunswick, 32 N. J. L. 548, where the decision was affirmed upon the ground that a dedication by the turnpike company of that part of its road within the city to the use of a public street was to be implied, the question as to the power of a municipality to improve a turnpike within its limits and assess the expense on the abutting owners being left for future determination.

In Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 60, note, it is said, in speaking of this decision, that, "We cannot assent to the doctrine that the property of a private corporation, although a toll road, can be improved at the expense of adjoining property owners under a statute authorizing the improvement of streets and highways, for we think the term highways means public ways in the strict sense;" also, "We think it clear that under an authority to improve streets, a municipal corporation would have no right to improve a turnpike road, since the right to take tolls imposes upon a private corporation the imperative duty of keeping its road in proper condition for travel, and the municipality cannot cast the burden upon the property owners."

2. In Versailles, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Versailles (Ky. 1889), 10 S. W. Rep. 280, it is said, that while the duty is imposed upon the town to keep its streets in a condition fit for public use, and a power is given to levy and collect necessary taxes for that purpose, including the street upon which the company's road is, the company is not released from its obligation, nor can it claim exemption from its original undertaking to keep in proper repair that part of its road within the town limits until it clearly appears that it has ratably diminished its toll; it cannot claim and enjoy the benefit of the full amount of tolls on its road, and at the same time shift the burden of keeping it, or any part of it, in repair, to the town.

3. State v. Passaic, 42 N. J. L. 524; State v. New Brunswick, 32 N. J. L. 548, affirming 30 N. J. L. 395; Jersey

X. LIABILITY FOR NEGLIGENCE.—A turnpike company, like other employers, is liable for the negligence of its agents; such as letting down a bar upon a traveler, etc.¹

TURN-TABLES.

I. Injuries to Children by Turn-Tables, 344.

1. General Rule of Liability, 344.
2. Evidence, 347.

3. Contributory Negligence of Child, 348.

II. Injuries to Employés by Turn-Tables, 349.

I. INJURIES TO CHILDREN BY TURN-TABLES—1. General Rule of Liability.—The general rule of liability, as laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States and adopted by the great majority of the state courts, is, that if a railway company leaves a turntable, or other like machinery upon its own property likely to attract children, so unsecured that children may put it in motion, the company is negligent, and if a child is injured thereby, will be liable in damages;² it is immaterial whether the turn-table, at the time of the accident, was operated by the child injured or by a

City v. State, 30 N. J. L. 521; State v. Jersey City, 29 N. J. L. 441; State v. Atlantic City, 34 N. J. L. 99.

In Elliott on Roads and Streets, p. 61, it is said that, "If the citizens are compelled to treat the way as a street, by paying the expenses of improving and repairing it, the private corporation must certainly lose its right to claim the way as its private property, since it cannot be both a turnpike and a street. It may be that, as against the municipality, the citizens might, in some cases, be estopped while the private corporation would not be; but certainly, if the private corporation knows that the way is claimed as a street and that money is expended upon it as such, it may, on the same principle which is held to estop the property owner, be estopped to aver that it is not a street, but a turnpike."

1. Nolensville v. Gause, 76 Ind. 142; 40 Am. Rep. 224; Dudley v. Canal Bank, 5 La. Ann. 297, where a gate was closed at an unusual hour, and instead of a gate, a bar was used, which was not easily discernible at night, and against which plaintiff's horse struck his head and was killed.

But where a gate keeper, to prevent the passage of travelers apparently attempting to drive by without the payment of toll, suddenly lowers the gate, whereby an occupant of the carriage is injured, the company is not held liable as for a willful injury. Brannen v. Komo, etc., Gravel Co., 115 Ind. 115.

2. In Stout v. Sioux City, etc., R. Co., 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657, it was held that a child could recover in an action brought in his own name for injuries received while playing on a turntable, when it appeared that the land on which the turn-table was situated was uninclosed, and that the company had failed to lock or otherwise secure the turn-table from interference by trespassers. See also Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Styron (Tex. 1886), 1 S. W. Rep. 161; Bridger v. Asheville, etc., R. Co., 25 S. Car. 24; Callahan v. Eel River, etc., R. Co., 92 Cal. 89; O'Malley v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 43 Minn. 289.

The doctrine of the Supreme Court of the United States has been followed in Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Styron (Tex. 1886), 1 S. W. Rep. 161; Evanich v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 24; Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Simpson, 60 Tex. 103; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. McWhirter, 77 Tex. 356; 19 Am. St. Rep. 755; Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Measles, 81 Tex. 474; Keffe v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 21 Minn. 207; O'Malley v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co., 43 Minn. 289; Twist v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 164; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 336; Nagel v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 75 Mo. 653; 42 Am. Rep. 418; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 702; Barrett v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 91 Cal. 296; Callahan v. Eel River, etc., R. Co., 92 Cal. 89; Union Pac. R. Co. v. Dunden, 37 Kan. 1; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 88; Kansas Cent. R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 22 Kan. 686;

Bridger v. Asheville, etc., R. Co., 25 S. Car. 24; Illwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Hedrick, 1 Wash. 146; 22 Am. St. Rep. 169; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68; Ferguson v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 75 Ga. 637; Bates v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 90 Tenn. 36; Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 11 Neb. 332; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 742; Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 604; Koons v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 592; Kolsti v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. (Minn. 1894), 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140.

For a railroad company to leave a dangerous machine, such as a turn-table, unfastened in a city lot which is not securely inclosed, and where people and children are wont to visit and pass through, is negligence. And if an infant of ten or twelve years of age resorts to the turn-table, and in riding upon it is seriously injured, the railroad company is liable in damages for such injuries to the infant, and this is so notwithstanding the father of the infant permitted her to go near the turn-table to carry breakfast to a brother who had been left by the father to protect other property of the company. The fault, if any, of the father, is not attributed to the infant, the action being brought by the infant herself. Ferguson v. Columbus, etc., R. Co., 75 Ga. 637.

In Keffe v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 21 Minn. 207, Young, J., said: "We agree with the defendant's counsel that a railroad company is not required to make its lands a safe playground for children. It has the same right to maintain and use its turn-table that any landowner has to use his property. It is not an insurer of the lives or limbs of young children who play upon its premises. We merely decide that when it sets before young children a temptation which it has reason to believe will lead them into danger, it must use ordinary care to protect them from harm. What would be proper care, in any case, must, in general, be a question for the jury, upon all the circumstances of the case." The same judge also said: "To treat the plaintiff as a voluntary trespasser is to ignore the averments of the complaint, that the turn-table, which was situate in a public (by which we understand, an open, frequented) place, was, when left unfastened, very attractive, and, when put in motion by them, was dangerous to young children, by whom it could be easily put in motion, and many of them were in the habit of going upon it to play. The turn-table, being thus attractive, presented to the natural instincts of young children a strong temptation; and such children, following, as they must be expected to follow, those natural instincts, were thus allured into a danger whose nature and extent they, being without judgment or discretion, could neither apprehend nor appreciate, and against which they could not protect themselves. The difference between the plaintiff's position and that of a voluntary trespasser, capable of using care, consists in this, that the plaintiff was induced to come upon the defendant's turn-table by the defendant's own conduct, and that, as to him, the turn-table was a hidden danger, a trap."

In St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Bell, 81 Ill. 76, the turn-table was a skeleton structure not covered with planks, and not protected by a wall, except where the rails of the switch intersected it. The turn-table was not near any public street nor in a place where the public were in the habit of passing. It was fastened with a latch which prevented it from being turned by accident, but was not locked, so as to render it impracticable for boys to open or withdraw the latch and move the table. The court, after an examination of the testimony, decided that in view of the isolated position in which the turn-table was located, the proofs failed to show that the railway company was guilty of such want of care as could lawfully charge it with damages for the accident.

Security Required in Fastening.—In Bates v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 90 Tenn. 36, it was held that while a railway company should secure a turn-table sufficiently to keep it in place, it is not incumbent on the company to fasten it so that a boy, or boys, could not displace the fastening and put it in motion.

In an action against a railway company for negligence in not properly securing a turn-table, whereby a child of six years of age received injuries causing death, the fact that prior to the accident, an agent of the company tied the turn-table with a rope so that it could not be revolved unless the rope were cut or untied, does not relieve the company from liability for its negligence in not adopting more secure fastenings, where it is shown that the agent knew children were attracted to the machine and were in the habit of playmate.¹ To render the company liable, it is not necessary to show that it was the owner of the turn-table. It is sufficient if it appear that the turn-table was in charge of, or under the control of, the company.² It is for the jury to decide whether the company exercised due care in keeping the turn-table fastened.³

But the rule of the United States Supreme Court is not followed in either Massachusetts or New Hampshire, it being held in playing on it, and that this method of securing it had in the past proved insufficient. Illwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Hedrick, 1 Wash. 446; 22 Am. St. Rep. 169; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

1. Nagel v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 75 Mo. 653; 42 Am. Rep. 418; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 702; Barrett v. Southern Pac. R. Co., 91 Cal. 296.

Negligence of Responsible Person.—A railway company is liable for its negligence in leaving a turn-table unguarded and unfastened, even if the negligence of a responsible person who turned it, contributed to the accident. Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. McWhirter, 77 Tex. 356; 19 Am. St. Rep. 755.

2. Nagel v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 75 Mo. 653; 42 Am. Rep. 418; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 702. In this case it was held that where a petition stated in substance that the defendant railroad company "used and operated a turn-table in connection with its railroad, and that it was the duty of the company to keep the turn-table locked and fastened," the averments are equivalent to a charge that the defendant company controlled the turn-table.

3. The question of due care, when negligence is charged against a railroad company on account of leaving its turn-table unfastened, is one for the jury, and the charge that the failure of the company to fasten its table under a condition of facts stated would be negligence, would be an invasion of the province of the jury and was properly refused. Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Simpson, 60 Tex. 103.

The questions whether the defendant had anything to do with the turn-table, whether the defendant was negligent or not, and whether the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence or not, are questions of fact to be determined by the jury from the evidence. Kansas Cent. R. Co. v. Fitzsimmons, 22 Kan. 686. It should be left to the jury to find from the testimony whether, under all the circumstances, the defendant was guilty of negligence in erecting the turn-table at the place it did, and allowing it to remain in the condition, as shown by the testimony. Atchison, etc., R. Co. v. Bailey, 11 Neb. 332; 10 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 742.

In Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 604, Herrick, J., said: "In this case, while the turn-table was on the defendant's own land, yet it allowed the public to use that land for many of the purposes of a highway; while situated in a populated neighborhood it was, so far as ease of access was concerned, substantially uninclosed; it was, to an extent, overgrown with grass and weeds, a place where the children of the neighborhood might naturally go for amusement; the turn-table was easily handled, and as was demonstrated by this case and others, was, when in motion, liable to inflict injury; children came there from time to time to play with it; under such circumstances, it seems to me, that it was a question for the jury to say whether, under all the circumstances, the defendant had invited, allured, or enticed the plaintiff upon its premises, or to play with the turn-table, and if it had, whether such turn-table was left in such a condition as to charge it with any resulting injury."

Instructions.—An instruction that, if the jury believes from the evidence that the plaintiffs negligently permitted their son to wander from his home and go upon the turn-table of the defendant railway company, and he was killed by said turn-table, that the child was so young and inexperienced as not to possess sufficient judgment to warn him of the danger of the place, or the character of the machinery, that he was killed by the negligence and carelessness of the defendants in not properly guarding or protecting their turn-table, and keeping children from playing on the same, they will find for the plaintiffs, is erroneous. It would be equivalent to saying, that if the parents sent their boy and encouraged him to resort to this machine as a playground, they would still be entitled to recover, notwithstanding their negligence, be-those states that a railroad company is not liable for injuries sustained by a child while playing upon a turn-table, either upon the ground of an implied invitation to come there, or of a duty on the part of the company to refrain from ordinary negligence in its management of the turn-table.¹

2. Evidence.—Persons who are experts, or have been employed cause the machine was, through the negligence of the railroad company, left so that it could be used by children for such purposes. Thus the plaintiffs would be allowed to recover for their own negligence, without which the accident could not have happened. Koons v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 592.

If there is evidence tending to show that the table was well fastened, and that it could not have been unfastened by a child of tender age, it is the duty of the court to give an instruction fairly submitting to the jury whether the servants of the corporation had so fastened its turn-table that children non sui juris could have unfastened it, and used it. Evansich v. Gulf, etc., R. Co., 61 Tex. 24.

1. Daniels v. New York, etc., R. Co., 154 Mass. 349. In this case, it was held that a railroad company was not liable for injuries to a child playing upon a turn-table situate upon its own premises, about six hundred feet from two highways, and left unlocked and unguarded, on the ground that it was an attractive object to children, where the only thing to show that it was attractive, was that it had large upright standards or guys twelve or fifteen feet in height, which could be seen for a considerable distance.

In Frost v. Eastern R. Co., 64 N. H. 220, Clark, J., said: "The ground of the action is, that the defendants were guilty of negligence in maintaining a turn-table insecurely guarded, which, being wrongfully set in motion by older boys, caused an injury to the plaintiff, who was at that time seven years old, and was attracted to the turn-table by the noise of the older and larger boys turning and playing upon it. The turn-table was situated on the defendant's land, about sixty feet from the public street, in a cut with high, steep embankments on each side; and the land on each side was private property and fenced. It was fastened by a toggle, which prevented its being set in motion unless the toggle was drawn by a lever, to which was attached a switch padlock, which being locked prevented the lever from being used unless the staple was drawn. At the time of the accident the turn-table was fastened by the toggle, but it was a controverted point whether the padlock was then locked. When secured by the toggle and not locked with the padlock, the turn-table could not be set in motion by a boy of the age and strength of the plaintiff. Upon these facts we think the action cannot be maintained. The alleged negligence complained of relates to the construction and condition of the turn-table, and it is not claimed that the defendants were guilty of any active misconduct towards the plaintiff. The right of a landowner in the use of his own land is not limited or qualified, like the enjoyment of a right or privilege in which others have an interest, as the use of a street for highway purposes under the general law, or for other purposes under special license.

. . . . At the time of his injury, the plaintiff was using the defendant's premises as a playground without right. The turn-table was required in operating defendant's railroad. It was located on its own land so far removed from the highway as not to interfere with the convenience and safety of the public travel, and it was not a trap set for the purpose of injuring trespassers. Under these circumstances, the defendant owed no duty to the plaintiff; and there can be no negligence or breach of duty where there is no act of service which a party is bound to perform or fulfill. A landowner is not required to take active measures to insure the safety of intruders, nor is he liable for an injury resulting from the lawful use of his premises to one entering upon them without right. . . . We are not prepared to adopt the doctrine of Sioux City, etc., R. Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657, that the owner of machinery or other property attractive to children is liable for injuries happening to children wrongfully interfering with it on his own premises. The owner is not an insurer in railroading, are competent to give their opinions as to the practicability of securely fastening or fencing a turn-table.¹ Proof of a custom of railroads to keep their turn-tables locked, is immaterial upon the question of negligence of the defendant in failing to do so;² and so is evidence of a custom to keep them unfastened at all times,³ but evidence that the fastenings were similar to those in general use by railways, is admissible.⁴ It may be shown that the company had notice of the lack of proper fastenings on its turn-table,⁵ but a witness may not be asked whether, if the child injured had been strong and healthy, he would have survived.⁶

3. Contributory Negligence of Child.—Although a minor, killed

of the safety of infant trespassers. One having in his possession agricultural or mechanical tools is not responsible for injuries caused to trespassers by careless handling. . . . The owner is under no duty to a mere trespasser to keep his premises safe; and the fact that the trespasser is an infant cannot have the effect to raise a duty where none otherwise exists."

The court of appeals of New York, in McAlpin v. Powell, 70 N. Y. 126; 26 Am. Rep. 555, said, in speaking of Railroad Co. v. Stout, 17 Wall. (U. S.) 657, and similar decisions: "We are not now called to express an opinion as to the soundness of these decisions in such a case, and, while we are not prepared to uphold them, it is enough to say that the facts are by no means analogous."

But in the late case of Walsh v. Fitchburg R. Co., 67 Hun (N. Y.) 604, the supreme court of the same state held that it was for the jury to say whether, under all the circumstances, the company had invited, allured, or enticed the plaintiff upon its premises or to play with the turn-table, and, if it had, whether the turn-table was left in such a condition as to charge the defendant with any resulting injury.

1. Evidence.—A witness who has been employed in railroad work for twenty-five years, part of the time in charge of a turn-table, is competent to answer the question, "Would it be practicable to lock or fence turn-tables?" Kolsti v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. (Minn. 1884), 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140. But witnesses who are not experts cannot give their opinion as to whether or not a turn-table is a dangerous machine, or as to whether or not it was negligence on the part of the company to leave it unfastened or without covering. Koons v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 592. Though if a witness is personally acquainted with the character and location of a turn-table, he may testify that it was dangerous for children to ride thereon. Bridger v. Asheville, etc., R. Co., 25 S. Car. 24.

2. Koons v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 65 Mo. 592.

3. Evidence of the custom of railways to keep turn-tables unfastened at all times, whether in actual use or not, and whether inclosed or in an open public place, is inadmissible. The question is, whether the defendant secured the turn-table as careful and prudent men would ordinarily do under like circumstances. Illwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Hedrick, 1 Wash. 446; 22 Am. St. Rep. 169; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

But where the plaintiff had been allowed to show that one railroad kept its turn-table locked, it was held proper to allow the defendant to show in reply, as bearing on the question of negligence, that other companies did not keep their turn-tables locked. Bidgen v. Asheville, etc., R. Co., 27 S. Car. 456; 13 Am. St. Rep. 653.

4. Kolsti v. Minneapolis, etc., R. Co. (Minn. 1884), 19 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 140.

5. It is competent to prove allegations that a railway company had notice of the lack of proper fastenings on one of their turn-tables, by the testimony of a boy, that he and other boys had played about a year and a half before the trial on the turn-table, and that it was unfastened, and by the production of an appearance docket, showing that suit had been instituted against the company for injuries suffered by one of the boys, who was at that date playing on the turn-table. Fort Worth, etc., R. Co. v. Measles, 81 Tex. 474.

6. Where the attending physician had testified that the child, who was frail and weak, died from the injuries received from the turn-table, it was while playing upon the turn-table of a railroad company, has sufficient knowledge to know that it is wrong to trespass upon a turn-table, yet, if he had no knowledge that playing there was unsafe or dangerous, it cannot be said that he was guilty of contributory negligence.¹ If, however, a child knows that he has no right to play upon a turn-table, and that it is dangerous to do so, he is guilty of such contributory negligence as will bar a recovery for injuries sustained.²

II. INJURIES TO EMPLOYEES BY TURN-TABLES.—Whatever the character or capacity of a turn-table, if it is sufficient to do the work required, without danger to those servants of the company required to be present and about it while in use, the company is not liable for an injury sustained by an employe.³ The question not error for the court to exclude a question put to such witness, as to whether or not, if the child had been healthy, it would have survived the injury. Illwaco R. & Nav. Co. v. Hedrick, 1 Wash. 446; 22 Am. St. Rep. 169; 45 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 68.

1. In Union Pac. R. Co. v. Dunden, 37 Kan. 1; 34 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 88, Horton, C. J., said: "As to the question whether the deceased knew it was wrong to play upon the turn-table, an answer either way would not have affected the case. He might have known that it was wrong to trespass upon the property of the railroad company, and yet have had no knowledge that the use of the turn-table was dangerous, or even unsafe. If the company had presented the inquiry whether the deceased knew that it was dangerous, or unsafe to play upon the turn-table, a wholly different question would be before us for determination."

2. If a boy nearly ten years and a half old, of average intelligence, who has been frequently in the vicinity of a railway turn-table, and has a general knowledge of its structure and operation, who has been repeatedly warned by his father that it is dangerous to play upon it, and told not to do so, who also knows that the railway company prohibits children from playing on the table, and that he has no right to play upon it, that it is dangerous to do so, engages with other boys in swinging upon it while in motion, and is injured by his foot being caught between the arm of the table and the stationary abutments, he is guilty of such contributory negligence as will bar a recovery for the injuries sustained, even though he may not be of sufficient age and discretion to understand and comprehend the full extent of the danger to which his conduct exposes him. Twist v. Winona, etc., R. Co., 39 Minn. 164; 37 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 336.

In a suit by a child for damages claimed on account of injuries inflicted by the turn-table of a railway company, after the court had properly instructed the jury as to the degree of care requisite in the child to avoid injury, it was not error to charge them, "If you believe, from the evidence, that the plaintiff had intelligence enough to appreciate the peril of getting on the defendant's turn-table in the manner that the evidence shows he did; or if you believe that he was warned by defendant's employe not to get on such table, that it was dangerous to do so, and said plaintiff understood and appreciated such warning, but did nevertheless get on such turn-table, and is thereby the direct cause of his injury, you will find for the defendant." Houston, etc., R. Co. v. Simpson, 60 Tex. 103.

3. East Tennessee, etc., R. Co. v. Toppins, 10 Lea (Tenn.) 58; 11 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 222.

In an action against the owner of a railroad, brought by a servant to recover damages for a personal injury sustained by reason of a locomotive running upon the plaintiff from a turn-table, while turning upon it, in consequence of the want of a sufficient brake, evidence is competent on the part of the owner of the road to show that the person who had charge for him of all the engines on the road, had given instructions to the engineers before the accident to have the wheels of their engines blocked while turning on the turn-table, and that the accident of negligence in the company in providing a defective turn-table, and of the contributory negligence of an employé injured thereon, is for the jury.¹

TUTOR—(See GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 9, p. 85).—In civil law, a person to whom is committed the care and custody of the person and estate of a minor. Tutrix is the feminine form of the word.²

TWELVEMONTH.—See note 3.

TWELVE MONTHS.—See note 4.

TWICE IN JEOPARDY.—See JEOPARDY, vol. 11, p. 926.

TYPEWRITER.—See STENOGRAPHER, vol. 23, p. 556.

ULLAGE.—See note 5.

ULTIMATE.—See note 6.

occurred from the failure of some of the defendant's servants to obey such instructions, although such instruction was not known to the plaintiff. Durgin v. Munson, 9 Allen (Mass.) 396.

If a watchman employed by a railway company, on passing along an adjoining street on a dark night, falls into a turn-table and is injured, he cannot recover, if it appear that he had known of the location of the turn-table since its erection more than fifteen years previous, and there was no statute requiring a railway company to fence its depot grounds. Early v. Lake Shore, etc., R. Co., 66 Mich. 349; 30 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 163.

1. Where an employé, who was turning an engine upon a turn-table with the assistance of another engine upon an adjoining track, was injured by the breaking of a stick with which the engine was being turned, the questions as to whether the railway company was guilty of negligence in allowing the turn-table to be in a defective condition, and whether the plaintiff was guilty of contributory negligence, are for the jury. McDonald v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 41 Minn. 439; 16 Am. St. Rep. 711.

Turn-Tables in Streets.—Where a sleigh was injured by the projecting catch of the turn-table of a street-car company, it was held to be a question for the jury, whether it was negligence in the company to retain that style of turn-table. Fitts v. Cream City R. Co., 50 Wis. 323; 15 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 462.

Persons operating a turn-table in a public highway, are bound to such vigilance as may be reasonably necessary to prevent collisions. Schureman v. Missouri Pac. R. Co., 7 Mo. App. 570, note.

2. See And. L. Dict.

3. In Crooke v. M'Tavish, 1 Bing. 307; 8 E. C. L. 521, it is said that while "twelve months" standing alone would be construed to refer to lunar months, "twelvemonth" would embrace the whole year. See also MONTH, vol. 15, p. 712.

4. As to the meaning of "twelve months certain" in an agreement, see CERTAIN, vol. 3, p. 58.

5. As to whether "ullage" is included in the exemption from liability for loss by "leakage" in marine insurance policies, see Cory v. Boylston Ins. Co., 107 Mass. 145.

6. Ultimate and Ultimately in Guaranties.—In National Exch. Bank v. Gay, 57 Conn. 235, it was held that a guaranty of the "ultimate" payment of a note, meant that the "obligor should continue bound to the end of all substitutions, renewals, and extensions."

In Seaver v. Bradley, 6 Me. 64, it was held that "ultimately" did not mean that the obligor should pay at some definite period, but should be bound for advances made on the faith of the guaranty, upon due notice of the principal's failure to comply with his engagement.

Ultimate Facts.—In the expression "ultimate facts," "ultimate" is opposed to probative and evidential, and as the probative or evidential facts are such as serve to establish or disprove the issues, the issues are, therefore, the ultimate facts." And. L. Dict., citing Kahn v. Central Smelting Co., 2 Utah 379; Pio Pico v. Cuyas, 47 Cal. 174.

ULTRA VIRES.—(See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 89; BENEFICIAL OR BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 171; BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 604; CARRIERS OF GOODS, vol. 2, p. 771; CARRIERS OF PASSENGERS, vol. 2, p. 738; CARRIERS OF LIVE STOCK, vol. 3, p. 1; CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, p. 184; FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329; FORFEITURE, vol. 8, p. 443; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 584; MANUFACTURING CORPORATIONS, vol. 14, p. 269; MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949; NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 143; OFFICERS AND AGENTS OF PRIVATE CORPORATIONS, vol. 17, p. 39; QUO WARRANTO, vol. 19, p. 660; RAILROADS, vol. 19, p. 775; SAVINGS BANKS, vol. 21, p. 716; SCIRE FACIAS, vol. 21, p. 852; STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776; STREET RAILWAYS, vol. 23, p. 940; TELEGRAPHS AND TELEPHONES, vol. 25, p. 744.)

- | | |
|--|--|
| I. Introductory—Scope of Article, 351. | Within Knowledge and Intention of Corporation , 387. |
| II. Definition and General Principles, 352. | 5. Contracts Executed in Unauthorized Manner , 391. |
| III. History and Development of the Doctrine, 356. | 6. Contracts in Anticipation of Legislative Authority , 391. |
| IV. Classification of Ultra Vires Contracts, 361. | V. Personal Liability of Directors and Officers for Ultra Vires Transactions, 391. |
| 1. Contracts Impliedly Forbidden , 361. | VI. Liability of Corporation for Ultra Vires Torts, 393. |
| a. Executory , 361. | VII. Restraining Ultra Vires Acts—Stockholders and Creditors, 396. |
| b. Executed , 363. | VIII. Ratification and Acquiescence, 403. |
| (1) On One Side , 363. | IX. Rights of the State, 410. |
| (2) On Both Sides , 377. | 1. To Restrain Ultra Vires Acts , 410. |
| 2. Contracts Expressly Forbidden or Contrary to Public Policy , 378. | 2. To Forfeit Charter , 413. |
| 3. Contracts Unfitting Corporations for Performance of Public Duties , 384. | a. When Enforced , 413. |
| 4. Contracts Ultra Vires Because of Facts Peculiarly | b. How Enforced , 417. |
| | c. Waiver , 418. |

I. INTRODUCTORY—SCOPE OF ARTICLE.—The law of ultra vires, in its application to municipal corporations, has been treated in a former part of this work, and reference is made thereto, as illustrating that branch of the subject.¹ Cases bearing upon the powers of such corporations, and the validity and effect of their transactions, in this connection, will be used only when the principles involved are equally applicable to private corporations. This article will be confined to private corporations aggregate, using the expression in its broadest signification. The general powers of corporations, what transactions they are authorized by their charters or constating instruments to engage in, the principles governing the construction of such instruments, and the powers of corporate officers and agents, are matters which properly belong to a work on the general law of corporations, and have already received full treatment.¹ These questions will be touched upon only so far as is necessary to a clear apprehension of the main subject. This statement, together with the synopsis above given, sufficiently indicates the scope of the article.

1. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1204.

II. DEFINITION AND GENERAL PRINCIPLES.—The term ultra vires means, literally, beyond the powers or capacity—that is, the lawful authority—of a corporation, company, or person. The expression extra vires denotes the same thing. Opposed to these are the phrases intra vires and infra vires, meaning within the power or legal competence of the corporation, company, or person in question.²

The term ultra vires has, unfortunately, been employed in the law of corporations in many senses. First, to denote acts which are beyond the authority of the directors, officers, or agents, but within the scope of the powers of the corporation itself. Cases of this kind properly belong to the law of agency.³

Second, acts that are outside the powers, not of a particular corporation, but of every corporation, being forbidden by positive law or public policy. In this sense, by-laws in restraint of trade are said to be ultra vires.⁴ Strictly speaking, this is not a proper use of the term. As a rule, when corporate acts are spoken of as ultra vires, it is not intended that they are unlawful, or even such as the corporation cannot perform, but merely those which are not within the powers conferred upon the corporation by the act of its creation, and are in violation of the trust reposed in the managing board by the shareholders that the affairs shall be managed and the funds applied solely to the carrying out of the objects for which the corporation was created. The words "ultra vires" and "illegality" represent totally different and distinct ideas.⁵

Third, acts which, although within the powers granted, are per-

1. See the table of cross references, supra.

2. Cent. Dict.; Brown's L. Dict.; Anderson's L. Dict.

"Ultra Vires: beyond their powers; the doctrine by which corporations cannot exceed the powers specially conferred by, or reasonably implied from, their charters." Stimson's Common Law Glossary, p. 289.

"There is nothing of mystery or of sanctity in the use of the words of a dead language—ultra vires—and although it is a concise and convenient form by which to indicate the unauthorized action of artificial persons with limited powers, still it is as applicable to individual as to corporate action. An illegal act of an individual is as really ultra vires as the unauthorized act of a corporation." Lord, J., in National Pemberton Bank v. Porter, 125 Mass. 333; 28 Am. Rep. 235.

3. Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 El. & Bl. 397; 82 E. C. L. 396; Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Hawkes, 5 H. L. Cas. 331; Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. 356; Canal, etc., R. Co. v. St. Charles St. R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 1069; Boyce v. Montauk Gas Co., 37 W. Va. 73. See infra, this title, Ratification and Acquiescence.

4. Green's Brice's Ultra Vires, p. 35. See infra, this title, Contracts Expressly Forbidden or Contrary to Public Policy; To Forfeit Charter—When Enforced.

5. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 68; 20 Am. Rep. 504.

In Bissell v. Michigan Southern R.

formed in a manner different from that prescribed by the terms of the grant.¹

Fourth, acts which are outside the objects for which the corporation was created, as defined in the law of its organization, and, therefore, beyond the powers conferred upon it by the legislature.² This is the proper use of the term, and its employment in any other sense simply occasions confusion. Yet, as it has been employed in other senses, it becomes necessary to consider it in those connections, though the real technical meaning should be kept in mind.

Co., 22 N. Y. 258, Comstock, C. J., said: "The words ultra vires and illegality represent totally different and distinct ideas. It is true that a contract may have both those defects, but it may also have one without the other. For example, a bank has no authority to engage, and usually does not engage, in benevolent enterprises. A subscription, made by authority of the board of directors, and under the corporate seal, for the building of a church or college or an almshouse, would be clearly ultra vires, but it would not be illegal. If every corporation should expressly assent to such an application of the funds, it still would be ultra vires, but no wrong would be committed and no public interest violated. So a manufacturing corporation may purchase ground for a schoolhouse, or a place of worship, for the intellectual, religious, and moral improvement of its operatives. It may buy tracts and books of instruction for distribution amongst them. Such dealings are outside of the charter; but, so far from being illegal or wrong, they are in themselves benevolent and praiseworthy. So a church corporation may deal in exchange. This, although ultra vires, is not illegal, because dealing in exchange is, in itself, a lawful business, and there is no state policy in restraint of that business." See also Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 185.

• And in Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653, Cairns, L. C., says: "I have used the expressions extra vires and intra vires. I prefer either expression very much to one which occasionally has been used in the judgments in the present case, and has also been used in other cases, the expression 'illegality.' In a case such as that which your Lordships have now to deal with, it is not a question whether the contract sued upon involves that which is malum prohibitum or malum in se, or is a contract contrary to public policy, and illegal in itself. I assume the contract in itself to be perfectly legal, to have nothing in it obnoxious to the doctrine involved in the expressions which I have used. The question is not as to the legality of the contract; the question is as to the competency and power of the company to make the contract."

1. Farmer's, etc., Bank v. Harrison, 57 Mo. 503; McSpedon v. New York, 7 Bosw. (N. Y.) 601; Matthews v. Skinker, 62 Mo. 329; 21 Am. Rep. 425. See infra, this title, Contracts Executed in Unauthorized Manner.

2. Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 59.

"The contracts of corporations are said to be ultra vires when they involve some adventure or undertaking not within the scope of their charter, which is their rule of corporate action." Gray, J., in Leslie v. Lorillard, 110 N. Y. 531.

In Miner's, etc., Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 578; 99 Am. Dec. 30, the court, by Sawyer, C. J., said: "The term ultra vires, whether with strict propriety or not, is used in different senses. An act is said to be ultra vires when it is not within the scope of the powers of the corporation to perform it under any circumstances, or for any purpose. An act is also, sometimes, said to be ultra vires with reference to the rights of certain parties, when the corporation is not authorized to perform it without their consent; or with reference to some specific purpose, when it is not authorized to perform it for that purpose, although fully within the scope of the general powers of the corporation, with the consent of the parties interested, or for some other purpose. And the right of strangers dealing with corporations may vary, according as the act is ultra vires in one, or the other, of these senses. All these distinctions must be constantly

The decisions upon the subject are so very conflicting—some absolutely irreconcilable—that it is extremely difficult, if not impossible, to formulate general rules.

It has been said that "it is often impossible to predicate beforehand what acts and contracts will be adjudged ultra vires, and what intra vires," of a given corporation; and that the principle has become, "if not an excrescence upon, at least a very disturbing element in, the legal system."¹

The reasons upon which the doctrine of ultra vires rests, have been thus stated: first, the interest of the public that the corporation shall not transcend the powers granted; second, the interest of the stockholders that the capital shall not be subjected to the risk of enterprises not contemplated by the charter, and, therefore, not authorized by the stockholders in subscribing for the stock; third, the obligation of everyone entering into a contract with a corporation, to take notice of the legal limits of its powers.²

borne in mind in considering a question arising out of dealings with a corporation." Approved in McPherson v. Foster, 43 Iowa 65; 22 Am. Rep. 215.

1. Green's Brice's Ultra Vires, p. x. Here Mr. Brice illustrates the uncertainty that shrouds the application of the doctrine, thus: "It is ultra vires of the Great Eastern Railway Company to run steam packets from Harwich, Colman v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Beav. 1; but not of the South Wales Railway Company to run them from Milford Haven. South Wales R. Co. v. Redmond, 10 C. B. N. S. 675; 100 E. C. L. 674. It is ultra vires of a steamship company to sell the whole of its vessels except two, Gregory v. Patchett, 33 Beav. 597; but perfectly legal thus to dispose of every one of them. Wilson v. Miers, 10 C. B. N. S. 348; 100 E. C. L. 348. It is ultra vires of railway companies to enter into partnership, Charlton v. New Castle, etc., R. Co., 5 Jur. N. S. 1097; but not ultra vires to make arrangements for dividing the whole of the joint profits among themselves in fixed proportions. Hare v. London, etc., R. Co., 2 J. & H. 80. It is ultra vires of the town of Southampton, Atty. Gen'l v. Andrews, 2 Mac. & G. 225; or Sheffield, Reg. v. Sheffield, L. R., 6 Q. B. 652, to incur expense in order to obtain a proper supply of water for their respective inhabitants; but not so for Ashton-under-Lyne. Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne, 3 H. & N. 323, or Wigan, Atty. Gen'l v. Wigan, 5 De G. M. & G. 52, to do exactly the same thing."

It is interesting to note the history of two quite recent cases—the discordance of opinion between the different tribunals, and between the members of the same tribunal, is very marked. In the first case, the contract in question was adjudged valid by all the barons in the court of exchequer. Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., 4 H. & C. 409. But this judgment was reversed in the exchequer chamber, four judges being for, and two against, the reversal; and four opinions were delivered, two judges taking views of the principles governing the powers of corporations to make contracts, the opposite of those taken by the others. Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Ex. 356. Subsequently, on appeal to the House of Lords, the judgment of the court of exchequer was sustained, and that of the exchequer chamber reversed. Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 H. L. C. 628. In the second case, in the court of exchequer, two of the three judges were of opinion that the plaintiff should have judgment, and when the case came before the exchequer chamber, it was heard before six judges, and they being equally divided in opinion, the judgment was affirmed. Riche v. Ashbury R., etc., Co., L. R., 9 Exch. 224. On appeal to the House of Lords, the judgment was reversed, pronouncing the contract ultra vires, and declaring that it was without the power of the shareholders to validate it by their acquiescence. Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653.

2. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371.

Where the transaction which is ultra vires is merely an incident, and the principal matter is intra vires, the latter may be sustained.¹

It seems that, when authority to do a particular act is conferred, whether rightfully or not, it cannot be said that such act is ultra vires, within the proper meaning of that expression; it is otherwise, however, if the law is invalid in attempting to confer the power.²

The dealings of corporations which, on their face, or according to their apparent import, are within the powers granted, are not to be considered as illegal or unauthorized, without some evidence tending to show that they are of such a character. In the absence of proof, there is no presumption that the law has been violated.³ For example, the rule in respect to the exercise by corporations of the right conferred upon them by law to purchase, hold, and convey real estate is thus stated: When the corporation is authorized to hold and convey real estate under certain circumstances, or for certain purposes, it will be presumed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, that real estate conveyed by it was held and conveyed in pursuance of its powers.⁴

The question of ultra vires is mainly one of construction, but there has been some difference of opinion as to the principles which should control in the construction of corporate charters. It may be stated as a general rule that the charter of a corporation, read in connection with the general laws applicable thereto, is the true measure of its powers, and a transaction manifestly beyond those powers is ultra vires; yet, whatever under the charter and general laws, reasonably construed, may fairly be considered as incidental to the purposes for which the corporation was created, is not to be taken as prohibited, but is as much granted as that which is expressed.⁵

Another general rule of importance in this connection is that

See also Pearce v. Madison, etc., R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441.

1. Scott v. Colburn, 26 Beav. 276; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 33 Pa. St. 33; 75 Am. Dec. 574; Grand Gulf Bank v. Archer, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 151.

2. Freeland v. Pennsylvania Cent. Ins. Co., 94 Pa. St. 504.

3. Chautauqua County Bank v. Risley, 19 N. Y. 371; 75 Am. Dec. 347; Allegheny City v. McClurkan, 14 Pa. St. 81; Mitchell v. Rome R. Co., 17 Ga. 574; Oxford Iron Co. v. Spradley, 46 Ala. 98; Underwood v. Newport Lyceum, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 129; 41 Am. Dec. 260; Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230; Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Fluming Co., 22 Cal. 621.

4. Alward v. Holmes, 10 Abb. N. Cas. (Buffalo Super. Ct.) 96; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258.

5. Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 385; Green Bay, etc., R. Co. v. Union Steam Boat Co., 107 U. S. 100; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 258; 41 Am. Rep. 221.

In Atty. Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., L. R., 5 App. 473, Selborne, L. C. J., said: "I agree with Lord Justice James that this doctrine (ultra vires) ought to be reasonably, and not unreasonably, understood and applied, and that whatever may fairly be regarded as incidental to, and consequential upon, those things which the legislature has authorized, ought not, unless every person who enters into a contract with a corporation is bound at his peril to take notice of the legal limits of its capacity.¹ But this principle does not require him, in every instance, to know whether the general powers of the corporation may be properly exercised in the particular case.²

Corporations are liable for every wrong committed by them, and in such cases, the doctrine of ultra vires has no application.³

In the case of municipal corporations, the rule is stricter than in private corporations, against the validity of ultra vires contracts.⁴

III. HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT OF THE DOCTRINE.—The expression ultra vires, as used in the discussion of legal questions, is of comparatively modern invention. It is first found, so far as can be ascertained, in Lord Kames' Principles of Equity, originally published in 1776; the author observing: "A deed or covenant being void at common law as ultra vires, can a court of equity afford any relief? A principle in logics that will, without power, cannot produce any effect, is applicable to matters of law, and is thus expressed, that a deed ultra vires is null and void, etc."⁵ The doctrine of ultra vires, in the strictly proper sense of the phrase, is entirely the creation of the courts. In early times, expressly prohibited, to be held by judicial construction to be ultra vires." Quoted approvingly in Ellerman v. Chicago Junction R., etc., Co., 49 N. J. Eq. 217.

To the point that a corporation possesses no power except what is given by its charter or governing act, either expressly or as incidental to its existence, see Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 127; Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 636; Betts v. Menard, 1 Ill. 395; State v. Stebbins, 1 Stew. (Ala.) 299; Beatty v. Knowler, 4 Pet. (U. S.) 152; Beatty v. Marine Ins. Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 109; 3 Am. Dec. 401; Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230; Straus v. Eagle Ins. Co., 5 Ohio St. 59; White's Bank v. Toledo Ins. Co., 12 Ohio St. 601; McMasters v. Reed, 1 Grant Cas. (Pa.) 36; Smith v. Eureka Flour Mills Co., 6 Cal. 1; Winter v. Muscogee R. Co., 11 Ga. 438; Kinzie v. Chicago, 3 Ill. 187; 33 Am. Dec. 443; Jacksonville v. McConnel, 12 Ill. 138; Petersburgh v. Metzker, 21 Ill. 205; Louisiana State Bank v. Orleans Nav. Co., 3 La. Ann. 294; Baltimore v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 21 Md. 50; Whitman Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. Baker, 3 Nev. 386.

1. Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 258; 41 Am. Rep. 721; Relf v. Rundle, 103 U. S. 226; Salt Lake City

v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 263; Bohmer v. City Bank, 77 Va. 445; Leonard v. American Ins. Co., 97 Ind. 299; Had den v. Farmers', etc., F. Assoc., 80 Va. 683; Spence v. Mobile, etc., R. Co., 79 Ala. 576; Pearce v. Madison, etc., R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 443; Knoxville v. Knoxville, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 758; Lucas v. White Line Transfer Co., 70 Iowa 541; 59 Am. Rep. 449; Alexander v. Cauldwell, 83 N. Y. 480; Memphis Grain, etc., Elevator Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 85 Tenn. 703; Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230; Jemison v. City Sav. Bank, 122 N. Y. 143; 19 Am. St. Rep. 482; Alexander v. Cauldwell, 83 N. Y. 480; Hoyt v. Thompson, 19 N. Y. 207, 222; Fitzburgh v. Franco-Texan Land Co., 81 Tex. 306.

2. See infra, this title, Contracts Ultra Vires Because of Facts Peculiarly Within Knowledge and Intention of Corporation.

3. First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699. See infra, this title, Liability of Corporation for Ultra Vires Torts.

4. Nashville v. Roy, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 468. See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949.

5. Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.), p. viii. It is also here said that the phrase does not appear in Angell and Ames on Corporations corporations were considered to have most of the powers—the due exercise of such powers being secured by the imposition of certain formalities—and to be subject to the greater part of the obligations, of ordinary citizens.¹ Its appearance as a principle in the legal system of England, was made less than fifty years since, arising in a case in equity in 1846,² and at law in 1851.³ But the courts of this country much earlier discussed the powers of private corporations aggregate, and announced rules relative thereto.⁴ The doctrine, as first announced, was drawn from the artificial nature of corporations, being based upon the supposed axiom, that as a corporation is “an artificial being, invisible, intangible, and existing only in contemplation of law,” it possesses only those qualities with which its charter endows it, and is non-existent, except for the purposes for which it was created. Accordingly, an ultra vires act was held to be not the act of the

until the fifth edition, published in 1855.

1. Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.), p. 28; Sutton's Hospital Case, 10 Coke 1. It was here resolved by the court that, “When a corporation is duly created all other incidents are tacite annexed . . . and, therefore, divers clauses subsequent in the charter are not of necessity, but only declaratory, and might well have been left out: As, first, by the same to have authority, ability, and capacity to purchase; but no clause is added that they may alien, etc., and it need not, for it is incident; second, to sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded; third, to have a seal, etc.; that is also declaratory, for when they are incorporated they may make or use what seal they will; fourth, to restrain them from aliening or demising, but in a certain form; that is, an ordinance testifying the King's desire, but it is but a precept and does not bind in law.” Referring to this, Blackburn, J., in Riche v. Ashbury R., etc., Co., L. R., 9 Exch. 263, said: “This seems to me an express authority that at common law it is an incident to a corporation to use its common seal for the purpose of binding itself to anything to which a natural person could bind himself, and to deal with its property as a natural person might deal with his own. And, further, that an attempt to forbid this on the part of the King, even by express negative words, does not bind at law. Nor am I aware of any authority in conflict with this case.”

And Bowen, L. J., in Wenlock v. River Dee Co., 36 Ch. Div. 674, observes: “At common law a corporation created by the King's charter has prima facie, and has been known to have ever since the Sutton Hospital Case, 10 Coke 1, the power to do with its property all such acts as an ordinary person can do, and to bind itself to such contracts as an ordinary person can bind himself to; and even if by the charter creating the corporation, the King imposes some direction which would have the effect of limiting the natural capacity of the body of which he is speaking, the common law has always held that the direction of the king might be enforced through the Attorney General; but although it might contain an essential part of the so-called bargain between the Crown and the corporation, that did not at law destroy the legal power of the body which the King had created.”

2. Colman v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Beav. 13, where Lord Langdale says: “I think it right to observe that companies of this kind, possessing most extensive powers, have so recently been introduced into this country, that neither the legislature nor courts of justice have been yet able to understand all the different lights in which their actions ought properly to be viewed.”

3. East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 775; 21 L. J. C. P. 23.

4. Fleckner v. U. S. Bank, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 338; Head v. Providence Ins. Co., 2 Cranch (U. S.) 127; Bank of Augusta v. Earle, 13 Pet. (U. S.) 519; Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 373; Bulkley v. Derby corporation, and, therefore, a nullity so far as it was concerned.¹ It is now admitted, however, that a corporation is not a mere fiction, but a body of individuals, and may perform acts foreign to the purposes of its creation.² The very foundation of the proceeding by quo warranto, for usurpation and abuse of power, is that corporations can, and do, perform acts and usurp franchises

Fishing Co., 2 Conn. 252; 7 Am. Dec. 271; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 102; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Little v. O'Brien, 9 Mass. 423.

1. Dartmouth College v. Woodward, 4 Wheat. (U. S.) 636. In this case, Marshall, C. J., defined a corporation as, "an artificial being, invisible, intangible, and existing only in contemplation of law. Being a mere creature of the law, it possesses only those properties which the charter of its creation confers upon it, either expressly or as incidental to its very existence. Among the most important (properties) are immortality, and, if the expression may be allowed, individuality; properties by which a perpetual succession of many persons are considered as the same, and may act as a single individual. They enable a corporation to manage its own affairs, and to hold property without the perplexing intricacies, the hazardous and endless necessity, of perpetual conveyance for the purpose of conveying it from hand to hand."

And in Bank of U. S. v. Danbridge, 12 Wheat. (U. S.) 92, the same judge, speaking of a corporation, inquires: "Can such a being speak or act otherwise than in writing? Being destitute of the natural organs of man, being distinct from all its members, can it communicate its resolution, or declare its will, without the aid of some adequate substitute for these organs?"

Again, in Straus v. Eagle Ins. Co., 5 Ohio St. 60, in the execution of an unauthorized contract, the corporation had taken by indorsement from the other party to the contract the promissory note of a third party, against whom it tried to enforce it. Ranney, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, observes: "If a fair construction of its charter does not confer the power, it is incompetent to become a party to the contract of indorsement, and without capacity to take or hold title. As well might a dead man, by the mere act of the indorser, be invested with the legal interest as a corporation, which only lives for the purposes and objects intended by the legislature. Beyond these limits it has no existence, and its acts are neither more nor less than a nullity."

2. "The statement that a corporation is an artificial person, or entity, apart from its members, is merely a description, in figurative language, of a corporation viewed as a collective body: a corporation is really an association of persons, and no judicial dictum or legislative enactment can alter this fact." 1 Morawetz on Corp., § 227. See also Stockton v. Central R. Co., 50 N. J. Eq. 54.

In State v. Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), 36 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 19, the court uses this language: "The general proposition that a corporation is to be regarded as a legal entity, existing separate and apart from the natural persons composing it, is not disputed; but that the statement is a mere fiction, existing only in idea, is well understood, and not controverted by anyone who pretends to accurate knowledge on the subject. It has been introduced for the convenience of the company in making contracts, in acquiring property for corporate purposes, in suing and being sued, and to preserve the limited liability of the stockholders."

In Life, etc., Ins. Co. v. Mechanic F. Ins. Co., 7 Wend. (N. Y.) 31, Sutherland, J., said: "This would be a most convenient distinction for corporations to establish, that every violation of their charter or assumption of unauthorized power on the part of their officers, although with the full approbation of their directors, is to be considered the act of the officers and is not to prejudice the corporation itself. There would be no possibility of ever convicting a corporation of exceeding its powers, and thereby forfeiting its charter, or incurring any other penalty, if this principle could be established." And Miller, J., in Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256, said: "The argument is unsound that whatever is done by a corporation in excess of the corporate powers, as defined by its charter, is as though it was not done at all."

beyond the rightful authority conferred by their charter.¹ Moreover, they are held liable for torts, and certain criminal offenses.²

In a leading case in New York,³ which has had much influence upon the courts of the country, the court considered the unauthorized contract in two aspects: first, as a breach of the agreement among the shareholders, and a perversion of property held on a quasi trust according to the terms of that agreement; second, as a breach of the condition on which the charter was granted, for which the state might exact forfeiture; and denied that the contract was illegal in the ordinary sense of the term, and declared that where a corporation has received the consideration of its unauthorized contract and restitution will not do complete justice, suit may be brought by the other party directly on the contract.

And now the defense of ultra vires is very generally regarded

1. Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 265, per Comstock, C. J.

2. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. (U. S.) 202. This was an action for libel by Quigley against the company for the publication of a letter addressed to the company in the course of an investigation by the directors, in regard to the conduct of some of its subordinates. This letter contained statements in regard to the plaintiff's skill and capacity as a mechanic, very disparaging in that respect. This, with much other testimony, was printed and published by the board of directors, and the court held that the corporation could be held liable for the publication. The argument that only the individuals who ordered the publication should be made responsible was urged; but the court held that if it was a libel, the corporation was responsible for it in damages. It was also insisted that the existence of malice was a necessary element in an action for libel, and that the abstract entity which constituted the corporation, was incapable of malice, which could only be predicated of the officers who ordered the publication. This was also overruled, it being held that if the act implied malice, the corporation was liable for it. After examining the authorities, the court said: "With much wariness, and after close and exact scrutiny into the nature of their constitution, have the judicial tribunals determined the legal relations which are established for the corporation by their governing body, and their agents, with the natural persons with whom they are brought into contact or collision. The result of the cases is, that for acts done by the agents or the corporation, either in contractu or in delicto, in the course of its business, and of their employment, the corporation is responsible, as an individual is responsible under similar circumstances. At a more early period, it was decided in Great Britain, as well as in the United States, that actions might be maintained against corporations for torts; and instances may be found, in the judicial annals of both countries, of suits for torts arising from the acts of their agents, of nearly every variety."

In Reed v. Home Sav. Bank, 130 Mass. 443; 39 Am. Rep. 468, the bank was held liable in an action for malicious prosecution. Another well-considered case in which the corporation was held liable for malicious prosecution, is Copley v. Grover, etc., Sewing Mach. Co., 2 Woods (U. S.) 494.

In Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 260, Miller, J., for the court, said: "The truth is, that with the great increase in corporations in very recent times, and in their extension to nearly all the business transactions of life, it has been found necessary to hold them responsible for acts not strictly within their corporate powers, but done in their corporate name and by corporation officers who were competent to exercise all the corporate powers. When such acts are not founded on contract, but are arbitrary exercises of power in the nature of torts, or are quasi-criminal, the corporation may be held to a pecuniary responsibility for them to the party injured." See infra, this title, Liability of Corporation for Ultra Vires Torts.

3. Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 265.

by the courts as an ungracious and odious one,¹ and it is very well settled that neither party to the contract can avail himself of such a defense, when the contract has been fully performed by the other party, and he has received the full benefit of the performance and of the contract. If an action cannot be brought directly upon the contract, either equity will grant relief, or an action in some other form will prevail.²

Generally speaking, the rule of ultra vires prevails in full force only where the contracts of corporations remain wholly executory.³

1. In Hawkes v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 1 De G. M. & G. 760, Lord St. Leonards said: "In my opinion, nothing can be more indecent than for a great company like this to allege by way of defense that a solemn contract which they have entered into is void, on the ground of its not being within their powers, not from any mistake, misapprehension, or subsequent accident, but because they thought fit to enter into it, and meant to have the benefit of it, if it turned out for their benefit, and to take advantage of the illegality in case the contract proved onerous and they should desire to get rid of it." "A sentiment," says Lord Campbell, in Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 El. & Bl. 445; 82 E. C. L. 396, "in which we should all concur."

And Lord St. Leonards again says: "The safety of men in their daily contracts requires that this doctrine of ultra vires should be confined within narrow bounds. . . . The opinions of some of the judges in the Norwich case favor the disposition which I felt to restrain the doctrine of ultra vires to clear cases of excess of power with the knowledge of the other party, express or implied, from the nature of the corporation and the contract entered into." Eastern Counties R. Co. v. Hawkes, 5 H. L. Cas. 331.

In Cary v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 29 Barb. (N. Y.) 36, Allen, J., said: "Contracts should be palpably ultra vires before they should be held to be void for that reason, at the instance of the company, as against innocent third persons dealing with it. The corporations should be restricted so far as courts can, in the exercise of their powers, limit them, to the exercise of their legitimate functions; but the plea is not a gracious one that a contract which they have deliberately made, and of which they have received the full benefit, is void for want of power in them to make it. Eminent judges have expressed regret that covenants entered into deliberately, and with fair intentions on both sides, should be resisted on the ground of ultra vires."

In Wright v. Antwerp Pipe Line Co., 101 Pa. St. 204; 47 Am. Rep. 701, Paxson, J., said: "The defense of ultra vires by a corporation comes with better grace if made before it has discovered that it has made a bad bargain."

In Third Ave. Sav. Bank v. Dimock, 24 N. J. Eq. 26, the court denied an application for leave to file supplemental answers setting up ultra vires as a defense to a bill to foreclose a mortgage, on the ground that the defense was an unconscionable one, which the court would not extend its indulgence to admit.

The hardships and inconveniences incident to a rigid application of the doctrine led the court, in Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62; 20 Am. Rep. 504, to observe: "The plea of ultra vires should not, as a general rule, prevail, whether it is interposed for or against a corporation, when it would not advance justice, but, on the contrary, would accomplish a legal wrong." Quoted approvingly in Carson City Sav. Bank v. Carson City Elevator Co., 90 Mich. 550; Dewey v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 91 Mich. 351; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. McCarthy, 96 U. S. 258. See also Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne, 3 H. & N. 323, per Martin, B.; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. London, etc., R. Co., 16 Beav. 441, per Romilly, M. R.; South Yorkshire, etc., R. Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 9 Exch. 55, per Parke, B.; Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 El. & Bl. 397; 82 E. C. L. 396, per Erle, J.

2. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62; 20 Am. Rep. 504. See infra, this title, Contracts Impliedly Forbidden—Executed—On One Side.

3. See Thompson v. Lambert, 44

The ground upon which the defense of ultra vires is most generally excluded is that of estoppel—that the corporation or other party to the contract, having received the fruits of the same, should not be permitted to plead want of power in the corporation and thus escape liability.¹

IV. CLASSIFICATION OF ULTRA VIRES CONTRACTS—1. Contracts Impliedly Forbidden—a. EXECUTORY.—Contracts of corporations involving an unauthorized exercise of their powers, so long as they remain purely executory, are not enforceable, either by an action for specific performance or for damages.² Where neither party has acted upon the contract, the only injustice caused by a refusal to enforce it, is the loss to the parties of prospective profits, and this is too slight a consideration to weigh against the reasons of public policy for declaring it void and not enforceable.

Iowa 239. See also infra, this title, Contracts Impliedly Forbidden—Executory.

1. Dewey v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 91 Mich. 351; Schurr v. New York, etc., Investment Co. (C. Pl.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 454; Campbell v. Argenta Gold, etc., Min. Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 1; Kinkler v. Junica, 84 Tex. 116; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Howard, 7 Wall. (U. S.) 392; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Dow, 19 Fed. Rep. 388; Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62; 20 Am. Rep. 504; Hays v. Galion Gas Light, etc., Co., 29 Ohio St. 330; Matt v. Roman Catholic, etc., Soc., 70 Iowa 455; Safford v. Wyckoff, 1 Hill (N. Y.) 11; Woodruff v. Erie R. Co., 93 N. Y. 609; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656; Chicago Bldg. Soc. v. Crowell, 65 Ill. 454; Racine, etc., R. Co. v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 49 Ill. 346; 95 Am. Dec. 595; Newburg Petroleum Co. v. Weare, 27 Ohio St. 343; St. Louis v. St. Louis Gas Light Co., 70 Mo. 69; Oregonian R. Co. v. Oregon R., etc., Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 245; Auerbach v. LeSueur Mill Co., 28 Minn. 291; 41 Am. Rep. 285; Jones v. National Bldg. Assoc., 94 Pa. St. 215; North Hudson Mut. Bldg. Assoc. v. First Nat. Bank, 79 Wis. 31.

2. Simpson v. Building, etc., Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 349; Nassau Bank v. Jones, 95 N. Y. 115; 47 Am. Rep. 14; Wilks v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 79 Ala. 180; Day v. Spiral Springs Buggy Co., 57 Mich. 146; 58 Am. Rep. 563; Jemison v. Citizens' Sav. Bank, 122 N. Y. 142; 19 Am. St. Rep. 482; Atty. Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., L. R., 5 App. Cas. 473; Hall v. Paris, 59 N. H. 71; North West- ern Union Packet Co. v. Shaw, 37 Wis. 655; 19 Am. Rep. 781; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Mays Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; Easun v. Buckeye Brewing Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 156; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656; Thompson v. Lambert, 44 Iowa 239; Parish v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. 508; Wright v. Hughes, 119 Ind. 329; 12 Am. St. Rep. 412; San Francisco Gas Co. v. San Francisco, 9 Cal. 453; State Board v. Citizens, etc., R. Co., 47 Ind. 407; 17 Am. Rep. 702; Oil Creek, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Transp. Co., 83 Pa. St. 166; Morgan v. Donovan, 58 Ala. 241; Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230; Coppin v. Greenlees Co., 38 Ohio St. 275; 43 Am. Rep. 425; Great Northern R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 Hare 306; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. Birmingham R. Co., 6 H. L. Cas. 113; Madison, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Watertown, etc., Plank Road Co., 7 Wis. 59; Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Grayson, 88 Ala. 572; 16 Am. St. Rep. 69.

In Simmons v. Troy Iron Works, 92 Ala. 427, the declaration of the defendant company stated its business to be "the manufacturing, repairing, buying, selling, and operating machinery of all kinds, and all such other business pertaining or belonging to machine shops or foundries." The plaintiff sued for damages for the company's breach of contract to furnish him with ice weekly. It was held that the contract was ultra vires and the plaintiff could not recover.

A corporation chartered to deal in copper ore made a contract to supply the other party with iron rails, the latter to supply the sections by which the rails were to be made. The corpora-

The completion of such a contract by the corporation will be enjoined at the instance of a shareholder.¹ A bank having, under its charter, no right to purchase lands for the purpose of selling them again, a contract entered into for such a purpose will not be enforced.²

Where a bank, through its president, subscribed to a creamery, but before any act was done or any expenditures were made in reliance upon the subscription, it was canceled, it was held that the subscription could be withdrawn by the bank without incurring liability.³

The court will not decree the conveyance of land to a corporation which it cannot, consistently with its charter, receive and own; yet if the title has already vested, and the corporation is in possession and ownership, it will hesitate to declare it void on the principle that the corporation had no authority to take such land.⁴

A devise of lands to a corporation beyond its power to take, is void, and may be attacked by the heirs and next of kin of the testator.⁵

Where a continuing contract has been partly performed on one side, it is treated as executory in respect of its future and further performance, and will not support an action for failure to go on with it. A lease is a continuing contract in this sense, and the tion sued in assumpsit, alleging that the defendant had failed to furnish sections so as to enable it to supply the rails. It was held that the contract was ultra vires and would not sustain the action. Governor, etc., of Copper Miners v. Fox, 16 Q. B. 229.

A company incorporated for the purpose of keeping a hose carriage and hose with which to extinguish fires, cannot recover damages for the breach of a contract on the part of a steamboat company in failing to furnish its boat to convey said company and its friends on an excursion of pleasure and profit—the contract being beyond the objects contemplated by its charter. Screven Hose Co. v. Philpot, 53 Ga. 629.

1. Colman v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10 Beav. 1; Bagshaw v. Eastern Counties Union R. Co., 7 Hare 114; Small v. Minneapolis Electro Matrix Co., 45 Minn. 264; Young v. Rondout, etc., Gaslight Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 443; Lyde v. East Bengal R. Co., 36 Beav. 10; Tippecanoe County v. Lafayette R. Co., 50 Ind. 85; McCray v. Junction R. Co., 9 Ind. 358; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 331; Gifford v. New Jersey R. Co., 10 N. J. Eq. 174; Stewart v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 348; Easun v. Buckeye Brewing Co., 51 Fed. Rep.

156; Coffin v. Greenlees Co., 38 Ohio St. 275; 43 Am. St. Rep. 425. See also, infra, this title, Restraining Ultra Vires Acts—Stockholders and Creditors.

2. Bank of Michigan v. Niles, 1 Doug. (Mich.) 401; 41 Am. Dec. 575; Pacific R. Co. v. Seely, 45 Mo. 212; 100 Am. Dec. 369. See also Chapman v. Colby, 47 Mich. 51.

3. Holt v. Winfield Bank, 25 Fed. Rep. 812.

4. Case v. Kelly, 133 U. S. 21, aff'g 13 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 70. And a bond to convey land to a corporation which has no right to acquire the same, is void. Coleman v. San Rafael Turnpike Co., 49 Cal. 517. See also Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71.

5. Starkweather v. American Bible Soc., 72 Ill. 50; 22 Am. Rep. 133; Downing v. Marshall, 23 N. Y. 366; 80 Am. Dec. 290; McCartee v. Orphan Asylum Soc., 9 Cow. (N. Y.) 437; 18 Am. Dec. 516; In re McGraw's Estate, 111 N. Y. 66, aff'g 45 Hun (N. Y.) 354; Heiskell v. Chickasaw Lodge, 87 Tenn. 686. See also U. S. Trust Co. v. Lee, 73 Ill. 142; Barnes v. Suddard, 117 Ill. 237. There is a wide distinction between these cases and cases where there has been a grant to a corporation for a valuable consideration, and the grantor seeks to avoid on the ground that the lessee may throw up an unexpired term without liability for damages.¹ So one who has furnished part of the goods called for by a contract ultra vires the corporation, may refuse to deliver the remaining portion.²

And one who is engaged to act as salesman for a stated term for a corporation in an ultra vires business, may repudiate the contract before the expiration of the term.³

b. EXECUTED—(1) On One Side.—The distinction taken between ultra vires contracts purely executory and those fully executed on one side, is founded in reason. When the contract has been fully performed by one of the parties, the infraction of the law has already taken place, which eliminates all questions of public policy from the case, and allows the courts to deal with the contract on equitable principles. Furthermore, the only justification for the plea of ultra vires by an individual sued upon a contract with a corporation is that the obligation is not mutual, as the other party, the corporation, would not be bound by it. But when the contract has been fully performed by the corporation, the mutuality of the obligation becomes an immaterial question, for the reason that the other party can have no occasion to seek its enforcement.⁴

According to the weight of authority, a corporation may not power of the corporation to take is exhausted. American, etc., Christian Union v. Yount, 101 U. S. 353. Or where property has been used for purposes different from those allowed by charter. Barrow v. Nashville, etc., Turnpike Co., 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 304. Or obtained when not necessary for its business. Cowell v. Colorado Springs Co., 100 U. S. 61. Or cases where national banks have taken securities not authorized by the law of their incorporation. National Bank v. Natchez, 98 U. S. 621; Union Nat. Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99. The element of estoppel would seem to be strongly applicable in such cases.

1. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 290; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71; Mallory v. Hanauer Oil Works, 86 Tenn. 598. In this last case it was held that where only two of the three years for which an unauthorized contract of partnership between two corporations was entered into, have expired, the contract is unexecuted as to the remaining year, in the sense that it may be repudiated as ultra vires, and property delivered to the committee appointed by the two corporations for the use of the partnership recovered at once by the corporations.

In Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1, an action of covenant for rent of a railroad failed, the rent being payable in advance. But see Heims Brewing Co. v. Flannery, 137 Ill. 309. Here the plaintiff leased his liquor saloon to a wholesale brewing company for five years. The company threw up the lease before the expiration of the term. In an action for rent for the residue of the term, it was held that the contract was ultra vires, but that the plaintiff, having performed his part, should be allowed to recover. In this case, it appeared that the plaintiff had changed his position in other ways on the strength of the contract.

2. Day v. Spiral Springs Buggy Co., 57 Mich. 146; 58 Am. Rep. 563. See also Governor, etc., of Copper Miners v. Fox, 16 Q. B. 229.

3. Boorman Dairy Co. v. Mooney, 41 Mo. App. 665. In this case, the application of the corporation for an injunction restraining the defendant from abandoning the contract and going into other business, was refused.

4. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62; 20 Am. Rep. 504; Bowman Dairy Co. v. Mooney, 41 Mo. App.

avail itself of the defense of ultra vires when the contract has been in good faith fully performed by the other party, and it has had the full benefit of the performance and of the contract; and, conversely, if the other party has had the benefit of a contract fully performed by the corporation, he will not be heard to object that the contract and performance were not within the legitimate powers of the corporation. If an action cannot be brought directly upon the agreement, either equity will grant relief, or an action in some other form will prevail.¹ And it is upon this point, viz., the character of the remedy available to the aggrieved party, that the authorities are not agreed. In some jurisdictions, suit

665; Fishmongers Co. v. Robertson, 5 M. & G. 131.

1. See cases cited in the succeeding notes to this section. In Darst v. Gale, 83 Ill. 137, an insurance company executed a deed of trust to secure the payment of certain bonds from which the company had received the money. The bill was filed to enjoin the trustee from selling the premises, and to declare the deed of trust void. The court refused to allow the plea of ultra vires to prevail, on the ground that a private corporation cannot be heard in such a defense where the contract has been performed by the other party, and the corporation has had the benefit of the contract and the performance. The following language of Chief Justice Lawrence, in Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656, was quoted with approbation: "It would be pressing the doctrine of ultra vires to an extent that can never be tolerated, even though the lender knew that the corporation was transacting a business beyond its chartered powers, provided the business itself was free from any intrinsic immorality or illegality."

In Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656, Lawrence, C. J., said further that, "when the contract is executed, the doctrine of estoppel is applied for the purpose of compelling corporations to be honest, in the simplest and commonest sense of honesty, after whatever mischief may belong to the performance of the ultra vires act has been accomplished." This case was one in which money was borrowed and notes given by a corporation to enable it to prosecute a business, which the lender knew it had no right to undertake.

In Underwood v. Newport Lyceum, 5 B. Mon. (Ky.) 129; 41 Am. Dec. 260, it was held that although the charter of a corporation may not give the power of banking or issuing checks to pass as currency, and it may be a penal offense to issue such notes or checks, still the corporation is bound to pay for plates and notes or checks procured to be made by the officers of such corporation.

In Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 1, suit was brought on a special contract by the defendant to carry the plaintiff safely to a point beyond its own line. The alleged contract was not, however, proved, so it was not necessary to pass upon the question of ultra vires. The court expressed a doubt as to whether the plea of ultra vires should, in all cases, be allowed to prevail. On the second appeal (Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 502), the question was whether the defense of ultra vires could be set up, and it was held that the defendants were not estopped to claim that under their charter they had no power to enter into the alleged contract, and that it was not obligatory upon them. A bill in equity was thereafter brought, upon the theory that in equity at least, the defendant should be prevented from interposing the defense; but the bill was dismissed, it being held that the defendants would not be estopped in equity, any more than at law, from setting up their want of power. Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 23 Conn. 609.

See also Converse v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 166. Here the question raised was whether a contract to carry beyond the company's lines was ultra vires, and for that reason not enforceable. In the opinion of the court no such contract was proved, and the question was therefore not material. In both of these cases, however, the court sustained a strict construction of powers conferred upon the corporation, quite at variance with opinions of courts in other cases.

may be brought directly upon the contract and relief given according to its terms.¹

Thus, a corporation has been held liable on a note given by it

1. Homestead Bank v. Wood (C. Pl.), 20 N. Y. Supp. 640; Chicago etc., R. Co. v. Derkes, 103 Ind. 520; Diamond Match Co. v. Roeber, 106 N. Y. 473; 60 Am. Rep. 464; Edwards v. Fairbanks, 27 La. Ann. 449; Sherman Center Town Co. v. Fletcher, 46 Kan. 524; Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117; Cunningham v. Massena Springs, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 600; Wood v. Corry Waterworks Co., 44 Fed. Rep. 146; Allen v. Freedman's Sav., etc., Co., 14 Fla. 418; Brown v. Scottish-American Mortgage Co., 110 Ill. 235; Beecher v. Marquette Rolling Mill Co., 45 Mich. 103; Campbell v. Argenta Gold, etc., Min. Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 1; Amerman v. Wiles, 24 N. J. Eq. 13; Pancoast v. Travelers Ins. Co., 79 Ind. 172; Holmes, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Holmes, etc., Metal Co., 127 N. Y. 252; 24 Am. St. Rep. 448; Main v. Casserly, 67 Cal. 127; Argenti v. San Francisco, 16 Cal. 255; Zottman v. San Francisco, 20 Cal. 96; Hackensack Water Co. v. DeKay, 36 N. J. Eq. 548; Trenton Mut. L. & F. Ins. Co. v. McKelway, 12 N. J. Eq. 133; Zabriskie v. Hackensack, etc., R. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 179; 90 Am. Dec. 617; Hays v. Galion Gas Light, etc., Co., 29 Ohio St. 340; Cozart v. Georgia R., etc., Co., 54 Ga. 379; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Dec. 656; Ehrman v. Union L. Ins. Co., 35 Ohio St. 324; Steam Nav. Co. v. Weed, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 378; Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 370; Allegheny City v. McClurkan, 14 Pa. St. 83; Rutland, etc., R. Co. v. Proctor, 29 Vt. 93; Perkins v. Portland, etc., R. Co., 47 Me. 573; 74 Am. Dec. 507; Union Water Co. v. Murphy's Flat Plumbing Co., 22 Cal. 631; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; Peoria, etc., R. Co. v. Thompson, 103 Ill. 187; DeGross v. American Linen Thread Co., 21 N. Y. 127; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; North Hudson Mut. Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. First Nat. Bank, 79 Wis. 31; Darst v. Gale, 83 Ill. 136; Heims Brewing Co. v. Flannery, 137 Ill. 309.

In Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 567, Van Syckel, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "In my judgment, the true rule is, that when the transaction is complete, and the party seeking relief has performed his part, the plea of ultra vires by the corporation which has acquiesced in it, is inadmissible in an action brought against it for not performing its side of the contract, in all those instances where the party who has performed cannot, upon rescission, be restored to his former status."

In State Board of Agriculture v. Citizens, etc., R. Co., 47 Ind. 407; 17 Am. Rep. 709, the railway company was held bound to pay a subscription promised to the State Board of Agriculture in consideration that the state fair should be located upon its line, where the plaintiff had performed its part of the contract.

In Louisville, etc., R. Co. v. Flanagan, 113 Ind. 488, the defendant promised the plaintiff that if he would remove his factory to a certain town upon its line, it would transport the products of the factory for certain rates. In an action of contract for failure to transport the plaintiff's goods, the defendant was not allowed to set up the plea of ultra vires.

A contract by a railroad company to pay a pipe line company a certain rate per barrel for all oil delivered by the latter to the former for transportation, though ultra vires, is enforceable, the plaintiff having fully performed his part. Oil Creek, etc., R. Co. v. Pennsylvania Transp. Co., 83 Pa. St. 160.

Where stock is issued on the vote of the directors, and used by them as a pledge to obtain a loan, the corporation is estopped from objecting that the issue of stock not paid up is prohibited by the constitution, and the holder will be entitled to the same to the extent of the loan. Gasquet v. Crescent City Brewing Co., 49 Fed. Rep. 496.

In Mitchell v. Beckman, 64 Cal. 117, it is held that where the stockholders of a bank have received the dividends paid by it on deposits transferred to it by another bank, in consideration of its assumption of all the latter's liabilities, they may not plead ultra vires in a suit by one of the depositors to enforce their individual liability, after the

for property purchased, and used without authority.¹ And when a corporation buys land and receives a deed in which an express lien is reserved for its price, it cannot retain the land and escape paying in money because of its incapacity to contract or pay in anything but warrants on its treasury.²

So, when a corporation receives the benefit of money borrowed on a corporate mortgage, and the stockholders know of it and do not object in a reasonable time to the want of authority to make the loan, neither the corporation nor the creditors can plead want of authority in a suit on the mortgage; nor can the receiver of the corporation do so for them.³

Where a corporation takes a lease in excess of its charter powers, and holds possession of the land, the lessor is entitled to recover the rent stipulated in the lease.⁴

Where a bank creates an investment department, under which parties loaning money to the bank or making deposits are secured by a deed of trust for the repayment of their loans or deposits, and the bank receives large sums of money on the faith of the security, which goes into its general business, it will not be allowed, after having the full benefit of the contract, to interpose the defense of ultra vires to defeat the execution of the trust.⁵

And one who has rendered services to a corporation in an ultra vires transaction may recover compensation therefor.⁶

It has been held that where a corporation having authority to contract for the erection of a certain building, makes a contract for such purpose and receives the benefit thereof by the erection of the building, it cannot escape liability in an action for the bank to which the deposits were transferred has stopped payment.

A purchaser of property from the corporation may not, when sued for the price, object that the corporation had no authority to buy and sell the property. Holmes, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Holmes, etc., Metal Co., 127 N. Y. 252; 24 Am. St. Rep. 448.

1. Dewey v. Toledo, etc., R. Co., 91 Mich. 351; Carson City Sav. Bank v. Carson City Elevator R. Co., 90 Mich. 550.

Where a corporation, although prohibited by its charter, enters into a contract for the purchase of shares of stock in another corporation, and the contract is executed by the delivery of the stock, it may not plead in defense to a suit on a promissory note given for the price of the stock, and in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, that the contract was ultra vires. Wright v. Antwerp Pipe Line Co., 101 Pa. St. 204.

2. Natchez v. Mallery, 54 Miss. 499.

3. Manhattan, etc., Co. v. Phalen, 128 Pa. St. 110.

4. Woodruff v. Erie R. Co., 93 N. Y. 609; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. Mays Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; Canal, etc., R. Co. v. St. Charles R. Co., 44 La. Ann. 1069. See also Moss v. Rossie Lead Min. Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 137.

5. Ward v. Johnson, 95 Ill. 215.

6. Schurr v. New York, etc., Investment Co. (C. Pl.), 18 N. Y. Supp. 454. In this case, the corporation was organized for the purpose of "purchasing, taking, holding, possessing, selling, improving, and leasing real estate and buildings, the manufacture, lease, sale, and use of building stone, lumber, and other materials." It contracted with a party to pay him for services in organizing stock companies to locate and engage in business upon its land. It was held that, while the contract was ultra vires, the corporation, having received the benefit thereof, could not avail itself of such a defense.

money due upon the contract by showing that the provision of its charter authorizing the erection of the building is invalid.¹

On the other hand, when a corporation has fully performed, on its part, a contract to manufacture and deliver certain articles, and sues for the price, the other party may not set up want of authority in the corporation.²

A corporation may enforce a mortgage given by the defendant as security for a contract of guaranty entered into by the corporation without authority.³

A corporation may recover upon a promissory note given for the repayment of money loaned by it, notwithstanding it exceeded its powers in making the loan.⁴

When, by the charter, the corporate surplus is to be invested in mortgages on certain real estate, or in certain classes of bonds, it is not competent for one who, in another state, has obtained a loan on personal security, nor his surety, to set up the plea of want of power.⁵

The obligor in a bond in the hands of a corporation, will not be allowed to show, for the purpose of defeating a recovery thereon, that the corporation has no power to hold or sue upon it.⁶

Where one, who has contracted with a corporation for the exclusive right to manufacture and sell a certain patented article, has received the full benefit of the contract, he may not, in an action for the royalties, deny the authority of the corporation to make the contract.⁷

In other jurisdictions, the mere fact that the corporation has received the consideration of, or otherwise derived benefits from, the contract, is held not to involve it in any direct liability thereon;⁸

1. Prairie Lodge v. Smith, 58 Miss. 301.

2. Whitney Arms Co. v. Barlow, 63 N. Y. 62; 20 Am. Rep. 504.

3. Macon, etc., R. Co. v. Georgia R. Co., 63 Ga. 103.

4. Poock v. Lafayette Bldg. Assoc., 71 Ind. 357; Pancoast v. Travelers Ins. Co., 79 Ind. 172; Steam Nav. Co. v. Weed, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 378. In this last case, the court, after examining a number of authorities, concludes the opinion as follows: "I am happy to come to the conclusion that the law will not sustain this most unconscionable defense. It ill becomes the defendant to borrow from the plaintiff one thousand dollars for a single day, to relieve their immediate necessities, and then to turn around and say, 'I will not return you this money, because you had no power, by your charter, to lend it.' Let them first restore the money, and then it will be time enough for them to discuss with the sovereign power of the State of Connecticut the extent of the plaintiff's chartered privileges. We shall lose our respect for the law when it so far loses its character for justice as to sanction the defense here attempted." The following cases are cited and examined in the opinion and relied upon in support of the ruling: Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 370; Indiana v. Woram, 6 Hill (N. Y.) 33; Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128; Baltimore, etc., Steam Boat Co. v. McCutcheon, 13 Pa. St. 13; Palmer v. Lawrence, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 161; Potter v. Ithaca Bank, 5 Hill (N. Y.) 490; Suydam v. Morris Canal, etc., Co., 5 Hill (N. Y.) 491, note; Sacket's Harbor Bank v. Lewis County Bank, 11 Barb. (N. Y.) 213.

5. Mutual L. Ins. Co. v. Wilcox, 8 Biss. (U. S.) 203.

6. Franklin Ave. German Sav. Inst. v. Board of Education, 75 Mo. 408.

7. Hall Mfg. Co. v. American R. Co., 48 Mich. 331.

8. Congress, etc., Spring Co. v.

that the other party, being bound to constructive notice of the limits of the corporation's capacity, is taken to have parted with

Knowlton, 103 U. S. 49; Nashville v. Ray, 19 Wall. (U. S.) 468; Hancock v. Louisville, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 409; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371; Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 294; Parkersburg v. Brown, 106 U. S. 487; Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348; Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 263; Pennsylvania, etc., R. Co. v. St. Louis R. Co., 118 U. S. 290; Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 350; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Palace Car Co., 139 U. S. 24; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71; Dill v. Wareham, 7 Met. (Mass.) 438; White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 81; Morville v. American Tract Soc., 123 Mass. 129; 25 Am. Rep. 40; Bangor Boom Corp. v. Whiting, 29 Me. 123; Buckeye, etc., Co. v. Harvey, 92 Tenn. 115; Simmons v. Troy Iron Works, 92 Ala. 427; Chuvacua Lime Works v. Dismukes, 87 Ala. 344; Sherwood v. Alvis, 83 Ala. 115; 3 Am. St. Rep. 695; Smith v. Alabama L. Ins. Co., 4 Ala. 558; Montgomery v. Montgomery, etc., Plank Road Co., 31 Ala. 76; Waddill v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 35 Ala. 323; Grand Lodge v. Waddill, 36 Ala. 313; Chambers v. Falkner, 65 Ala. 448; Wilkes v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 79 Ala. 180; Westinghouse Mach. Co. v. Wilkinson, 79 Ala. 312; Marion Sav. Bank v. Durkin, 54 Ala. 471; Farmers, etc., Bank v. Baldwin, 23 Minn. 198; South Yorkshire R., etc., Co. v. Great Northern R. Co., 3 De G. M. & G. 576; Simpson v. Denison, 10 Hare 51; Salomons v. Laing, 13 Beav. 339; Munt v. Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co., 13 Beav. 1; East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 803; 73 E. C. L. 775; Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 El. & Bl. 397; 82 E. C. L. 396; Scottish Northeastern R. v. Stuart, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 382. See Dover v. London, etc., R. Co., 3 De G. F. & J. 543; Brooks v. Blackburn, etc., Bldg. Soc., 9 App. Cas. 857; Murray v. Scott, 9 App. Cas. 517; In re German Min. Co., 4 De G. M. & G. 19; In re Cork, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 Ch. 748; In re National Bldg. Soc., L. R., 5 Ch. 309; Ex p. Bignold, 22 Beav. 143; Throup's Case, 29 Beav. 353; Hoare's Case, 30 Beav. 225; Lowndes v. Garnet, etc., Mfg. Co., 32 L. J. Ch. 418; In re Exmouth Dock Co., L. R., 17 Eq. 181; In re Worcester Corn Ex- change, 3 De G. M. & G. 180; In re Pooley Hall Colliery Co., 18 W. R. 201; English Channel S. S. Co. v. Rolt, 17 Ch. Div. 715; Yorkshire R. Wagon Co. v. Maclure, 21 Ch. Div. 309; MacGregor v. Dover, etc., R. Co., 18 Q. B. 618; 83 E. C. L. 618; Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 2 Exch. 356; Gage v. Newmarket R. Co., 18 Q. B. 457; 83 E. C. L. 456; Preston v. Liverpool, etc., R. Co., 5 H. L. Cas. 605; Webb v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 De G. M. & G. 521; Stuart v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 De G. M. & G. 721. And à fortiori, equity will refuse to decree specific performance of such contracts. Webb v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 De G. M. & G. 521; Stuart v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 De G. M. & G. 721; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. London, etc., R. Co., 4 De G. M. & G. 115; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. Birmingham R. Co., 6 H. L. Cas. 113. In Memphis Grain, etc., Elevator Co. v. Memphis, etc., R. Co., 85 Tenn. 703, the court refused to enforce a contract of guaranty by the defendant to a subscriber to its stock, that the dividends should not fall below a certain per cent. In Great Northern R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 Hare 306, specific performance of a contract regarding the use of the lines and stations of the defendant railroad was refused. In Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371, it was stated as the result of the previous cases in that court that, "a contract made by a corporation which is unlawful and void because beyond the scope of its corporate powers, does not, by being carried into execution, become lawful and valid; but the proper remedy for the party aggrieved is by disaffirming the contract, and suing to recover as on a quantum meruit the value of what the defendant has actually received the benefit of."

The ground and the limits of the rule concerning the remedy in the case of a contract ultra vires which has been partly performed, and under which property or money has passed, is thus summed up by Mr. Justice Miller in Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 317: The rule "stands upon the broad ground that the contract itself is void, and that nothing which has been done under it, nor the action of the court, can infuse his property with full knowledge that the contract was illegal and void, and has no claim to enforce it.¹

Thus, in these jurisdictions, a railroad company and an organ manufacturing establishment are not liable upon a contract to guarantee the expenses of a musical festival, although it is made with the reasonable belief that the holding of the proposed festival will be of great pecuniary advantage to the corporation by increasing its proper business, and the festival is held, and expenses incurred, in reliance upon the guaranty;² nor a manufacturing any vitality into it;" and that "where the parties have so far acted under such a contract that they cannot be restored to their original condition, the court inquires if relief can be given independently of the contract, or whether it will refuse to interfere as the matter stands."

1. Pearce v. Madison, etc., R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441; Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 381; Pacific Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 493; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71; Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 468; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 290; Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256; Willamette Mfg. Co. v. Bank of British Columbia, 119 U. S. 191; Green Bay, etc., R. Co. v. Union Steamboat Co., 107 U. S. 98; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371; Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 24; Sutliff v. Lake County, 147 U. S. 230; Marcy v. Oswego, 92 U. S. 637; Humboldt v. Long, 92 U. S. 642; Dixon County v. Field, 111 U. S. 83; Lake County v. Graham, 130 U. S. 674; Chaffee County v. Potter, 142 U. S. 355; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393; Bailey v. M. E. Church, 71 Me. 472; Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Inst., 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 17; Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 23 Conn. 622; Naugatuck R. Co. v. Waterbury Button Co., 24 Conn. 482; Converse v. Norwich, etc., Transp. Co., 33 Conn. 570; In re Cork, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 Ch. 748; Greeley v. Nashua Sav. Bank, 63 N. H. 145; Hall v. Paris, 59 N. H. 74; Simmons v. Troy Iron Works, 92 Ala. 427; Sherwood v. Alvis, 83 Ala. 115; 3 Am. St. Rep. 695; Smith v. Alabama L. Ins., etc., Co., 4 Ala. 558; Montgomery v. Montgomery, etc.,

Plank Road Co., 31 Ala. 76; Waddill v. Alabama, etc., R. Co., 35 Ala. 323; Grand Lodge v. Waddill, 36 Ala. 313; Chambers v. Falkner, 65 Ala. 448; Wilkes v. Georgia Pac. R. Co., 79 Ala. 180; Northwestern Union Packet Co. v. Shaw, 37 Wis. 655; 19 Am. Rep. 781; Madison, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Watertown, etc., Plank Road Co., 7 Wis. 59; Dietrich v. Madison Relief Assoc., 45 Wis. 79; Luthe v. Farmers' Mut. F. Ins. Co., 55 Wis. 543.

In Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 258, Selden, J., uses this language: "When the want of power is apparent upon comparing the act done with the terms of the charter, the party dealing with the corporation is presumed to have knowledge of the defect, and the defense of ultra vires is available against him. But such defense will not be permitted to prevail against a party who cannot be presumed to have had any knowledge of the want of authority to make the contract. Hence, if the question of power depends, not merely upon the law under which the corporation acts, but upon the existence of certain extrinsic facts resting peculiarly within the knowledge of the corporate officers, then the corporation will be estopped from denying that which, by assuming to make the contract, it had virtually affirmed." Quoted approvingly in Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 58; 3 Am. Rep. 322.

2. Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 258; 41 Am. Rep. 221. In this case the court said: "A corporation may indeed be bound to refund to a person, from whom it has received money or property for a purpose unauthorized by its charter, the value of that which it has actually received; for, in such a case, to maintain the action against the corporation is not to affirm, but to disaffirm, the illegal contract. White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 181; Morville v. Ameri- company on a contract to promote a railroad enterprise;¹ nor a turnpike company for the purchase of coaches to be used on a stage line;² nor a steamboat company on a contract to tow another vessel to a point off its own route,³ or to aid in the im-can Tract Soc., 123 Mass. 129; 25 Am. Rep. 40; In re Cork, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 Ch. 748. But when the corporation has actually received nothing in money or property, it cannot be held liable upon an agreement to share in, or to guarantee the profits of, an enterprise which is wholly without the scope of its corporate powers, upon the mere ground that conjectural or speculative benefits were believed by its officers to be likely to result from the making of the agreement, and that the other party has incurred expenses upon the faith of it. East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 775; 73 E. C. L. 775; Macgregor v. Dover, etc., R. Co., 18 Q. B. 618; 83 E. C. L. 618; Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71."

Where a corporation established for the purpose of constructing a plank road, guarantees the payment of a loan of money made by another corporation of similar character, for the purpose of enabling it to build its road, the building of which would be advantageous to the former, and on default in the payment of the loan the guarantor pays the amount thereof, the other party is not estopped from setting up want of authority in the guarantor to make the contract of guaranty. Madison, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Watertown, etc., Plank Road Co., 7 Wis. 59.

1. Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653, reversing L. R., 9 Exch. 224. Here the company was incorporated under the Companies' Act of 1862 to make and sell railway carriages and all kinds of railway apparatus. The company, by its directors, entered into an agreement with Riche to give him the construction of a railway between certain points. After Riche had entered upon the work, and executed it in part, the company repudiated the contract as being ultra vires. Riche then brought an action to recover damages for breach of contract. In the court of exchequer, two of the three judges were of opinion that the plaintiff should have judgment, and when the case came before the exchequer chamber it was heard before six judges, and they being equally divided in opinion, the judgment was affirmed. On appeal to the House of Lords, the judgment was reversed, pronouncing the contract ultra vires, and without the power of the shareholders to validate it by their acquiescence.

2. Downing v. Mt. Washington Road Co., 40 N. H. 230.

In Pearce v. Madison, etc., R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441, two corporations, created by the laws of Indiana to construct distinct, though connecting, lines of railroad in that state, were consolidated by agreement, and conducted the business of both lines under a common board of management, which gave notes in the name of the consolidated company in payment for a steamboat to be run in connection with the railroads. After the execution of the notes and the acquisition of the steamboat, this relation between the corporations was legally dissolved. It was held that an action brought by an indorsee against the two corporations upon the notes, could not be maintained.

3. Pennsylvania, etc., Steam Nav. Co. v. Dandridge, 8 Gill & J. (Md.) 248. In this case, it was said that the circumstance that the corporation has entered into a contract, does not estop it from denying its authority to do so in an action against it founded upon such contract. If such were the case in reference to the corporation, the estoppel would apply equally to the other contracting party, and thus in effect limitations upon the powers of corporations would be of no avail. Approved in Weckler v. First Nat. Bank, 42 Md. 595; Boyce v. M. E. Church, 46 Md. 373.

In Maryland Hospital v. Foreman, 29 Md. 532, it is said that if a party makes a contract with the corporation, which is beyond the powers of the latter, he may recover the money paid thereon, whether the contract be executed or executory. The contract in all such cases, will be regarded as void, and the party who delivered the property or advanced the money to such corporation will be entitled to his legal remedy (not founded upon but in repudiation of the contract), to recover the property or the money from the corporation, upon the principle that it

provement of a harbor off the line of its route;¹ nor a national bank upon a guaranty of the payment for land conveyed by the plaintiff to a third person.²

A life insurance company is not liable on policies of marine insurance issued by it, but the holders of such policies may recover the premiums paid in an appropriate action.³

And a company limited to insurance against accidents sustained "in traveling," is not liable on a policy insuring the holder "against external bodily injuries effected through external violence and accidental means," regardless of whether the injury was sustained "in traveling" or not.⁴

A fire insurance company is not liable on a policy against damage by lightning, unless the damage happened by fire.⁵

But, while refusing to maintain an action upon the contract, these courts have, at the same time, always striven to do justice between the parties by permitting property or money parted with on the faith of the contract, to be recovered, or compensation to be made for it. In such cases, however, the action is not on the contract, nor according to its terms, but on an implied contract of the defendant to return, or failing in this, to make compensation for property or money which it has no right to retain. To maintain such an action is not to affirm, but to disaffirm, the ultra vires contract.⁶ Accordingly, if a corporation in excess of its powers, receives a sum of money on condition that it will return it if an additional sum is not raised within a given time, and the condition had acquired no right or title to either under the contract.

1. Abbott v. Baltimore, etc., Steam Packet Co., 1 Md. Ch. 541.

2. Norton v. Derry Nat. Bank, 61 N. H. 592. Here it was said if the guaranty is denied, the benefit must be restored. The plaintiff cannot recover upon the guaranty; if he desires, he may amend his declaration by adding an appropriate count for the recovery of the land or its value if sold.

3. In re Phoenix, etc., L. Assur. Co., 2 J. & H. 441. See also Natusch v. Irving, 2 Coop. C. C. 358.

4. Miller v. American Mut. Accident Ins. Co., 92 Tenn. 167. Here the court said that the remedy was a suit in disaffirmance of the contract and for an accounting.

5. Andrews v. Union Mut. F. Ins. Co., 37 Me. 257.

6. In addition to the cases below, see those cited to the proposition in the text that an action is not maintainable directly on the contract. Hull v. Swansea, 5 Q. B. 526; 48 E. C. L. 526; Athenæum L. Assur. Co. v. Tooley, 3 De G. & J. 294; Ex p. Key, 16 W. R.

1103; In re Phoenix L. Assur. Co., 2 J. & H. 441; In re Sea F. & L. Assur. Co., 5 De G. M. & G. 465; Logan County Nat. Bank v. Townsend, 139 U. S. 67; North Western Union Packet Co. v. Shaw, 37 Wis. 655; 19 Am. Rep. 781; Oneida Bank v. Ontario Bank, 21 N. Y. 490; Southern L. Ins., etc., Co. v. Lanier, 5 Fla. 110; 58 Am. Dec. 448; Ossipee Hosiery, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Cunney, 54 N. H. 295; Hall v. Paris, 59 N. H. 71; Whitney v. Peay, 24 Ark. 22; Roberts v. Deming Woodworking Co., 111 N. Car. 432; Curtis v. Piedmont Lumber, etc., Co., 109 N. Car. 401; Maher v. Chicago, 38 Ill. 266; Thomas v. Port Huron, 27 Mich. 323; Paul v. Kenosha, 22 Wis. 256; 94 Am. Dec. 598; Carey v. East Saginaw, 79 Mich. 73; Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. St. Joseph, etc., R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 247.

"To say that a corporation cannot sue or be sued upon an ultra vires arrangement is one thing; to say that it may retain the proceeds thereof which have come into its possession without making any compensation whatever to the person from whom it has obtained them, is something very different and savors very much of an inducement to fraud." Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.) 721.

In Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 263, it was said that in cases of contracts upon which corporations could not be sued because they were ultra vires, "the courts have gone a long way to enable parties who had parted with property or money on the faith of such contracts to obtain justice by the recovery of the property or the money specifically, or as money had and received to the plaintiff's use."

In Hitchcock v. Galveston, 96 U. S. 341, where a city was sued for damages for putting an end to a contract with plaintiffs for the improvement of its sidewalks, the only invalid part of which was its promise to pay in bonds which it was beyond its power to issue, it was decided that the invalidity of the promise was no reason why the city should not pay for the benefits which it had received from the plaintiffs' performance of the contract; Mr. Justice Story, in behalf of the court, saying: "It matters not that the promise was to pay in a manner not authorized by law. If payments cannot be made in bonds because their issue is ultra vires, it would be sanctioning rank injustice to hold that payment need not be made at all."

So, in Louisiana v. Wood, 102 U. S. 204, a city, which had received money for bonds issued by it without authority and at an illegal rate of interest, and purchased by the plaintiff, was held liable, not on any contract of purchase, nor on any express contract whatever, but on a contract implied from its receipt of the money; Wait, C. J., observing: "There was no actual sale of bonds, because there were no valid bonds to sell. There was no express contract of borrowing and lending, and consequently, no express contract to pay any rate of interest at all. The only contract actually entered into is the one the law implies from what was done, to-wit, that the city would, on demand, return the money paid to it by mistake, and as the money was got under a form of obligation which was apparently good, that interest should be paid at the legal rate from the time the obligation was denied. That contract the plaintiffs seek to enforce in this action, and no other."

Again, in Parkersburg v. Brown,

106 U. S. 487, where certain parties, in consideration of bonds issued to them by a city for a purpose beyond its powers, executed to the city a trust deed in the nature of a mortgage, to secure the payment of the bonds and interest, it was held that the bonds could not be enforced against the city, but that the mortgagors had a right to reclaim the property and to demand an account of the city. Mr. Justice Blatchford, in delivering judgment, said: "The enforcement of such right is not in affirmance of the illegal contract, but is in disaffirmance of it, and seeks to prevent the city from retaining the benefit which it has derived from the unlawful act. There was no illegality in the mere putting of the property by the O'Briens (the mortgagors) in the hands of the city. To deny a remedy to reclaim it is to give effect to the illegal contract. The illegality of that contract does not arise from any moral turpitude. The property was transferred under a contract which was merely malum prohibitum, and where the city was the principal offender. In such a case, the party receiving may be made to refund to the person from whom it has received property for the unauthorized purpose, the value of that which it has actually received." Chapman v. Douglas County, 107 U. S. 348, is to the same effect.

In Slater Woolen Co. v. Lamb, 143 Mass. 420, it was held that a corporation created "for the purpose of manufacturing fabrics of wool and worsted, or of a mixture thereof with other textile material," may maintain an action for groceries, dry goods, and other similar articles, sold and delivered by, and in the name of, a person who is keeping a store as the undisclosed agent of the corporation, to a person not in the employment of the corporation, who retains and uses the goods, notwithstanding the contracts of sale are not within the charter powers of the corporation. See also Chester Glass Co. v. Dewey, 16 Mass. 94; 8 Am. Dec. 128.

In Allen v. Freedman's Sav., etc., Co., 14 Fla. 418, the plaintiff advanced money upon certain commercial drafts which were afterwards dishonored. The plaintiff's charter did not authorize such use of moneys deposited with it, but required them to be invested in certain other securities. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to is broken, an action may be maintained against the corporation on an implied promise to return the money, and a demand for its return may be submitted to arbitration.¹

So where one receives money in advance on an ultra vires contract, and subsequently refuses to perform, the other party may recover the money in an action for money had and received.²

A railroad corporation which, under a contract, has used the roadbed, rolling stock and equipments of another, may not set up the defense of ultra vires to a bill in equity by the latter for an accounting and return of the property.³

So, a court of equity will always refuse relief to one seeking to rescind an ultra vires contract, unless he first offers to return, or make compensation for, the property he has received under it.⁴

recover the moneys in an action for money had and received, irrespective of the drafts.

In Moore v. Swanton Tanning Co., 60 Vt. 459, the orators and two of the defendants were members of a corporation conducting a tannery business. The stockholders voted to consolidate its business with the tannery owned by the orators in another state. The vote was carried out to the extent of transferring the personalty of the foreign tannery to the defendant corporation, but not the realty. It was held that whether or not the purchase of real property in another state was within the corporate powers of the defendant, it must account for the actual value of what it had received. See also Manville v. Belden Min. Co., 17 Fed. Rep. 425.

In Central Trust Co., etc., v. Ohio Cent. R. Co., 23 Fed. Rep. 306, it is held that where a "pooling contract," entered into between two railroad corporations, has been fully executed, and the profits arising therefrom are collected and held by a receiver of one of them, he may not retain the fund thus acquired, but will be decreed to pay it over to the other company, without regard to the validity of the original agreement.

But in Grand Lodge v. Waddill, 36 Ala. 313, it was held that when a corporation lends money without authority under its charter, and takes a promissory note to secure its repayment, it cannot recover under the common money counts. The court said: "It is true that money loaned may be recovered under a common money count. But then, a recovery under a common count in this case, would be an enforcement of a void contract, as effectually as if it had been under a special count setting forth the contract."

1. Morrill v. American Tract Soc., 123 Mass. 129; 25 Am. Rep. 40. Here the court said: "The plaintiff is not seeking to enforce that contract (the ultra vires contract), but only to recover his money and prevent the defendant from unjustly retaining the benefits of its own illegal act. He is doing nothing which must be regarded as a necessary affirmance of an illegal act. The right to recover the money upon the implied promise, under like circumstances, has been heretofore recognized by the court."

2. Dill v. Wareham, 7 Met. (Mass.) 438. See also White v. Franklin Bank, 22 Pick. (Mass.) 81.

3. Manchester, etc., R. Co. v. Concord, etc., R. Co. (N. H. 1890), 20 Atl. Rep. 383; the court, in this case, saying: "The defense set up is so repugnant to the natural sense of justice, so contrary to good faith and fair dealing, and so opposed to the weight of modern authority, that it need only be said that, in equity at least, neither party to a transaction ultra vires simply, will be heard to allege its invalidity while retaining its fruits. However the contractual power of the defendant may be limited under its charter, there is no limitation of its power to make restitution to the other party, whose money or property it has obtained through an unauthorized contract; nor, as a corporation, is it exempted from the common obligation to do justice, which binds individuals, for this duty rests upon all persons alike, whether natural or artificial."

4. Memphis, etc., R. Co. v. Dow, 19 Fed. Rep. 388; Brown v. Atchison, 39 Kan. 37; Manville v. Belden Min. Co.,

While a corporation is not chargeable with a loan of money made by the directors in excess of their authority, yet if any portion of the money has been devoted to the legitimate purposes of the corporation, it is liable to that extent.¹ And if the money

17 Fed. Rep. 425; United Lines Tel. Co. v. Boston Safe Deposit, etc., Co., 147 U. S. 431; Buford v. Keokuk Northern Line Packet Co., 69 Mo. 611. See also Madison Ave., etc., Church v. Oliver St., etc., Church, 73 N. Y. 82.

A railroad company which has leased certain telegraph lines without authority cannot repudiate the lease, unless it offers to make compensation for the improvements and additions which the lessees have made to the property. Western Union Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 562; American Union Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 188; Atlantic Union Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 541; Western Union Tel. Co. v. Burlington, etc., R. Co., 3 McCrary (U. S.) 130.

In New Castle Northern R. Co. v. Simpson, 23 Feb. Rep. 214, equity having, at the instance of a railroad company, set aside a construction contract as ultra vires, decreed that the corporation should account for benefits received from partial performance, and that the contractor was not to be put off with the mere reimbursement of his actual outlay, but was entitled to receive for what he had done such compensation as any other railroad contractor could recover under such circumstances, in the absence of an express agreement. The corporation was, also, held chargeable with interest on the amount found to be due the contractor when the work was stopped.

In Wilson's Case, L. R., 12 Eq. 521, where a person made a loan to a building society, which it was ultra vires in the latter to accept, and which was secured by a deposit of deeds of the society, it was held that on the society being wound up the official liquidator could not deprive the lender of his securities without repaying the money advanced.

1. Bank of Australasia v. Breillat, 6 Moo. P. C. 152; Hawtayne v. Bourne, 7 M. & W. 595; Hawken v. Bourne, 8 M. & W. 703; In re Exmouth Docks Co., L. R., 17 Eq. 181; Ulster R. Co. v. Banbridge, etc., R. Co., 2 Ir. Eq. 190; In re National Bldg. Soc., L. R., 5 Ch. 309; Allen v. LaFayette, 89 Ala. 650; Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 640; Parsons v. Monmouth, 70 Me. 262. Compare Hackettstown v. Swackhamer, 37 N. J. L. 191.

In 2 Morawetz on Priv. Corp. (2d ed.), § 715, it is said that money or other property transferred to the corporation under a contract which is void, because beyond the authority of the agent assuming to represent the corporation, the latter is liable to account for the money or other property so received. If any portion of the property has been preserved, it must be restored to the owner, and if it has been converted into a distinct fund, this must be given up.

And in Taylor on Priv. Corp., ch. 7, § 311, it is said: "The corporation may repudiate the contract without rendering up the benefits which through the contract have accrued to the corporate property, when such benefits have become amalgamated with the corporate property, and cannot be rendered up without infringing the rights of persons who have never assented to the contract, nor in any way acquiesced in it." See Hill's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 605.

In Allis v. Jones, 45 Fed. Rep. 148, it was said: "The mortgages were given to secure an indebtedness in excess of the amount of debts the companies, by their charters, were authorized to contract, and it is said this renders the evidence of the indebtedness, and the mortgages given to secure it, ultra vires and void. But on the facts of this case this position cannot be maintained. The money was received by the companies, and used in conducting and carrying on their legitimate corporate business, with the knowledge and consent of all the officers and stockholders. On these facts the banks are entitled to be repaid their money, and the companies could execute a valid security for its payment."

A mining company, being in financial difficulties and owing money to employes for wages, the directors borrowed sums for the purpose of paying these debts. They afterwards personally repaid these advances. It was held that they might prove these advances upon the winding up of the borrowed has been expended in discharging valid debts of the corporation, the lender is entitled to be subrogated to the rights of the creditors so paid.¹ If, however, the money has been used for unauthorized purposes, the corporation is not chargeable, though it may have received benefits therefrom.²

Transactions in violation of some positive law, or involving company, upon the ground that the money had been expended in the payment of debts which might have been enforced against the company. In re German Min. Co., 4 De G. M. & G. 19.

Where a corporation borrowed money without authority, for the purpose of completing its works, and sold the works for the full cost, it was held that the lender could prove insolvency in proceedings for the full amount of his claim against the company. Troupe's Case, 29 Beav. 353; Hoare's Case, 30 Beav. 225; In re Magdalena Steam Nav. Co., Johns. 690.

In Ex p. Bignold, 22 Beav. 143, a trading company borrowed money for the purpose of carrying on its business. It had no power to make this loan, but it was held that the members were liable to an additional subscription in order to pay the money advanced.

In Lowdnes v. Garnett, etc., Gold Min. Co., 33 L. J. Ch. 418, a director who had made advances to a company in excess of its borrowing powers, to meet the necessary expenses of the business, was allowed to prove his claim as a postponed creditor against the company. See also Ulster R. Co. v. Banbridge, etc., R. Co., 2 Ir. Eq. 190.

A building society that loaned money on the security of its own shares, in violation of its charter, was allowed to prove against the estate of the borrower to the amount of the loan. In re Coltman, 19 Ch. Div. 64. See Hardy v. Metropolitan Land, etc., Co., L. R., 7 Ch. 427.

1. The case of In re Cork, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 Ch. 748, is a leading one upon this subject. A railroad company had exhausted its borrowing powers, and was in debt for property bought on credit. In these circumstances, an issue of bonds was negotiated, and the money received from the sale thereof was expended for the payment of these debts, and the purchase of necessary material. The Lord Chancellor said: "It is shown, I think, as regards some of the moneys that have been received through the medium of Mr. Lewis, some small proportions were paid directly to persons who were actual creditors of the company, and so far there could be little or no dispute as to the right of Mr. Lewis or of the person claiming through him, to stand in the place of the original creditor, whose debt being valid, has been so paid." And it was held that, to that extent, the lender could recover.

See also the English cases cited in note just preceding. In Re National Bldg. Soc., L. R., 5 Ch. 309, Gifford, L. J., referring to these cases, said: "They were decided upon a principle recognized in the old cases beginning with Marlow v. Pitfield, 1 P. Wms. 558, where there was a loan to an infant and the money was spent in paying for necessities; and in another case of a more modern date, where there was money actually loaned to a lunatic, and it went in paying expenses which were actually necessary for the lunatic. In such cases it has been held that although the party loaning the money, could maintain no action, yet inasmuch as his money had gone to pay debts which would be recoverable at law, he could come into a court of equity and stand in the place of those creditors whose debts had been so paid. That is the principle of these cases. It is a very clear and definite principle which ought not to be departed from." See generally SUBROGATION, vol. 24, p. 187.

2. Re Worcester Corn Exchange Co., 3 De G. M. & G. 180; Zulueta's Claim, L. R., 5 Ch. 444; Wenlock v. River Dee Co., 36 Ch. Div. 674; Ex p. Cropper, 1 De G. M. & G. 147; Hill's Case, L. R., 9 Eq. 605; In re Doncaster Bldg. Soc., L. R., 3 Eq. 158.

A building society which had no powers of borrowing, obtained advances which were used partly in payment of the running expenses of the society, and partly in payment of debts to withdrawing members. It was held that the lender could not recover so far as the money was expended in payment of withdrawing members. Cunliffe v. Blackburn, etc., Bldg. Soc., 9 App. Cas. 857.

moral turpitude, and not ultra vires merely, are not embraced in the discussion in this section, and the principles here stated do not apply to them. They are subject to the rules governing the actions of courts with reference to illegal contracts generally.¹

The distinction made in some of the cases, that a suit may be brought for an accounting, or upon the common counts, but not directly upon the contract, seems to be based upon a technicality and refinement, and in some cases is calculated to work injustice; in some instances, the measure of relief would exceed or fall far short of that fixed by the parties; in others, there would be no remedy at all, for in certain cases an action upon the contract would be the only action that could be maintained. There is really no sound reason why the contract should not be recognized and enforced whenever justice requires it.²

The directors of a benefit building society, the rules of which gave no power to borrow money, borrowed a sum of money for the purpose of advancing it to their members on the security of their shares. The lender of the money subsequently presented a petition for an order to wind up the company. It was held, reversing the decision of the master of the rolls, that the transaction was ultra vires, and the petitioner had no legal or equitable debt against the company, and the petition was accordingly dismissed. Gifford, L. J., said: "There is no proof whatever that one sixpence of this money went in payment of any debt which was recoverable against the company." In re Nat. Bldg. Soc., L. R., 5 Ch. 309.

See the following cases, where the corporation, having received no benefits from the ultra vires contract, was held not liable, although the other party had incurred expenses in reliance upon the contract. Jemison v. Citizens Sav. Bank, 122 N. Y. 135; 19 Am. St. Rep. 482; St. Louis Mfg. Co. v. Hilbert, 24 Mo. App. 338; Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Inst., 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 268; 41 Am. Rep. 221. See also Greeley v. Nashua Sav. Bank, 63 N. H. 145, where it was held that an institution for savings is not estopped to plead want of authority under its charter to receive for safe keeping United States bonds delivered to a clerk of its treasurer, when neither the bonds nor their avails have come to its possession.

1. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 393; James v. Eve, L. R., 6 H. L. 335; Buckeye

Marble, etc., Co. v. Harvey, 92 Tenn. 115; Manchester, etc., R. Co. v. Concord R. Co. (N. H. 1890), 20 Atl. Rep. 383; Beach v. Fulton Bank, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 573; Philadelphia Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249; Nellis v. Clark, 4 Hill (N. Y.) 424; New York Firemen Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 678; Salina Bank v. Alvord, 31 N. Y. 474; Crocker v. Whitney, 71 N. Y. 161; Tracy v. Talmadge, 14 N. Y. 189; 67 Am. Dec. 132; Agawan Nat. Bank v. South Hadley, 128 Mass. 503; McDonald v. New York, 68 N. Y. 23; 23 Am. Rep. 144; Parr v. Greenbush, 72 N. Y. 463; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71. Such transactions are subject to the maxim, In pari delicto est conditio defendentis. See infra, this title, Contracts Expressly Forbidden, or Contrary to Public Policy.

In New York State L. & T. Co. v. Helmer, 77 N. Y. 64, a trust company which had discounted a note in violation of the law against unauthorized banking was held not entitled to recover against the maker. The court said: "The facts, as presented by the answers, do not bring the case within that class of decisions where the party having received the benefit of the contract, is not allowed to repudiate it because the other party had no power to make it. Such cases rest upon the principle that the contract was an innocent or legal one, and in this respect differ from the case where the act was illegal or expressly prohibited by law."

2. This is substantially the language of Mr. Morawetz. See 2 Morawetz Corp. (2d ed.), § 703.

In Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc.,

(2) On Both Sides.—Ultra vires contracts are recognized as unassailable, and are permitted to stand as the foundation of rights acquired under them, after they have been fully performed on both sides.¹

A transfer of property to or by a corporation, may not be set aside simply on the ground that it was unauthorized on the part

R. Co., 22 N. Y. 276, Comstock, C. J., in speaking for the majority of the court, said: "It is also said, in order to render this doctrine less offensive to the reason and conscience, that the innocent dealer may, upon the voidness of the contract and a disaffirmance of it, recover back the value or consideration with which he has parted. This position necessarily concedes that the corporation, as a legal person, made the unauthorized contract, and received the money or value under and according to it, thus overthrowing the main objection to its liability to respond directly upon the contract. It also concedes the innocence of the other contracting party; thus, according to all the analogies of the law, refuting the only other objection (illegality) on which the absolute invalidity of such dealings is claimed to rest; for surely, after conceding that the corporation actually made the contract, it will not be contended that it can set up that it ought not to have made it, against an innocent person who has given up his money or property on the faith of the same contract. But I answer, further, that while in many cases the remedy by a suit in disaffirmance of the agreement and to recover back the consideration, will be sufficient to prevent wrong, in many others it will be entirely worthless. All collateral securities must fall to the ground with the principal contract, and its consequences and results. The present case will afford the best illustration. The defendants, in consideration of a trifling sum received from the plaintiff for fare, agreed to perform the services of carrying him in their cars perhaps some two hundred miles. By the negligent performance of that agreement, they inflicted on him injuries for which a jury has said the proper compensation is $2,500. This being the measure of damages for the breach of the contract, the absurdity, not less than the injustice, of confining him to the remedy of disaffirmance because the agreement was ultra vires, must be quite apparent."

See also Chicago Bldg. Soc. v.

Crowell, 65 Ill. 453, where Mr. Justice Scott, for the court, said that, "when corporations have received the benefit of a contract, if there is nothing in it that is contrary to public policy, there can be no just reason why they should not be required to perform it."

1. Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 530; St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 145 U. S. 409; Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 316; Union Trust Co. v. Illinois Midland R. Co., 117 U. S. 468; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 56; Buckeye Marble Co. v. Harvey, 92 Tenn. 115; James v. Eve, L. R., 6 H. L. 335; Taylor v. South & North Alabama R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 575.

"The executed dealings of corporations must be allowed to stand for and against both the parties, when the plainest rules of good faith so require." Parish v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. 509, per Comstock, C. J.

"In many instances, where an invalid contract, which the parties to it might have avoided or refused to perform, has been fully performed on both sides, whereby money has been paid or property changed hands, the courts have refused to sustain an action for the recovery of the property or the money so transferred." Miller, J., in Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71.

In Holmes, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Holmes, etc., Metal Co., 127 N. Y. 252; 24 Am. St. Rep. 448, it was held that where a corporation has power, with the consent of all its stockholders, to sell its plant to another corporation and to retire from business, taking payment in the stock of the latter—if the fact that the stock so taken was issued to, and is held by, an officer of the vendor, as trustee, renders the transaction ultra vires—after it has been completed, and the title to the stock taken in payment vested in the vendor, it may sell and dispose of the same, and a purchaser from it may not, in an action to recover the purchase price, avail himself of the defense of ultra vires.

of the corporation; in such cases, the state alone may object to the unauthorized corporate action.¹

2. Contracts Expressly Forbidden or Contrary to Public Policy.—The effect to be given contracts in violation of express statutory provision depends upon the intention of the legislature, to be found by the application of the ordinary rules of statutory construction. It may be stated as a general rule, that if a statute expressly prohibits a corporation from making a certain contract, such contract is void, although not declared in terms to be so; and that it is void may be pleaded in a suit brought directly and exclusively upon the contract.²

For instance, a statute prohibiting a corporation from issuing

1. Shewalter v. Pirner, 55 Mo. 218; Coleman v. San Rafael Turnpike R. Co., 49 Cal. 517; Natoma Water, etc., Co. v. Clarkin, 14 Cal. 544; Natchez v. Mallery, 54 Miss. 499; Utley v. Clark Gardner Lode Min. Co., 4 Colo. 369; Whitman Gold, etc., Min. Co. v. Baker, 3 Nev. 386; Barnes v. Suddard, 117 Ill. 237; Alexander v. Tolleston Club, 110 Ill. 65; Leazure v. Hillegas, 7 S. & R. (Pa.) 313; Vermont, etc., R. Co. v. Vermont Cent. R. Co., 34 Vt. 1; Smith v. Sheeley, 12 Wall. (U. S.) 358; Lehman v. Warner, 61 Ala. 455; Union Mut. L. Ins. Co. v. McMillen, 24 Ohio St. 67; Chambers v. St. Louis, 29 Mo. 543; Worcester v. Eaton, 13 Mass. 371; 7 Am. Dec. 155; Com. v. Wilder, 127 Mass. 1; Holton v. Lake County, 55 Ind. 194; Land v. Coffman, 50 Mo. 243; Davidson College v. Chambers, 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 253; Goundie v. Northampton Water Co., 7 Pa. St. 233; Myers v. Croft, 13 Wall. (U. S.) 291; Com. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 114 Pa. St. 346; Camden, etc., R. Co. v. May's Landing, etc., R. Co., 48 N. J. L. 562; Fritts v. Palmer, 132 U. S. 282; Farmers, etc., Bank v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 17 Wis. 372; Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 370; Mapes v. Scott, 94 Ill. 379; Warner v. De Witt County Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; Runyan v. Coster, 14 Pet. (U. S.) 122; Banks v. Poitvaux, 3 Rand. (Va.) 136; 15 Am. Dec. 706; McIndoe v. St. Louis, 10 Mo. 577; Kelley v. Peoples Transp. Co., 3 Oregon 189; Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Lewis, 53 Iowa 101; Barrow v. Nashville, etc., Turnpike Co., 9 Humph. (Tenn.) 304; Mallett v. Simpson, 94 N. Car. 37; 55 Am. Dec. 595; Ayers v. South Australia Banking Co., L. R., 3 C. P. 548; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R., 7 C. P. 43; Heiskell v. Chickasaw Lodge, 87 Tenn.

686; Sistare v. Best, 88 N. Y. 527; Beecher v. Marquette, etc., Rolling Mill Co., 45 Mich. 103.

In Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 263, Swayne, J., speaking for the court, said: "Where a corporation is incompetent by its charter to take title to real estate, a conveyance to it is not void, but only voidable, and the sovereign alone can object. It is valid until assailed in a direct proceeding for that purpose."

In Hough v. Cook County Land Co., 73 Ill. 23; 24 Am. Rep. 230, it was held that where a corporation, created by the laws of that state, is empowered by its charter to purchase, and receive conveyances for, and hold titles to, lands, but is prohibited from so purchasing and holding for other than a prescribed purpose, a deed executed to it, by one having capacity to convey, will vest the title in the corporation, and the question as to whether it has exceeded its powers in making the purchase, is one between the corporation and the commonwealth, with which the grantor has no concern.

2. New York State L. & T. Co. v. Helmer, 77 N. Y. 64; In re Jaycox, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 209. In this latter case the People's Safe Deposit and Savings Institution, incorporated by special act (New York Laws 1868, ch. 816), opened an office for banking, at which it carried on a regular banking business, not being authorized by its charter to do so, but being forbidden by the constitution and laws of the state under heavy penalties. In the course of its business, it discounted for certain parties, afterwards bankrupt, certain notes, which were not paid, and which it proved in the district court as claims against them. It was held that the notes were void; and further that a notes, "unless the same be made payable on demand and without interest," renders void notes issued in contravention of it, even in the hands of a bona fide holder.¹

So, notes discounted by a corporation forbidden by a general statute to do a banking business, are void.²

But to the general rule above stated, there are several well recognized exceptions: First, where the inhibition is intended for the benefit and protection of a particular class of persons interested in the corporation, as, for instance, the shareholders, the claim for the money loaned was not a valid one, because the transaction was illegal, and the corporation had no power to loan money on personal security, and its charter prescribed how its funds should be invested.

General Statutory Prohibitions.—Statutes prohibiting corporations from transacting business for other purposes than those named in their charters are merely declaratory of the common law, and there is no reason for supposing that the legislature intended them to have greater force and effect than the common-law rule. 2 Morawetz Corp. (2d ed.), § 658; Farmers Nat. Bank v. Sutton Mfg. Co., 52 Fed. Rep. 191.

1. Root v. Godard, 3 McLean (U. S.) 102; Hayden v. Davis, 3 McLean (U. S.) 276; Weed v. Snow, 3 McLean (U. S.) 265; Root v. Wallace, 4 McLean (U. S.) 8; Davis v. Bank of River Raisin, 4 McLean (U. S.) 387.

2. In re Jaycox, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 209; Philadelphia Loan Co. v. Tower, 13 Conn. 249.

In Talmage v. Pell, 7 N. Y. 328, a trust company, in violation of general laws, bought stock of the plaintiff, giving notes secured by an assignment of a mortgage in payment. It was held that both note and assignment were void.

Utica Insurance Cases.—New York Restraining Act.—The effect of the New York Restraining Act upon contracts made in violation of its provisions, was considered in a series of cases known as the Utica Insurance Cases, beginning with the case of Utica Ins. Co. v. Scott, 19 Johns. (N. Y.) 1. In these cases the company had, in violation of the act carried on the business of discounting paper, exercising in respect thereto ordinary banking powers. And it was held that the securities taken on such discounts were void, but that the money loaned was recoverable. The court in the case just mentioned observed that: "The lending money is not declared to be void, and, therefore, whenever money has been lent, it may be recovered, although the security itself is void," citing among other authorities the case of Robinson v. Bland, 2 Burr. 1077. This distinction was adopted and followed in subsequent cases. Utica Ins. Co. v. Kip, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 20; Utica Ins. Co. v. Cadwell, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 369; Utica Ins. Co. v. Bloodgood, 4 Wend. (N. Y.) 652; Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 437; 35 Am. Rep. 531; New York Firemen Ins. Co. v. Ely, 2 Cow. (N. Y.) 678; New York State L. & T. Co. v. Helmer, 77 N. Y. 68. While these cases have been criticised, they have never been overruled. See Curtis v. Leavitt, 15 N. Y. 97.

In New Hope Delaware Bridge Co. v. Poughkeepsie Silk Co., 25 Wend. (N. Y.) 650, the court, by Nelson, C. J., said: "Whether the doctrine of these cases is well founded, and may be upheld upon established principles or not, or whether the result was not materially influenced by the peculiar phraseology and powers of the charter of the Utica Insurance Company in respect to which they arose, it is not necessary at present to examine. I am free to say, in either respect, I should have great difficulty in assenting to them." And in Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 166; 67 Am. Dec. 132, Selden, J., said: "These cases have never been overruled, and yet, I think I may say they have generally been regarded with some suspicion as to their soundness. . . . There is undoubtedly great difficulty in reconciling these cases with the settled rules in regard to illegal contracts." And the court, in In re Jaycox, 12 Blatchf. (U. S.) 209, says: "These cases are distinguished from the present, and in a particular which has been referred to as constituting the possible ground upon which the decisions there made could be upheld, or, as I should better say, in the feature which depositors (of a bank or savings institution), the creditors, the subscribers (of a building society), the policy holders (of an insurance company), such effect will be given the contract as will best promote the interests of the favored class.¹

A statute prohibiting savings banks from lending their funds "on the security of names alone," being for the protection of depositors, will not prevent the bank from enforcing payment of a promissory note, whether the purchase was or was not in conformity with its provisions.²

So debtors to a bank may not avoid payment on the ground that less than the required number of its directory discounted their notes.³ Again, it is no defense to a note made and indorsed only by one and the same party, that the plaintiff purchased it of a bank forbidden by statute to discount paper without at least two names to it—the provision being obviously intended for the protection and security of the stockholders and was deemed to furnish the ground on which those cases proceeded; namely, that that company had a general power to lend money, and, therefore, though it received therefor a void security, it could reclaim the loan. Without assenting to the reasoning by which this result was reached, it is sufficient to say that the premises are wanting in the present case."

In Beach v. Fulton Bank, 3 Wend. (N. Y.) 578, decided contemporaneously with some of the Utica insurance decisions, Savage, C. J., states the ground of those decisions as indicated in the case just preceding. He says: "If those cases are critically examined, it will be seen that the right of the plaintiffs in those cases to recover is placed upon the power given them by their charter to loan money." And he declares that "the Hudson Insurance Company has no such power, and therefore the contract of loan is void, as well as the security, and for the same reason, namely, the want of capacity to make such contract either by parol or by taking a note."

1. Mott v. U. S. Trust Co., 19 Barb. (N. Y.) 568; Little v. O'Brien, 9 Mass. 423; Prescott Nat. Bank v. Butler, 157 Mass. 548; National Pemberton Bank v. Porter, 125 Mass. 333; 28 Am. Rep. 235; Atlas Nat. Bank v. Savery, 127 Mass. 75; Merchants Nat. Bank v. Hanson, 33 Minn. 40; 53 Am. Rep. 5, overruling First Nat. Bank v. Pierson, 24 Minn. 140; 31 Am. Rep. 341; Holden v. Upton, 134 Mass. 177; National Bank v. Continental L. Ins. Co., 41 Ohio St. 1; Germantown Farmer's

Mut. Ins. Co. v. Dheim, 43 Wis. 420; 28 Am. Rep. 549.

In Bowditch v. New England L. Ins. Co., 141 Mass. 292; 55 Am. Rep. 474, the court, in referring to the statute which in that case prohibited loans by an insurance company to its officers, said: "It is designed to forbid officers, who are charged with the duty of investing the funds of the corporation, borrowing of themselves, and thus to prevent the risk of the funds being invested by them, under the promptings of self-interest, upon insufficient security. In other words, the purpose is to protect the corporation and the policy holders from the dishonesty or self-interest of the officers. It is intended as a shield to the corporation. To construe it as making the promises of the officers, who borrow money in violation of its provisions, void, would defeat the main purpose of its enactment, and would visit the consequences of the unlawful act of the officers, not upon themselves, but upon the corporation for whose protection the statute was made. It would require a plain expression of legislative intention to lead us to such a construction."

2. Farmington Sav. Bank v. Fall, 71 Me. 49.

3. Smith v. State Bank, 18 Ind. 327. Here it was said that the provisions in the charter as to what shall constitute a quorum to do business are for the security and protection of the stockholders and bill holders; but the bank may endanger its franchises by disregarding them. To the same effect are Bradley v. State Bank, 20 Ind. 528;

depositors of the bank, it should not be so construed as to operate adversely to their interests.¹

Upon this reasoning a national bank which has loaned money upon the security of real estate in violation of the National Bank Act, may enforce both the loan and the security taken therefor.²

And the provision in the same act prohibiting a bank organized thereunder from lending to any person a greater amount than ten per cent. of its capital stock, being obviously intended for the protection of its depositors, does not prevent the bank from recovering the money loaned and enforcing any security taken therefor.³

In all of these cases, the right of the government to forfeit the charter of the corporation is deemed a sufficient check and safeguard against the violation of the provisions; to declare the contracts void would be to defeat the aim and spirit of the enactments and work a hardship upon those for whose benefit and protection they were intended.⁴

Second, when the statute contains a specification of the conse-

Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 4 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 75; 4 Am. Dec. 470.

1. Roberts v. Lane, 64 Me. 108; 18 Am. Rep. 242.

2. See NATIONAL BANKS, vol. 16, p. 164 et seq.; Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 621; National Bank v. Whitney, 103 U. S. 99; Swope v. Leffingwell, 105 U. S. 3; Fortier v. New Orleans Nat. Bank, 112 U. S. 439; Reynolds v. Crawfordsville Bank, 112 U. S. 405; Columbia Nat. Bank's Appeal, 16 W. N. Cas. (Pa.) 357; Graham v. National Bank, 32 N. J. Eq. 804; Thornton v. National Exch. Bank, 71 Mo. 221; Winton v. Little, 94 Pa. St. 64; Oldham v. First Nat. Bank, 85 N. Car. 240; Scofield v. State Nat. Bank, 9 Neb. 316; 31 Am. Rep. 412; Warner v. DeWitt County Nat. Bank, 4 Ill. App. 305; Wroten v. Armat, 31 Gratt. (Va.) 228; Simons v. First Nat. Bank, 93 N. Y. 269; Wherry v. Hale, 77 Mo. 20; Mapes v. Scott, 88 Ill. 352.

Purchase of Note by Bank Under Power to "Discount and Negotiate."—In Prescott Nat. Bank v. Butler, 157 Mass. 548, it was held, that conceding that under United States Stat. (1864), ch. 106, § 8, empowering national banks to "discount and negotiate" notes, the purchase of a note by such a bank is ultra vires, the maker or indorser cannot defend on the ground that the bank has obtained no title.

3. Gold Min. Co. v. National Bank, 96 U. S. 640; Wyman v. Citizens' Nat. Bank, 29 Fed. Rep. 734; O'Hare v.

Second Nat. Bank, 77 Pa. St. 96; Shoemaker v. National Mechanics Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 416; Pangborn v. West Lake, 36 Iowa 546; Stewart v. Maryland's Nat. Union Bank, 2 Abb. (U. S.) 424; Vining v. Bricker, 14 Ohio St. 331; Mills County Nat. Bank v. Perry, 72 Iowa 15; 2 Am. St. Rep. 228.

In Union Gold Min. Co. v. Rocky Mt. Nat. Bank, 96 U. S. 642, the court said: "We do not think that public policy requires, or that Congress intended, that an excess of loans beyond the proportions specified should enable the borrower to avoid the payment of the money actually received by him. This would be to injure the interest of creditors, stockholders, and all who have an interest in the safety and security of the bank."

4. Union Nat. Bank v. Matthews, 98 U. S. 629. Here it was said: "We cannot believe it was meant that stockholders, and perhaps depositors and other creditors, should be punished and the borrower rewarded, by giving success to this defense whenever the offensive fact shall occur. The impending danger of an ouster and dissolution was, we think, the check, and none other contemplated by Congress."

In Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 373, the bank was a Pennsylvania corporation, and had taken a mortgage upon real estate in New York. A bill of foreclosure was filed in the latter state. The answer set up as a defense, "that by the act of quences which shall follow a violation of its provisions, and they are other than that the contract shall be void, the contract is valid and enforceable.¹

A provision in the charter of a bank prohibiting any officer, under penalty of fine or imprisonment, from borrowing money from the bank, belongs to this class. In such case, the officer is not exempt from liability for money loaned to him in violation of the provision.²

So also is the provision of the National Bank Act prohibiting banks organized thereunder from charging more than a specified rate of interest on loans or discounts, under penalty of forfeiting the whole interest. Here the penalty named in the statute is the only one intended, and the loans are recoverable.³

And a prohibition in the charter of a bank against demanding more than a certain rate of interest has no more effect upon a note or other security given for a loan made contrary thereto, than the ordinary laws of the state against usury have upon contracts made by individuals.⁴

incorporation the plaintiffs were not authorized to take a mortgage, except to secure a debt previously contracted in the course of its dealings; and here the money was loaned after the bond and mortgage were executed." Chancellor Kent, in delivering judgment, said: "Perhaps it would be sufficient for this case that the plaintiffs are a duly incorporated body, with authority to contract and take mortgages and judgments; and if they should pass the exact line of their power, it would rather belong to the government of Pennsylvania to exact a forfeiture of their charter, than for this court in this collateral way to decide a question of misuser by setting aside a just and bona fide contract."

1. Harris v. Runnels, 12 How. (U. S.) 80; Ossipee Hosiery Mfg. Co. v. Canney, 54 N. H. 295; Connecticut River Sav. Bank v. Fiske, 60 N. H. 363; Faneuil Hall Bank v. Bank of Brighton, 16 Gray (Mass.) 534; Taylor v. Empire State Sav. Bank (Supreme Ct.) 21 N. Y. Supp. 643; Pratt v. Short, 79 N. Y. 449; 35 Am. Rep. 531. In this last case it was said by the court: "In view of the special language of the Restraining Act and the specification of the consequences which should follow the unlawful discount of commercial paper, there is great force in the suggestion that the legislature regarded the particular penalty imposed, and the remedy of quo warranto, or by an action in equity to restrain the exercise by a corporation of unauthorized powers as a sufficient protection against corporations or individuals unlawfully engaged in the business of discounting paper, and that it was not intended that they should also forfeit all claim to money loaned or advanced upon the prohibited security."

2. Lester v. Howard Bank, 33 Md. 558; 3 Am. Rep. 211. See also Bowditch v. New England L. Ins. Co., 141 Mass. 292; 55 Am. Rep. 474.

3. Oates v. First Nat. Bank, 100 U. S. 250; Bank of U. S. v. Waggener, 9 Pet. (U. S.) 399; Smith v. Exchange Bank, 26 Ohio St. 141; First Nat. Bank v. Garlinghouse, 22 Ohio St. 192; Lucas v. Government Nat. Bank, 78 Pa. St. 228; 21 Am. Rep. 17; First Nat. Bank v. Childs, 133 Mass. 248; Stephens v. Monongahela Bank, 88 Pa. St. 157; Lazear v. National Union Bank, 52 Md. 78; 36 Am. Rep. 355. See also Bandel v. Isaac, 13 Md. 224.

In Fleckner v. U. S. Bank, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 355, Story, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The taking of interest by the bank beyond the sum authorized by the charter would doubtless be a violation of its charter, for which a remedy might be applied by the government; but as the act of Congress does not declare that it shall avoid the contract, it is not perceived how the original defendant could avail himself of this ground to defeat a recovery."

4. Farmers' Bank v. Burchard, 33 Vt. 344; Bank of Middlebury v. Bling-

Corporate contracts which contravene public policy are, like similar contracts between individuals, not enforceable; such contracts are more than ultra vires; they are illegal. Such are agreements for compensation for procuring a contract from the government to furnish its supplies,¹ or for lobby services,² or to influence directors of a corporation to act for the benefit of others and to the prejudice of the corporation,³ or to grant to individuals certain privileges in consideration of the withdrawal by them of their opposition to the passage of an act affecting the interests of the corporation,⁴ or whereby a corporation, collecting the lawful fees due to public officers, is to retain a portion thereof in consideration of forbearance of efforts to procure the repeal of the law by which the offices were created,⁵ or which tend to prevent fair and healthy competition.⁶

ham, 33 Vt. 621; Rock River Bank v. Sherwood, 10 Wis. 230; 78 Am. Dec. 666; Grand Gulf Bank v. Archer, 8 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 151; Planters' Bank v. Sharp, 4 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 75; 43 Am. Dec. 470; Philadelphia Loan Co. v. Towner, 13 Conn. 249; Manchester Com. Bank v. Nolan, 7 How. (Miss.) 508.

1. Providence Tool Co. v. Norris, 2 Wall. (U. S.) 45.

2. Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 314.

3. Bliss v. Matteson, 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 335. In this case, the agreement between the plaintiff and defendants contained an engagement on the part of the latter to control the action of directors and trustees of a railroad company, and to cause them to agree by vote to pay a claim of the plaintiff on account of past due coupons on bonds of the company, without reference to the legality of the same, or to the interest of their cestuis que trustent, in consideration that the plaintiff should use his influence to induce the bondholders to fund their coupons. The agreement was adjudged void as being against public policy. The court used this language: "The question is, whether this agreement is among that class which is deemed contrary to public policy, and, therefore, illegal and void. The law upon this subject inculcates a high morality, and the courts, in administering the rule, from time to time, so far from relaxing it, have constantly shown a disposition to apply it with increasing vigor. The rule is, that an agreement which is designed, or which, in its nature and effect, tends to lead persons who are charged with the performance of a trust or duties for the benefit of others, to violate or betray them, is contrary to public policy and void. There is no difference in principle, whether the trust which it is meant to pervert is public or private, nor is it material that nothing actually fraudulent or illegal was done under the contract. It is enough that such is the tendency of it." The following cases are cited and relied upon: Fuller v. Dame, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 472; Davidson v. Seymour, 1 Bosw. (N. Y.) 88; Satterlee v. Jones, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 102; Devlin v. Brady, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 518; Spinks v. Davis, 32 Miss. 152; Marshall v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 16 How. (U. S.) 314.

4. Pingry v. Washburn, 1 Aik. (Vt.) 264; 15 Am. Dec. 676. But it is otherwise where the opposition is of a private character, and merely for the protection of purely private interests, and is withdrawn for a consideration, and there is no design to conceal the arrangement from the law-makers. Low v. Connecticut, etc., Rivers R. Co., 46 N. H. 284.

5. Reed v. Pepper Tobacco Warehouse Co., 2 Mo. App. 82.

6. State v. Hartford, etc., R. Co., 29 Conn. 538. Here the H. & N. H. railroad company was chartered to construct and operate a road from Hartford to the navigable waters of New Haven harbor. Subsequently a steamboat company was chartered to run in connection with the road to New York—the two constituting a route of great convenience to the public. After the road was built and used in connection with the line of steamers for several years, the railroad company constructed a track diverging from the original track at a point a mile and a

3. Contracts Unfitting Corporations for Performance of Public Duties.—Corporations established for objects quasi public, such as railroad, canal, telegraph, turnpike and gas companies, to which the right of eminent domain and other extraordinary privileges are granted in order to enable them to accommodate the public, may not, without distinct legislative authority, make any alienation, absolute or conditional, either of the general franchise to be a corporation, or of the subordinate franchise to manage and carry on its corporate business, without which its function to be a corporation can have little more than a nominal existence. They cannot thus devolve upon others duties, privileges, and powers which were conferred upon them for the public advantage; and all contracts and transactions by which this is attempted, are ultra vires and void. Nor can such corporations assume the ownership and management of similar enterprises, without express legislative authority. The corporate charter not only grants rights, it also imposes duties; an acceptance of those rights is an assumption of those duties. As it is a contract which binds the state not to interfere with those rights, so likewise, it is one which binds the corporation not to abandon the discharge of those duties. It is unlike a deed or patent which vests in the grantee or patentee not only title, but full power of alienation; but it is more—it is a contract, the obligations of which neither party, state or corporation, can, without the consent of the other, abandon.¹

half from its terminus at tide water, and running to the depot of the N. Y. and N. H. railroad company in the city of New Haven, and discontinued the running of passenger trains to the original terminus at tide-water. This was done under a contract with the last named railroad company by which it was to prevent the extension of a certain railroad chartered by the legislature which would interfere with the H. & N. H. road, and the N. Y. & N. H. road was to secure an advantage over the line of steamboats in competing for public travel. The contract was declared void as against public policy.

1. Beman v. Rufford, 1 Sim. N. S. 550; 6 Eng. L. & Eq. 106; Great Northern, etc., R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 9 Hare 313; Winch v. Birkenhead, etc., R. Co., 13 Eng. L. & Eq. 506; Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co. v. Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co., 1 Sim. N. S. 110; MacGregor v. Dover R. Co., 16 Eng. L. & Eq. 180; East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 775; 73 E. C. L. 775; Johnson v. Shrewsbury, etc., R. Co., 3 De G. M. & G. 914; Staffordshire, etc., Canal Co. v. Birmingham Canal, 1 H. L. 254;

Rochdale Canal Co. v. Radcliffe, 18 Q. B. 287; 83 E. C. L. 287; Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 24; Oregon Steam Nav. Co. v. Winsor, 20 Wall. (U. S.) 64; State v. Consolidated Coal Co., 46 Md. 1; Tippecanoe County, etc., v. LaFayette, etc., R. Co., 50 Ind. 85; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 86 N. Y. 107; Troy, etc., R. Co. v. Kerr, 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 581; Abbott v. Johnstown, etc., R. Co., 80 N. Y. 27; 36 Am. Rep. 572; Atlantic, etc., Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 1 McCrary (U. S.) 541; Hamilton v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 49 Fed. Rep. 412; Stockton v. Central R. Co., 50 N. J. Eq. 54; Singleton v. Southwestern R. Co., 70 Ga. 464; 48 Am. Rep. 574; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. Morris, 67 Tex. 692; Archer v. Terre Haute, etc., R. Co., 102 Ill. 493; Roper v. McWhorter, 77 Va. 214; Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Bedford, etc., R. Co., 81* Pa. St. 104; Ohio, etc., R. Co. v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 5 Am. L. Reg. N. S. 733; Sapp v. Northern Central R. Co., 51 Md. 126; Rogers Locomotive, etc., Wks v. Erie R. Co., 20 N. J. Eq. 386; New Orleans Gas Co. v. Louisiana Light Co., 115 U. S. 650; Louisville Gas Co. v. Citizens' Gas Co., 115 U. S. 683;

Shepard v. Milwaukee Gas Light Co., 6 Wis. 539; 70 Am. Dec. 479; Chicago Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Peoples' Gas Light, etc., Co., 121 Ill. 530; 2 Am. St. Rep. 124; St. Louis v. St. Louis Gas Light Co., 70 Mo. 69; West Virginia Transp. Co. v. Ohio River Pipe Line Co., 22 W. Va. 600; 46 Am. Rep. 527; Western Union Tel. Co. v. American, etc., Tel. Co., 65 Ga. 160; 38 Am. Rep. 781.

In Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71, the court, by Mr. Justice Miller, in declaring ultra vires and void a lease by a railroad company, of all its road, rolling stock and franchises, for which there was no authority in the charter, said, "that where a corporation, like a railroad company, has granted to it by charter, a franchise intended in a large measure to be exercised for the public good, the due performance of those functions being the consideration of the public grant, any contract which disables the corporation from performing those functions—which undertakes, without the consent of the state, to transfer to others the rights and powers conferred by the charter, and to relieve the grantees of the burden which it imposes—is a violation of the contract with the state and is void as against public policy."

The doctrine is asserted with remarkable clearness in the opinion of the court delivered by Mr. Justice Campbell in New York, etc., R. Co. v. Winans, 17 How. (U. S.) 30. In this case, the corporation was chartered to build and maintain a railroad in Pennsylvania by the legislature of that state. The stock in it was taken by a Maryland corporation, and the entire management of the road was committed to the latter, which appointed all the officers and agents and furnished the rolling stock. In reference to this state of things, and its effect upon the liability of the Pennsylvania corporation for infringing a patent of the defendant in error, Winans, the court said: "This conclusion (argument) implies that the duties imposed upon the plaintiff (in error) by the charter are fulfilled by the construction of the road, and that, by alienating its right to use and its power of control and supervision, it may avoid further responsibility. But these acts involve an overturn of the relations which the charter has arranged between the legislature and the community. Important franchises were conferred upon the corporation to enable it to provide facilities for communication and intercourse required for public convenience. Corporate management and control over these were prescribed, and corporate responsibility for their insufficiency provided as a remuneration for their grant. The corporation cannot absolve itself from the performance of its obligations without the consent of the legislature."

And in Black v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 22 N. J. Eq. 390, Zabriskie, Ch., says: "It may be considered as settled that a corporation cannot lease or alienate any franchise, or any property necessary to perform its functions and duties to the state, without legislative authority." Here a New Jersey railroad corporation, without express authority, undertook to lease to another company for twenty years its railroad, with all its appurtenances and franchises, including the right to do the business of a railroad and collect the proper tolls. The contract of lease was confirmed by a vote of the stockholders. The lessor was authorized to cancel the lease upon giving three months' notice, but in that event was to be liable to pay the damages incurred by the other party by reason of such action. Under this provision the railroad company ended the contract and resumed possession of the leased road. The suit was by the lessee for the damages provided for, and it was held that no recovery could be had because the contract was ultra vires.

In Oregon R., etc., Co. v. Oregonian R. Co., 130 U. S. 1, it was held that a general law of Oregon authorizing companies to organize themselves by written articles of association, filed with the secretary of state, for "any lawful enterprise, business, pursuit, or occupation" specified in the articles, including "making or constructing any railroad" and "to purchase, possess, and dispose of such real and personal property as may be necessary and convenient to carry into effect the object of the incorporation," did not authorize a railroad company to be incorporated, either for leasing its road to another corporation, or for taking leases from other corporations of their roads, although these objects were included in its articles of association; and therefore, that, without further and express authority from the legislature, a lease for ninety-six years by one railroad company of its whole road and franchises to another such corporation, was ultra vires and void, and would not sustain an action by the lessor against the lessee for the rent stipulated in the lease.

In State v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 24 Neb. 161; 8 Am. St. Rep. 164, Maxwell, J., for the court, said: "To justify the defendant in leasing its line to the B. & M. R. R. Company, it must be able to point to the exact statute granting such authority, which it has failed to do. Pennsylvania R. Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 118 U. S. 294. In the opinion of the majority of the court in that case, it is said: 'We think it may be stated as the just result of these cases, and on sound principle, that unless specially authorized by its charter, or aided by some other legislative action, a railroad company cannot, by lease or any other contract, turn over to another company for a long period of time, its road and all its appurtenances, the use of its franchises, and the exercise of its powers; nor can any other railroad company, without similar authority, make a contract to receive and operate such road, franchises, and property of the first corporation, and that such a contract is not among the ordinary powers of a railroad company, and is not to be presumed from the usual grant of powers in a railroad charter.' This, in our view, is a correct statement of the law."

"It is too well settled to admit of doubt that a corporation cannot disable itself by contract from performing the public duties which it has undertaken, and by agreement compel itself to make public accommodation or convenience subservient to its private interests." Per Fuller, C. J., in Gibbs v. Consolidated Gas Co., 130 U. S. 396.

A contract by which a horse-railway corporation transfers the entire control of its road, with all its franchises, receiving in return only a fixed rent, paid in the form of a dividend to its stockholders, is ultra vires and void. Middlesex R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 115 Mass. 347.

In Pearce v. Madison, etc., R. Co., 21 How. (U. S.) 441, it was held that where two separate corporations were created to make railroads, they had no right to unite and conduct their business under one management; nor had they a right to establish a steamboat line to run in connection with the road, and notes given for the purchase of a steamboat could not be recovered upon.

A street-railway company has no power to mortgage its franchise, road, or property, without legislative authority, and under Massachusetts Statutes (1864), ch. 229, a mortgage by such a corporation of practically all of its property, without such authority, is void. Richardson v. Sibley, 11 Allen (Mass.) 65; 87 Am. Dec. 700. See also Com. v. Smith, 10 Allen (Mass.) 455; 87 Am. Dec. 672.

In American Union Tel. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 1 McCreary (U. S.) 188, certain contracts entered into by a railroad company assigning a large part of its franchise and alienating property which was necessary to the performance of its obligations and duties to the government and the public, were adjudged ultra vires.

A contract whereby a railroad company undertakes to grant to a single company the sole right to construct and maintain lines of telegraph along its road is ultra vires and void. Pacific Postal Tel. Cable Co. v. Western Union Tel. Co., 50 Fed. Rep. 493.

In Stewart's Appeal, 56 Pa. St. 413, a company was authorized to build a railroad, but failing to obtain the means necessary, contracted with an individual to build a railroad solely for his own use on a portion of their route. It was held that the company had no power to make such a contract, and the individual could not build the road.

A contract to pay certain sums for the use of a railway bridge across the Mississippi river between Illinois and Iowa, is not ultra vires of a railroad corporation of Illinois or Pennsylvania, whose road connects by means of intervening roads with the bridge as part of a continuous line of transportation. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co. v. Keokuk, etc., Bridge Co., 131 U. S. 371.

And a railroad company having the right to construct a particular line of railroad, with the general power to buy all lines of property, of whatever nature or kind, may purchase from another company a road built upon that line, provided the latter company has power to sell and dispose of the same. Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 468.

A contract whereby a railroad company lets another company into joint possession of a portion of its lines for the period of nine hundred and ninety-nine years at an agreed rental, is not

These principles have no application to corporations of a strictly private character, such as those established for ordinary manufacturing and trading purposes; they, like a partnership or an individual, may sell or lease their property to another corporation.¹

4. Contracts Ultra Viros Because of Facts Peculiarly Within Knowledge and Intention of Corporation.—When a corporation is not authorized to issue negotiable paper under any circumstances, such paper is void, not only in the hands of the original payee, but in those of any subsequent holder as well; this, for the reason that all persons dealing with a corporation are bound to take notice of the extent of its charter powers.²

But if the corporation is authorized to give notes for any purpose, the defense of ultra vires will not be available to it, in a suit by a bona fide indorsee of its negotiable instruments, although the particular contract might have been really unauthorized; the reason being that the corporation, by giving the note, has virtually represented that it was given for some legitimate purpose, and the indorsee could not be presumed to know the contrary. This doctrine is applied to commercial paper made by a corporaultra vires, where such joint possession does not interfere with the present use of such lines by the company that owns them. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 47 Fed. Rep. 15.

A corporation authorized to sell its franchises is authorized to mortgage them. Willamette Mfg. Co. v. Bank of British Columbia, 119 U. S. 191.

1. Holmes, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Holmes, etc., Metal Co., 127 N. Y. 252; 24 Am. St. Rep. 448; Evans v. Boston Heating Co., 157 Mass. 37; Treadwell v. Salisbury Mfg. Co., 7 Gray (Mass.) 393; Andesco Oil Co. v. North American, etc., Co., 66 Pa. St. 375; Lauman v. Lebanon Valley R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 42. See also Central Transp. Co. v. Pullman's Car Co., 139 U. S. 50.

It is competent for an irrigating company, incorporated under the laws of Kansas, to construct and operate a canal for irrigation, water works, and manufacturing purposes, with the assent of its stockholders, to sell and convey to a similar company its right of way, canal, personal and real property, provided this is done in good faith, and not for the purposes of delaying or defrauding creditors. State v. Western Irrigating Canal Co., 40 Kan. 96; 10 Am. St. Rep. 166.

But a contract by a corporation created under the laws of the State of Ohio, while solvent and flourishing, to sell its business, the greater part of the consideration being stock and bonds of another corporation to be organized to carry on the business, no emergency rendering the sale necessary for the protection of stockholders, is ultra vires, and not enforceable, as, under the laws of that state, one corporation may not, without express legislative authority, become the owner of stock in another. Eason v. Buckeye Brewing Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 156.

2. Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 58; 3 Am. Rep. 322; Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 289; Miner's Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 579; 99 Am. Dec. 30; Smead v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 11 Ind. 104.

Where a bank is prohibited by law from issuing any bill or note not payable on demand and without interest, under a penalty, any instrument issued in violation of the act is void. Hayden v. Davis, 3 McLean (U. S.) 276; Weed v. Snow, 3 McLean (U. S.) 265; Root v. Godard, 3 McLean (U. S.) 102.

In Dodge v. Memphis, 51 Fed. Rep. 165, where a town, in pursuance of statutory authority, subscribed for stock in a railroad, but without such authority issued negotiable bonds in payment therefor, the bonds were adjudged absolutely void, and suit was not allowed to be maintained on them upon the theory that they were valid as non-negotiable instruments.

tion for the accommodation of a third person when in the hands of a bona fide holder, who has taken it before maturity, on the faith of its being business paper.¹

And upon the same principle the defense of ultra vires has been disallowed to a corporation when sued for debts incurred in excess of the limit imposed by its charter.²

A corporation having power to contract for the purchase of Shares of capital stock issued beyond the limit fixed by charter are void. Scoville v. Thayer, 105 U. S. 148; McCord v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 13 Ind. 221; Oler v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 41 Md. 583; Mt. Holly, etc., Co.'s Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 513; People's Bank v. Kurtz, 99 Pa. St. 344; 44 Am. Rep. 112; Wright's Appeal, 99 Pa. St. 425. See generally Stock, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776.

1. Mechanics' Banking Assoc. v. New York, etc., Lead Co., 35 N. Y. 505, affirming 23 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 74; Lehigh Valley Coal Co. v. Welt Depere Agricultural Works, 63 Wis. 45; Credit Co. v. Howe Mach. Co., 54 Conn. 387; 1 Am. St. Rep. 123; Farmers', etc., Bank v. Empire Stone Dressing Co., 5 Bosw. (N. Y.) 275; Monument Nat. Bank v. Globe Works, 101 Mass. 57; 3 Am. Rep. 322; Bird v. Daggett, 97 Mass. 489; National Bank v. Young, 41 N. J. Eq. 531; Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 290, per Selden, J.; Miner's Ditch Co. v. Zellerbach, 37 Cal. 579; 99 Am. Dec. 30; Bailey v. M. E. Church, 71 Me. 475; Smead v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 11 Ind. 104.

In Auerbach v. LeSueur Mill Co., 28 Minn. 291; 41 Am. Rep. 285, it was held that the defendant corporation having authority to incur debts to a limited extent, and to issue negotiable notes therefor, the plaintiff, as a bona fide holder of the note in suit, might recover upon the same, although in this particular case the corporate indebtedness at the time the note was given exceeded the limits prescribed by the articles of association.

And in Wood v. Corry Water Works Co., 44 Fed. Rep. 146, the corporation having received and enjoyed the avails of its mortgage bonds, it was held that the plaintiffs could not assail their validity in the hands of bona fide purchasers, on the ground that, in contravention of statute, the amount of bonds issued exceeded one-half of the capital stock paid in.

In Balfour v. Ernest, 5 C. B. N. S. 601; 94 E. C. L. 599, where the holder knew of the circumstances under which the bill was accepted, he was held to notice that the acceptance was beyond the powers of the corporation and recovery was denied him.

In National Bank v. Young, 41 N. J. Eq. 535, the court said: "The general doctrine of the law is that where a corporation has power under any circumstances to issue negotiable paper, a bona fide holder has a right to presume that it was issued under the circumstances giving such requisite authority, and such paper is no more liable to be impeached for infirmity in the hands of such a holder than any other commercial paper. Gelpcke v. Dubuque, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 203; Marshall County v. Schenck, 5 Wall. (U. S.) 784; Hackensack Water Co. v. DeKay, 36 N. J. Eq. 548." See MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949; MUNICIPAL SECURITIES, vol. 15, p. 1204; and CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, p. 223, where the subject of the power and liability of corporations, public and private, respectively, in relation to commercial paper, is fully treated.

As railroad companies have general power to issue bonds, persons dealing therein, in the absence of notice, have the right to assume that all restrictions upon this power have been complied with. Ellsworth v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 98 N. Y. 553.

2. Ossipee Hosiery, etc., Mfg. Co. v. Canney, 54 N. H. 296; Connecticut River Sav. Bank v. Fiske, 60 N. H. 363; Humphrey v. Patrons Merc. Assoc., 50 Iowa 607; Auerbach v. LeSueur Mill Co., 28 Minn. 291; 41 Am. Rep. 285. But see Weber v. Spokane Nat. Bank, 50 Fed. Rep. 735.

"If a private corporation, under its governing statute, is limited in respect of the amount of indebtedness which it may incur, although a person to whom it proposes a contract by which it is to become indebted, will be bound to take notice of the statute creating the limit, yet he will not be bound to know whether the corporation has already incurred debts to the extent of goods, is bound by such a contract, although the goods may not be intended to be used for the purposes of the corporation, and this fact is known to the other party.¹

And a corporation having power to borrow money, may not evade payment of the same, even though the lender knew that the corporation would expend the money in prosecuting a business unauthorized by its charter, provided the business itself was free from any intrinsic immorality or illegality.²

If, however, it was a part of the agreement that the money loaned, or the goods purchased, should be used for an ultra vires purpose, or the lender or vendor has done anything in aid or furtherance of such purpose, he will be precluded from recovering.³

the limit, so as to exhaust its power; but, on the contrary, the proposal made to him for a contract creating an indebtedness is in itself a warranty that the power has not been exhausted; and it would be sanctioning the grossest fraud to allow the corporation to get the benefit of such a contract, and then repudiate the obligation of it, on the ground that its power had been exhausted when the contract was made." Judge Seymour D. Thompson, in Am. L. Rev., May-June, 1894, p. 386.

1. Effect of Knowledge of Unauthorized Application of Subject of Contract.—In re Contract Corporation, L. R., 8 Eq. 14; Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 162; 67 Am. Dec. 132. In this latter case stocks were sold to a banking corporation, which were intended by the latter for resale upon speculation. This was beyond the scope of the bank's charter powers. In reference to the contention that the vendor knew the object of the vendee in purchasing the stock, the court said: "It is contended by the counsel for the claimant that there is no evidence that the vendor, Morris Canal and Banking Company, had any knowledge of the object of the vendee in making the purchase. I shall, however, assume that they had such knowledge, because in the view I take of the subject it cannot affect the result."

2. Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656; Wright v. Hughes, 119 Ind. 324; 12 Am. St. Rep. 412; Thompson v. Lambert, 44 Iowa 239.

In Parish v. Wheeler, 22 N. Y. 502, the plaintiff, at the request of the corporation, advanced money to take up a draft accepted by the corporation for a part of the original purchase-money of a steamboat. It was held that the corporation could not escape liability on the ground that the purchase of the steamboat was ultra vires, although the plaintiff, knowing all the facts, advanced the money in pursuance and consummation of the purchase.

In Ex p. Credit Foncier, etc., L. R., 7 Ch. 161, two directors of company A were also directors of company B, and both companies employed the same solicitor. Company A was indebted to their contractor, but the debt was not payable immediately. The contractor had bought shares in the company and was pressed by the stockbrokers for the money. Company A agreed to advance him a certain sum, which sum it borrowed from company B, on the security of a mortgage. The loan was negotiated by one of the persons who was a director in both companies, and the mortgage was prepared by the solicitor who acted for both companies. Company A had authority to borrow money, but not to buy up their own shares. Both companies subsequently were wound up. It was held that company B was not affected by notice of any illegality in the purpose to which the money borrowed was to be applied, and that it was consequently entitled to prove against the estate of company A under the winding up.

3. Tracy v. Talmage, 14 N. Y. 162; 67 Am. Dec. 132; Franklin Co. v. Lewiston Sav. Inst., 68 Me. 43; 28 Am. Rep. 9; Wright v. Hughes, 119 Ind. 324; 12 Am. St. Rep. 412; Thompson v. Lambert, 44 Iowa 239. See also Soudheim v. Gilbert, 117 Ind. 71; 10 Am. St. Rep. 23; Lightfoot v. Tenant, 1 B. & P. 551; Cannan v. Bryce, 3 B. & Ald. 179; McKinnell v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 434.

The propositions of the text find support in a line of English cases regarding contracts for the sale of goods to be smuggled into that country, and other contracts of a similar nature. Thus, in Faikney v. Reynous, 4 Burr. 2069, the plaintiff and one of the defendants had been jointly concerned in stock jobbing, and the plaintiff, in contravention of an express statute, had advanced a certain sum of money in compounding certain differences, for one half of which defendants had given the bond upon which the action was brought. Upon demurrer to a plea setting up these facts, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover. Although this case differs from the others above cited in this section, yet the principle upon which it was decided is equally applicable; namely, that a party to a contract innocent in itself is not responsible for, nor affected by, the use which the other party may make of the subject of the contract.

The first of the cases in reference to smuggling is that of Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341, where the plaintiff, residing at Dunkirk, had sold to the defendant a quantity of tea, knowing that the latter intended to smuggle it into England, but had himself no concern in the smuggling. The action was brought for the price of the tea, and it was held, upon these facts, that the plaintiff could recover. The principle of the case is the same as that adopted in the case just mentioned: namely, that mere knowledge by the vendor of the unlawful intent did not make him a participant in the guilt of the purchaser. Lord Mansfield, who delivered the opinion in the case, says "The seller, indeed, knows what the buyer is going to do with the goods, but the interest of the vendor is totally at an end and his contract completed by the delivery of the goods." Where, however, the seller does any act which is calculated to facilitate the smuggling, he is regarded as particeps criminis, and cannot recover; as is shown by the subsequent cases of Biggs v. Lawrence, 3 T. R. 454; Clugas v. Penaluna, 4 T. R. 466; Waymell v. Reed, 5 T. R. 599. These were all cases where the plaintiff had sold goods to the defendant knowing that they were to be smuggled into England, and in each of them the plaintiff was non-suited, but they all differ from the case of Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341, just referred to, in this, that the plaintiff had in each of these three cases done some act in addition to the sale in aid and furtherance of the defendant's design to violate the revenue law, and the decision was in each case placed distinctly upon this ground. The language of Buller, J., in Waymell v. Reed, 5 T. R. 599, is very explicit. He observes: "In Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341, the seller did not assist the buyer in the smuggling. He merely sold the goods in the common and ordinary course of trade. But this case does not rest merely upon the circumstance of the plaintiff's knowledge of the use intended to be made of the goods; for he actually assisted the defendant in the act of smuggling by packing the goods up in a manner most convenient for that purpose. In each of the three cases just cited, special care is taken to guard against any inference that it was intended to impair the force of the decision in Holman v. Johnson, Cowp. 341. Indeed, that decision seems to have been uniformly followed by the courts in England from that day to the present. In 1835, the question again arose in Pellecat v. Angell, 2 C. M. & R. 317, where the court held that the plaintiff could recover the price of the goods sold to the defendant, although he knew at the time of the sale that they were bought to be smuggled into the country. Lord Abinger says: 'The distinction is, where he takes an actual part in the illegal adventure, as in packing the goods in prohibited parcels or otherwise, there he must take the consequences of his own act.' And again he observes: 'The plaintiff sold the goods; the defendant might smuggle them if he wished, or he might change his mind the next day. It does not at all import a contract of which the smuggling was an essential part.'"

In Hodgson v. Temple, 5 Taunt. 181, the plaintiffs, who were distillers, had sold spirituous liquors to the defendants, with full knowledge that the latter intended to retail them in express violation of the revenue law. It was insisted, in defense to an action brought for the purchase price of the liquors, that the plaintiffs were particeps criminis and could not recover. Mansfield, C. J., said: "This would be carrying the law much further than it has ever been carried. The merely selling goods, knowing that the buyer will make an illegal use of them, is not sufficient to deprive the vendor of his just right of payment; but to effect that, it is necessary that the vendor should be a sharer in the illegal transaction."

5. Contracts Executed in Unauthorized Manner.—As stated elsewhere in this article,¹ the term ultra vires has, in some instances, been used to designate corporate acts which, although within the powers granted, are performed in a manner different from that prescribed by the charter or by general law. Clearly, this is a misuse of the term; where the infirmity of the act does not consist in a want of corporate power to do it, but in the disregard of formalities prescribed, the material question is whether the prescription is mandatory or directory, and must be solved by the application of the ordinary rules of statutory construction. It may be here repeated that it is this indiscriminate use of the expression, with respect to cases different in their nature and principles, that has occasioned so much confusion, if not misapprehension, on this subject. Corporate contracts and transactions of the character here indicated have received full treatment elsewhere in this work, to which reference is now made.²

6. Contracts in Anticipation of Legislative Authority.—Contracts of corporations to do something, at the time not authorized, but conditioned upon obtaining legislative authority therefor, are valid, and their stipulations become enforceable after the passage of the act.³

V. PERSONAL LIABILITY OF DIRECTORS AND OFFICERS FOR ULTRA VIRES TRANSACTIONS.—When the directors and officers of a corporation engage in ultra vires transactions, they are personally liable to it for the resulting damages. This is true whether the act is expressly prohibited by the corporation's charter or by-laws, or is simply beyond the officers' authority, although within the corporation's charter powers. The directors and officers are agents of the corporation for which they act, and for their

1. See supra, this title, Definition and General Principles.

2. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 184; STATUTES, vol. 23, p. 140.

3. Contracts in Anticipation of Legislative Authority.—New Haven, etc., Co. v. Hayden, 107 Mass. 525; Portage County v. Wisconsin Cent. R. Co., 121 Mass. 460.

In Scottish North Eastern R. Co. v. Stewart, 3 Macq. H. L. Cas. 382, a railroad company had bound itself to purchase land, provided authority should be given to it by Parliament. Lord Wensleydale, in rendering judgment, observed: "No objection can, I think, be made, on the ultra vires doctrine, to a contract by a company who wish to alter one of the branches of their railroad, and are about to apply to Parliament for authority to do so, engaging to purchase land from a neighboring proprietor, if they should obtain their act."

In Norwich v. Norfolk R. Co., 4 El. & Bl. 410; 82 E. C. L. 396, Mr. Justice Erle says: "Although the works contracted for would have been unlawful without an act of Parliament, still, if the parties intended to obtain the act before the works were done, they would not intend to violate the law when the contract was made, nor violate it by doing the works according to the act."

So, in Taylor v. Chichester, etc., R. Co., L. R., 4 H. L. 628, it was held that an "agreement to arise and take effect on the passing of a bill then pending in Parliament, is to be regarded, by virtue of that stipulation as if it had been de facto made after the passing of the bill." And in Sussex R. Co. v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 19 N. J. Eq. 13, where a railroad company had made a contract relating to business "upon any future extension or branches," it was held that branches unauthorized transactions they are responsible to their principal, just as an agent of an individual is for the damage caused to his principal by his unauthorized acts.¹

Thus, the managers of a building and loan association are liable for losses from loans made on the personal security of the members in violation of a by-law limiting the amount of such loans.²

So the directors and trustees of a savings bank may be held liable for losses incurred by the violation of a law or provision of the charter regulating the investment of deposits.³

But where the ultra vires business is pursued for the benefit of the corporation, and it has the actual benefit thereof, and is so acquiesced in by the stockholders that it actually, though illegally, becomes the business of the corporation, it may not maintain an action against the officers for damages suffered therein. In other words, a corporation engaged in ultra vires dealings, may not sue, for damages suffered therein, the agents it employs to carry on the business. In such a case, the corporate agent would be protected, just as the agent of a copartnership who does business with the express or implied consent of the copartners, which is not authorized by the articles of copartnership.⁴

When the authority of the directors to do a particular act depends upon complicated questions of law, and they act in good faith, and use due care and skill to ascertain the precise extent of their powers, they will not be held liable if it turns out that the act is ultra vires.⁵

not then authorized, but subsequently allowed by the legislature, were included.

1. Holmes v. Willard, 125 N. Y. 75; North Hudson Mutual Bldg., etc., Assoc. v. Childs, 82 Wis. 460; Austin v. Daniels, 4 Den. (N. Y.) 299; Joint Stock Discount Co. v. Brown, L. R., 8 Eq. 381; In re Faure Electric Accumulator Co., L. R., 40 Ch. Div. 141; distinguishing Studdert v. Grosvenor, 33 Ch. Div. 528; Pickering v. Stephenson, L. R., 14 Eq. 322. See also OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, pp. 112, 118; BANKS AND BANKING, vol. 2, p. 114 et seq.

Ultra Vires Issue of Stock—Watered Stock.—As to the liability of corporate officers for an overissue or ultra vires issue of stock, and the issue of watered stock, see STOCK, vol. 23, pp. 619, 622.

2. Citizens Bldg. Assoc. v. Coriell, 34 N. J. Eq. 383. See generally, BUILDING AND LOAN ASSOCIATIONS, vol. 2, p. 604.

3. Dodd v. Wilkinson, 42 N. J. Eq. 647; Wilkinson v. Dodd, 42 N. J. Eq. 234; Williams v. McDonald, 42 N. J.

Eq. 392; Hun v. Cary, 82 N. Y. 65; 37 Am. Rep. 546. See also SAVINGS BANKS, vol. 21, p. 722 et seq.

4. Holmes v. Willard, 125 N. Y. 75; McNab v. McNab, etc., Mfg. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 448; Scott v. Depeyster, 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 536. See supra, this title, Ratification and Acquiescence. See generally PARTNERSHIP, vol. 17, p. 824; AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 39.

In International, etc., R. Co. v. Bremond, 53 Tex. 96, it was held that a shareholder in a railroad company which, against his protest, has been consolidated without authority of law with another company, by the action of other stockholders, and whose equitable interests have been wrongfully appropriated by the consolidated company, may not hold the directors, as such, liable for the damage; nor are the directors liable to the corporation for a consolidation effected by act of the stockholders.

5. Spering's Appeal, 71 Pa. St. 11; 10 Am. Rep. 684. Here Sharswood,

VI. LIABILITY OF CORPORATION FOR ULTRA VIRES TORTS.—It was at one time supposed that private corporations aggregate could not commit torts, and particularly those which involve the element of malicious intent; that, as the sovereign in granting rights and powers for lawful purposes had conferred no power to commit unlawful acts, such acts committed by the corporation's agents must, of necessity, be ultra vires the corporation, and the individual wrongs of the agents themselves. It is true that every tort committed by a corporation involves an unauthorized exercise of corporate power, but this is no reason why the corporation should not be held responsible for the consequences. However this may be, the doctrine stated above is entirely obsolete, and to-day corporations are held liable to the same extent, and under the same circumstances, for the consequences of their wrongful acts, as natural persons. They are held liable for assault and battery, fraud and deceit, false imprisonment, malicious prosecution, libel and slander, and other torts needless to mention. In certain cases, they may be indicted for misfeasance and nonfeasance touching duties imposed upon them in which the public are interested. Their offenses may be such as will forfeit their existence.¹

J., for the court, said: "In regard to the question last adverted to, whether the defendants should be held responsible for any of their acts and investments as ultra vires, it might be sufficient to notice the fact that the charter of this corporation was a very complicated one, made up by comparing together no less than sixteen different acts of incorporation or supplements. . . . To have mistaken the extent of their powers under such circumstances would not have been matter of surprise even in the most timid and cautious. We may adopt upon this point the language of C. J. Greene, in Hodges v. New England Screw Co., 1 R. I. 312; 53 Am. Dec. 624: 'In considering the question of the personal responsibility of the directors, we shall assume that they violated the charter of the screw company. The question then will be, was such violation the result of mistake as to their powers, and if so did they fall into the mistake from want of proper care, such care as a man of ordinary prudence practices in his own affairs? For, if the mistake be such as with proper care might have been avoided, they ought to be liable. If, on the other hand, the mistake be such as the directors might well make, notwithstanding the exercise of proper care, and if they acted in good faith and for the benefit of the screw company, they ought not to be liable.' We may say in this case, conceding that the directors did violate the charter, it was a question upon which, with all due care, they might have made an honest mistake; and moreover, it appears by the evidence, and is so reported, that they acted throughout by the advice of their counsel. It is well settled that trustees will be protected from responsibility under such circumstances. Lewin on Trusts 595; Vez v. Emery, 5 Ves. 141; Calhoun's Estate, 6 Watts (Pa.) 180."

1. See CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, p. 250 et seq., where the question is thoroughly discussed. See also TORTS, vol. 26, p. 72; and supra, this title, History and Development of the Doctrine.

The former doctrine as to the power of corporations to commit torts, and their liability therefor, is thus aptly answered by Mr. Binney in his argument in Chestnut Hill, etc., Turnpike Co. v. Rutter, 4 S. & R. (Pa.) 12; 8 Am. Dec. 675. He says: "According to the doctrine contended for, if they do an act within the scope of their corporate powers, it is legal and they are not answerable for the consequences. If the act be not within the range of their corporate powers, they had no right by law to do it; it was not one of the objects for which they were incorporated, and, therefore, it is no act of the corporation at all. This doctrine leads to

It is no defense to an action of tort against a corporation that the tort was committed while transacting a business without and beyond the purview of the corporate authority and purposes, if the corporation in any clear and explicit manner recognized the business as its own, as by employing agents to superintend it, or receiving the profits arising therefrom.¹

Thus, it can be no defense to a railroad company which undertakes to receive and transport passengers by steamer, that it had absolute impunity for every species of wrong, and can never be sanctioned by any court of justice." These observations were quoted approvingly by the court in State v. Morris, etc., R. Co., 23 N. J. L. 369.

While, as the law confers no power or permission to commit a wrongful act, every species of tort may be technically ultra vires, it is well established that corporations may commit almost every kind of tort, and be liable to an action for the same. In such case, the doctrine of ultra vires has no application. Central R., etc., Co. v. Smith, 76 Ala. 582; 52 Am. Rep. 353.

1. First Nat. Bank v. Graham, 100 U. S. 699; Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 258; Salt Lake City v. Hollister, 118 U. S. 256; Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Quigley, 21 How. (U. S.) 202; Alexander v. Relfe, 74 Mo. 495; South, etc., R. Co. v. Chappell, 61 Ala. 527. In this last case it was said: "It is not necessary, to fix the liability, that the wrongful act, or the negligence from which the injury proceeds, should have been committed while the corporation was in the exercise of the powers conferred by its charter. It may have been committed while the corporation, or its servants or agents, acting under its authority, were exceeding corporate power or engaged in business or transactions wholly foreign to its nature."

Corporations are liable for every wrong of which they are guilty, and in such cases, the doctrine of ultra vires has no application. Merchants' Nat. Bank v. State Nat. Bank, 10 Wall. (U. S.) 604.

In New York, etc., R. Co. v. Schuyler, 34 N. Y. 30, it is said that a corporation is liable to the same extent, and under the same circumstances, as a natural person, for the consequences of its wrongful acts, and will be held to respond in a civil action, at the suit of an injured party, for every grade and description of forcible, malicious or negligent tort, or wrong, which it commits, however foreign to its nature or beyond its general powers the wrongful transaction or act may be.

But see Hood v. New York, etc., R. Co., 22 Conn. 1; 22 Conn. 502; 23 Conn. 609, and Bathe v. Decatur County Agricultural Soc., 73 Iowa 11; 5 Am. St. Rep. 651. In this latter case it was held that the agricultural society, not being authorized to employ persons to convey people in their vehicles to a fair held under its auspices, was not liable for an injury to a horse occasioned by such persons negligently running against it while so engaged.

Mill v. Hawker, L. R., 9 Exch. 309, was an action for trespass against the surveyor and members, in their private capacity, of a highway board, committed by the surveyor in carrying out a resolution of the board, admitted to be ultra vires. It was held that the action would lie at least against the surveyor, but no decision was arrived at as to the liability of the board as a corporation, though the point arose on the argument. Kelly, C. B., dissented, expressing it as his opinion that the board was liable, and no one else. He says: "It was argued that no action could be maintained against the board on the ground that the resolution and the order to the surveyor were ultra vires. But I apprehend that this is a misapplication of the term ultra vires. If the board, by resolution or otherwise, had accepted a bill of exchange, directed their clerk or other officer to write their corporate name or title across a bill drawn upon them for a debt, this would have been ultra vires, and no holder of the acceptance could have recovered the amount against them. It would have been void upon the face of it, and it is immaterial to consider whether the individual who had written or authorized the acceptance would have been liable to any, and if any, to what action at the suit

no legal right so to do, when charged with responsibility for wrongs coming to those who commit their personal safety to the agents of the company, and who suffer from their negligence and misconduct.¹

And when a corporation is sued in trover, as bailee, it may not

of a holder for value. But it is otherwise with an act merely unlawful or unauthorized, as a trespass or the conversion of a chattel. If such an act is to be deemed ultra vires, and, therefore, no action would lie against the corporate body if it had been authorized, it is clear that a corporation would not be liable for any tort committed or authorized by them, and the decisions above cited would be contrary to law."

In Central R., etc., Co. v. Smith, 76 Ala. 572; 52 Am. Rep. 353, Clopton, J., for the court, said: "Generally it may be said that corporations are liable for the consequences of tortious acts done by their authority, though not within the scope of their powers, express, implied, or incidental. The distinction between the liability of a corporation, on an unauthorized contract, and for a negligent or wrongful act in the performance of such contract, is clearly and properly drawn by Seldon, J., in Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 258; which was an action by a passenger on a train of cars, which by contract the two companies were unitedly running, for a breach of duty to convey him safely, the passenger having been injured by the negligence of their servants. The defense of the companies was that, in making the contract, they transcended their powers, and, consequently, in judgment of law, they were not operating the road, and did not undertake to carry the plaintiff over it. After holding that the contract to operate the consolidated roads and to transport the plaintiff was illegal and void, he says: 'It is said that if the contract was ultra vires and the corporation is protected from all responsibility for its violation on that ground, it must be equally free from responsibility for an injury inflicted while attempting to perform it. But this, I apprehend, by no means follows, though it is probably true so far as the duty to observe due care grows out of the contract. The plaintiff's claim, however, rests not upon his contract, but upon the right which every man has to be protected from injury through the carelessness of others. It has the same legal foundation as that of one who has been injured by the negligent driving of some person upon the public highway, or has been run over by a train of cars when crossing the railroad track. The duty to observe care in these cases arises not upon any contract, but from the obligation which rests upon all persons, whether natural or artificial, so to conduct themselves as not through their negligence to inflict injury upon others.' An exemption from liability in such cases, because the act is ultra vires, would be a license to corporations to do wrongs to others. From these principles, it follows that if the defendant undertook the business of transporting persons by a mode of conveyance other than that authorized and provided by the charter, its duties and responsibilities to a passenger are the same as if the business was authorized and legal."

1. Gruber v. Washington, etc., R. Co., 92 N. Car. 1; Central R., etc., Co. v. Smith, 76 Ala. 572; 52 Am. Rep. 353; Hutchinson v. Western, etc., R. Co., 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 634. In the first of these cases, it is said that, "Conceding that running a line of steamers was not within the contemplation of the charter and was unwarranted by it, it by no means follows that upon the wrongful assumption of the business of common carriers, it can be conducted without incurring the obligations for safe transportation which belong to the exercise of those functions." In the second case the court said: "To render a corporation liable in an action ex delicto for damages occasioned by the negligence of its agents and servants in the performance of an ultra vires contract, it must be established that the contract was its corporate act, and not the unauthorized act of its officers or agents, and this may be shown by proof of authority conferred by a prior corporate act, or by a subsequent ratification by a corporate act under circumstances which required an election to ratify or repudiate it." In the last case, the court by Tenney, J., said: "If a corporation, chartered interpose the defense that the contract of bailment was ultra vires.¹

On the other hand, a party causing by his negligence, injury to lands, the title to which is held by a corporation, may not escape liability by showing that the corporation was not permitted by its charter to acquire title to the property, or that it was acquired for unauthorized purposes.²

VII. RESTRAINING ULTRA VIRES ACTS—STOCKHOLDERS AND CREDITORS.—A single shareholder may maintain suit to restrain the corporation from a contemplated transaction which is manifestly beyond its powers. This is true, notwithstanding all the other shareholders are willing to assent to and confirm the proposed act; no majority, however large, can authorize such an act. This right of the stockholder is placed upon the ground that, from the fact that the corporation was created for certain purposes, there is an implied contract that it shall not divert its powers, funds, or credit to other purposes, and that such diversion would be a species of breach of trust, as well as a violation of law which might endanger the existence of its charter.³ It is not necessary for a complaining stockholder to show that any pecuniary injury for one purpose, engage in a business different from that authorized by charter, or if its employes engage in such different business in the name of the principal, and the principal, with a knowledge of such departure, receive the profits arising therefrom, employ agents to superintend it, or in any other distinct mode recognize it as their business, and in its prosecution by its agents an injury results therefrom to another's person or property, the party so injured is entitled to maintain his action for the damages resulting from the wrongful act. The fact that the act from which the injury resulted was unauthorized by the charter of incorporation is no defense for the wrongdoer. With corporations, as with individuals, if it be engaged in a lawful business, and to promote that lawful business, resort to unauthorized acts, it must be held responsible for the consequences of such unauthorized acts, else the maxim that no 'man shall take advantage of his own wrong' is violated."

1. First Nat. Bank v. Strang, 138 Ill. 347.

2. Farmers' L. & T. Co. v. Green Bay, etc., R. Co., 11 Biss. (U. S.) 334; Cole Silver Min. Co. v. Virginia, etc., Water Co., 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 470; Farmers' and Millers' Bank v. Detroit, etc., R. Co., 17 Wis. 383.

3. Gray v. Lewis, 8 Eq. Cas. 526;

Atwool v. Merryweather, L. R., 5 Eq. 464, note; Bird v. Bird's Patent Deodorizing Co., L. R., 9 Ch. 358; Salomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 352; Lyde v. Eastern Bengal R. Co., 36 Beav. 13; Clinch v. Financial Corp., 5 Eq. 479; Menier v. Hooper's Tel. Works, 9 Ch. 350; Simpson v. Westminster Palace Hotel Co., 8 H. L. Cas. 712; Russell v. Wakefield Water-Works Co., L. R., 20 Eq. 474; Great Western R. Co. v. Rushout, 5 De G. & S. 200; Cunliff v. Manchester, etc., Canal Co., 2 Russ. & M. 480 n; Ware v. Grand Junction Water-Works Co., 2 Russ. & Mylne 470; Bagshaw v. Eastern Counties Union R. Co., 7 Hare 114; Auckland v. Westminster Board, L. R., 7 Ch. 597; Mills v. Northern R. Co., 5 Ch. Div. 621; Pickering v. Stephenson, L. R., 14 Eq. 322; Kernaghan v. Williams, L. R., 6 Eq. 228; Ware v. Regent's Canal Co., 3 De G. & J. 212; Rogers v. Oxford, etc., R. Co., 2 De G. & J. 662; Hodgson v. Powis, 1 De G. M. & G. 6; Cohen v. Wilkinson, 1 Macn. & G. 481; Zabriskie v. Cleveland, etc., R. Co., 23 How. (U. S.) 381; Memphis v. Dean, 8 Wall. (U. S.) 64; Bronson v. Lacrosse R. Co., 2 Wall. (U. S.) 302; Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 331; Heath v. Erie R. Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 347; Zabriskie v. Hackensack, etc., R. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 178; 90 Am. Dec. 617; Lanman v. Lebanon Valley R. Co., 30 Pa. St. 46; Cass v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 9 Fed.

will result from the contemplated act; he has an interest in the continued existence of the corporation, and any act which would warrant a court in decreeing forfeiture of its charter is such an injury to his interest as will give him standing in a court of

Rep. 640; Bergman v. St. Paul Mut. Bldg. Assoc., 29 Minn. 275; Bliss v. Anderson, 31 Ala. 612; 70 Am. Dec. 511; Davis v. Old Colony R. Co., 131 Mass. 258; 41 Am. Rep. 221; Pratt v. Pratt, 33 Conn. 446; Belmont v. Erie R. Co., 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 637; Black v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 22 N. J. Eq. 130; Tippicanoe County v. Lafayette, etc., R. Co., 50 Ind. 85; Chicago v. Cameron, 120 Ill. 447; Teachout v. Des Moines, etc., R. Co., 75 Iowa 722; Smith v. Bangs, 15 Ill. 400; Willoughby v. Chicago Junction R., etc., Co. (N. J.), 39 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 153.

In such a case, the question is not one of discretion or expediency. The right of the stockholder to maintain the action and enjoin the transaction is personal to himself, and independent of any right or interest of the corporation, and must be recognized, although all the other members are arrayed against him. Da Ponte v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 534.

"It is now no longer doubted, either in England or the United States, that courts of equity in both have a jurisdiction over corporations, at the instance of one or more of their members, to apply preventive remedies by injunction, to restrain those who administer them from doing acts which would amount to a violation of charters, or to prevent any misapplication of their capitals or profits, which might result in lessening the dividends of stockholders, or the value of their shares, as either may be protected by the franchises of a corporation, if the acts intended to be done create what is in law denominated a breach of trust. And the jurisdiction extends to inquire into, and to enjoin, as the case may require that to be done, any proceedings by individuals in whatever character they may profess to act, if the subject of complaint is an imputed violation of a corporate franchise, or the denial of a right growing out of it, for which there is not an adequate remedy at law." Wayne, J., in Dodge v. Woolsey, 18 How. (U. S.) 341.

Instances of Ultra Vires Acts Restrained at the Suit of One, or of a Minority, of the Stockholders.—The following may be given as examples of ultra vires acts restrained at the instance of stockholders as just stated: The unauthorized purchase by a railroad company of shares in another company. Central R. Co. v. Collins, 40 Ga. 582; Maunsell v. Midland, etc., R. Co., 1 H. & M. 130; Salomons v. Laing, 12 Beav. 339; Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 401; unauthorized consolidations and leases. Nathan v. Tompkins, 82 Ala. 437; Black v. Delaware, etc., Canal Co., 24 N. J. Eq. 455; International, etc., R. Co. v. Bremond, 53 Tex. 96; Clearwater v. Meredith, 1 Wall. (U. S.) 40; Small v. Minneapolis Electro Matrix Co., 45 Minn. 264; Zabriskie v. Hackensack, etc., R. Co., 18 N. J. Eq. 178; 90 Am. Dec. 617; Charlton v. New Castle, etc., R. Co., 5 Jur. N. S. 1096; Imperial Bank v. Bank of Hindustan, L. R., 6 Eq. 91; Blatchford v. Ross, 54 Barb. (N. Y.) 42; Young v. Rundout, etc., Gas Light Co. (Supreme Ct.), 15 N. Y. Supp. 443; Botts v. Simpsonville, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 88 Ky. 54; Shaw v. Campbell Turnpike R. Co. (Ky. 1891), 15 S. W. Rep. 245; Tuscaloosa Mfg. Co. v. Cox, 68 Ala. 75; a corporation created for the purpose of constructing a railroad between certain termini, from using the funds obtained for that purpose, or from pledging its credit, for the purpose of an extension beyond those termini. Stevens v. Rutland, etc., R. Co., 29 Vt. 546; a corporation organized for the purpose of granting fire and life assurance, from embarking in the business of marine insurance. Natusch v. Irving, Appendix to Gow on Partnership, 576; 2 Cooper's Ch. Cases, pt. 2, p. 358; a canal company from changing part of its line into a railway. Cunliff v. Manchester, etc., Canal Co., 2 Russ. & M. 480, note; a water company from taking its supply from a source different from that designated in its charter. Ware v. Grand Junction Water-Works Co., 2 Russ. & M. 470; a plank-road company from undertaking to establish a stage line upon the road and to procure a contract for carrying the United States mail. Wiswall v. Greenville, etc., Plank Road Co., 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 183; a bank from discounting or purchasing paper at a equity.¹ But the complainant must have the interest of a share-greater rate of discount than that allowed by the fundamental law of the corporation. Manderson v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. St. 379; from proceeding to try a complaining stockholder for the violation of certain by-laws which are beyond the scope of the purposes of the corporation. Kolff v. St. Paul Fuel Exchange, 48 Minn. 215; a company incorporated for the manufacture of pig-iron, from engaging in the milling business as an independent enterprise. Yarborough v. Lumpkin, 52 Ga. 276; the unauthorized use of notes by a bank intended to circulate as currency. Bliss v. Anderson, 31 Ala. 612; 70 Am. Dec. 511.

In Mackintosh v. Flint, etc., R. Co., 34 Fed. Rep. 582, it was held that where the holders of the common stock of a railroad corporation are entitled to, but are denied, a voice in the management and control of the corporate affairs, equity will, pending a suit for the enforcement of this right, interfere to prevent the consummation of a transaction which is injurious to their rights, and perhaps ultra vires the corporation, until they can have an opportunity to express their assent or dissent thereto.

Creditors.—"And this right may be exercised also by a creditor, either when the corporation is about to do such an act, or when the directors or other officers or agents, propose to assume powers not conferred upon the corporation. . . . The creditors have a right to restrain general speculations and acts ultra vires, as they have become creditors with the knowledge and understanding that they are constituted a corporation for certain purposes and with certain powers; and it is to be presumed that the credit was given with a full knowledge of these matters and a judgment of the ability to meet the obligation, based upon such purposes and powers, of the debtor." G. W. Field in American Law Review, vol. 13, p. 659.

Unsecured Creditor.—Where the amount of indebtedness that a corporation is authorized to incur is limited by its charter, the objection that a mortgage for a sum exceeding that amount is ultra vires, will not avail an unsecured creditor, who became such after the execution of the mortgage, and whose claim is open to the same objection. Allis v. Jones, 45 Fed. Rep. 148.

Interference of Equity with the Internal Policy of Corporations.—Equity will not interfere with the internal policy and management of a corporation, unless it is manifest that the act complained of is ultra vires. Becher v. Wells Flouring Mill Co., 1 Fed. Rep. 276; Thompson v. Erie R. Co., 11 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 188; Joslyn v. Pac. Mail Steamship Co., 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 329; Bach v. Pacific Mail Steamship Co., 12 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 373. In this last case it was held that equity will not interfere by injunction at the instance of a shareholder in a business corporation, with the general management of the corporate property, such as the manner of investing its surplus funds, unless there is a clear violation of express law or a wide departure from charter powers.

For the principles governing equitable interference to prevent mismanagement of corporate affairs, breaches of trust, fraud, etc., see CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 184; OFFICERS (PRIVATE CORPORATIONS), vol. 17, p. 39.

Where the Act is Intra Vires, but Hurtful to the Stockholder in Another Capacity.—The corporation will not be enjoined at the instance of a stockholder from doing what is in direct furtherance of the object of its creation, and to the advantage of all the stockholders as such, though it may be injurious to the complaining stockholder in another character, or to some other person, or to the public. Baltimore, etc., R. Co. v. Wheeling, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 40.

Demand Upon Corporation to Sue.—As to whether it is necessary, in order to enable a stockholder to sustain suit in his own name, that he should aver in his bill that he has applied to the corporation, or its board of directors, to sue, and that they have refused, see CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 280 et seq., where the question is fully treated.

1. Not Necessary to Show that Pecuniary Injury Will Result from the Act.—Noole v. Great Western R. Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 262; Stewart v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 348; Bliss v. Anderson, 31 Ala. 613; 70 Am. Dec. 511; Manderson v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. St.

holder;¹ though the quantum of that interest is immaterial.² A person not a stockholder, and whose rights are not infringed by a violation of its charter by the corporation, has no just cause of complaint.³ It seems that a transferee of stock, who has not 379; Wiswall v. Greenville, etc., Plank Road Co., 3 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 183.

Every proprietor, when he takes shares, has a right to expect that the conditions upon which the act was obtained will be performed; and it is not a sufficient answer to a shareholder, expecting his dividend, that the money has been expended upon an undertaking which at some remote period may be highly beneficial to the company. East Anglian R. Co. v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 11 C. B. 775.

"It seems to me that if such a transaction is contemplated, the charter is placed in a degree of peril that entitles any shareholder to call in the assistance of this court to prevent the company from taking such a step. The defendant's objection that the plaintiff does not state a cause of action in the complaint, because no facts are alleged going to show that he will suffer any pecuniary damage in consequence of the contract complained of, is not well taken; not only because the plaintiff alleges that the effect of the contract, if carried out, will be to render the plaintiff's stock worthless, but because if the contract is illegal, as alleged, it may lead to a total forfeiture of the charter of the company, in which the plaintiff is a stockholder." Rendall v. Crystal Palace Co., 4 K. & J. 326, per Page-Wood, V. C.

In Yarborough v. Lumpkin, 52 Ga. 276, the court, in restraining a corporation created for the purpose of manufacturing pig-iron from engaging in the milling business, said: "Whether the corn and flour mill is not the best investment is not the question. The complainant has a right to insist on it that the funds of the company shall go to the uses designated by the charter, and all the parties together do not, as a corporation, have the legal right to engage in the milling business, except as a mere incident to the purposes of their incorporation."

In Tomkinson v. South Eastern R. Co., 35 Ch. Div. 677, Kay, J., said: "The question . . . is whether the act proposed to be done is within the powers of the railway company, or outside its powers. If it is outside its powers, it is now perfectly settled that any one shareholder may come to the court and say: 'This company is going to do an act beyond its powers; stop it;' and the court thereupon has no discretion in the matter."

1. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co. v. Catawissa R. Co., 53 Pa. St. 20; Roebeling v. First Nat. Bank, 30 Fed. Rep. 744; Mayer v. Denver, etc., R. Co., 38 Fed. Rep. 197; Busey v. Hooper, 35 Md. 15; Landes v. Globe, etc., Mfg. Co., 73 Ga. 176.

2. Kean v. Johnson, 9 N. J. Eq. 401; Seaton v. Grant, L. R., 2 Ch. 459; Samuel v. Holladay, 1 Woolw. (U.S.) 400; McDonnell v. Grand Canal Co., 3 Ir. Ch. 578; Natusch v. Irving, Appendix to Gow on Part. 576. In this last case the complainant had only paid one hundred and fifty pounds to the funds of the company, the whole capital being five hundred thousand pounds divided amongst about six hundred stockholders.

3. Belcher Sugar Refining Co. v. St. Louis Grain Elevator Co., 101 Mo. 192; Sparhawk v. Union, etc., R. Co., 54 Pa. St. 401; Camblos v. Philadelphia, etc., R. Co., 4 Brew. (Pa.) 563; Rafferty v. Central Traction Co., 147 Pa. St. 579; Jersey City Gas Light Co. v. Consumers' Gas Co., 40 N. J. Eq. 432; New Orleans, etc., R. Co. v. Ellerman, 105 U. S. 166. In this last case, the city of New Orleans was authorized to erect and maintain wharves within its limits, and to collect wharfage. The legislature of the state granted to a railroad company the authority to inclose and occupy for its purposes and uses a specifically described portion of the levee and batture, maintain the wharves theretofore erected on the property within those limits, and exempted it from the supervision and control which the municipal authorities exercised in the matter of public wharves. The court, by Mr. Justice Mathews, in holding that the enactment referred to infringed no rights of the city, and that the question as to whether the company in constructing, pursuant to the authority conferred, the wharf on its property and collecting wharfage, acted ultra vires, could not be raised by a claimant under the city, who was not a stockholder in the company, and registered his stock, nor obtained recognition by the corporation as a stockholder, is not qualified to bring suit.¹ It would be otherwise in case of a wrongful refusal on the part of the corporate officers to make the transfer on the books.² It seems to be the better opinion that the fact that the complainant purchased the stock with the avowed design of preventing the consummation of the unauthorized transaction, or that he is interested in a rival corporation to whose advantage the suit will inure, or that his motives and feelings are adverse to the defendant corporation, will not disentitle him to relief.³ But, it should be ob-whose rights had not been infringed, said: "The legal interest which qualifies a complainant, other than the state itself, to sue in such a case, is a pecuniary interest in preventing the defendant from doing an act, where the injury flows from its quality and character as a breach of some legal or equitable duty. A stockholder of the company has such an interest in restraining it within the limits of the enterprise for which it was formed, because that is to enforce his contract of membership. The state has a legal interest in preventing the usurpation and perversion of its franchises, because it is a trustee of its powers for uses strictly public. In these questions the appellant has no interest, and he cannot raise them in order, under that cover, to create and protect a monopoly, which the law does not give him. The only injury of which he can be heard in a judicial tribunal to complain is the invasion of some legal or equitable right. If he asserts that the competition of the railroad company damages him, the answer is that it does not abridge or impair any such right. If he alleges that the railroad company is acting beyond the warrant of the law, the answer is that a violation of its charter does not of itself injuriously affect any of his rights. The company is not shown to owe him any duty which it has not performed. This was the principle on which this court proceeded in the case of Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 91. It is applied in Liverpool v. Chorley Water-Works Co., 2 De G. M. & G. 852; Stockport Dist. Water-Works Co. v. Manchester, 9 Jur. N. S. 266; Pudsey Coal Gas Co. v. Bedford, L. R., 15 Eq. 167."

1. Brown v. Duluth, etc., R. Co., 53 Fed. Rep. 889. Here the court said: "A membership in this corporation consists in the ownership of shares thereof recognized by the corporation.

The complainant claims membership by acquiring corporate stock by transfer, but not having registered his stock and obtained recognition by the corporation as a stockholder, he can claim no other rights than those which the assignment vests in him. Undoubtedly, as between himself and his assignors, the purchase of the certificate gives him all the rights of ownership, and entitles him to demand that he shall be registered by the corporation; but until he has caused a transfer to be made upon the books of the corporation, his title, as between the corporation and himself, is not perfected, and he neither has the rights, nor is subject to the liabilities, of membership. He may bring suit, under some circumstances, to protect his individual interests in the corporate property, but he cannot participate in the management of the corporation and enforce corporate rights to restrain threatened wrongs on the corporate interest. He brings this suit in behalf of himself and his associate stockholders. Not being a stockholder himself recognized by the corporation, he is personally precluded from doing this."

Whether persons having an equitable interest in shares, but not being registered shareholders, have a standing in a court of equity to restrain ultra vires acts, quære. Mills v. Northern R. Co., 5 Ch. Div. 621.

In Stewart v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 372, it was objected that the plaintiff was not entitled to sue, because he was not a stockholder, upon a bona fide cash subscription. The court, in negating this objection, said: "If he is a legal stockholder, his right to protect his interest as such cannot depend upon the manner in which he acquired it."

2. Carson v. Iowa City Gas Light Co., 80 Iowa 638.

3. Elkins v. Camden, etc., R. Co., 36 served, the plaintiff on the record must be the person urging the suit. If it appears that he is a mere nominee or puppet in the hands of another, the bill will be dismissed.¹

In one instance the court refused to interfere by injunction, it

N. J. Eq. 5; Colman v. Eastern Counties R. Co., 10. Beav. 1; Seaton v. Grant, L. R., 2 Ch. 459; Salisbury v. Metropolitan R. Co., 39 L. J. Ch. 429; Sanford v. Catawissa, etc., R. Co., 24 Pa. St. 378.

In Bloxam v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 337, the plaintiff bought his shares a short time before the bill was filed, and to enable him to file the bill, Lord Chelmsford, L. C., said: "However questionable the mode of the plaintiff's introduction to the company may have been, he has an actual interest in the subject-matter of the suit. In this respect he differs from the plaintiff in the case of Forrest v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 7 Jur. N. S. 887, who stated in his examination that the directors of a rival company directed the institution of the suit and indemnified him against costs; and Lord Westbury dismissed the bill on the ground that the plaintiff, coming in the character of a shareholder in the company, and stating that it was not his own act but an act that he had been directed to do by the other company, the suit was an imposition on the court. The plaintiff may be properly described in the words of Lord Justice Knight Bruce in Rogers v. Oxford, etc., R. Co., 2 De G. & J. 662, as a person who was made 'a shareholder in the company for the mere purpose of instituting this litigation.' But if the question put by Vice Chancellor Wood in Filder v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 H. & M. 493, is repeated in this case: 'Is the suit bona fide plaintiff's own suit, or is he merely the hand by which some one else acts?' the correct answer must be, that he consented to become the instrument of others, but for that purpose he has acquired an interest which gives him a common cause with them. I cannot say that, having chosen to place himself in this invidious position, with a real interest, though of no great amount, at stake, he is not to have the ordinary rights of a plaintiff on account of the motives which led him to acquire the means of appearing in that character."

Wallace, J., in Da Ponte v. Northern Pac. R. Co., 21 Blatchf. (U. S.) 534, said: "A court of equity will not be swift to grant the stringent relief of a preliminary injunction to an officious plaintiff who seems to have acquired his interest as a stockholder with a view of assailing transactions in the corporate affairs, of which the existing stockholders do not seem to have complained."

By Equity Rule 94 of the United States Supreme Court, it is provided that, "every bill brought by one or more stockholders in a corporation against the corporation and other parties, founded on rights which may be properly asserted by the corporation, must be verified by oath, and must contain an allegation that the plaintiff was a shareholder at the time of the transaction of which he complains, or that his share had devolved upon him since by operation of law." See Dimpfel v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 209; Hawes v. Contra Costa Water Co., 104 U. S. 450; Leo v. Union Pac. R. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 283; Dannmeyer v. Coleman, 8 Sawy. (U. S.) 51; Whittemore v. Amoskeag Nat. Bank, 26 Fed. Rep. 819.

In reference to this rule, the court, in Parsons v. Joseph, 92 Ala. 405, said: "Upon an examination of these authorities it will be seen that the principle asserted rests solely upon Equity Rule No. 94, adopted by the United States Supreme Court, and which may be found in the preface to volume 104 of the United States Reports. Morawetz on Private Corporations, speaking of this rule, says: 'It was evidently designed as a rule of practice merely and was deemed necessary to guard courts from being imposed upon by the collusion of parties.' Morawetz on Priv. Corp., §§ 269, 270. The rule is not a general principle of law applicable to pleadings in all the courts, and has never been applied to the courts of this state." Compare Alexander v. Searcy, 81 Ga. 536; 12 Am. St. Rep. 337.

1. Forrest v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 7 Jur. N. S. 887. An injunction will not be granted at the instance of a plaintiff who purchased his stock to enable him to file a bill in aid of a private bill of other plaintiffs. Sparhawk v. Union, etc., R. Co., 54 Pa. St. 401.

appearing that the corporation repudiated, and refused to be bound by, the ultra vires contract.¹

Legislative authorization of an ultra vires sale of corporate franchises and property has merely the effect of waiving the rights of the public—the right of dissenting stockholders to object to the unauthorized corporate act remains unimpaired. It is not competent for the legislature to thus divest or impair the rights of shareholders inter se as guarantied by the charter, without their consent.²

When the proceedings are not against particular members or officers of the corporation, on account of their misdeeds, but against the corporation, on account of corporate acts in excess of charter powers, the relief sought primarily affects the corporation itself, and it must be made a party defendant.³

Here, Woodward, C. J., said: "A chancellor will always look to the genuineness of the character in which a plaintiff comes before him. A stockholder is bound to come with clean hands, with a sincere complaint, free from all false pretenses, as much as every other party who comes into a court of equity. Injunction is not of right, but of grace, and to move an upright chancellor to enforce this strongest arm of the law, he must have, not a sham case, but a well-grounded complaint, the bona fides of which is unquestioned, or capable of vindication, if questioned."

In Robson v. Dodds, L. R., 8 Eq. 30, it was held that a suit instituted by a plaintiff having only a nominal interest, on behalf of a body of shareholders, not for the benefit of the plaintiff, but for improper purposes, at the instigation of another person, who indemnifies the plaintiff against the costs of the suit, will be treated as an imposition on the court, and the bill will be ordered to be taken off the file. In this case a bill filed by a member of a building society on behalf of himself and other members against the directors of the society to restrain certain proceedings alleged to be ultra vires, was ordered to be taken off the file, upon evidence that the plaintiff was a person of small means, and had purchased one share in the society for the purpose of instituting the suit, and that the suit was really instituted by his solicitor, who was not a shareholder, for the purpose of annoying two of the directors.

Whether if the act had been ultra vires the court would have declined to interfere, on the ground that the bill was filed by the nominee of another company with a view solely to the interest of that company, quære. Rogers v. Oxford, etc., R. Co., 2 De G. & J. 662. See also Belmont v. Erie R. Co., 52 Barb. (N. Y.) 662; Ffooks v. Southwestern R. Co., 1 S. & G. 166.

1. Stewart v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 372.

In Nathan v. Tompkins, 82 Ala. 438, it was held that where the bill seeks to enjoin the consummation of an attempted consolidation with another corporation, as shown by resolutions passed by the majority at a stockholders' meeting, which declared that the consolidation "do now take place, and be fully carried into effect," followed by an election of officers of the consolidated company, the abandonment of the attempt by the defendants, on discovering the irregularity of their proceedings, not shown by an official declaration, or by the rescission of the resolutions, does not destroy the equity of the bill.

2. Knoxville v. Knoxville, etc., R. Co., 22 Fed. Rep. 758.

3. Parties Defendant—The Corporation.—See CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, p. 283; Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.), p. 654. At this point Mr. Brice says further: "There are, however, two decisions by Lord Romilly, M. R., where the absence of the corporation was excused. The former of these is Daugars v. Rivaz, 28 Beav. 233. . . . In the case of Gregory v. Patchet, 33 Beav. 595, the action was against the directors only in respect of proceedings ultra vires in the second sense, and amounting to a fraud on a minority of the shareholders."

Mr. Green, in his American notes (note a, p. 654), commenting on the

As a general rule it is not necessary to make the directors or governing body defendants, and particularly, when no relief is prayed against them.¹

If third parties are immediately concerned in the transaction objected to by the complainant, they should be brought, or allowed to come, before the court to protect their interests; but ordinarily the stockholder's complaint is against the corporation directly, and he will be satisfied in having an end put to the objectionable transaction, without more.²

A shareholder seeking to restrain the corporation from doing an ultra vires act must show by distinct and definite averments that the act is ultra vires.³

The right of the state to restrain ultra vires acts is discussed in a subsequent part of this article.⁴

VIII. RATIFICATION AND ACQUIESCENCE.—It is necessary, in this connection, to distinguish between such acts as are beyond the legitimate scope and province of the corporation under any circumstances, and such as are within the scope of the franchise granted, but beyond the authority of a mere majority of the shareholders, or of the officers or agents assuming to perform them.⁵ According to some authorities, when a corporation does an act not per se illegal or malum prohibitum, though there is want of power under the charter to do it, and which affects the interests of the stockholders only, the latter may be barred from objecting to, or repudiating, the act, either by their express assent, or intelligent, though tacit, consent, thereto.⁶ By other authorities this first case above, says: "This is an exceptional case and cannot be considered as militating against the rule now well settled in America that the corporation must be a party to the suit."

1. The Directors.—Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.) 656; Heath v. Erie R. Co., 8 Blatchf. (U. S.) 347; Hatch v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 6 Blatchf. (U. S.) 105; Winch v. Birkenhead, etc., R. Co., 5 De G. & S. 562. In an action to procure the cancellation of stock unlawfully issued, the directors are not necessary parties. Wood v. Union, etc., Bldg. Assoc., 63 Wis. 9. See also Dousman v. Wisconsin, etc., Min. etc., Co., 40 Wis. 418.

2. Third Parties.—Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.), p. 655. See Hare v. London, etc., R. Co., 1 J. & H. 252, where a corporation had acted upon an agreement made with several other corporations, which was alleged to be ultra vires, and it was held that the latter were necessary parties to a suit by a stockholder in the former to have the agreement adjudged void, and his corporation enjoined from further acting upon it. See also Brogdin v. Bank of Upper Canada, 13 Grant's Ch. (Ont.) 544.

3. Mills v. Northern R., etc., Co., 5 Ch. Div. 621. See also Oliver v. Gilmore, 52 Fed. Rep. 562.

4. See infra, this title, Rights of the State.

5. For the different senses in which the expression ultra vires is used, see supra, this title, Definition and General Principles.

6. In Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159, at a meeting of the shareholders, a resolution was passed by a majority, authorizing any shareholder to convert his shares into preferred shares, upon paying a certain bonus to the corporation. Many of the members took advantage of this privilege, and a large number of shares were reissued as preferred shares. After the expiration of four years, during which the preferred shares were quoted in the newspapers, and referred to in the annual reports of the board of directors, a member who had retained his original shares, instituted suit to enjoin the corporation from giving preference to the holders of the preferred shares. The court, by Folger, J., in holding that the shareholders must be deemed to have had notice of the resolution, and to have ratified it by their acquiescence, said: "In the application of the doctrine of ultra vires, it is to be borne in mind that it has two phases: one where the public is concerned; one where the question is between the corporate body and the stockholders in it, or between it and its stockholders and third parties dealing with it, and through it with them. When the public is concerned to restrain a corporation within the limit of the power given to it by its charter, an assent of the stockholders to the use of unauthorized power by the corporate body, will be of no avail. When it is a question of the right of a stockholder to restrain the corporation within its express or incidental powers, the stockholder may in many cases be denied, on the ground of his express assent, or his intelligent, though tacit, consent, to the corporate action. If there be a departure from statutory direction, which is to be considered merely a breach of trust, to be restrained by a stockholder, it is pertinent to consider what has been his conduct in regard thereto. A corporation may do acts which affect the public to its harm, inasmuch as they are per se illegal or are malum prohibitum; then no assent of the stockholders can validate them. It may do acts not thus illegal, though there is want of power to do them, which affect only the interest of the stockholders. They may be made good by the assent of the stockholders, so that strangers to the stockholders dealing in good faith with the corporation will be protected in a reliance upon those acts. The instance put in Bissell v. Michigan Southern, etc., R. Co., 22 N. Y. 269, is illustrative. A bank has no authority from the state to engage in benevolent enterprises, and a subscription, though formally made, for a charitable object, will be out of its powers, but it would not be otherwise an illegal act; yet if every stockholder did expressly assent to such an application of the corporate funds, though it would still be in one sense ultra vires, no wrong would be done, no public interest harmed; and no stockholder could object, or claim that there was an infringement of his rights, and have redress or protection. Such an act, though beyond the power given by the charter, unless expressly prohibited, if confirmed by the stockholders, could not be avoided by any of them to the harm of third persons. This arises from the principle that the trust for stockholders is not of a public nature. . . . It was not expressly prohibited by the charter, or by any statute, to this corporation, to classify the shares of its capital stock so that one class should have greater right and value than another. It was not malum in se so to do, unless it was that a vested right was thereby affected, but that was not a public evil; it was a wrong that affected private persons only, and one which they might assent to. This case is thus without the principle of Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653, where the act was expressly prohibited."

This principle was reaffirmed in Sheldon Hat Blocking Co. v. Eickemeyer Hat Blocking Mach. Co., 90 N. Y. 607. Here the trustees of a manufacturing corporation in good faith, assigned and transferred all of its property in the settlement of a judgment against the corporation. All of the stockholders had knowledge of the transfer at or about the time it was made, and for four years took no steps to impeach or question the same. It was held that, even conceding that the trustees had no power to make the assignment and transfer, an action was not maintainable to set it aside, either by the corporation or its stockholders; Tracy, J., saying: "If all the stockholders of this corporation had, with full knowledge, subsequently ratified the transfer and affirmed the settlement, the act, though beyond the power given the trustees by the charter, could not be subsequently avoided by the stockholders or by the corporation. This case falls within the rule established by this court in the case of Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159."

The general rule laid down in Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159, was also approved in Hollins v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 909.

In Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R., 7 C. P. 43, the company was expressly prohibited from purchasing its own shares. The directors entered into an agreement with a stockholder amounting to a purchase of his shares. It was held that this arrangement, doctrine is denied.¹ It seems to be universally agreed that a stockholder may be estopped from complaining of acts falling in the second class, as stated above, by reason of his acquiescence or ratification. Such acts are generally governed by the rules applicawhich had been carried out, could not be set aside, as it had been ratified by the shareholders.

In regard to this case Mr. Brice says: "The marginal note says 'the directors' (were prohibited, etc.), but this is wrong; it was 'the company,' though the decision apparently proceeded upon the other supposition. If not, it is decided that the company, notwithstanding, could ratify a purchase of its own shares, although it had no power to do this; then the case is directly contrary to numerous other decisions. See ante, p. 95. Indeed, in any view, the decision seems to be bad, unless the proceedings were ultra vires in the narrow sense only." Green's Brice's Ultra Vires (2d Am. ed.), p. 548, note.

The shareholders having acknowledged the liability of the corporation for a particular debt, may not repudiate it on the ground that it was in excess of the limit of indebtedness which the corporation was authorized by law to incur. Poole v. West Point Butter, etc., Assoc., 30 Fed. Rep. 513.

"It does not follow that, because a railroad has no power to purchase or own stock in another railroad company, a stockholder who has acquiesced therein for fifteen years should have a right to object. It may be true, and doubtless is, that no assent or acquiescence of the stockholders can validate such an act; but it is a different question whether, after such a long acquiescence, the stockholder may take advantage of the invalidity of such acts. The act of purchasing and owning and voting stock in one railroad company by another railroad company may be ultra vires, so far as the public are concerned; but we do not think that a stockholder, who has acquiesced for fifteen years, and who has received money from the corporation by reason of the illegal act, should be allowed to make that question. His acquiescence does not render valid the illegal act of the corporation, but will prevent him from taking advantage of its invalidity." Simmons, J., in Alexander v. Searcy, 81 Ga. 546; 12 Am. St. Rep. 337.

In Taylor v. South & North Ala- bama R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 575, it was held that an executed contract constructively fraudulent, for the issue of preferred stock by a corporation, in excess of its charter powers, but not prohibited by law or contrary to public policy, will not, after acquiescence for the period of ten years by the shareholders, be disturbed at their instance, on the ground that it was ultra vires.

1. In Ashbury R., etc., Co. v. Riche, L. R., 7 H. L. 653, the contract was expressly prohibited by statute. It was held that the contract, "being in its inception void, as beyond the provisions of the statute, it cannot be ratified even by the assent of the whole body of shareholders." The Lord Chancellor (Lord Cairns) said: "If the shareholders of this company could not ab ante have authorized a contract of this kind to be made, how could they subsequently sanction the contract after it had, in point of fact, been made? . . . It appears to me that it would be perfectly fatal to the whole scheme of legislation to which I have referred, if you were to hold that, in the first place, directors might do that which even the whole company could not do, and that then, the shareholders finding out what had been done, could sanction, subsequently, what they could not antecedently have authorized." In this case, Lord Chelmsford, concurring, observed: "If there had been an active ratification, it could not have given life to a contract which had no existence in itself; but at the utmost it would have amounted to a sanction by the shareholders to the act of the directors, which, if given before the contract was entered into, would not have made it valid, as it does not relate to an object within the scope of the memorandum of association."

In Hazlehurst v. Savannah, etc., R. Co., 43 Ga. 13. McCay, J., for the court, said: "Every charter is a contract between the public and the corporators, and between the corporators themselves. An act of the officers (and a corporation can act in no other way) may violate the contract with the public. According to the authorities, such an act is an illegal contract, contrary

ble to principal and agent, or by an analogous principle adopted in reference to contracts under the Statute of Frauds, where, though the contract may not be binding ab initio, it may still become so by the subsequent action of the parties.¹

As just stated, ratification by a shareholder of acts ultra vires the directors or agents of a corporation, may be express² or im-to public policy and void. But if the act only violated the contract between the corporators, it may or may not be void, accordingly as the corporators may have directed, assented to, or acquiesced in it. The former class of facts includes those which relate to enterprises or franchises not granted. The latter class includes such acts as violate those provisions of the charter which regulate the rights of the corporators with each other. It is apparent that there is a wide difference in the nature of things between these two classes of acts. The officers of a corporation may do an act which is, under the charter, beyond the legitimate scope and province of the grant, as if a railroad company should undertake to build a cotton manufactory, or a bank to build a railroad. Such an act would be an attempt to exercise a franchise not granted to the corporation. There is strength in the argument that such an act is illegal, contrary to public policy, and, however parties may have consented, they may ask the court to refuse to enforce contracts based upon or in furtherance of it. If by consent the stockholders could give validity to contracts based upon such acts, they could, in effect, grasp new franchises from the public at their pleasure. But acts of the officers of a corporation are often said to be ultra vires when they are wholly within the scope of the franchises granted in the charter, but they are beyond the authority conferred upon the officers. Such acts, though directly contrary to the provisions of the charter, if they be authorized by the stockholders, or be acquiesced in, or confirmed, cannot be avoided after third persons have acted upon them. They are regulated by the rules which govern the relation of principal and agent to third persons."

Similar observations were made in Cozart v. Georgia R., etc., Co., 54 Ga. 384.

"An act which is in excess of the charter of a corporation, involves an unauthorized exercise of corporate power on the part of the company, and this objection cannot be obviated by any subsequent ratification, either by the agents or by the shareholders of the corporation; so it is clear that if an act performed by an agent on behalf of a corporation is prohibited by statute or by the charter of the company, or by some general rule of the common law, no ratification by other agents or shareholders of the company can cure the illegality of the act. The ratification of an act has no greater effect than a previous grant of authority to do the act; it merely obviates the objection that the principal did not authorize the act to be done." 2 Morawetz on Private Corp. (2d ed.), § 619.

See also Lucas v. White Line Transfer Co., 70 Iowa 550; 59 Am. Rep. 449; Martin v. Zellerbach, 38 Cal. 300; 99 Am. Dec. 365; Faymouth v. Koehler, 35 Mich. 22. Neither the directors nor shareholders can waive the provisions of a statute forbidding the directors from being concerned in certain contracts with the corporation. Barton v. Port Jackson, etc., Plank Road Co., 17 Barb. (N. Y.) 397.

1. Dimpfel v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 209; Watts' Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 370; Ashhurst's Appeal, 60 Pa. St. 290; McNab v. McNab Mfg. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 16 N. Y. Supp. 448; Bradley v. Ballard, 55 Ill. 413; 7 Am. Rep. 656; Emerson v. New York, etc., R. Co., 14 R. I. 555, affirming Boston, etc., R. Co. v. New York, etc., R. Co., 13 R. I. 260; Cozart v. Georgia, etc., Co., 54 Ga. 384; Thompson v. Lambert, 44 Iowa 239; Scott v. Methodist Church, etc., 50 Mich. 528; Perry v. Simpson, etc., Mfg. Co., 37 Conn. 520. See generally AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331.

2. In Sewell's Case, L. R., 3 Ch. 131, the directors of a company, whose capital was three hundred thousand pounds, divided into three thousand shares of one hundred pounds each, made an unauthorized issue of one thousand additional shares beyond their capital. They subsequently called general meetings, at which resolutions plied. Implied ratification is another term for acquiescence or laches.¹

The general rule is that delay in instituting suit will not in itself constitute laches. In addition to the element of delay, there must be the element of knowledge, actual or constructive, of the material facts and circumstances of the transaction.²

After knowledge of the transaction may be imputed to the were passed extending, as it was competent for the company to do, in that manner, under its articles of association, its capital to six hundred thousand pounds. It was held (reversing the decision of the master of the rolls), that the issue of the one thousand shares, although originally ultra vires, was confirmed by these resolutions.

1. See Brotherhood's Case, 31 Beav. 365; 8 Jur. N. S. 926; Spackman v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 171; Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. L. 249; Allen v. Wilson, 28 Fed. Rep. 677; Scott v. Methodist Church, etc., 50 Mich. 528.

When the stockholders neglect to promptly and actively condemn the unauthorized act, and to seek judicial redress after knowledge of the commitment of it, this will be deemed an acquiescence in it, and if innocent third parties have been led thereby to put themselves in a position from which they cannot be taken without loss if the act were held invalid, the stockholders will be estopped from questioning it. Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Sheldon Hat Blocking Mach. Co. v. Eickemeyer Hat Blocking Co., 90 N. Y. 607.

"If by 'acquiescence' is meant a course of conduct which amounts to active and intelligent consent, I think it very likely that many of these shareholders could not be held to have actively or intelligently consented to what was going on, but what I think is the real question to be looked at in any case of this kind is this: Had the shareholders notice of the way in which the affairs of the company were being conducted and its property was being managed, and of the rights and interests which were created with regard to the stock of the company? If they had that notice, and if they were content not to oppose those acts which they knew were every day being done, then I think they are debarred in point of equity from coming forward at a later period for the purpose of undoing the rights and releases which had been created and given, although it might well be that any remedy to which they would originally have been entitled against the executive of the company for any breach of duty on their part might be unaffected even by lapse of time." The Lord Chancellor (Lord Cairns) in Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. of L. 256.

In Kolff v. St. Paul Fuel Exchange, 48 Minn. 215, it was held that mere failure of a shareholder to object to certain by-laws, which were ultra vires the corporation, until an attempt was made to enforce them against him, did not preclude him from objecting to them.

2. See generally, LACHES, vol. 12, p. 533; AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 432; Kelley v. Newburyport, etc., R. Co., 141 Mass. 496; Gilman, etc., R. Co. v. Kelly, 77 Ill. 426; Bi-Spool, etc., Co. v. Acme Mfg. Co., 152 Mass. 404; Stokes v. Detrick, 75 Md. 256.

In Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. L. 249, Lord Chelmsford said: "Length of time may, in many cases, materially assist in establishing the presumption of acquiescence in an act which requires confirmation to give it validity; but then it is not time, but acquiescence, which changes what would otherwise be a void act into a valid one."

"A shareholder must be considered to be fully informed of the powers given to directors by the deed of association to which he is either actually or constructively a party; but he is not bound to know, and practically he rarely does know, whether the directors are acting within, or exceeding the scope of the authority intrusted to them. Therefore, as your lordships lately held in the case of Spackman v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 171, where the directors had exceeded their powers in allowing certain shareholders to forfeit their shares and retire from the company, the acquiescence of the remaining shareholders was not to be presumed, in the absence of proof of actual knowledge, or means of knowledge of which they had neglected to shareholder, the length of delay on his part that will constitute a bar must depend largely, if not entirely, upon the circumstances of each case. He certainly will not be permitted to wait until events have shown whether ratification or repudiation is the more profitable, but he must act with diligence, and before the act of which he complains has become the foundation of rights or avail themselves." Lord Chelmsford in Downes v. Ship, L. R., 3 H. L. 343.

"It is a most essential proposition, to be rigidly enforced, that in these joint-stock companies absent shareholders should never be bound to do anything more than to assume that the directors are doing their duty, unless in cases where they are informed that, although the directors have not intended to defraud the company, yet, exercising powers not legally conferred upon them, they have gone beyond what they ought to do. If, with knowledge of that fact, the shareholders remain a long time and take no steps whatever, still more if they so remain while great alterations are going on in the company, they must be taken to have retrospectively sanctioned what has been done." Lord Cranworth in Houldsworth v. Evans, L. R., 3 H. L. 263.

In Stanhope's Case, L. R., 1 Ch. 169, Lord Cranworth, L. C., said: "That such a proceeding could not have been supported if questioned at the time it originally took place was hardly contested. But if so, lapse of time makes no difference, for there is nothing to show that any of the other shareholders, still less that all of them, were aware of what had been done. It is said that by examining books and accounts open to their inspection, and consulting the letters of shareholders, as published from time to time, any shareholder might have discovered the truth. This is not to my apprehension very clear, but even supposing it to be so, that is not sufficient. It is no part of the duty of a shareholder to look into the management of the business. He has the right, acting on the terms of the deed, to leave the management in the hands of those to whom he has confided it, and to assume that they are doing their duty. It is not enough to show that they might have become acquainted with the mismanagement of their affairs. It must be shown that they did so."

In Mallory v. Mallory-Wheeler Co. (Conn.), 38 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 120, Andrews, C. J., said: "Ratification ordinarily requires some positive assertive act. Howell v. McCrie, 36 Kan. 636; 59 Am. Rep. 584. In order that acquiescence alone should become ratification, the delay must be so long continued that it can be accounted for only on the theory that there has been some affirmative act. Derby v. Alling, 40 Conn. 410; Evans v. Smallcombe, L. R., 3 H. L. 249. The distinction is perhaps of no consequence in this case. The real claim is that the defendant by long delay has lost all right to avail itself of the original invalidity in the plaintiff's contract; whether it was called 'ratification,' or 'waiver,' or 'acquiescence,' or 'estoppel,' it makes no very great difference. But before such right can be lost in either of the ways mentioned, certain conditions must exist. The delay must have been unreasonable. Lewin on Trusts (Am. ed.) *495, 496; Sherman v. Fitch, 98 Mass. 64; Indianapolis Rolling Mill v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 120 U. S. 256. The stockholder must have had an opportunity to act, and to act with perfect freedom, Hoffman Steam Coal Co. v. Cumberland Coal, etc., Co., 16 Md. 456; Hoxie v. Home Ins. Co., 32 Conn. 40; 85 Am. Dec. 240; Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 512; DeBussche v. Alt, 8 Ch. Div. 286; Kempson v. Ashbee, L. R., 10 Ch. 15; Sayers v. Collyer, 28 Ch. Div. 103; and have been fully advised of all the material facts in the case. Gould v. Blodgett, 61 N. H. 115; Kelly v. Newburyport, etc., R. Co., 141 Mass. 496; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R., 7 C. P. 43; Lewin on Trusts (Am. ed.) *597; Imperial Mercantile Credit Assoc. v. Coleman, L. R., 6 Ch. 558; Albion Steel, etc., Co. v. Martin, 1 Ch. Div. 580; Twin-Lick Oil Co. v. Marbury, 91 U. S. 587."

In many cases it has been said that "the means of knowledge are the same thing in effect as knowledge itself." See Wood v. Carpenter, 101 U. S. 143; Taylor v. South & North Alabama R. Co., 4 Woods (U. S.) 584; Phosphate of Lime Co. v. Green, L. R., 7 C. P. 43.

equities which must be overthrown in order to extend relief to him.¹

Participation by a shareholder in the transaction complained of,²

1. Watts' Appeal, 78 Pa. St. 370; Rabe v. Dunlap (N. J. 1893), 25 Atl. Rep. 959; Moore v. Silver Valley Min. Co., 104 N. Car. 534; Leo v. Union Pac. R. Co., 19 Fed. Rep. 283; Seymour v. Spring Forest Cemetery Assoc. (Supreme Ct.), 19 N. Y. Supp. 94. In Ffooks v. South Western R. Co., 1 Sm. & G. 142, a delay of one year was held to be fatal; in In re Pinto Silver Min. Co., 8 Ch. Div. 273, and Peabody v. Flint, 6 Allen (Mass.) 52, three years; in Boston R. Co. v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 65 N. H. 393; Burt v. British Nat. L. Assur. Assoc., 4 De G. & J. 158; Chetlain v. Republic L. Ins. Co., 86 Ill. 220; International, etc., R. Co. v. Bremond, 53 Tex. 96, two years; in Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159, four years; in Kitchen v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 69 Mo. 224, five years; in Graham v. Birkenhead, etc., R. Co., 2 Mac. & G. 146, eighteen months; in Gray v. Chaplin, 2 Russ. 126, forty-seven years; in Alexander v. Searcy, 81 Ga. 546; 12 Am. St. Rep. 337, fifteen years; in Descombes v. Wood, 91 Mo. 196; 60 Am. Rep. 239, four years; in Dimpfel v. Ohio, etc., R. Co., 110 U. S. 209, three years and eight months.

In Chicago v. Cameron, 120 Ill. 448, it was held that where no attempt is made to enforce the payment of bonds of a railroad company wrongfully delivered for other than a corporate purpose, a delay of eleven and a half years in the bringing of a suit by the stockholders to cancel and set aside the bonds and the deed of trust given to secure their payment, is not a bar to the relief sought.

In Mills v. Central R. Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 12, it was said: "If a stockholder, in order to save his rights in such a case as this, is bound to bring suit, a delay of fifty-four days in bringing it is not, under such circumstances as this case presents, laches. Sixty days is the time given by the statute for filing an answer to a bill, and surely he may, without forfeiting his rights, take as much time to prepare his bill as the defendants would have by law to put in their answer. If a stockholder whose rights are disregarded and trampled under foot makes reasonable haste to bring suit, it is enough."

"But it is to a dissentient stockholder that the relief is granted, and to a stockholder who comes with diligence to assert his rights. If a stockholder assents to acts ultra vires, or, although not originally or expressly assenting, has for an unreasonable time acquiesced, and has permitted them to go unquestioned, so that other parties, who have acted upon the faith of them (as, for instance, by making large expenditures of money), would suffer great injury from their repudiation, a court of equity would not easily be induced to grant relief at the instance of such a stockholder." Berry, J., in Stewart v. Erie, etc., Transp. Co., 17 Minn. 372.

2. Parsons v. Joseph, 92 Ala. 406; Bartelle v. North Western Cement, etc., Co., 37 Minn. 89; Venner v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 581; Barr v. Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., 51 Fed. Rep. 33; Rio Grande Cattle Co. v. Burns, 82 Tex. 50. See also the cases cited in the preceding notes to this section.

In Terry v. Eagle Lock Co., 47 Conn. 161, the court, by Carpenter, J., said: "In many instances a court of equity will refuse to interfere with the corporation, at the instance of a stockholder, in respect to an unauthorized contract which has been fully executed, when, if the same stockholder had applied in season for an order to restrain the execution of the contract, it might have felt bound to grant the relief prayed for, and especially is this so where, as in this case, the petitioner has stood by and allowed the alleged illegal transaction to be consummated, and has allowed and even induced others to become interested in the corporation, upon the supposition that the existing state of things is legal and proper. If it be conceded, therefore, that the transaction was originally ultra vires, a point we do not discuss, we should not have felt justified in interfering with it at this time except for very strong reasons. Such reasons do not exist in this case. On the contrary, there are pretty cogent reasons why we should not interfere."

In Mills v. Central R. Co., 41 N. J. Eq. 1, it was held that, where one of two trustees, who held stock of the or acceptance by him of the benefits and fruits thereof, with full knowledge,¹ will constitute a bar to his relief.

The ratification of a particular act of the directors in excess of their authority will not authorize the performance of similar acts in the future.²

A transferee of shares with notice that the prior holder was precluded from objecting by reason of laches, is bound by the same disqualification; but a transferee in good faith and without notice is not thus barred.³

IX. RIGHTS OF THE STATE—1. To Restrain Ultra Vires Acts.—The right of stockholders, creditors and other parties, to invoke the interposition of equity against the commission by the corporation of ultra vires acts, has been treated in a former part of this article.⁴ The question here has reference solely to the rights of the state to restrain such acts. The better opinion seems to be that equity may not, in the absence of an express grant of jurisdiction, restrain by injunction, at the suit of the state, the bare usurpation, excess, or abuse of corporate powers; that the appropriate remedy of the state in such case is at law by information in the defendant as part of their trust funds, merely expressed an opinion favorable to the lease of the defendant's road to another, but refused to vote for a resolution by the stockholders directing the officers to make the lease, and subsequently voted against ratifying it, he was not estopped by acquiescence from asserting its validity.

In Mowrey v. Indianapolis, etc., R. Co., 4 Biss. (U. S.) 78, it was held that if a member of the board of directors is present at the adoption of a resolution, and aware of what is being done, and does not object, he must be presumed to have assented to it; but if such proceeding is simply preliminary to a decision by a subsequent vote of the shareholders on the consolidation of the company with another company, which can only be ultimately decided by the vote of all the shareholders, and not of the board of directors, such consent so given by a director, who is also a shareholder, will not preclude him from subsequently objecting to the consolidation.

1. Alexander v. Searcy, 81 Ga. 546; 12 Am. St. Rep. 337; Tyrell v. Cairo, etc., R. Co., 7 Mo. App. 294; Branch v. Jesup, 106 U. S. 469; Parsons v. Joseph, 92 Ala. 406; Venner v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 581; Dexter v. Long, 2 Wash. 435; West Salem Land Co. v. Montgomery Land Co., 89 Va. 192. But the receipt of money as a part of the earnings of a corporation is no ratification of acts of business carried on outside of the corporation without knowledge of him who is sought to be charged with them that the money came from such business. Central City Sav. Bank v. Walker, 66 N. Y. 429. See also Baldwin v. Burrows, 47 N. Y. 199.

2. Irvine v. Union Bank, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 366. See also Bloxham v. Metropolitan R. Co., L. R., 3 Ch. 354; Ashbury v. Watson, L. R., 28 Ch. Div. 56. But in Wood v. Boney (N. J. 1891), 21 Atl. Rep. 574, it was held that a shareholder may not object to a meeting of the directory on the ground that it was held beyond the state of the company's incorporation, it appearing that he attended the previous meetings, nearly all of which were held at the same place, and made no objection.

3. Ffooks v. South Western R. Co., 1 Sm. & G. 142; Kent v. Quicksilver Min. Co., 78 N. Y. 159; Matter of Syracuse, etc., R. Co., 91 N. Y. 1; Hollins v. St. Paul, etc., R. Co. (Supreme Ct.), 9 N. Y. Supp. 909; Parsons v. Joseph, 92 Ala. 403; Brown v. Duluth, etc., R. Co., 53 Fed. Rep. 889; Venner v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 28 Fed. Rep. 581; Ashbury v. Watson, 28 Ch. Div. 56; 1 Morawetz on Corporations, § 267. See generally LACHES, vol. 12, p. 533; STOCK, vol. 23, p. 582; STOCKHOLDERS, vol. 23, p. 776.

4. See supra, this title, Restraining nature of a quo warranto. In order to sustain the proceeding in equity, it must be made to appear that some injury to the public either has ensued, or is likely to ensue, from the ultra vires act.¹

Now, by statute in some of the states, courts of chancery have Ultra Vires Acts—Stockholders and Creditors.

1. The leading case upon this question in this country is Atty. Gen'l v. Utica Ins. Co., 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 371, where Chancellor Kent, in a very able and elaborate opinion, after a thorough discussion of the question upon principle, and an extensive examination of the earlier authorities, held that such a proceeding could not be maintained to restrain an insurance company from exercising banking powers in violation of a statute of New York, but that the proper remedy was at law by information in the nature of a quo warranto. The Chancellor said: "If a charge be of a criminal nature, or an offense against the public, and does not touch the enjoyment of property, it ought not to be brought within the direct jurisdiction of this court, which was intended to deal only in matters of civil right resting in equity, or where the remedy at law was not sufficiently adequate. . . . If the defendants are carrying on banking operations contrary to law, they ought, undoubtedly, to be restrained, but I cannot be of opinion that the operation is such a mischief or public nuisance as to require the immediate and extraordinary process of this court to abate it." No appeal appears to have been taken from this decree, and an information in the nature of a quo warranto was thereupon filed and sustained by the supreme court of New York, and judgment rendered thereon that the corporation be ousted from the franchise which it had usurped. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 358; 8 Am. Dec. 243. Followed in Atty. Gen'l v. Bank of Niagara, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 354. See also Pixley v. Roanoke Nov. Co., 75 Va. 325; U. S. v. Union Pac. R. Co., 98 U. S. 569.

In Atty. Gen'l v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 35 Wis. 432, an injunction was granted in favor of the state, acting through its attorney general, to restrain certain railroad companies from charging tolls for the transportation of passengers and freight in excess of the rates allowed by law. Chief Justice Ryan, who delivered the opinion in this case, assails the decision of Chancellor Kent just referred to.

In Atty. Gen'l v. Tudor Ice Co., 104 Mass. 239; 6 Am. Rep. 227, it was held that, "this court has no jurisdiction in equity of an information by the attorney general against a private trading corporation, whose proceedings are not shown to have injured or endangered any public or private rights, and are objected to solely on the ground that they are not authorized by the act of incorporation, and are, therefore, against public policy." Gray, J., in delivering the opinion of the court, said: "The single case in which an information has been sustained in an English court of chancery against a corporation for carrying on a business beyond its corporate powers is Atty. Gen'l v. Great Northern R. Co., 1 D. & S. 154, in which Vice Chancellor Kindersley in 1860 restrained a railway company from trading in coal in large quantities, upon the ground that there was danger that, if allowed to go on, it might get into its hands the coal trade of the whole district from or through which its railway ran, and thus acquire a monopoly injurious to the public. That case is evidently the foundation of the dictum of Vice Chancellor Wood, two years later, in Hare v. London, etc., R. Co., 2 J. & H. 111."

That Vice Chancellor Kindersley did proceed upon the ground that the question involved was a matter of grave damage and injury to the public is obvious from the following observation. He said: "Wherever the interests of the public are damaged by a company established for any particular purpose by act of Parliament acting illegally and in contravention of the powers conferred upon it, I conceive it is the function and the duty of the attorney general to protect the interests of the public by an information."

In Atty. Gen'l v. Great Eastern R. Co., 11 Ch. Div. 449, James, L. J., said: "In my judgment, where the matter is a mere matter of ultra vires—that is, whether the managing partners of a concern are or are not doing something outside of their charter, act of Parliament, or deed of settlement—there ought to be some plain and sufficient public mischief shown to warrant a suit on behalf of the sovereign or the people. It is not, in my opinion, sufficient to say the thing complained of is ultra vires and that it interests the public; that whatever may be the nature or extent of the excess complained of, the excess should be at once stopped, so that bodies incorporated and established by an act of Parliament should be taught to keep within their strict lines. I cannot accede to any such view of the duty of the attorney general or of this court. . . . It is only where some public mischief is done, or where, in respect of something intended for the public protection, there is misfeasance or nonfeasance, that the attorney general ought to interfere. If a particular landowner has cause of complaint, it is for him to appeal to the tribunals. If, as between the company and its shareholders, there is a wrongful application of the capital or a wrongful incurring of liabilities, it is for the shareholders to complain. If, as between the company and any persons outside the company, it is entering into contracts ultra vires, it is for such persons to take proper advice and guard themselves from risks which they are perfectly free to avoid. I cannot myself see any principle on which the attorney general is to interfere with a railway company's contracts merely because they are ultra vires, any more than he would on the like ground interfere with the contracts of any other incorporated joint-stock company carrying on other industrial enterprises."

In Stockton v. Central R. Co., 50 N. J. Eq. 54, a New Jersey railway company leased its franchises and roads to a similar corporation of another state. The lease was not only unauthorized, but was expressly forbidden by law. Its effect was to combine coal producers and carriers, and to partially destroy competition in the production and sale of anthracite coal, a staple commodity of the state. This was held to be a corporate excess of power tending to monopoly and the public injury, and might well be restrained by equity at the suit of the attorney general. See also Pennsylvania R. Co. v. Com. (Pa. 1886), 7 Atl. Rep. 368; Gulf, etc., R. Co. v. State, 72 Tex. 404.

In Atty. Gen'l v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Corp., 133 Mass. 361, it was held that an information in equity in behalf of the state, through its attorney general, will lie against a quasi public corporation doing and contemplating acts which are ultra vires and illegal, the necessary effects of which are not merely to impair the rights of the public in the use of one of the great ponds of the commonwealth for the purposes of boating and fishing, but to create a nuisance by lowering the pond and exposing upon its shores slime, mud, and offensive vegetation hurtful to the public health. Here the court said: "The information in this case alleges not only that the defendant is doing acts which are ultra vires, and an abuse of the power granted it by the legislature, but also that the necessary effect of such acts will be to create a public nuisance. This brings the case within the established principle that the court has jurisdiction in equity to restrain and prevent nuisances. And when the nuisance is a public one, an information by the attorney general is the appropriate remedy."

That such proceedings may be sustained where the unauthorized act amounts to a public nuisance, requiring immediate judicial interference, such as the obstruction of highways and navigable waters, see Atty. Gen'l v. Shrewsbury Bridge Co., 21 Ch. Div. 752; Atty. Gen'l v. Cockermouth Local Board, L. R., 18 Eq. 172; Atty. Gen'l v. Leeds, L. R., 5 Ch. 583; Atty. Gen'l v. Southampton, 2 Giff. 363; Ware v. Regent's Canal Co., 3 De G. & J. 212; Georgetown v. Alexandria Canal Co., 12 Pet. (U. S.) 98; Pennsylvania v. Wheeling, etc., Bridge Co., 13 How. (U. S.) 518; District Atty. v. Lynn, etc., R. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 242; Atty. Gen'l v. Boston Wharf Co., 12 Gray (Mass.) 553; Atty. Gen'l v. Tudor Ice Co., 104 Mass. 244; 6 Am. Rep. 227; Atty. Gen'l v. Cohoes Co., 6 Paige (N. Y.) 133; 29 Am. Dec. 755; Thompson v. Patterson, etc., R. Co., 9 N. J. Eq. 526; Com. v. Pittsburg, etc., R. Co., 24 Pa. St. 159.

So, too, the attorney general may sue to restrain public corporations from acting ultra vires where public interests are involved. Atty. Gen'l v. West Hartlepool Imp. Com'rs, L. R., 10 Eq. 152; People v. New York, 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 35; aff'd 32 Barb. (N. Y.) 102; State v. New York, 3 Duer (N. Y.) 159; Ewing v. Board of Education, 72 Mo. 440; State v. Saline County Ct., 51 Mo. 350. See also MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS, vol. 15, p. 949; INJUNCTIONS, vol. 10, p. 777.

power to restrain by injunction any corporation from assuming or exercising any franchise, liberty or privilege, or transacting any business not allowed by its charter, and in the same manner, to restrain any individuals from exercising any corporate rights, privileges, or franchises not granted to them by the law of the state.¹

2. To Forfeit Charter—a. WHEN ENFORCED.—The right of the state to revoke corporate franchises for misuser or nonuser has been said to be "the common law of the land and a tacit condition annexed to the creation of every corporation."²

The subject of forfeiture of corporate charters on the ground of mere nonuser does not find a proper place in this article.

Obstruction of Road—Balance of Public Convenience.—It has been held that where a railway company has diverted its road ultra vires, but with a bona fide view to public convenience, equity will not compel it to replace the road so as to make its work intra vires, if the result be to occasion greater inconvenience to the public, or to the complaining section of the public. Atty. Gen'l v. Ely, etc., R. Co., L. R., 6 Eq. 106. Here Lord Romilly, M. R., said: "I decline to interfere by injunction, either ordinary or mandatory; but as I think that the attorney general ought not to be prevented from proceeding to abate any obstruction or nuisance which he may consider to exist on the highway or on the parish road in question, I shall dismiss the information without costs, and without prejudice to the attorney general taking such steps at law, by way of indictment or otherwise, as he may think proper."

1. People v. Ballard, 134 N. Y. 269 (reviewing the legislation of the state upon the subject of the jurisdiction of chancery over corporations); Atty. Gen'l v. Bank of Chenango, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 598; Verplanck v. New York Mercantile Ins. Co., 1 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 88; Bank Com'rs v. Bank of Buffalo, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 497; Atty. Gen'l v. Bank of Niagara, Hopk. Ch. (N. Y.) 354; Chicago L. Ins. Co. v. Needles, 113 U. S. 574 (involving Illinois statute); State v. Merchants' Ins., etc., Co., 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 235.

Texas Constitution, art. 4, § 22, providing that the attorney general shall especially inquire into the charter rights of all private corporations, and in the name of the state take such action in the courts as may be proper to prevent any private corporation from exercising any power, etc., unauthorized by law, is held to authorize that officer to maintain such a suit only when the public interest will be subserved thereby, and does not extend to restraining the unlawful action on the part of the corporation which will affect only private interests. State v. Farmers' L. & T. Co., 81 Tex. 530; State v. Kennedy, 81 Tex. 553.

2. Terrett v. Taylor, 9 Cranch (U. S.) 43, per Story, J. And the same high authority in another case, said that, "a corporation by the very terms and nature of its political existence is subject to dissolution by forfeiture of its franchises for willful misuser or nonuser." Mumma v. Potomac Co., 8 Pet. (U. S.) 287.

And in Com. v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. St. 389, the court said: "It is now well settled by numerous authorities that it is a tacit condition of a grant of incorporation that the grantees shall act up to the end or design for which they were incorporated; and hence, through neglect or abuse of its franchises, a corporation may forfeit its charter, as for condition broken, or for a breach of trust. Angell & Ames on Corp., p. 660."

In People v. Dashaway Assoc., 84 Cal. 814, it was said that the cases of forfeiture may be divided into two classes: First, cases of perversion, as where a corporation does an act inconsistent with the nature, and destructive of the end and purposes, of the grant. In these cases, unless the perversion is such as to amount to an injury to the public, who are interested in the franchise, it will not work a forfeiture. Second, cases of usurpation, as where a corporation exercises powers and privileges which it has no right to exercise. In this class of cases the question of forfeiture is not dependent, as

Moreover, the principles governing the subject have been fully treated in other parts of this work.¹ This discussion will be confined, as far as practicable, to forfeitures for the exercise of powers, privileges, and liberties not granted to the corporation.

No mere intention or purpose on the part of a corporation to violate its duty can constitute ground for forfeiture of its charter. Its officers and managers have, like individuals, a locus pœnitentiæ.²

Where a corporation has been guilty of acts which are made by statute a cause of forfeiture, and the state by its proper representative demands a judgment of dissolution on account thereof, the court has no discretion to refuse such judgment upon the ground that public or private interest would be better subserved by preserving the existence of the corporation.³ But in other cases, it seems that the court is invested with discretion to determine whether judgment of ouster of the franchise to be a corporation shall be rendered, or whether the corporation shall be ousted merely of the particular power illegally assumed, and ordinarily the latter course will be adopted if the public good is sufficiently protected thereby and does not demand the former.⁴

It has been held that if a corporation, formed under a general in the former, upon any interest of, or injury to, the public. See also Harris v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 51 Miss. 605; Commercial Bank v. State, 6 Smed. & M. (Miss.) 617; 45 Am. Dec. 280; People v. Hillsdale, etc., Turnpike Co., 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 190; State v. Kill Buck Turnpike Co., 38 Ind. 71.

1. See CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, p. 184; FORFEITURE, vol. 8, p. 443; FRANCHISES, vol. 8, p. 584; INFORMATION (CRIMINAL), vol. 10, p. 702; QUO WARRANTO, vol. 19, p. 660.

2. Com. v. Pittsburgh, etc., R. Co., 58 Pa. St. 26. Here it was said, by Sharswood, J., that, "it would be unjust, before the act was consummated, to visit the corporate body itself with the extreme penalty of civil death and confiscation." See also State v. Kingan, 51 Ind. 142; State v. Beck, 81 Ind. 500.

3. State v. Pennsylvania, etc., Canal Co., 23 Ohio St. 121; State v. Oberlin Bldg., etc., Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258. See also State v. Minnesota Cent. R. Co., 36 Minn. 246; People v. Northern R. Co., 53 Barb. (N. Y.) 98; People v. Fishkill, etc., Plank Road Co., 27 Barb. (N. Y.) 445.

4. State v. Ironton Gas Co., 37 Ohio St. 45; State v. Southwestern Transp. Co., 23 Ohio St. 166; State v. Cincinnati, etc., R. Co., 47 Ohio St. 130; State v. Greenville Bldg., etc., Assoc., 29 Ohio St. 92; State v. Farmers' College, 32 Ohio St. 487; State v. Standard

Ins. Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 281; State v. Middleburgh Mut. Aid, etc., Assoc., 38 Ohio St. 300; People v. Rensselaer, etc., R. Co., 15 Wend. (N. Y.) 113; Central, etc., Road Co. v. People, 5 Colo. 39.

In State v. Oberlin Bldg., etc., Assoc., 35 Ohio St. 258, the court said: "With some hesitation, a majority of the court have reached the conclusion that it will be for the interest of the stockholders, as well as the public, that we should render the latter (ouster of the particular power) instead of the former (ouster of the franchise to be a corporation) judgment. The evidence satisfies us that if the corporation is permitted to wind up its affairs, the work will be accomplished in a few months. But if the association should be ousted from its franchise to be a corporation, we would be required to appoint trustees under the act of 1878, 75 Ohio Laws 817, § 22; Rev. Sta., § 6781, and this would occasion delay and involve increased expense. Accordingly, the corporation will be ousted from the exercise of the powers referred to in the first paragraph of the syllabus, and from the power of permitting any member to hold in his own right more than twenty shares of stock, but not from its franchise to be a corporation, nor from the exercise of the power referred to in the second paragraph of the syllabus."

statute authorizing incorporation for any legal purpose except, among others mentioned, that of insurance, attempts to transact the business of life insurance, it may be proceeded against for usurping powers not conferred by law.¹

Where a bank had willfully and repeatedly violated a prohibition in its charter against dealing in promissory notes, and making loans at a greater rate of discount than that specified therein, the charter was declared forfeited.²

And judgment of ouster was rendered against an insurance company for doing a banking business without authority and in violation of a general statute restraining unauthorized banking.³ So if a bank makes loans to its directors,⁴ or keeps its principal place of business and its books and records out of the state, in violation of statute,⁵ it is subject to forfeiture.

And in State v. People's Mut. Ben. Assoc., 42 Ohio St. 579, the court said: "The present membership of the defendant numbers about thirty-five hundred, chiefly worthy and deserving people, utterly innocent, if not wholly ignorant, of any misuse or abuse of its franchises. Purged of the unfortunate features of its management which this trial has developed, this association is capable of much usefulness. To visit perversion of its objects by a few upon the heads of the entire membership must result in irremediable hardship. Without stating more fully the grounds of our action or the considerations which move us, it must serve our present purpose to say that the relator's prayer that the defendant be ousted of its franchise to be a corporation is refused. Judgment will be entered, however, ousting it of the use of its franchise for the profit of its trustees and for the issuing of certificates of membership in the form complained of by the relator."

In State v. Essex Bank, 8 Vt. 489, it was held, that while the withdrawing of bank stock under the form of loans upon private security, if permitted with intent to reduce the effective capital below the amount required by charter, was a violation of the charter, yet on proceedings had upon information for the purpose of vacating the charter, it is not a matter of course that for this cause it will be declared vacated. The power of the court is to be exercised in discretion, and if no existing danger to the community requires it to be exercised, the court will decline to exercise it.

In Com. v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa.

St. 383, where the bank had repeatedly and willfully violated a prohibition in its charter against dealing in promissory notes, and making loans at more than a specified rate of discount, the court said: "We have no doubt that a violation of the charter in either of these particulars defeats the chief object of the grant and is good ground for demanding judgment of forfeiture. These abuses are of such magnitude and affect the public so injuriously that when willfully persisted in it becomes a duty of high obligation on the part of those in authority rigidly to enforce the forfeiture."

1. The Golden Rule v. People, 118 Ill. 492.

An Ohio statute (66 Ohio Laws 125, 126), authorized incorporation for the purpose of building and repairing steamboats. A corporation formed under this statute undertook to build and maintain wharves. It was held that the statute did not authorize incorporation for such a purpose and judgment of ouster from doing such business was rendered. State v. Southwestern Transp., etc., Co., 23 Ohio St. 166. Subsequently the company persisted in conducting this forbidden business, and in a second suit, judgment of forfeiture was rendered against it. State v. McCoy, unreported, cited in 33 Ohio St. 453.

2. Com. v. Commercial Bank, 28 Pa. St. 383.

3. People v. Utica Ins. Co., 15 Johns. (N. Y.) 355; 8 Am. Dec. 243.

4. Banking Com'rs v. Buffalo Bank, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 497.

5. State v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 45 Wis. 579.

It has been held that if a bank's corporate existence is fixed by its charter in a specified city or town, any attempt to exercise elsewhere those powers which are essential corporate franchises, will be illegal and subject it to forfeiture.¹

But it seems that a mere negligent or mistaken excess of power, will not of itself warrant a judgment of forfeiture.²

When a corporation has given instructions to its agents, in accordance with its charter, for their guidance in the conduct of its business as prescribed by that instrument, violation of the instructions by the mere agents, without the knowledge, connivance, acquiescence or approbation of the corporation, affords no ground for forfeiture.³

Corporations of a quasi public character, such as railway, turnpike, telegraph, and gas companies, may not, in the absence of special authority, dispose of their property or franchises in any way calculated to disable them from discharging their duties to the public, and for such acts their charters are subject to forfeiture.⁴

In several very recent cases, where a corporation had entered into a trust combination, the object of which was to destroy competition in an article of commerce and create a monopoly therein, its charter was decreed forfeited. Such an act, besides being ultra vires, is against public policy, as being in restraint of trade.⁵

The courts of one state may not revoke or annul a corporate

1. People v. Oakland County Bank, 1 Dougl. (Mich.) 282. See also Thompson v. Waters, 25 Mich. 242; 12 Am. Rep. 243; Underwood v. Waldron, 12 Mich. 91; Detroit F. & M. Ins. Co. v. Judge, 23 Mich. 494.

2. For example, in State v. Merchants', etc., Ins. Co., 8 Humph. (Tenn.) 235, it was held that the action of the respondent in loaning money at a higher rate than was allowable through a mistaken idea of its powers, was not a fatal abuse of its charter. See also State v. Consolidated Coal Co., 46 Md. 1; People v. Kingston, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 193; 35 Am. Dec. 551.

3. Tuscaloosa Scientific, etc., Assoc. v. State, 58 Ala. 54.

4. See CORPORATIONS, vol. 4, p. 272 et seq.; Com. v. Tenth Mass. Turnpike Co., 5 Cush. (Mass.) 509; State v. Pawtuxet Turnpike Co., 8 R. I. 521; 94 Am. Dec. 123.

In East Line, etc., R. Co. v. State, 75 Tex. 434, the respondent, a railroad chartered under the laws of Texas and doing business in that state, was sold to the Mo., Kan. & Texas Ry., a competing road; forfeiture of the respondent's charter was decreed, and its property put into the hands of a receiver.

Under similar facts, in State v. Atchison, etc., R. Co., 24 Neb. 143; 8 Am. St. Rep. 164, the court declared that such consolidation was ground for forfeiture, but confined the judgment to ouster from that particular transaction. See supra, this title, Contracts Unfitting Corporations for Performance of Public Duties.

5. See TRADE COMBINATIONS AND CORPORATE TRUSTS, vol. 26, p. 229. In People v. North River Sugar Refining Co., 121 N. Y. 582; 18 Am. St. Rep. 843, the defendant was one of the companies forming the sugar trust. All the shareholders of the defendant (in pursuance of a former agreement) joined in selling the entire stock to one Searles, one of the trustees of the sugar trust, who proceeded to operate the company in the interests of the trust. The decision contained two points: first, that the act of the shareholders in selling out their shares to the trust, was the act of the corporation; secondly, that the object of the trust was in restraint of trade and illegal, and that the act of the corporation in joining this "trust" was so charter granted by the laws of another state, but they may withdraw franchises granted to such a corporation by their own state, when justified by the facts, and, by injunction or otherwise, prevent the corporation carrying on business therein in violation of its laws.¹

b. HOW ENFORCED.—The subject of the modes of proceeding much against public policy as to justify a forfeiture. Finch, J., in an extremely able opinion, said: "And yet it is argued that the corporation, the legal entity, has done nothing; that Searles was guilty, but the corporate robe that enveloped him was innocent, and so he must be left to wear it undisturbed; that while all that was human and could act, had sinned, yet the impalpable entity had not acted at all and must go free. I think there may be actual corporate conduct which is not formal corporate action; and where that conduct is directed or produced by the whole body, both of officers and stockholders, by every living instrumentality which can possess and wield the corporate franchise, that conduct is of a corporate character, and if illegal and injurious may deserve and receive the penalty of dissolution." In same case at page 625, the same judge observes: "As corporate grants are always assumed to have been made for the public benefit, any conduct which destroys their normal functions, and maims and cripples their separate activity, and takes away their free and independent action, must so far disappoint the purpose of their creation as to affect unfavorably the public interest; and that to a much greater extent when beyond their own several aggregations of capital they compact them all into one combination which stands outside of the ward of the state, which dominates the range of an entire industry, and puts upon the market a capital stock proudly defiant of actual values, and capable of an unlimited expansion. It is not a sufficient answer to say that similar results may be lawfully accomplished; that an individual having the necessary wealth might have bought all these refineries, manned them with his own chosen agents, and managed them as a group at his sovereign will; for it is one thing for the state to respect the rights of ownership and protect them out of regard to the business freedom of the citizen, and quite another thing to add to that possibility a further extension of those consequences by creating artificial persons to aid in producing such aggregations."

The next case was that of the whisky trust. The Nebraska Distilling Co., by vote of all the shareholders, sold all its property to trustees in trust for the Distillers' and Cattle-Feeders' Trust, the official name of the whisky trust. It was held that inasmuch as the object of the whisky trust was to destroy competition and create a monopoly, the action of the defendant corporation was a breach of its duty to the state that demanded its dissolution. State v. Nebraska Distilling Co., 29 Neb. 700.

The third case was decided by the supreme court of Ohio in March, 1892. The shareholders of the Standard Oil Co., an Ohio corporation, entered into an agreement with certain other companies and certain parties as trustees, for the formation of the Standard Oil Trust. By this agreement it covenanted that corporations should be formed in each of several states as soon as possible, and that, upon the formation of such companies, the parties to this agreement (among whom were the shareholders of the defendant), would transfer their property to such new companies. It was held that the action of the shareholders was the corporate act of the defendant, and as such was properly punishable by forfeiture. But the judgment was the annulment of this particular agreement and not forfeiture, because the attorney general had failed to comply with the provision of the Ohio statutes requiring suit to be instituted within five years from the date of the agreement. State v. Standard Oil Co., 49 Ohio St. 137.

1. State v. Fidelity, etc., Ins. Co. (Ohio, 1892), 37 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 583; State v. Fidelity, etc., Ins. Co., 39 Minn. 538; State v. Western Union L. Ins. Co., 47 Ohio St. 167; Talbott v. Fidelity, etc., Ins. Co., 74 Md. 536; 35 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 262; State v. Fidelity & Cas. Ins. Co., 77 Iowa 648; 26 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 22; State v.

against a corporation to forfeit its franchises has been thoroughly treated in other parts of this work.¹

c. WAIVER.—The state may exact the forfeiture of corporate rights, or waive it, as may seem best to it for the public interests. The waiver may be implied or express, as by subsequent legislative acts recognizing the continued existence of the corporation.²

Boston, etc., R. Co., 25 Vt. 433; Merrick v. Van Santvoord, 34 N. Y. 208; Silver Lake Bank v. North, 4 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 373; East Line, etc., R. Co. v. State, 75 Tex. 451; Society, etc., v. New Haven, 8 Wheat. (U. S.) 464; Importing, etc., Co. v. Locke, 50 Ala. 335. See generally, FOREIGN CORPORATIONS, vol. 8, p. 329.

1. See CORPORATIONS (PRIVATE), vol. 4, pp. 291, 302; FORFEITURE, vol. 8, p. 445; INFORMATION (CRIMINAL), vol. 10, p. 709 et seq.; QUO WARRANTO, vol. 19, p. 660; SCIRE FACIAS, vol. 21, p. 879 et seq.

2. Com. v. Union F. Ins., etc., Co., 5 Mass. 230; 4 Am. Dec. 50; People v. Los Angeles Electric R. Co., 91 Cal. 338; People v. Ulster, etc., R. Co., 128 N. Y. 240; Atty. Gen'l v. Petersburg, etc., R. Co., 6 Ired. (N. Car.) 456; Snell v. Chicago, 133 Ill. 413; State v. Minnesota Cent. R. Co., 36 Minn. 262; State v. Mississippi, etc., R. Co., 20 Ark. 495; People v. Manhattan Co., 9 Wend. (N. Y.) 351; Farnsworth v. Lime Rock R. Co., 83 Me. 440; Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co. v. Baltimore, etc., R. Co., 4 Gill & J. (Md.) 127; Com. v. Allegheny Bridge Co., 20 Pa. St. 185; People v. Kingston, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 193; 35 Am. Dec. 551; People v. Bristol, etc., Turnpike Road Co., 23 Wend. (N. Y.) 222.

"The alleged forfeiture by . . . the railroad company of all or any part of its corporate rights, powers or privileges, is, therefore, impertinent to the present controversy. If it were material, the successive legislative enactments in recognition of its existence, and in confirmation and extension of its powers to which reference has already been made, . . . would operate as a remission and waiver in respect of any cause of forfeiture previously existing." Per Sandford, J., in Central Crosstown R. Co. v. Twenty-third St. R. Co., 54 How. Pr. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 168.

In State v. Real Estate Bank, 5 Ark. 506; 41 Am. Dec. 109, it was held that if, after an act has been done by a bank, which is ground for forfeiture, the legislature directs the governor to borrow money from the bank, knowing the ground of forfeiture to exist, this constitutes a waiver of the forfeiture.

In Thomas v. West Jersey R. Co., 101 U. S. 71, a railroad company incorporated and doing business under the laws of New Jersey leased its road and franchises. The lease was held to be ultra vires and void. While the lease was in operation, an act was passed by the New Jersey legislature making it unlawful for "directors, lessees, or agents" of that road to charge more than specified rates. It was argued that the use of the word "lessees" operated a ratification of the lease, but this was negated by the court in the following language: "It is not by such an incidental use of the word 'lessees' in an effort to make sure that all who collected fares should be bound by the law, that a contract, unauthorized by the charter and forbidden by public policy, is to be made valid and ratified by the state."

In People v. Phoenix Bank, 24 Wend. (N. Y.) 431; 35 Am. Dec. 634, it is held, that where by the act incorporating a bank, the legislature reserves the power of annually appointing one of the directors of the institution, and an information in the nature of a quo warranto is filed against it for a misuser of its franchises, an appointment of a director by the governor and the senate subsequently to the filing of the information is not a waiver of the forfeiture. The legislature alone may waive such forfeiture.

And where, in quo warranto proceedings to oust a foreign insurance company from the right to do business prohibited by the laws of Ohio, the defense was set up that the offense had been condoned by the issue of a certificate to the offending corporation by the Ohio superintendent of insurance, Minshall, J., said: "We are of the opinion that the issuing of a license to a foreign insurance company to do business in this state is a ministerial and not a judicial act, and is not a bar to a proceeding against it in quo warranto,

The waiver of the right to claim forfeiture confers no new rights upon the corporation. It is merely the surrender by the sovereign of a right reserved to itself upon the original grant.¹

The state may not be estopped from instituting quo warranto proceedings against a private corporation for the usurpation of rights and franchises, upon the ground that it has been recognized as a corporation by a municipality of the state.²

UMPIRE—(See also ARBITRATION, vol. 1, p. 689).—An umpire is a person whom two arbitrators, appointed and duly authorized by parties, select to decide the matter in controversy, concerning which the arbitrators are unable to agree. His province is to determine the issue submitted to the arbitrators on which they have failed to agree, and to make an award thereon which is his sole award. Neither of the original arbitrators is required to join in the award, in order to make it valid and binding on the parties. In the absence of any agreement or assent by the parties to the controversy, dispensing with all civil hearing by the umpire, it is his duty to hear the whole case, and to make a distinct and independent award thereon, as the result of his judgment. He stands, in fact, in the same situation as a sole arbitrator, and he is bound to hear and determine the case in like manner as if it had been originally submitted to his determination.³

UNAVOIDABLE—(See also INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, vol. 10, p. 601; ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, p. 173; ACCIDENT, vol. 18, p. 82).—See note 4.

when it is found to be exercising any of the franchises of the state without authority of law." State v. Fidelity, etc., Ins. Co. (Ohio), 37 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 583. See also State v. Fidelity, etc., Ins. Co., 39 Minn. 538.

1. Matter of New York El. R. Co., 70 N. Y. 338. Here it was held that a legislative act waiving the right to claim the forfeiture of the railroad's charter was not in violation of a constitutional prohibition against laws conferring exclusive franchises, etc.

But where a corporation engages in another and entirely different business from that contemplated by its charter, so that there is ground for forfeiture, if the legislature, during the existence of such ground of forfeiture, passes a law amending the act under which it was organized, in which its corporate existence is clearly recognized, its acquisitions confirmed, its powers enlarged and new ones conferred, so as to embrace its business as then conducted, such amendatory act will, in effect, constitute a new charter and operate as a waiver of any cause of forfeiture, and the corporation may subsequently engage in any business authorized by such later and amendatory act. People v. Ottawa Hydraulic Co., 115 Ill. 281.

2. Atty. Gen'l v. Hanchett, 42 Mich. 436.

3. Haven v. Winnisimmet Co., 11 Allen (Mass.) 384; 87 Am. Dec. 723; Ingraham v. Whitmore, 75 Ill. 30; Watson on Arbitration (3d ed.) 100; McKinstry v. Solomons, 2 Johns. (N. Y.) 57; 13 Johns. (N. Y.) 27; Bates v. Cooke, 9 B. & C. 407; 17 E. C. L. 407; In re Salkeld, 12 Ad. & El. 767; 40 E. C. L. 189; Passmore v. Pettit, 4 Dall. (U. S.) 271. So a testator may appoint his executor as umpire to decide disputed questions as to his intentions. American Board, etc., of Foreign Missions v. Terry, 15 Fed. Rep. 700.

4. Unavoidable casualty, as the term is used in a lease to limit the lessee's liability to pay rent, has been held to comprehend only damage or destruction arising from supervening and uncontrollable force or accidents; that is, events or accidents which human prudence and foresight could not prevent; and not to extend to a mere want of repair arising from lapse of

UNBECOMING.—See note 1.

UNBORN CHILDREN.—(See also INFANTS, vol. 10, p. 624.)

In regard to the right of a person to sue for injury or loss sustained while en ventre sa mere, the few adjudged cases indicate that such a right exists.²

time. Welles v. Castles, 3 Gray (Mass.) 323. See also Crystal Spring Distillery Co. v. Cox, 49 Fed. Rep. 555. A boiler explosion has been held to be such an "unavoidable casualty." Phillips v. Sun, etc., Co., 10 R. I. 458. See also LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 12, p. 741; CASUALTY, vol. 3, p. 37.

Unavoidable Accident—Bill of Lading.—To constitute an unavoidable accident, within a stipulation in a bill of lading that a vessel shall not be liable for losses by such accidents, there must be a vis major; the interfering cause must be irresistible. A loss occurring from the breaking of an apurtenance of the vessel is not included, although the thing broken was tested and appeared sound, and broke in consequence of a hidden flaw. Central Line of Boats v. Lowe, 50 Ga. 509. See also ACCIDENT, vol. 1, p. 82; Reaves v. Waterman, 2 Spears (S. Car.) 107.

Unavoidable is synonymous with inevitable, and inevitable or unavoidable accidents mean any accidents produced by physical causes which are inevitable: such as lightnings, storms, perils of the sea, earthquakes, inundations, sudden death or illness. Fish v. Chapman, 2 Ga. 349. That unavoidable accident in this connection is synonymous with "inevitable accident," see Fowler v. Davenport, 21 Tex. 626.

In Swindler v. Hilliard, 2 Rich. (S. Car.) 286, it was held that "dangers of fire" and "unavoidable accidents by fire," as used in a bill of lading, meant the same thing. See also INEVITABLE ACCIDENT, vol. 10, p. 601; ACT OF GOD, vol. 1, p. 173.

Unavoidable Dangers.—This term in a bill of lading has been held to include ice and cold. West v. Steamboat Berlin, 3 Iowa 534.

Unavoidable Accident—Service of Process.—A statute provided, where a writ failed of sufficient service by reason of "unavoidable accident," that the plaintiff might have further time within which to commence his action. Shaw, C. J., in speaking of this provision, said: "The term 'unavoidable accident,' we think, must have a reasonable construction, and does not mean to limit the case to a cause which no possible diligence could guard against, but an unforeseen cause, preventing the service of the writ, where due diligence has been used, by the creditor, to commence his suit seasonably, by the due and ordinary course of law." Bullock v. Dean, 12 Met. (Mass.) 15. And in that case it was held that a misdescription of the residence of the defendant, which had been recently changed, fell within the term.

In Lewis v. Smart, 67 Me. 207, it was held that a failure by reason of delay in the mail, when the writ might have been mailed earlier, was not an "unavoidable accident."

1. Conduct Unbecoming an Officer.—As to the meaning of this term, as applied to the police force, see People v. Bell (Supreme Ct.), 3 N. Y. Supp. 314.

2. Walker v. Great Northern R. Co., 28 L. R. Ir. 69. This was an action brought on behalf of the plaintiff, for injuries sustained while the plaintiff was en ventre sa mere, and while its mother was traveling on the railroad of the defendant company. Upon demurrer the court held that the declaration setting forth these facts disclosed no cause of action. The court decided the case upon the following grounds: That the statements of the plaintiff's declaration failed to fix any legal liability upon the defendant, since a railroad company does not insure its passengers against any injury that may be sustained during carriage; that the plaintiff's claim must be based upon some breach by the defendant of its duty, either arising generally by reason of its position as a common carrier, or by reason of some contract with the plaintiff; no duty on the part of the defendant was shown upon any ground, for it made no contract with reference to the carriage of the child, received no consideration therefor, and did not even know of the existence of the child, or the condition of its mother. This case goes no farther than the facts involved. The Lord Chief Justice expressly stated that the court did not decide the question whether an action would or would not lie at the suit of a

Under Lord Campbell's Act, an infant may claim compensation for the loss, while en ventre sa mere, of an immediate relative.¹

UNCHASTE CONDUCT.—See CHASTE, vol. 3, p. 157.

UNCONSCIONABLE BARGAINS.—(See also CATCHING BARGAIN, vol. 3, p. 37; CONTRACT, vol. 3, p. 823; EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 683; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; INADEQUATE CONSIDERATION, vol. 10, p. 325; RESCISSION, vol. 21, p. 24; SALES, vol. 21, p. 444; UNDUE INFLUENCE.)

An unconscionable bargain has been defined to be such a contract as no man in his senses, and not under a delusion, would make, on the one hand, and no honest and fair man would accept, on the other.²

A bargain will not be considered unconscionable, and set aside, for the mere inadequacy of price, or any other inequality in the bargain; because, whether the price is inadequate depends upon child so crippled, for acts done to the mother, while en ventre sa mere, with the intention of so injuring the child. Counsel for the plaintiff cited those cases and authorities, both of the civil and criminal law, which hold that, in legal contemplation and for many purposes of the law, an infant en ventre sa mere is considered in esse.

In Thelluson v. Woodford, 4 Ves. 227, Mr. Justice Buller, in reply to an allegation of counsel that a child en ventre sa mere was a nonentity, said: "Let us see what this nonentity can do. He may be vouched in a recovery, though it is for the purpose of making him answer over in value. He may be executor. He may take under the Statute of Distributions. He may take by devise. He may be entitled under a charge for raising portions. He may have an injunction, and he may have a guardian." See also Rex v. Senior, 1 Mood. C. C. 346; Reg. v. West, 2 Car. & Kir. 784; Austin v. Great W. R. R. Co., L. R., 2 Q. B. 442.

A child in utero is considered as living for its own benefit, but not to fix a period of time. Blasson v. Blasson, 2 De G. J. & S. 665.

1. In The George and Richard, L. R., 3 Adm. & Eccl. 466, the suit was for limitation of the liability resulting from a collision at sea. As a result of this collision several persons were killed, among them the claimant's father, the claimant being en ventre sa mere. Sir Robert Phillimore, delivering the judgment of the court, held that the infant en ventre would be entitled, within the meaning of Lord Campbell's Act, 9 and 10 Vict., ch. 93, to claim for the death of its father, and reserved leave to it, if born alive within due time, to prefer its claim for damages before the registrar. The child was afterwards born alive and its claim was assessed. 20 W. R. 245.

In Nelson v. Galveston, etc., R. Co., 78 Tex. 621; 48 Am. & Eng. R. Cas. 8, it was held that a posthumous child could recover damages for the death of his father by the negligence of a railroad, under a statute (Texas Rev. St., art. 2903), providing that an action on account of injuries causing death "shall be for the sole and exclusive benefit of the surviving children," the term "children" including a posthumous child. And a posthumous child is not concluded from suing for damages for the death of his father by a suit brought by his mother and another beneficiary under the statute.

The earlier case of Blake v. Midland R. R. Co., 18 Q. B. 93, turned upon the construction of Lord Campbell's Act. Mr. Justice Coleridge, delivering the judgment of the court, held that the purpose of the act was pecuniary compensation for the injury sustained, and not a solatium for wounded feelings, and further, speaking of a posthumous child, seems to have considered that such a child would come within the purview of the statute.

2. Chesterfield v. Janssen, 2 Ves. 125, per Lord Hardwicke.

"A contract so obviously unfair that it is inequitable to enforce it; a contract which no rational man would numerous circumstances, which cannot be considered by the courts without setting afloat all contracts and rendering everything uncertain.¹

To have this effect, the inadequacy or inequality must be so gross or manifest as to "shock the conscience and confound the judgment of a man of common sense," and furnish satisfactory and decisive evidence of fraud.²

But there are cases where equity will not relieve, even where there has been gross inadequacy attended with circumstances which might otherwise induce it to act, unless the parties can be put in statu quo; for instance, in cases of marriage settlements, it cannot unmarry the parties, so it will not interfere at all.³

In some cases of grossly unreasonable contracts, relief may be had at law.⁴

UNCOMPLETED.—See note 5.

UNDER.—The term "under" is used sometimes in its literal sense of below in position; but more frequently in its secondary make and no honest man would accept." Cent. Dict.

1. 2 Bouv. Inst. No. 3852; Borrell v. Dann, 2 Hare 440; Copis v. Middleton, 2 Madd. 409; Warner v. Daniels, 1 Woodb. & M. (U. S.) 110; Erwin v. Parham, 12 How. (U. S.) 197; Cribbins v. Markwood, 13 Gratt. (Va.) 495; 67 Am. Dec. 775.

In Griffith v. Spratley, 1 Cox. 383, it was said that, "The value of a thing is what it will produce, and it admits of no precise standard. One man may sell his property for less than another would; he may sell under the pressure of circumstances which may make a smaller price more beneficial than a greater would have been under different circumstances. If courts of equity were to unravel all these transactions, they would throw everything into confusion and set afloat the contracts of mankind."

2. How v. Weldon, 2 Ves. 516; Gartside v. Isherwood, 1 Bro. C. C. 560; Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 250; Gwynne v. Heaton, 1 Bro. C. C. 9; Peacock v. Evans, 16 Ves. 517; Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 275; 7 Am. Dec. 513; Juzan v. Toulmin, 9 Ala. 662; 44 Am. Dec. 448; McKinney v. Pinckard, 2 Leigh (Va.) 150; 21 Am. Dec. 601; Mayo v. Carrington, 19 Gratt. (Va.) 107; Howard v. Edgell, 17 Vt. 9.

Lord Thurlow, in Gwynne v. Heaton, 1 Bro. C. C. 9, says: "It must be an inequality so strong, gross, and manifest, that it would be impossible to state it to a man with common sense without producing an exclamation at the inequality of it."

"It is said that if the inadequacy be so gross and manifest that it cannot be stated to a man with common sense without shocking the conscience and confounding the judgment, it suffices of itself, in the absence of adequate explanation, to prove that a fraudulent advantage was taken, as it shows that the person did not understand the bargain he made, or that he was so oppressed that he was glad to make it, knowing its inadequacy." 2 Minor's Inst. (3d ed.) *669.

3. 1 Story Eq. Jur. (13th ed.) 250; 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. 271; North v. Ansell, 2 P. Wms. 619.

4. As, for example, the celebrated horse-shoe case, where a party stipulated to pay for a horse, a barleycorn, a nail, doubling it every nail, and there were thirty-two nails in the horse's shoes. James v. Morgan, 1 Lev. 111; 1 White and Tudor's Lead. Cas. 668, 676.

5. Sale of Uncompleted Railroad.—A railroad may be said to be "uncompleted" which has neither station houses, side tracks, nor turntables, nor rolling stock fit for use, the company having leased what it used about as long as it could, and being unable to complete its construction by furnishing what is necessary for its successful operation. Young v. Toledo and South Haven R. Co., 76 Mich. 485, per Sherwood, C. J.

meaning of inferior or subordinate. "Under" a law or jurisdiction means "subject to" the law, etc.¹

UNDERGROUND WATERS.—(See also DAM, vol. 4, p. 971; DRAINS AND SEWERS, vol. 6, p. 2; MINES AND MINING CLAIMS, vol. 15, p. 499; NEGLIGENCE, vol. 16, p. 386; NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 922; SURFACE WATERS, vol. 24, p. 896; WATERS AND WATERCOURSES.)

- I. Definition, 423.
- II. Water Flowing in Defined Channels, 424.
- III. Percolations; Wells and Springs, 425.
 1. Rights Therein—Diversion or Interception of, 425.
 2. Effect of Grant, 430.
 3. Effect of Prescription (See also PRESCRIPTION, vol. 19, p. 6), 431.
4. Effect of Motive of Act of Appropriation, 433.
5. Pollution of Underground Waters (See also NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 922; SURFACE WATERS, vol. 24, p. 933), 436.
- IV. Artificial or Enforced Percolations—Injuries Therefrom, 442.
 1. In General, 442.
 2. Diversion of Surface Streams by Artificial Percolation, 444.

I. DEFINITION.—Subterranean or underground waters are of two kinds: First, underground currents of water flowing in defined and known channels;² Second, water percolating or filtering through the ground beneath the surface, either without a definite channel, or in courses which are unknown and unascertainable.³

1. Mills v. Stoddard, 8 How. (U. S.) 356.

Under and Subject to.—As to the force of this phrase used in a conveyance with reference to a mortgage created by the grantor or some prior holder of the property, see MORTGAGES, vol. 15, p. 832; Merriman v. Moore, 90 Pa. St. 78; Taylor v. Mayer, 93 Pa. St. 42; Morris' Appeal, 88 Pa. St. 368; Elliott v. Sackett, 108 U. S. 140; Fiske v. Tolman, 124 Mass. 256; IMPLIED COVENANTS, vol. 9, p. 936.

Under Protest.—See PAYMENT, vol. 18, p. 219.

Under Sheriff.—See DEPUTY, vol. 5, p. 625.

Under Lease.—See LANDLORD AND TENANT, vol. 12, p. 658; LEASE, vol. 12, p. 1036.

Under the Hand.—See HAND, vol. 9, p. 262.

2. "In this connection, 'defined' means a contracted and bounded channel, though the course of the stream may be undefined by human knowledge; and 'known,' which is not here synonymous with 'visible,' refers to knowledge by reasonable inference." Gould on Waters (2d ed.), § 281.

Where the existence of a subterranean channel can be ascertained by means of excavations only, it is not considered as "known" within the meaning of the definition. Ewart v. Belfast Poor Law Guardians, 9 L. R. Ir. 172.

In Black v. Ballymera Com'rs, L. R., 17 Ir. 474, Chatterton, V. C., said: "The onus of proof lies, of course, on the plaintiff claiming the right, and it lies upon him to show that, without opening the ground by excavation, or having recourse to abstruse speculations of scientific persons, men of ordinary powers and attainments would know, or could with reasonable diligence ascertain, that the stream, when it emerges into light, comes from, and has flowed through, a defined subterranean channel."

Presumption as to Underground Waters.—In Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303; 10 Am. Rep. 299, it was held that in a controversy respecting the use of the waters of a tunnel, where there is nothing to show that it is defined by any flowing stream, it must be presumed to be formed from the ordinary percolations of water in the soil. See also Ocean Grove Camp-Meeting Assoc. v. Asbury Park Com'rs, 40 N. J. Eq. 447.

3. Gould on Waters (2d ed.), § 280.

II. WATER FLOWING IN DEFINED CHANNELS.—No distinction exists between subterranean and surface waters, arising from their location, but, as in the case of surface streams, if the underground waters are well defined and constitute a regular stream, one cannot so divert it as to interfere with the rights of the owner below.¹ It is not necessary that the flow should be continued; it must,

The word "percolate," as used in the cases relating to the right of landowners to use water on their premises, designates any flowage of sub-surface water, other than that of a running stream, open, visible, and clearly to be traced. Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363.

"Percolating waters collected or gathered in a stream running in a defined channel, constitute property, or incidents of property, which may be acquired by grant, express or implied, or by appropriation, and when rights in such percolating waters are acquired, the owner cannot be divested thereof by the wrongful acts of another." Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 217; 58 Am. Rep. 558.

In a controversy respecting the use of the waters of a spring, where there was nothing to show that it was supplied by any defined flowing stream, it was held, that it must be presumed to be formed by the ordinary percolations of water in the soil. Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303; 10 Am. Rep. 299.

1. Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R., 6 Ch. 483; Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349; Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 7 Exch. 282; Cross v. Kitts, 69 Cal. 217; 58 Am. Rep. 558; Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303; 10 Am. Rep. 299; Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45; 42 Am. Rep. 62; Hale v. Lea, 53 Cal. 578; Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67 Iowa 66; Taylor v. Welch, 6 Oregon 198; Redman v. Forman, 83 Ky. 214; Keeney v. Carillo, 2 N. Mex. 480; Smith v. Adams, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 435; Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 626; 51 Am. Rep. 542; Collins v. Charters Valley Gas Co., 131 Pa. St. 143; 17 Am. St. Rep. 791; Strait v. Brown, 16 Nev. 317; 40 Am. Rep. 497; Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276; Delhi v. Youmans, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 316.

Where subterranean water emerges, and afterward sinks and re-emerges, if its entire, exact course can be traced, the proprietor of the land at the lower part will be protected against the diversion of the water. Saddler v. Lee, 66 Ga. 45; 42 Am. Rep. 62.

The fact that a stream flows into a sink, if it flows in a definite direction and emerges upon the surface again, and the connection between the two can be traced clearly, will not prevent the application of the rules of an ordinary watercourse. Whetstone v. Bowser, 29 Pa. St. 60.

In Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 7 Exch. 282, Parke, J., said: "Where water is on the surface, the right of the owner of the adjoining land, the usufruct to that water, is not a doubtful matter of fact . . . and indeed, if the course of a subterranean stream were well known, as is the case with many which sink underground, pursue for a short space a subterranean course, and then emerge again, it should never be contended that the owner of the soil, in which the stream flowed, could not maintain an action for the diversion of it as if it took place under such circumstances as would enable him to recover if the stream had been wholly above ground."

And in Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, Lewis, C. J., recognizing the distinction between mere percolation and well-defined underground streams, said: "In limestone regions streams of great volume and power pursue their subterranean courses for great distances, and then emerge from their caverns, furnishing power for machinery of every description, or supplying towns and settlements with water, all for the purposes of life. To say that these streams might be obstructed or diverted, merely because they ran through subterranean channels, is to forget the rights and duties of man in relation to flowing water. But to entitle the stream to the consideration of the law, it is certainly necessary that it be a watercourse in the proper sense of the term." But see Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. St. 514; 84 Am. Dec. 511.

In Hale v. McLea, 53 Cal. 581, a subterranean stream was held to be a well-defined channel, where its course was marked by shrubs and bushes which would grow nowhere save above such waters.

however, be well known and notorious.¹ A stream which can only be ascertained by excavation, is not such a stream.²

III. PERCOLATIONS; WELLS AND SPRINGS—1. Rights Therein—Diverſion or Interception of.—The correlative rights of adjoining proprietors in reference to running streams, whether on the ſurface or ſubterranean, and the general principles relating thereto, have no application to undefined ſubterranean waters which are merely the reſult of natural and ordinary percolations through the ſoil; ſuch waters are a part of the land itſelf, and belong abſolutely to the proprietor within his territory; and it has been well ſettled, by a long and unbroken line of authority, that a proprietor of land may dig a well upon his own premises, mine, drain it, or in any way change its natural condition, even though in ſo doing he may intercept or impede the natural underground percolations, the ſources of ſupply of his neighbor's ſpring or well.³ He may

1. Shively v. Hume, 10 Oregon 76; Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175; 16 Am. Rep. 419; Ewart v. Belfast Poor Law Guardians, L. R., 9 Ir. 172. The fact that the water failed to flow from a ſpring, when the water was drained from a natural baſin on higher ground, is not of itſelf ſufficient to ſhow that the water flowed in a well-defined channel. Taylor v. Welch, 6 Oregon 200.

2. Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349. But ſee Burroughs v. Saterlee, 67 Iowa 396; 56 Am. Rep. 350.

3. Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349; Hammond v. Hall, 10 Sim. 552; Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 B. & S. 710; 113 E. C. L. 708; Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 7 Exch. 282; Balston v. Bensted, 1 Campb. 463; Galgay v. Great Southern R. Co., 4 Ir. C. L. 456; Greatrex v. Hayward, 8 Exch. 291; Stainton v. Woolrych, 23 Beav. 225; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721; Coleman v. Chadwick, 80 Pa. St. 81; 21 Am. Rep. 93; Trout v. McDonald, 83 Pa. St. 144; Haugh's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 42; 48 Am. Rep. 193; Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 626; 51 Am. Rep. 542; Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 113 Pa. St. 126; 57 Am. Rep. 445; Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co., 131 Pa. St. 143; 17 Am. St. Rep. 79; Williams v. Laden (Pa. 1894), 29 Atl. Rep. 54; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294; Columbus Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Freeland, 12 Ohio St. 392; Hanson v. McCue, 42 Cal. 303; 10 Am. Rep. 299; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 615; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533; 52 Am. Dec. 352; Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn.

84; 71 Am. Dec. 49; Chase v. Silverstone, 62 Me. 175; 16 Am. Rep. 419; Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49; 31 Vt. 358; Clark v. Conroe, 38 Vt. 469; New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Peterson, 14 Ind. 112; 77 Am. Dec. 60; Taylor v. Fickas, 64 Ind. 167; 31 Am. Rep. 114; Greencastle v. Hazelett, 23 Ind. 189; Benthall v. Seifert, 77 Ind. 302; Cairo, etc., R. Co. v. Houry, 77 Ind. 364; Bloodgood v. Ayres, 108 N. Y. 400; 2 Am. St. Rep. 443; Ellis v. Dun-can, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 230; Goodale v. Tuttle, 29 N. Y. 459; Smith v. Adams, 6 Paige (N. Y.) 435; Radcliff v. Brooklyn, 4 N. Y. 195; 53 Am. Dec. 357; Pixley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520; 91 Am. Dec. 72; Barkley v. Wilcox, 86 N. Y. 147; 40 Am. Rep. 519; Bliss v. Greeley, 45 N. Y. 671; 6 Am. Rep. 157; Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 39; 28 Am. Rep. 93; Delhi v. Youmans, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 316; 45 N. Y. 362; 6 Am. Rep. 100; Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co., 43 N. H. 573; 82 Am. Dec. 179; Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276; Mosier v. Caldwell, 7 Nev. 363; Strait v. Brown, 16 Nev. 317; 40 Am. Rep. 497; Taylor v. Welch, 6 Oregon 198; Shiveley v. Hume, 10 Oregon 76; Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 117; Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 564; Parker v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 107; 50 Am. Dec. 709; Ocean Grove Camp Meeting Assoc. v. Asbury Park Com'rs, 40 N. J. Eq. 447; Quinn v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 63 Iowa 510; Morrison v. Bucksport, etc., R. Co., 67 Me. 353; Meyer v. Tacoma, etc., Water Co., 8 Wash. 144.

In Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, Tindal, C. J., ſays: "The rule of law which governs the enjoyment of a stream flowing in its natural course over the surface of land belonging to different proprietors is well established; each proprietor of the land has a right to the advantage of the stream flowing in its natural course over his land, to use the same as he pleases for any purpose of his own, not inconsistent with a similar right in the proprietors of the land above or below; so that neither can any proprietor above diminish the quantity or injure the quality of the water which would otherwise naturally descend, nor can any proprietor below throw back the water without the license or the grant of the proprietor above. Mason v. Hill, 5 B. & Ad. 1; 27 E. C. L. 11; Wright v. Howard, 1 S. & S. 190. But there is a marked and substantial difference between watercourses flowing on the surface, and springs beneath the surface. . . . In the case of a well sunk by a proprietor in his own land, the water which feeds it from a neighboring soil does not flow openly in the sight of the neighboring proprietor, but through the hidden veins of the earth beneath the surface; no man can tell what changes these underground sources have undergone in the progress of time. . . . No proprietor knows what portion of water is taken from beneath his own soil; how much he gives originally, or how much he transmits only, or how much he receives; on the contrary, until the well is sunk and the water collected by draining into it, there cannot properly be said, with reference to the well, to be any flow at all. . . . The difference in the two cases with respect to the consequences, if the same law is to be applied to both, is still more apparent. In the case of the running stream, the owner of the soil merely transmits the water over its surface; he receives as much from his higher neighbor as he sends down to his neighbor below; he is neither better nor worse; the level of the water remains the same. But if the man who sinks the well on his own land can acquire by that act an absolute and indefeasible right to the water that collects in it, he has the power of preventing his neighbor from making any use of the spring in his own soil, which shall interfere with the enjoyment of the well. He has the power still further, of debarring the owner of the land in which the spring is first found or through which it is transmitted, from draining his land for the proper cultivation of the soil; and thus by an act which is voluntary on his part, and which may be entirely unsuspected by his neighbor, he may impose on such neighbor the necessity of bearing a heavy expense, if the latter has erected machinery for the purpose of mining, and discovers, when too late, that the appropriation of the water has already been made. Further, the advantage on one side and the detriment to the other may bear no proportion. The well may be sunk to supply a cottage or a drinking place for the cattle, whilst the owner of the adjoining land may be prevented from mining metals and minerals of inestimable value. And, lastly, there is no limit of space within which the claim of right to an underground spring may be confined; in the present case, the nearest coal pit is at a distance of half a mile from the well; it is obvious the law must equally apply if there is an interval of many miles."

In Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. St. 514; 84 Am. Dec. 511, Strong, J., observes: "A surface stream cannot be diverted without knowledge that the diversion will affect a lower proprietor. Not so with an unknown subterranean percolation or stream. One can hardly have rights upon another's land which are imperceptible, of which neither himself nor that other can have any knowledge. No such right can be supposed to have been taken into consideration, when either the upper or lower tract was purchased. The purchaser of lands on which there are unknown sub-surface currents, must buy in ignorance of any obstacle to the full enjoyment of his purchase indefinitely downwards, and the purchaser of lands on which a spring rises, ignorant whence and how the water comes, cannot bargain for any right to a secret flow of water in another's land. It would seem, therefore, most unreasonable, that the latter should have a right to prevent his neighbor from enjoying his own land in the ordinary way, either by digging wells, cellars, drains, or by quarrying and mining. A further reason for holding that there is no such right, is found in the indefinite nature and great extent of the obligation which would be imposed if the right existed. Instances have occurred where excavations have had the effect of draining land, although at the distance of several miles. Gale

as lawfully drain the natural percolations from his neighbor's land, as prevent the percolations of his own well going into the well of his neighbor.¹ Such underground waters are as much the property of the owners of the land as the ores, rocks, etc., beneath the surface.² It has, however, been held in some cases that, to avoid liability for an injury to the adjoining owner by withdrawing the & Wheatley on Easements 178. Even in the case before us, the mining pit of the defendants is more than three hundred feet distant from the plaintiffs' spring. These appear to us very sufficient reasons for distinguishing between surface and subterranean streams, and denying to inferior proprietors any right to control the flow of water in unknown subterranean channels upon an adjainer's land. They are as applicable to unknown sub-surface streams as they are to filtrations and percolations through small interstices. Neither can be defined watercourses, though they may be definable."

In New River Co. v. Johnson, 2 El. & El. 445; 105 E. C. L. 434, Crompton, J., in considering the question of the abstraction of percolating water, observes: "The only remedy of the owner of a well, from which such water has been abstracted, is to sink the well deeper."

Damages are not recoverable for injury to a spring between high and low water mark. Com. v. Fisher, 1 P. & W. (Pa.) 462. But see Lehigh Valley R. Co. v. Trone, 28 Pa. St. 206.

Where a spring was fed solely from percolating waters from a swamp or wet land surrounding the same, and not by any running stream of water, it was held that there was no water at such spring to which the right of use could be acquired, either by statutory appropriation or by adverse user, and no action would lie in favor of one who had collected the water of a spring at a reservoir, and transmitted it by pipe for use, against one who had diverted the water from a reservoir by means of a tunnel and ditch, constructed above the reservoir on his own lands. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 615.

Diversion by Stranger.—In Hart v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Co., 133 Mass. 488, an injunction was granted against a corporation authorized to take land, in favor of the plaintiff, who alleged that the corporation was sinking a ditch and well on the land of which the plaintiff was the owner in fee, and which the defendant took under the statute, and was erecting thereon powerful manufacturing pumping machinery, to be used in pumping water from the well for the purpose of supplying water to its customers, and the plaintiff was the owner of other land adjoining that so taken, and also valuable water rights and privileges below the land taken, the value of which would be seriously impaired by the acts of the defendant corporation.

1. Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 327; New River Co. v. Johnson, 2 El. & El. 435; 105 E. C. L. 434. See also Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 B. & S. 241; 116 E. C. L. 239.

2. Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Dufour, 95 Cal. 615; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533; 52 Am. Dec. 352; Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn. 84; 71 Am. Dec. 49; Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721. In Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, Tindal, C. J., said: "We think the present case is not to be governed by the law which applies to rivers and flowing streams, but that it rather falls within the principle which gives to the owner of the soil all that lies beneath its surface; that the land immediately below is his property, whether it is solid rock or porous ground or venous earth, or part soil and part water; that the person who owns the surface may take therein and apply all that is there found for his own purpose at his free will and pleasure, and that if, in the exercise of such right, he interrupts so as to have the water collected from the underground springs in his neighbor's well, this inconvenience to his neighbor falls within the description of damnum absque injuria which cannot become the ground of an action."

In Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294, in answering the question, "whether, in the absence of all rights derived either from contract or legislation, a landowner can have any legal claims in respect to sub-surface waters which, without any distinct and definite channel, ooze, filter, and percolate from adjoining lands into his own, when source of supply, a landowner must make such use of his own property as is reasonable.¹

In the absence of a condition arising from a grant or otherwise, no right of action arises from a subsidence of land caused by an such waters are diverted, retained, or abstracted by the owner of such adjoining lands in the use of his property, for any object of either taste or profit, even though the use may be accompanied by a malicious intent to injure his neighbor by means of such use," Brinkerhoff, J., said: "Whatever points of casuistry may arise out of this question, cognizable in the court of individual conscience, under the perfect law of Christian morals, we are of opinion that the law of the land can recognize no such claims; and that, subject only to the possible exception of a case of unmixed malice, the maxim, 'cujus est solum ejus est usque ad cælum et ad infernos,' applies to its full extent; and whatever damage may result from the exercise of this absolute right of property to adjoining proprietors, from the loss of such percolating sub-surface waters, is damnum absque injuria. With the exception of the nisi prius decision of Lord Ellenborough, in Balston v. Bensted, 1 Campb. 463, and an obiter opinion of Parke, B., in Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., 93 Eng. L. & Eq. 520, the current of decisions, to this effect, both in England and the United States, is uniform and consistent. I say, the opinion of Parke, B., was obiter; for, on an inspection of that case, it will be seen that the plaintiff's rights, as there claimed by him, well rested on a basis of express contract; and there was no occasion to pass upon any principle of natural right growing out of the other relations of the parties." After reviewing the leading cases, the learned judge goes on to say: "The reasoning is briefly this: in the absence of express contract, and of positive authorized legislation, as between proprietors of adjoining lands, the law recognizes no correlative right in respect to underground waters percolating, oozing, or filtering through the earth; and this mainly from considerations of public policy. (1) Because the existence, origin, movement and course of such waters, and the causes which govern and direct their movements, are so secret, occult and concealed, that an attempt to administer any set of legal rules in respect to them would be involved in hopeless uncertainty, and would be, therefore, practically impossible. (2) Because any such recognition of correlative rights would interfere, to the material detriment of the commonwealth, with drainage and agriculture, mining, the construction of highways and railroads, with sanitary regulations, building and the general progress of improvement in works of embellishment and utility."

1. While the following New Hampshire cases have been considered a departure from the rule laid down in Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, they can, it seems, be reconciled on the ground of the reasonableness of the use, by a proprietor, of his own land.

In Bassett v. Salisbury Mfg. Co., 43 N. H. 569; 82 Am. Dec. 179, the court, by Bartlett, J., said: "No landowner has an absolute and unqualified right to the unaltered natural drainage or percolation to or from his neighbor's land. In general, it would be impossible for a landowner to avoid disturbing the natural percolation or drainage, without a practical abandonment of all improvement or beneficial enjoyment of his land. Any doctrine that would forbid all action of a landowner, affecting the relations as to percolation or drainage between his own and his neighbors' lands, would in effect deprive him of his property; and so far from being an application of the maxim, 'cujus est solum,' etc., would work a general denial of effect to it. If A has the absolute and unqualified right to receive from and discharge into the adjoining land of B all the drainage and percolation, as they naturally flow between that land and his own, this is substantially a right to a use of B's land, practically depriving the latter of all beneficial enjoyment of his property, and in effect amounting to an appropriation of it; and as B and the other neighboring landowners must have similar rights, the improvement, or beneficial occupation of land, becomes in fact impossible, and property in the soil for nearly all useful purposes is annihilated. But we do not think it follows from this, as some recent cases adjoining owner exercising the right of draining his own soil, as a man has, at common law, no right to the support of subterranean waters.¹

Where, in the appropriation and use of land taken for public purposes, subterranean waters are intercepted or diverted, there can be no right of action,² except when it is provided by statute have held, that a landowner has the full and unlimited ownership, and the absolute and unqualified right of control of all water in or upon his land not gathered into natural water-courses; for the non-existence of an absolute right does not conclusively disprove the existence of a qualified right.

We need not argue that some rights exist; that the owner of the land may make some use of the water in it; that he may do some acts that will affect to some extent the drainage; that a well may be dug, under some circumstances, although it will draw water by percolation from a water-course, from adjoining land, or even from the well of a neighbor. If the views we have expressed are correct, they have already indicated the sole ground of the qualification of the landowner's right in such cases, and that is, as in certain cases of water-courses, the similar rights of others; and this will of course determine the extent of the qualification, which, as in the analogous cases suggested, and for the same reasons, is the rule of reasonable use—of a reasonable exercise of one's own right.

As in these cases of the water-course, so in the drainage, a man may exercise his own right on his own land as he pleases, provided he does not interfere with the rights of others. The rights are correlative, and, from the necessity of the case, the right of each is only to a reasonable user or management; and whatever exercise of one's right or use of one's privilege, in such case, is, under all the circumstances, and in view of the rights of others, such a reasonable user or management is not an infringement of the rights of others; but any interference by one landowner, with the natural drainage, injurious to the land of another, and not reasonable, is unjustifiable. Every interference by one landowner with the natural drainage, actually injurious to the land of another, would be unreasonable, if not made by the former in the reasonable use of his own property." See also Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276; Gerrish v.

Clough, 48 N. H. 11; 2 Am. Rep. 165; 97 Am. Dec. 561.

1. Popplewell v. Hodkinson, L. R., 4 Exch. 248; Elliott v. Northeastern R. Co., 10 H. L. Cas. 333. See also Smith v. Thackerah, L. R., 1 C. P. 564; Humfries v. Brodgen, 15 Q. B. 739; Partridge v. Scott, 3 M. & W. 220; Wilson v. Waddell, L. R., 2 App. Cas. 95.

In Gumbert v. Kilgore (Pa. 1886), 6 Cent. Rep. 406, it was held that the owner of coal in lands was liable to the owner of the surface of the land, where a spring was ruined in failure of the former to properly support the surface, but that he was not liable, if the injury was caused by mining operations, when the surface was supported in its natural condition.

2. New River Co. v. Johnson, 2 El. & El. 435; 105 E. C. L. 434; Reg. v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 3 B. & S. 710.

So a city is not liable because, in constructing a sewer, it drains away the water which formerly percolated to a spring. Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 82.

In Alexander v. U. S., 25 Ct. of Cl. 87, where the plaintiff's well was rendered dry by the construction of the Washington water tunnel, authorized by an act of Congress, it was held that the injury to the plaintiff was damnum absque injuria, the United States having a clear title to the property.

Injury to Well or Spring by Railroad Excavation.—So in New Albany, etc., R. Co. v. Peterson, 14 Ind. 112; 77 Am. Dec. 60, it was held that the railroad company, for the purpose of constructing its road, had the same right to excavate within the limits of its right of way, that a private individual had to dig upon his land for any purpose, and that one, whose well or subterranean stream was rendered dry by such excavation, had no action; the injury was damnum absque injuria. But in Parker v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 114; 1 Am. Rep. 709, a railroad company was held liable for such damages, the railroad being considered to that compensation shall be made for consequential damages,¹ or where the defendant has merely a usufruct in the land.²

2. Effect of Grant.—A landowner, however, may be liable for an interference with underground waters, if his acts are in derogation of an express grant. So, where there has been a grant of water, express or implied, from which it is clearly intended to secure to the grantee a regular supply of water, the grantor is liable, if by interference either with known water-courses or by excavations, he diminishes such supply.³ But, in the absence of such intent, have acquired only a special right to, and usufruct in the land, upon the condition of paying all damages which might be thereby occasioned to others.

1. Trowbridge v. Brookline, 144 Mass. 139; Parker v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 107; 1 Am. Rep. 709.

In Aldrich v. Cheshire R. Co., 21 N. H. 359; 53 Am. Dec. 212, where damages had been assessed by the commissioners to a landowner for an injury done to him by excavations for the purposes of the railroad, in the manner prescribed by the legislature authorizing the act, it was held that a special action could not be maintained for an injury to the plaintiff's spring; but that such injury must be presumed to have been considered by the commissioners when the damages were assessed.

2. Hart v. Jamaica Pond Aqueduct Co., 133 Mass. 488.

In Parker v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush. (Mass.) 107; 1 Am. Rep. 709, in regard to the injury to the plaintiff's well, Shaw, C. J., said: "The claim for damages on this ground does not depend on the relative rights of owners of land, each of whom has a right to make a proper use of his own estate, and sinking a well upon it is such proper use; and if the water, by its natural current, flows from one to the other, and a loss ensues, it is damnum absque injuria. But the respondents did not own the land; they only acquired a special right to and usufruct in it, upon the condition of paying all damages which might be thereby occasioned to others."

But in Hougan v. Milwaukee, etc., R. Co., 35 Iowa 558, where the railroad acquired "the right of way over and through the land for all purposes connected with the construction, use, and occupation of its railway," it was held that it had the legal right to dig a well upon such right of way, and to use the water supplied by percolation for railway purposes, although such use materially diminished the supply of water in a spring upon the grantor's land.

3. Whitehead v. Parks, 2 H. & N. 877.

In Johnstown Cheese Mfg. Co. v. Veghte, 69 N. Y. 16; 25 Am. Rep. 125, where the defendant granted to a cheese manufactory situated on his land, the use of water which was then conducted to the factory from springs on the defendant's lands, and covenanted to warrant and defend the granted premises against himself and all other persons, he was held liable for withdrawing his supply from such springs. In delivering the opinion of the court, Rapallo, J., said: "We are of opinion that these acts of the defendant were in derogation of his grant and in violation of his covenant, and that the judgment of the court below was justified by the facts. The case of Bliss v. Greeley, 45 N. Y. 671; 6 Am. Rep. 157, is cited on the part of the defendant as in conflict with this judgment; but the facts of that case were very different. In that case there was simply a grant of a right to dig and stone up a certain spring and to conduct the water therefrom through the grantor's land, with a covenant of warranty; and the court held that this did not preclude the grantor from sinking another spring on his land at some distance from the one granted, although the effect of it was to render the latter useless, provided such act was not done unnecessarily or maliciously. In that case the parties were regarded in the same light as adjacent owners, and the rule was applied that the defendant might lawfully dig on his own land, though the effect was to cut off the water from the plaintiff's spring by percolation; but there was no grant in that case of any particular supply of water from the spring or from the defendant's lands. The grant was merely of the right to the spring, and secured as where the grant secures to the grantee no greater right than he would have if he were the owner of the land, the grantor, or those claiming under him, are not precluded from draining their lands as they may see fit, although their acts interfere with the grantee's supply.¹

3. Effect of Prescription—(See also PRESCRIPTION, vol. 19, p. 6).—The owner of land cannot acquire by prescription the right to receive percolations through the land of another,² for no pre-the plaintiff no greater rights than such as he would have had if he had owned the land on which it was situated. In this case the grant was of the use of the water which, at the time of the grant, was being conducted from the spring, and the intent was to secure the continuance of that supply of water, it being essential to the operation of the cheese factory conveyed."

And in Paine v. Chandler, 134 N. Y. 385, the defendant was the owner of two adjoining farms, upon one of which was a spring, from which pipes had been laid conducting the water to the barn-yard on the other, thus furnishing sufficient water for the stock thereon and other domestic uses. The defendant sold and conveyed the farm so supplied to the plaintiff by a deed which conveyed the land with appurtenances, but made no mention of the spring or the pipes. The defendant dug a well upon his farm a few feet from the spring, which resulted in lowering the water of the spring below the mouth of the pipes so as to deprive the plaintiff of the use of the water. It was held that the uninterrupted flow of the water being essential to the full enjoyment of the estate conveyed, the defendant could be restrained from the use of the well causing the injury.

1. Bliss v. Greeley, 45 N. Y. 671; 6 Am. Rep. 157; Chesley v. King, 74 Me. 164; 43 Am. Rep. 569; Davis v. Spaulding, 157 Mass. 431; Brain v. Marfell, 41 L. T. N. S. 455.

A purchased land subject to the reservation that B should have the right to conduct the water from a certain spring thereon to his adjoining land. Where A, by a well dug upon his own land, cut off the subterranean supply to the spring to the injury of B, it was held that A might lawfully do so, and that B could not claim the absolute right to an uninterrupted flow through A's land. Lybe's Appeal, 106 Pa. St. 626; 51 Am. Rep. 542.

So a grant of "a certain spring or fountain of water," does not deprive the owner of the land of the right of properly draining his land to make it productive, even though in some unknown mode the drainage of the land may affect his supply of water. Buffum v. Harris, 5 R. I. 243.

In Davis v. Spaulding, 157 Mass. 431, it was held that the grant of a mere easement to draw water from a well by a pipe laid in the ground, which was used at the time of the grant, did not preclude the grantor, or his subsequent vendee, from digging another well or reservoir on his own land, although the result was to destroy the value of the easement by diversion of the water which formerly percolated into the well.

The sale of a well and right to convey the water away gives merely a right to water risen in the well, and interception of the water before it reached the well affords no cause of action. Brain v. Marfell, 41 L. T. N. S. 455. See Huston v. Leach, 53 Cal. 262.

A grant of the privilege of taking water from springs gives only a right to take it where it issues from the ground by natural forces, and not from wells or orifices in the ground where the water does not flow to the surface. Mixer v. Reed, 25 Vt. 254; Clark v. Conroe, 38 Vt. 469.

A grant of a well passes a fee in the land occupied by the well. Johnson v. Rayner, 6 Gray (Mass.) 107.

2. Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., L. R., 7 Exch. 282; Elster v. Springfield, 49 Ohio St. 82.

In Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533; 52 Am. Dec. 352, Ellsworth, J., said: "Nothing is gained by a mere continued preoccupation of water under the surface. Why should any advantage be gained by preoccupation? Each owner has an equal and complete right to the use of his land, and to the water which is in it. Water combined with earth, or passing through it, by percosumption can arise against a party on the ground of long enjoyment of a privilege by another, until it is shown that the privilege in some way interferes with the right of the party whose grant is proposed to be presumed,¹ and in the case of a surface stream, lation, or by filtration, or chemical attraction, has no distinctive character of ownership from the earth itself; not more than the metallic oxides of which the earth is composed. . . . No man is bound to know that his neighbor's well is supplied by water percolating his own soil; and he ought not, therefore, to be held to lose his rights, by such continued enjoyment. He cannot know that the first well requires any other than the natural and common use of water under the surface; nor can he know from whence the water comes; nor by what means it appears in one place or the other; nor which of the persons who first or afterwards opens the earth, encroaches upon the right of the other."

In Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294, Brinkerhoff, J., in stating the proposition of the text, said: "The doctrine of prescription, or presumption of grant from lapse of time, can have no proper application to the question: 1. Because the party against whom the doctrine will have to be applied, could not be reasonably required to enter his caveat against the appropriation of a thing so hidden and obscure as is percolating underground water; and, 2. Because the appropriation of such waters by an adjoining proprietor is not an infringement of his rights, so as to become the subject of legal redress, until such time as he himself has occasion to appropriate them."

In Chasemore v. Richards, 5 H. & N. 988, Lord Chelmsford, commenting upon the case of Balston v. Bensted, 1 Camp. 463, said: "The great distinction between water flowing in a definite stream, and water percolating through the ground, was not presented to the mind of the judge; and his observation, that twenty years' exclusive enjoyment was decisive as to the presumption in favor of the party, showed that he thought only of the rights which arose out of the uninterrupted enjoyment of a right to water flowing in a defined stream on the surface of the ground. The case terminating as it did could hardly be considered as an authority upon the point." Creswell, J., in Chasemore v. Richards, 5 H. & N. 988, said: "There are two cases in our books, and I believe two only, which support a claim to water not in a flowing stream—Balston v. Bensted, 1 Camp. 463, and Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal, L. R., 7 Exch. 282. In the former of these cases, Lord Ellenborough said: 'There could be no doubt but that twenty years' exclusive enjoyment of water in any particular manner, affords a conclusive presumption of right in the party so enjoying it.' His lordship is not reported to have explained the nature of the presumption to be made, but at that period it seems to have been supposed that the right of a riparian owner arose out of some presumption of a grant by those higher up the stream. It is, therefore, probable that in the case then before him, which related to the water springing up in the plaintiffs' lands, he meant that an enjoyment of it for twenty years raised a presumption of a grant—a presumption not generally made against those who had no knowledge of the existence of that which they are to be presumed to have granted; and I do not understand that anyone has insisted in this case upon the doctrine of presumption, which was altogether repudiated in the other case alluded to (Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., L. R., 7 Exch. 280), where Lord Chief Baron Pollock, in giving the judgment of the court, says: 'We consider it as settled law, that the right to have a stream running in its natural course is not by a presumed grant from long acquiescence on the part of the riparian proprietors, above and below, but is ex jure nature, and an incident of property, as much as the right to have the soil itself in its natural state, unaltered by the acts of a neighboring proprietor, who cannot dig so as to deprive it of the support of his land.' It would seem, therefore, that the court of exchequer, as instituted when that judgment was given, would not have rested an opinion in favor of the plaintiff, in Balston v. Bensted, 1 Camp. 463, on the ground stated by Lord Ellenborough."

1. Cooper v. Barber, 3 Taunt. 99.

In Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, Lewis, C. J., said:

the right of a proprietor to have it running in its natural course is not from a presumed grant acquired by the user, but is ex jure naturæ, and an incident of property.¹

In several of the states, and in the case of public lands, however, the rights acquired, by priority of possession, to the use of water for mining and other purposes, are recognized and confirmed by statute.²

4. Effect of Motive of Act of Appropriation.—The question as to the effect of the motive prompting the diversion or interference of underground waters, has seldom been directly before the courts, but there are numerous conflicting dicta. Some authorities lay stress upon it, considering the motive as an important, although not necessarily a controlling, element.³ However,

"The prior occupancy of the spring for the uses of a tannery, gave no right of servitude over or through the land of the adjacent proprietor. No man, by mere prior enjoyment of the advantages of his own land, can establish a servitude upon the land of another. This is shown in a satisfactory manner by Mr. Justice Rogers, in Hoy v. Sterrett, 2 Watts (Pa.) 330; 27 Am. Dec. 313. But it seems to be thought that the enjoyment of the spring by the plaintiff below and those under whom he claims, for the period of twenty-one years, gives him a right to its continued existence, although the neighboring proprietor may thereby be deprived of the chief value of his own land. This depends upon the question whether the enjoyment of the spring was of such a character as to have invaded his neighbor's rights, so as to enable the latter to maintain an action for the injury. No man can be barred by a statute of limitation for not bringing his action within the prescribed period, until it is first shown that he had a cause of action which he could have maintained. . . . Presumption is when the conduct of the party out of possession cannot be accounted for without presuming a conveyance. Kingston v. Lesley, 10 S. & R. (Pa.) 390; Butz v. Ihrie, 1 Rawle (Pa.) 218. The Federician Code of Prussia provides that no presumption can take place where no negligence can be imputed, and accordingly by that code a man may raise his house after any lapse of time, although it darkens his neighbor's house. Federician Code of Prussia 48, 55. The same principle is to be found in the law of Scotland. Erskine's Prin. Law of Scotland 350. The owner of the mine had no right to complain of his neighbor below for making use of the spring on his own lands. As long as it flowed there, he had a right to make use of it, and the owner of the land through which the supply of water came, was not in any manner injured by such use of the water. Silence or acquiescence, where one is not injured and has no cause of complaint, can never deprive him of his rights on the ground of presumption of a grant. No man can be said to have granted a right about which it would have been an impertinent interference to utter a complaint. Hoy v. Sterrett, 2 Watts (Pa.) 331; 27 Am. Dec. 313; Merlin's Repertoire de Jurisp., verb. "Cours d'Eau." . . . By the Civil Code of Louisiana, non-apparent servitudes can be established only by title. Immemorial possession alone is not sufficient to acquire them. Louisiana Civ. Code, tit. "Servitudes," p. 240; Pardessus Traité des Servitudes, § 95. In a case like the present, therefore, there is no reason whatever for depriving the plaintiff in error of the enjoyment of his rights of property on his own land, on the ground of any servitude established by time, or acquiescence for the benefit of the tannery of the adjacent tract."

1. Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., L. R., 7 Exch. 299; Shury v. Piggot, 3 Bulst. 339; Tyler v. Wilkinson, 4 Mason (U. S.) 397; Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533; 52 Am. Dec. 352.

2. MINES AND MINING CLAIMS, vol. 15, p. 580.

3. See Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 117; Howland v. Vincent, 10 Met. (Mass.) 373; 63 Am. Dec. 442; Parker v. Boston, etc., R. Co., 3 Cush.

where the question of motive generally, and its application to the interception of subterranean waters, has arisen, the weight of authority is to the effect that, in accordance with the principle that the law deals with the outward acts, when the use which a landowner makes of his property is lawful in itself, the law will not take cognizance of the motive which prompts the use, even where it results in damage to another, and that the exercise of the legal right cannot be effected by the motive which controls it.¹ The (Mass.) 115; 1 Am. Rep. 709; Roath v. Driscoll, 20 Conn. 533; 52 Am. Dec. 352; Chesley v. King, 74 Me. 164; 43 Am. Rep. 569; Haldeman v. Bruckhart, 45 Pa. St. 521; 84 Am. Dec. 511. See also Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349; Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324.

In Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, Lewis, C. J., says: "Neither the civil law nor the common law permits a man to be deprived of a well or spring, or stream of water, for the mere gratification of malice." And in Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276, Bellows, C. J., said: "Ordinarily a landowner may dig a well upon his own land, even though, by percolation, it draws the water from his neighbor's land, or even his well; but it would present a very different question if the well was dug by him with the express purpose of transferring the water in his neighbor's spring or well to his own, and knowing that this would be the result."

But in none of these cases was the question decided in favor of the plaintiff, upon the ground of the motive of the defendant's act. And in Walker v. Cronin, 107 Mass. 556, Wells, J., commenting upon Greenleaf v. Francis, 18 Pick. (Mass.) 117, said: "It is intimated, in this case, that such acts might be actionable if done maliciously. But the rights of the owner of land being absolute therein, and the adjoining proprietor having no legal right to such a supply of water from lands of another, the superior right must prevail. Accordingly, it is generally held that no action will lie against one for acts done upon his own land in the exercise of his rights of ownership, whatever the motive, if they merely deprive a not her of advantages, or cause a loss to him, without violating any legal right; that is, the motive in such cases is immaterial."

1. Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 39; 28

Am. Rep. 93; Kiff v. Youmans, 86 N. Y. 324; 40 Am. Rep. 543; Corey v. People, 45 Barb. (N. Y.) 262; Mahan v. Brown, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 261; Delhi v. Youmans, 50 Barb. (N. Y.) 316; Moran v. McClearn, 60 Barb. (N. Y.) 388; Pantou v. Holland, 17 Johns. (N. Y.) 92; 8 Am. Dec. 369; Harwood v. Benton, 32 Vt. 734; South Royalton Bank v. Suffolk Bank, 27 Vt. 505; Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294.

See also in analogy, Stevenson v. Newnham, 13 C. B. 285; 76 E. C. L. 285; Floyd v. Barker, 12 Co. 23; Taylor v. Henniker, 12 A. & E. 488; 40 E. C. L. 105; Heald v. Carey, 11 C. B. 977; 73 E. C. L. 976; Clinton v. Myers, 46 N. Y. 511; 7 Am. Rep. 373; Covanhovan v. Hart, 21 Pa. St. 501; 60 Am. Dec. 57; Jenkins v. Fowler, 24 Pa. St. 308; Fowler v. Jenkins, 28 Pa. St. 176; Glendon Iron Co. v. Uhler, 75 Pa. St. 467; 15 Am. Rep. 599; Smith v. Johnson, 76 Pa. St. 191; Hunt v. Simonds, 19 Mo. 583; Auburn, etc., Plank Road Co. v. Douglass, 9 N. Y. 444.

In Jenkins v. Fowler, 24 Pa. St. 308, Black, J., said: "Malicious motives make a bad act worse, but they cannot make that a wrong, which in its own essence is lawful."

"The refusal or discontinuance of a favor gives no cause of action." Mahan v. Brown, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 261. See also Old Colony R. Co. v. Miller, 125 Mass. 1; 28 Am. Rep. 194.

In Chatfield v. Wilson, 28 Vt. 49, where the defendant had placed within his own land, and near the line of the plaintiff's land, dry, hard earth which prevented the plaintiff from availing himself of water which had before percolated into the plaintiff's land, and supplied a reservoir placed therein, it was held that the act, being lawful of itself, could not subject the defendant to damages, unless by reason thereof some right of the plaintiff had been violated.

In Phelps v. Nowlen, 72 N. Y. 39; 28 Am. Rep. 93, the defendant was the owner of land upon which there was a mineral spring, surrounded by an artificial embankment. The plaintiff dug a well on his own land, striking a vein of mineral water, which rose high enough to be conducted in pipes to his bathhouse. The defendant, for no purpose beneficial to himself, and simply to divert the water from the plaintiff's well, lowered the embankment on his land, thereby cutting off the supply of water from the plaintiff's well. The court held that the plaintiff had sustained no legal injury, and could not sustain an action for such diversion of the water, and that the maxim Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas, does not apply to an act legal in itself.

In Pickard v. Collins, 23 Barb. (N. Y.) 444, it was held that the injury arising by the use of one's own land so as to injure another's property must be a legal injury; an invasion of some legal right, as erecting a building, or carrying on a business which so obstructs the enjoyment by another of his property, as to amount to a nuisance; or removing the soil, or placing something on the soil of another, and that the liability of the defendant does not depend upon the motives with which the erection was made. It was said that the fallacy of a contrary doctrine, which was contended for, "consists in its overlooking a fatal defect in a right of action in such a case—the absence of any legal injury. Bad motives in doing an act which violates no legal right of another, cannot make that act a ground of action." See also Mahan v. Brown, 13 Wend. (N. Y.) 261; Clinton v. Myers, 46 N. Y. 511; 7 Am. Rep. 373.

In Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294, the court, by Brinkerhoff, J., observed: "As an act unlawful in itself, resulting in injury to another, whatever may have been the motive with which it was done, is none the less the subject of legal redress, so the act done, to-wit, the using of one's own property, being lawful in itself, the motive with which it is done—whatever it may be as a matter of conscience—is, in law, a matter of indifference."

In Porter v. Durham, 74 N. Car. 767, the court, by Rodman, J., observed: "We have not given any attention to the alleged motives of the defendants. Their motives are immaterial. The question is only as to their rights."

"The civil law deems an act, otherwise lawful in itself, illegal, if done with a malicious intent of injuring a neighbor, animo vicino nocendi. The same principle is adopted in the laws of Scotland, where an otherwise lawful act is forbidden, if done in æmulationem vicini; but this principle has not found a place in our law." Lord Wensleydale, in Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349.

In considering the question of motive, Mr. Angell, in his work on Water-courses (7th ed.), p. 189, observes: "Whichever side the balance of opinion upon the question under consideration may fall, it is quite evident that it is not settled by authority. Whenever settled, it must be upon principles involving the natural rights of property. These rights are based upon two fundamental maxims, one looking to the extent of one's ownership in land, the other to his mode of using it. The time-honored legal maxim, Ejus est solum, ejus est usque ad cælum, has given to the word land, when standing alone and not otherwise restricted, an extension bringing within its scope everything which exists naturally, or has been fixed artificially, between the center of the earth and the confines of the atmosphere; and to this extent the landowner has an absolute right of property. But in as much as every owner or occupier of land may be brought into close proprietary relations with neighbors on all sides of him, it is obvious that he and his neighbors cannot be mutually indifferent to each other's doings. To regulate these relations, the common law, otherwise so jealous of interference between the owner and his property, imposes upon him the simple rule, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas. The rights, which spring from the exclusive power, given by common law to every possessor of property, of doing what he likes with his own, when modified by the rule last stated, may be conveniently designated natural rights. Or, to state the same thing somewhat differently, all which can be enjoyed and practised by neighboring proprietors, each within his own territorial space, without materially affecting the natural state of the other's property, or their respective means of dealing with it, constitutes in the aggregate the natural rights of property. Any further restraint, which the owner or occupier may be obliged to put upon the free exercise of his physical power over the land, must rest upon contract, maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas, is held to be applicable to such injuries as the law will redress, and not such as are damnum absque injuria.¹ These principles, it will be seen, are not applicable to pollution of such waters.²

5. Pollution of Underground Waters—(See also NUISANCES, vol. 16, p. 922; SURFACE WATERS, vol. 24, p. 933).—There is a distinction between the appropriation of underground water before it becomes the property of the adjoining landowner, and the poisoning or pollution of such water to which he is entitled; and it is well settled that, where a proprietor permits, or causes, filthy or contaminated water to percolate from his soil into adjoining land to the injury of his neighbor, he is liable in damages;³

either express or implied. Now, it becomes important to know the precise force given by courts to the maxim, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas. 'Confessedly,' said Strong, J., in Halderman v. Buckhart, 45 Pa. St. 517; 84 Am. Dec. 511, 'the absolute dominion of a proprietor over his land to the center of the earth is restrained by it. But what is an injury? The rightful use of one's land may cause damage to another without any legal wrong. An act done, causing damage which the law will redress, must not only be hurtful, but wrongful. There must be damnum et injuria, an act not merely hurtful, but an infringement of another's right.' And in Ellis v. Duncan, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 230, Strong, J., said: 'There can be no doubt of the correctness of the injunction, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non lædas; but I have frequently had occasion to remark that it refers to such injuries only as the law will redress, and not to the large class which are usually denominated damnum absque injuria.'

1. Broom's Legal Maxims, p. 366; Ellis v. Duncan, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 230.

2. See infra, this title, Pollution of Underground Waters.

3. Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. Div. 115; 32 Alb. L. J. 289; 24 Am. L. R. 634; Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 B. & S. 229; 116 E. C. L. 229; Tenant v. Goldwin, 2 Ld. Raym. 1089; 1 Salk. 360; Fletcher v. Rylands, L. R., 3 H. L. Cas. 330; Snow v. Whitehead, 27 Ch. Div. 588; Turner v. Mirfield, 34 Beav. 390; Smith v. Kenrick, 7 C. B. 515; 62 E. C. L. 513; Embrey v. Owen, 6 Exch. 353; Wood v. Waugh, 3 Exch. 748; Womersley v. Church, 17 L. T. N. S. 190; Humphries v. Cousins, 2 C. P. Div. 239; Ball v. Nye, 99 Mass. 582; 97 Am. Dec. 56; Wilson v. New Bed- ford, 108 Mass. 261; 11 Am. Rep. 352; Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322; Decatur Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Howell, 92 Ill. 19; Perrine v. Taylor, 43 N. J. Eq. 128; Haugh's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 42; 48 Am. Rep. 193; Shuter v. Philadelphia, 3 Phila. (Pa.) 228; Pottstown Gas Co. v. Murphy, 39 Pa. St. 230; Jacobs v. Worrell, 15 Leg. Int. (Pa.) 139; Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas, etc., Co., 131 Pa. St. 143; 17 Am. St. Rep. 79; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 295; Robinson v. Black Diamond Coal Co., 57 Cal. 412; 40 Am. Rep. 118; Red River Roller Mills v. Wright, 30 Minn. 249; 44 Am. Rep. 194; Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271; 43 Am. Dec. 699.

The injury, it seems, must be positive and substantial, and such as fairly imposes upon the party causing it the duty of restraint. Columbus Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Freeland, 12 Ohio St. 392.

He whose filth it is, is required to keep it on his own premises at his peril. Tenant v. Goldwin, 2 Ld. Raym. 1089; 6 Mod. 311.

If a person should place, or negligently allow, a deleterious substance to remain, whereby the useful waters of another may be corrupted, either by the ordinary or extraordinary, yet not very uncommon, action of the elements, he is liable for an injury resulting therefrom. Woodward v. Aborn, 35 Me. 271; 43 Am. Dec. 699.

In Kinnaird v. Standard Oil Co., 89 Ky. 469, the defendants were the owners of a warehouse which they used for the purpose of storing oil, and the evidence showed that it leaked from the casks and passed into the ground and polluted the stream from which the spring of the plaintiff was supplied; the defendants were held liable for the injury resulting to the plaintiff, although they were ignorant of the fact that the oil was affecting the spring. Prior, J., said : " It seems to us, after a careful review of the authorities referred to by counsel for the corporation, all of which are entitled to great weight, that there is a manifest distinction between the right of the owner of the land to use the underground water upon it that originates from percolation, or is found in hidden veins, and the right to contaminate it so as to injure or destroy the water when passing to the adjoining land of his neighbor. . . . Because the owner has the right to make an appropriation of all the underground water, and thus prevent its use by another, he has no right to poison it, however innocently, or to contaminate it, so when it reaches his neighbor's land it is in such condition as to be unfit for use, either by man or beast. One may be entitled, by contract with his neighbor, to all the water that flows in a stream on the surface that passes through the land of both ; and, while he can thus appropriate it, he has no right to pollute the water in such a manner as, when it passes to his neighbor, its use becomes dangerous or unhealthy to his family, or to the beasts on his farm. " As soon as water leaves the land of the one who claims the right to use it, and runs on the land of another, the latter has the same right to appropriate it ; and, if property, it then becomes as much the property of the last, as the first proprietor. The owner of land has the same right to the use and enjoyment of the air that is around and over his premises as he has to use and enjoy the water under his ground. He is entitled to the use of what is above the ground as well as that below it ; and, still, it will scarcely be insisted that he can poison the atmosphere with noxious odors, that reach the dwelling of his neighbor to the injury of himself or family ; if not, we see no reason why he should be permitted to so contaminate the water that flows from his land to his neighbor, producing the same results, and still escape liability for the damages sustained ; and, whether the water escapes the one way or the other, is immaterial."

In Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. Div. 125, the leading case on this subject, the defendant was held liable for injury to his neighbor's well by permitting sewage from his house to flow into the well. Lindley, L. J., said : " The right to foul water is not the same as the right to get it ; and in my opinion does not depend on the same principles. Prima facie every man has a right to get from his own land water which is naturally found there, but it frequently happens that he cannot do this without diminishing his neighbor's supply. In such a case the neighbor must submit to the inconvenience. But prima facie no man has a right to use his own land in such a way as to be a nuisance to his neighbor, and whether the nuisance is effected by sending filth onto his neighbor's land, or by putting poisonous matter on his own land and allowing it to escape on his neighbor's land, or whether the nuisance is effected by poisoning the air which his neighbor breathes, or the water he drinks, appears to me wholly immaterial. . . . So, if a man chooses to poison his own well, he must take care not to poison the waters which other persons have a right to use as much as himself. To hold the contrary, on the ground that the water is not their property until they get it, and that it is poisoned before they get it, is to take an inadequate view of the subject, and to overlook the fact that the law of nuisance is not based exclusively on rights of property."

Hon. Edmund H. Bennett, in a note to Ballard v. Tomlinson, 24 Am. Law Reg. 634, says : " The decision of Mr. Justice Pearson in the court below (Ballard v. Tomlinson, 26 Ch. Div. 194), was founded upon the proposition that, ' as the defendants were clearly entitled to pump every drop of water out of their well and leave the plaintiff with none, it would be no difference in principle if they deprived him of the water by rendering it unfit for use ;' and similar views seem to have been entertained in Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 549 ; Green-castle v. Hazelett, 23 Ind. 186 ; Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn. 84 ; 71 Am. Dec. 49. The fallacy of this reasoning is abundantly shown by the judgments in the case on appeal. It does not follow that because one has a right to use a thing on his own land, he may lawfully send it into his neighbor's premises in a condition to work an injury to him. . . . The American cases, therefore, while recognizing to its fullest extent the right of every landowner to use, detain, and even totally abstract all underground percolating water, yet quite agree with the decision in Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch.

and to prevent such injury a court of equity will grant an injunction.¹ So, a recovery has been had against one who has poisoned or contaminated waters of a spring or well of an adjoining owner, by permitting gas to escape therein,² by the erection of a cemetery or private burying-ground,³ or

Div. 115, that he is liable for corrupting it, and thus causing injury to the well of an adjoining owner. . . . The true cause of action therefore in this case, is not exactly that the defendant contaminated underground percolating water, but that he allowed his impure sewage to escape from his premises to the plaintiff's, and the circumstance that it reached there by underground percolation instead of by a surface stream is quite immaterial. The mode of transmission is unimportant."

1. Bloodgood v. Ayers, 108 N. Y. 400; 2 Am. St. Rep. 443; Dillon v. Acme Oil Co., 49 Hun (N. Y.) 565; Hodgkinson v. Ennor, 4 B. & S. 229; Haugh's Appeal, 102 Pa. St. 42; 48 Am. Rep. 193; Wilson v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 261; 11 Am. Rep. 352; Ball v. Nye, 99 Mass. 582; 97 Am. Dec. 56; Frazier v. Brown, 12 Ohio St. 294. So in Turner v. Mirfield, 34 Beav. 390, a perpetual injunction was granted to restrain the defendant from allowing noxious and unfit refuse matter to flow from the manufactories into his land, but which percolated into the defendant's collieries. And in Womersley v. Church, 17 L. T. N. S. 190, the defendant was prevented by injunction from maintaining a cesspool through which water percolated to the plaintiff's well.

2. Collins v. Chartiers Valley, etc., Gas Co., 131 Pa. St. 143; 17 Am. St. Rep. 79; Ottawa Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Graham, 28 Ill. 74; 81 Am. Dec. 263; Ottawa Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Thompson, 39 Ill. 601; Decatur Gas, etc., Co. v. Howell, 92 Ill. 19; Columbus Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Freeland, 12 Ohio St. 392.

In Ottawa Gas Light, etc., Co. v. Graham, 28 Ill. 74; 81 Am. Dec. 263, the gas company erected its works near the well of the plaintiff, and, by permitting the substances used in the manufacture of the gas to permeate the soil, injured the water in the plaintiff's well; the jury was instructed that if such substances did soak into the ground, percolate through the soil, and render the water of the plaintiff's well unfit for use, they should render a verdict for him, which was held proper.

In Pottstown Gas Co. v. Murphy, 39 Pa. St. 257, the company was held liable for the poisoning of the plaintiff's well by reason of fluids percolating from the works of the gas company.

In Sherman v. Fall River Iron Works Co., 5 Allen (Mass.) 213, the court held that the fact that other causes have contributed to render the water of a well impure and unfit for use, is no bar to an action to recover damages for an injury to the water, caused by the escape of gas into it; but it may be shown in mitigation of damages.

3. Clark v. Lawrence, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 83; 78 Am. Dec. 241; Barnes v. Hathorn, 54 Me. 124. See also CEMETERIES, vol. 3, p. 55.

In Ball v. Nye, 99 Mass. 582; 97 Am. Dec. 56, Foster, J., said: "To suffer filthy water from a vault to percolate or filter through the soil into the land of a contiguous proprietor, to the injury of his well and cellar, where it is done habitually and within the knowledge of the party who maintains the vault, whether it passes above ground or below, is of itself an actionable tort. Under such circumstances the reasonable precaution which the law requires is, effectually to exclude the filth from the neighbor's land; and not to do so is of itself negligence. In the present instance, there was no pretense of a sudden and unavoidable accident which could not have been foreseen or guarded against by due care. The percolations appear to have been constant, and their existence to have been known to the defendant." See also Baird v. Williamson, 15 C. B. N. S. 376; 109 E. C. L. 375; Fletcher v. Rylands, L. R., 3 H. L. Cas. 330.

Whenever it can be clearly proved that a burial ground is so situated that the burial of the dead there will endanger life or health, either by corrupting the surrounding atmosphere or the water of springs or wells, a court of equity will grant its injunctive relief, upon the ground that the act will be a nuisance of a kind likely to produce by the construction of sewers and privy vaults.¹ And the fact that the plaintiff appropriates the polluted water by artificial means as, for instance, by pumping, has been held to be immaterial, where a right to the water exists.²

There are several cases, however, in which the distinction is apparently not recognized, and the pollution or poisoning by the irreparable mischief, and one which cannot be adequately redressed by an action at law. Clark v. Lawrence, 6 Jones Eq. (N. Car.) 83; 78 Am. Dec. 241.

In Kingsbury v. Flowers, 65 Ala. 479; 39 Am. Rep. 14, the court held that a private burial ground near dwellings, is not necessarily a nuisance, and its use can only be enjoined on clear proof of probable injury.

In Greencastle v. Hazelett, 23 Ind. 186, the distinction pointed out in the text was not recognized, and it was held that a city had complete authority to establish cemeteries, and discretion to judge of their necessity.

1. In Alston v. Grant, 3 El. & Bl. 128; 77 E. C. L. 127, it was held that where, by reason of the faulty construction of a sewer, filth percolated therefrom into the cellars of the adjoining premises, the owner of the land was liable for the damages, even when he was the owner of the premises into which the filth percolated, and the parties complaining were his own tenants. See also Brown v. Sargent, 1 F. & F. 112; Barton v. Syracuse, 37 Barb. (N. Y.) 292; Child v. Boston, 4 Allen (Mass.) 41; 81 Am. Dec. 680; McSwiney v. Haynes, 1 Ir. Eq. Rep. 322. See generally DRAINS AND SEWERS, vol. 6, p. 2.

When the Erection of a Privy Will Be Enjoined as a Nuisance.—De Give v. Seltzer, 64 Ga. 423; Rand v. Wilber, 19 Ill. App. 395. In Wahle v. Reinbach, 76 Ill. 322, the defendant was about to erect a privy on his own lot, about eight feet from the dwelling house and cellar, and within twenty feet of the well of the complainant. It was held that a bill for an injunction to restrain the completion of the same, would lie, there being no adequate remedy at law for the injury that would result therefrom to the complainant. The court observes: "Privies are regarded as prima facie nuisances, and although necessary and indispensable in connection with the use of property for the ordinary purposes of habitation, yet if they are built or allowed to remain in such a condition as to annoy others in the proper enjoyment of their property, by reason either of the noisome smells that arise therefrom or by the escape of filthy matter therefrom upon the premises of another, or so as to corrupt the water of a well or spring, they are nuisances in fact." See also Cleveland v. Citizens' Gas Light Co., 20, N. J. Eq. 201; Ross v. Butler, 19 N. J. Eq. 294; 97 Am. Dec. 654.

2. In Ballard v. Tomlinson, 29 Ch. Div. 115, the defendant polluted his own well with sewage, and the water therefrom percolated into the plaintiff's well, which was on a lower level. The latter used his well by pumping. It was contended that inasmuch as such water came to him, not through the operation of natural causes alone, but was appropriated by artificial means, the defendant was not liable; but the court held otherwise. Brett, M. R., reversing Pearson, J., in Ballard v. Tomlinson, 26 Ch. Div. 194, said: "It seems to my mind to be clear from the decisions that no one has at any time any property in water percolating below the surface of the earth, even when it is under his own land, but it is equally clear that everybody has a right to appropriate that percolating water, at least whilst it is under his own land, to the extent that he may take it all so as to prevent any of it going on the land of his neighbor. But his neighbor below him according to the flow of water, has an equal right before the person above has appropriated it to take it all. He has a right to take the water from the percolating stream under his own land to this extent, that he may thereby cause the water which is under the land above him to come on his own land when it otherwise would not, and then to take that, and so on, until he has absolutely dried the land above him. This percolating water below the surface of the earth is therefore a common reservoir or source in which nobody has any property, but of which everybody has, as far as he can, the right of appropriating the whole. . . . The principle of natural user does not plaintiff is held to be no ground of action;¹ but these cases, it seems, may be reconciled in the principle, that the use of his own property which causes the injury must be natural, proper, and free from negligence, the question not being as to the property rights, but whether or not the defendant is guilty of a nuisance.²

apply at all. The plaintiff, if he has a right to use anything in nature, has a right to exercise that user by all the skill and invention of which man is capable, and it seems to me that as long as the plaintiff uses only lawful means as against his neighbor, however ingenious or however artificial those means may be, his right to appropriate the common source is not diminished, because he uses the most artificial or most ingenious methods."

1. In Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 542, Cooley, J. observes: "If withdrawing the water from one's well by an excavation on adjoining lands will give no right of action, it is difficult to understand how corrupting its waters by a proper use of the adjoining premises can be actionable, when there is no actual intent to injure, and no negligence. The one act destroys the well, and the other does no more." This, however, was mere dicta.

In Brown v. Illius, 27 Conn. 84; 71 Am. Dec. 49, the action was for a nuisance; the defendant was engaged in operating gas-works, and he had negligently and improperly placed upon the surface of the lot and along the line of the plaintiff's lands, near his well, large quantities of coal tar, gas lime, and other offensive and noxious materials, which were washed by the surface water into the well, and also soaked and penetrated into the ground, and thence into the soil around and adjoining the well, whereby the waters were corrupted, etc. The court held that the negligently leaving of noxious substances on the land, which are washed by the rain along the surface of the ground into a neighbor's well, is actionable, and that it makes no difference if the substances are carried upon the surface of the ground, or have soaked into the soil, and are carried along the surface by means of water diffusing itself according to natural laws; but where such noxious substances, by penetrating or being buried within the soil, have affected the subterranean currents by which a well is supplied, and have corrupted the water, the party placing such substances on or within his soil is not liable, unless he acted maliciously. See also Upjohn v. Board of Health, 46 Mich. 542; Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324.

And in Dillon v. Acme Oil Co., 49 Hun (N. Y.) 565, the court, by Haight, J., says: "It is only in exceptional cases that the channels of subterranean streams are known and their courses defined; it is only in such exceptional cases that the owner can know beforehand that his works will affect his neighbor's wells or supply of water, and we are, therefore, of the opinion that in the absence of negligence and of knowledge as to the existence of such subterranean water-courses, when the business is legitimate and conducted with care and skill, there can be no liability if such subterranean courses become contaminated." In this case a distinction is drawn between contaminating a subterranean stream and contamination by soaking or percolation, as follows: "In the case of Womersley v. Church, 17 L. T. N. S. 190, the owner of the adjoining premises dug a cesspool within fourteen yards of the plaintiff's well, so near that the liquid from the cesspool percolated through and contaminated the water in the well. It was held that the defendant's use of the cesspool should be restrained. To the same effect is the case of Norton v. Scholefield, 9 M. & W. 665. It will be observed, however, that the contamination was by soaking or percolating of the sewage matter from the cesspool, and was not from the contamination of subterranean streams, so that in case oil from the defendant's works had soaked or percolated along the surface, thus reaching and contaminating the plaintiff's wells, a different question would have been presented."

2. See Swett v. Cutts, 50 N. H. 439; 9 Am. Rep. 276. In Collins v. Chartiers Valley Gas Co., 131 Pa. St. 143; 17 Am. St. Rep. 79, the court, by Mitchell, J., said: "The dividing line between the right to use one's own, and the duty not to injure another's, is one of great nicety and importance, and frequently of difficulty. The Pennsylvania decisions have endeavored with unusual care, to preserve the substance of both rights, as far as their sometimes inevitable conflict may permit. With regard to the use and control of flowing water, and of water courses, the case of Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 113 Pa. St. 126; 57 Am. Rep. 445, definitely settled the rule that for unavoidable damage to another's land, in the lawful use of one's own, no action can be maintained. No other result seems possible, without restricting the uses, derogating from the full enjoyment, and diminishing the value of property. But the rule does not go beyond proper use and unavoidable damage. It is thus clearly expressed in the opinion of our Brother Clark: 'Every man has the right to the natural use and enjoyment of his own property; and if, while lawfully in such use and enjoyment, without negligence or malice on his part, an unavoidable loss occurs to his neighbor, it is damnum absque injuria.' That this is the rule as to surface streams was conceded by the defendant below; but it contended that, as to subterranean waters, or at least as to percolations and hidden streams, an owner was not bound to pay any attention to the effect of his operations within his own land, upon the land of others. The learned judge below, though seeing and expressing the force of the reasons for a uniform rule applicable to both classes of waters, felt himself so far constrained by adjudicated cases that he directed a verdict for the defendant.

"The use which inflicts the damage must be natural, proper, and free from negligence, and the damage unavoidable. On the question of negligence, the question of knowledge is always important, and may be conclusive. Hence the practical inquiry is, first, whether the damage was necessary and unavoidable; secondly, if not, was it sufficiently obvious to have been foreseen, and also preventible by reasonable care and expenditure? In Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 113 Pa. St. 126; 57 Am. Rep. 445, the damage was unavoidable. In Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, it was not ascertainable beforehand; hence the plaintiff had no cause of action in either case. Later cases, following Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, have held that injury to springs, wells, etc., supplied by mere percolation, was not actionable, and the reason has always been the same—that the damage could not be foreseen or avoided. If the boundaries of knowledge have been so enlarged as to make an end of the reason, then, cessante ratione, cessat ipsa lex. Geology is a progressive, and now, in many respects, a practical science; and, as truly remarked by the learned judge below, in his opinion on the motion for a new trial, 'Since the decisions in Acton v. Blundell, 12 M. & W. 324, and Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, probably more deep wells have been drilled in Western Pennsylvania than had previously been dug in the entire earth in all time. And that which was then held to be necessarily unknown and merely speculative, as to the flow of water underground, has been, by experience in such cases as this, reduced almost to a certainty.' If this is the state of knowledge at the present day; if the existence of a stratum of clear water, and its flow into wells and springs of the vicinity, and the existence of a separate and deeper stratum of salt water, which is likely to rise and mingle with the fresh, when penetrated in boring for oil or gas, are known, and the means of preventing the mixing are available at reasonable expense, then, clearly, it would be a violation of the living spirit of the law not to recognize the change, and apply the settled and immutable principles of right to the altered conditions of fact. The learned judge, in his charge, said: 'There is evidence from which the jury could fairly find that the defendant, when the well was drilled, knew, or ought to have known, if he had exercised any reasonable judgment, or investigated or paid attention to it, that the boring of this well in the way it was done, without shutting off the salt water from the fresh water, would almost inevitably ruin these and other wells in the immediate vicinity. And I think there is evidence from which the jury could fairly find that the defendant could, with the outlay of a small amount of money, have shut off the salt water from the fresh water, so that it could not have done any injury.' If the jury had found the facts as this charge assumes that they fairly might on the evidence, then the plaintiff had made out a case of negligence, and was entitled to recover. Negligence in this sense is the absence of such care and regard for the rights of others as a

IV. ARTIFICIAL OR ENFORCED PERCOLATIONS—INJURIES THEREFROM

—1. In General.—A distinction has been drawn between natural percolations and percolations caused artificially,¹ and it has been held, both in England and the United States, that one who accumulates water artificially on his own land, thereby causing percolation through the soil to the damage of his neighbor, is liable prudent and just man would and should have in the same situation. If the plaintiff showed that the injury was plainly to be anticipated, and easily preventible with reasonable care and expense, he brought himself within the exception of all the cases from Wheatley v. Baugh, 25 Pa. St. 528; 64 Am. Dec. 721, to Pennsylvania Coal Co. v. Sanderson, 113 Pa. St. 126; 57 Am. Rep. 445, inclusive. It may be well to say that, in cases of this nature, juries should be held with a firm hand to real cases of negligence within the exception, and not allowed to pare down the general rule by sympathetic verdicts in cases of loss or hardship from the proper exercise of clear rights. The danger of such result is not to be ignored, but we cannot on that account shut the door to suitors entitled to redress for genuine wrongs. The duty to maintain the line firmly where justice and law put it is, in the first instance and chiefly upon the trial courts."

1. In Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R., 3 H. L. Cas. 330, a leading case on this subject, a reservoir was created artificially, from which the water flowed from some passage, apparently filled up and long disused, into the plaintiff's mine. Lord Cranworth said: "If a man brings or accumulates water and allows it to escape and cause damage, he is responsible, however careful he may have been, and whatever precautions he may have taken to prevent the damage. . . . If water naturally rising in the defendants' land had, by percolation, found its way down to the plaintiff's mine through the old workings, and so had impeded his operations, that would not have afforded him any ground of complaint. . . . But that is not the real state of the case. The defendants, in order to effect an object of their own, brought onto their land, a large accumulated mass of water, and stored it up in a reservoir. The consequence of this was damage to the plaintiff, and for that damage, however skillfully and carefully the accumulation was made, the defendants were certainly responsible." This doctrine was approved in Nichols v. Marsland, L. R., 10 Exch. 255. See also Show v. Whitehead, 27 Ch. Div. 588; Humphries v. Cousins, 2 C. P. Div. 239.

In Hurdman v. North Eastern R. Co., 3 C. P. Div. 168, the defendants placed upon their land and against their wall, which adjoined the house of the plaintiff, large quantities of soil, clay, and limestone, and other refuse, and thereby raised the surface of their land above the level of the land upon which the plaintiff's house was built, so that the rain which fell upon the soil, clay, limestone, etc., oozed and percolated through the wall of the defendants into the house of the plaintiff, causing it to become wet, unwholesome, and unhealthy, etc. It was held that the defendants were liable for the damages. See also, Broder v. Sailard, 2 Ch. Div. 692.

And in Evans v. Manchester, etc., R. Co., 3 Ch. Div. 626, on the bank of a canal, constructed under an old act of Parliament, a mill had been built; in consequence of the working of a coal mine, the canal and mill had subsided, and the water leaked from the canal into the mill. In an action brought by the mill owner against the canal company, for an injunction and damages, it was held that the company, being authorized by an act of Parliament, were not under the same liabilities as a private person, but they were liable for damages if guilty of negligence, and that the canal company were guilty of negligence, inasmuch as they might have prevented the damage.

In Massachusetts, the doctrine of the English courts seems to be adopted. In Ætna Mills v. Brookline, 127 Mass. 69, the defendants, under a statute authorizing them to take the waters of the Charles River for the use of the said town and inhabitants thereof, providing that the town shall be liable in damages to any person injured by such taking, constructed a water gallery on land near the river, which drew off, by percolation, water from the river through the natural soil between the gallery and the river. It was held that therefor; but in a majority of the states this doctrine is qualified, and in order to create liability, negligence must be shown.¹ Where, however, accumulation is in the first instance wrongful, there had been a taking of the waters of the river, within the meaning of the act, and that a person whose property was injured by such taking was entitled to indemnity. Endicott, J., said: "It is well settled that water, which flows or percolates underground in defined channels, belongs to the owner of the soil, and he may by a well or other structure appropriate it to his own use, although by so doing he may arrest it on its way to his neighbor's land, or draw it from his neighbor's land into his own. Such water on the land is as much his property as the land itself. But a very different question is presented where the owner of land constructs his well or other structure in such manner as to create an artificial underground current of water from a running stream, thus withdrawing the water of the stream into his own land, under the claim that of right he is entitled to the waters thus found in or coming to his land." See also Ætna Mills v. Waltham, 126 Mass. 422; Bailey v. Woburn, 126 Mass. 416.

It was held immaterial how the town took the water, whether by pipes or by percolations through an artificial or natural embankment between the gallery and the river in Cowdrey v. Woburn, 136 Mass. 409.

And in Wilson v. New Bedford, 108 Mass. 265; 11 Am. Rep. 352, Chapman, C. J., observes: "The percolating water belongs to the owner of the land, as much as the land itself, or the rocks and stones in it. Therefore he may dig a well, and make it very large, and draw up the water, by machinery or otherwise, in such quantities as to supply aqueducts for a large neighborhood. He may thus take the water which would otherwise pass by natural percolation into his neighbor's land, and draw off the water which may come by natural percolation from his neighbor's land; and his neighbor may, by a wall or other obstruction, retain the water which is upon his own land, and prevent the water from coming into his soil. . . . But the present case is of a different character. The respondents have so raised their dam and reservoir as to cause an artificial pressure of the water through the soil, and by its action it has flooded the petitioner's cellars."

In Fuller v. Chicopee Mfg. Co., 16 Gray (Mass.) 46, recovery was had for damages occasioned by raising a pond which affected injuriously the plaintiff's well. See also Gorham v. Cross, 125 Mass. 232; 28 Am. Rep. 234.

In Mears v. Dole, 135 Mass. 508, one who, by excavations on his land, let in the sea which undermined and injured adjoining land, was held liable in an action for the injury so caused, including an injury to a well by percolation of salt water.

1. The doctrine of Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R., 3 H. L. Cas. 330, has been departed from, both in its application to the percolating water, and the escape of water by the overflowing of dams, reservoirs, etc., as in the following cases: Reed v. State, 108 N. Y. 407; Pixley v. Clark, 35 N. Y. 520; 91 Am. Dec. 72; Mairs v. Manhattan Real Estate Assoc., 89 N. Y. 506; Loosee v. Buchanann, 51 N. Y. 476; 10 Am. Rep. 623; Livingston v. Adams, 8 Cow. (N. Y.) 175; Garland v. Towne, 55 N. H. 55; 20 Am. Rep. 164; Lapham v. Curtis, 5 Vt. 371; 26 Am. Dec. 310; Todd v. Gochell, 17 Cal. 97; Everett v. Hydraulic Flume Funnel Co., 23 Cal. 225; Campbell v. Bear River, etc., Water, etc., Co., 35 Cal. 679; Hoffman v. Tuolumne County Water Co., 10 Cal. 413; Wolf v. St. Louis, etc., Water Co., 10 Cal. 541; Tenney v. Miners' Ditch Co., 7 Cal. 335; Richardson v. Kier, 34 Cal. 63; 91 Am. Dec. 681; Jones v. Robertson, 116 Ill. 543; 56 Am. Rep. 786; China v. Southwick, 12 Me. 238; Higgins v. Chesapeake, etc., Canal Co., 3 Harr. (Del.) 411; Morris Canal, etc., Co. v. Ryerson, 27 N. J. L. 457; Bell v. McClintock, 9 Watts (Pa.) 120; 34 Am. Dec. 507; Lehigh Bridge Co. v. Lehigh Coal, etc., Co., 4 Rawle (Pa.) 9; 26 Am. Dec. 111; Sheldon v. Sherman, 42 N. Y. 484; 1 Am. Rep. 569.

In Reed v. State, 108 N. Y. 407, it was held that the attempt to collect a large body of water into a limited space, surrounded with a porous and gravelly soil, without taking any adequate precaution to confine it to the receptacle prepared for it, is negligence, and for damages resulting therefrom to adjoining owners, the person chargeable with the negligent act is liable. See also Jutte v. Hughes, 67 N. Y.

the defendant is liable, although guilty of no negligence.¹ The general question as to the effect of accumulating water in mines² and dams³ has been treated elsewhere.

2. Diversion of Surface Streams by Artificial Percolation.—The distinction between artificial and natural percolations is again apparent in cases of the diversion of surface streams. Although a landowner may appropriate the natural percolations upon his land, he cannot construct his well, or other structure, in such a manner as to create an artificial underground current of water from a running stream, to the injury of his neighbors.⁴

267; Mairs v. Manhattan Real Estate Assoc., 89 N. Y. 506; Clements v. State, 105 N. Y. 621.

In Heacock v. State, 105 N. Y. 246; Avery v. State, 105 N. Y. 636, and Collins v. State, 105 N. Y. 641, a refusal to award damages for such percolations was reversed, and the claims sent back for a rehearing upon the merits.

A landowner who permits the water taken from artesian wells on his land, and carried through a ditch for the purpose of irrigating his fields, to percolate through the ditch and to saturate his neighbor's land, to his injury, when it might have been drained from the ditch so as probably to prevent such injury, is liable for the damages thereby sustained, and may be restrained by injunction. Parker v. Larsen, 86 Cal. 236; 21 Am. St. Rep. 30.

In Marshall v. Welwood, 38 N. J. L. 339; 20 Am. Rep. 394, the court, by Beasley, C. J., observes: "The fallacy in the process of argument by which judgment is reached in Rylands v. Fletcher, L. R., 3 H. L. Cas. 330, appears to me to consist in this: that the rule mainly applicable to a class of cases which, I think, should be regarded as, in a great degree, exceptional, is amplified and extended into a general, if not universal, principle. . . . It seems to me, therefore, that in this case (the bursting of a steam boiler while in use on the owner's property) it was necessary to submit the matter, as a question of fact for the jury, whether the occurrence doing the damage complained of, was the product of pure accident, or the result of want of care or skill on the part of the defendant or his agents." See also Simonton v. Loring, 68 Me. 164; 28 Am. Rep. 32 n; Parrott v. Barney, 1 Sawy. (U. S.) 423.

1. Frye v. Moor, 53 Me. 583.

2. See MINES AND MINING CLAIMS, vol. 15, p. 499.

3. See DAM, vol. 4, p. 971.

4. McClellan v. Hurdle, 3 Colo. App. 430. In Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, L. R., 6 Ch. 487, the defendant, by constructing a drain, drew off water flowing in a defined surface channel, the property of the plaintiff, flowing through adjoining land through which it had percolated into the drain. An injunction was granted. Lord Hatherly, L. C., said: "Where a well had been made to receive underground water, and another man had made a well which took away the water from the first well, he has as much right to use the soil as the digger of the first well. A man cannot compel his neighbor to leave his own soil untouched, and prevent his having a well, too. But, as regards flowing water, the case is quite different. . . . In this case there is, ex concessis, a defined channel in which this water was flowing, and I think the evidence is clear that some of it is withdrawn by the drain which the Local Board (the defendants) have made. As far as regards the support of the water, all one can say is this: I do not think Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349, or any other case, has decided more than this, that you have a right to all the water which you can draw from the different sources which may percolate under ground; but that has no bearing at all on what you may do with regard to water which is in a defined channel, and which you are not to touch. If you cannot get at the underground water without touching the water in a defined surface channel, I think you cannot get at it at all."

In Emporia v. Soden, 25 Kan. 588; 37 Am. Rep. 265, the distinction is well maintained. Brewer, J., said: "It is doubtless true, as a general proposition, that the law takes no cognizance of percolating water. The impossibility of proving with reasonable certainty the sources of supply is a strong, if not the principal, reason therefor. . . . It is also a general proposition that a man may not do indirectly what he may not do directly. Unquestionably a party may not run pipes into plaintiff's millpond, or dig a channel to it, and thus divert the water. May he accomplish the same result by digging a well upon the very banks, and so near thereto that the water oozes out from the pond into the well, and be beyond the reach of the law, so long as he keeps a wall of earth between the well and the pond? If this were the recognized law, protection to the owners of water-power would rest on slender foundations. . . . And, if a well on the very bank would be restrained, may the same result be accomplished by digging one a few feet off? It would seem as though but one answer could in justice be given: that the owner of an established power is entitled to protection against any subtraction therefrom, whether sought to be accomplished by direct or indirect methods. We are aware that the further the well is removed from the banks of the stream, the more difficult and uncertain the evidence of the abstraction of the water; but, when the fact of the abstraction is proved, it would seem that relief must necessarily follow. It is a matter of common knowledge that water, passing through but a narrow passage, and finding at the end an outlet, soon increases by its flow the size of the passage; and thus that which at first was but a mere trickle becomes in time a sizable stream, and the abstraction, which at first was limited, soon increases, until it may eventuate in a general exhaustion. Of course, the mere proximity of the well to the stream does not prove the abstraction; there may be other subterranean sources of supply; and he who alleges the abstraction has the burden of proof, and, if he fails to establish the fact, he fails to show a right to relief, and, if he asks compensation for the abstraction, he can recover only for the amount which he is able to prove.”

UNDERSTAND; UNDERSTANDING.—Understanding and agreement are synonymous.¹ An understanding is “anything mutually understood or agreed upon.”

Compare Ellis v. Duncan, 21 Barb. (N. Y.) 230. In this case the water was drawn from a natural spring which was the head and source of a small stream of surface water. The court held that, “The owner of a farm may dig a ditch to drain his land, or open and work a quarry upon it, although by so doing he intercepts one of the underground sources of a spring on his neighbor's land, which supplies a small stream of water flowing partly through the land of each, and thereby diminishes the natural supply of water, to the injury of the adjoining proprietor.” See also Goodale v. Tuttle, 29 N. Y. 466.

Ignorance of the Injury.—In Dickinson v. Grand Junction Canal Co., L. R., 7 Exch. 282, it was held that ignorance and lack of negligence on the part of the defendant would defeat the right of action. Where the defendant, by digging a well, drew water from a river after it had formed part of a stream, thereby preventing the plaintiff from working his mill, which was situated on the river, it was held that an action would lie. Pollock, C. J., said: “If indeed it appeared that the company were ignorant, and could not by any degree of care have ascertained before making the well that it would have the effect of obstructing the water, and when they discovered that it did, they could not have repaired the mischief, it might have raised the question whether the action was maintainable.”

1. Webster's Dict., followed in Bar-kow v. Sandger, 47 Wis. 501. In this case it was held, when the jury were asked whether a certain matter was “understood,” between the parties, and they answered that there was no “agreement,” that this reply was responsive to the question and not evasive. See also Winslow v. Dakota Lumber Co., 32 Minn. 238; Hill v. Fox, 4 Hurl. & N. 362; House v. Howell, 6 N. Y. Supp. 801; 53 Hun (N. Y.) 638; Fraser v. Davie, 11 S. Car. 68.

“It is understood, in the ordinary use of that phrase, when it is adopted in a written contract, has the same force as ‘it is agreed.’” Hoar, J., in Higginson v. Weld, 14 Gray (Mass.) 170. On the other hand, the term sometimes falls short of alleging a distinct agreement. Thus, in Camp v. Waring, 25 Conn. 529, the court said: “The context here shows that the word ‘understanding,’ always a loose and ambiguous one, unless accom-

UNDERSTANDINGLY.—See note 1.

UNDERTAKING.—An engagement by one of the parties to a contract to the other, and not the mutual engagement of the parties to each other; a promise.²

UNDERTAKINGS ON APPEAL.

- | | |
|--|--------------------------------------|
| I. Definition, 446. | 3. Penalty of the Bond, 449. |
| II. Necessity for, 446. | 4. To Whom the Bond Should Run, 449. |
| III. Requisites of the Bond, 447. | 5. Signature of Appellant, 449. |
| 1. Description of Judgment Appealed from, 447. [448. | 6. Sureties, 450. |
| 2. Condition of Undertaking, | |

I. DEFINITION.—An undertaking on appeal or writ of error is a bond of the form and substance provided by the law of jurisdiction, filed by the appellant or plaintiff in error in civil actions in order to perfect his appeal or writ of error, and in most cases to secure also a stay of proceedings in the trial court during the pendency of the cause in the appellate court.

II. NECESSITY FOR.—Under modern statutes it is a general rule that an appellant or a plaintiff in error must file a bond or undertaking for the benefit of those opposed to him in interest, as a condition precedent to having the cause reviewed by an appellate court. Accordingly, where no bond of any kind is filed within the time provided by statute, the appellate court acquires no jurisdiction and the appeal should be dismissed.³ In many jurisdictions, however, executors, administrators, guardians, etc., who sue or defend in a representative capacity, are not required to file the panied with some expression to show that it constituted a meeting of the minds of the parties upon something respecting which they intended to be bound, was used, not to express anything which was the subject of an agreement or contract between the parties, but only that kind of expectation or confidence upon which parties are frequently willing to rely without requiring any binding stipulation."

In Black v. Columbia, 19 S. Car. 419, it was held that the term "understanding" fell short of alleging a distinct and express contract between the parties, the question being whether the cause of action was ex contractu or ex delicto.

Express Understanding.—See EXPRESS, vol. 7, p. 539.

1. Understandingly.—Married woman's acknowledgment. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT, vol. 1, p. 169.

2. Bouv. Law Dict., citing Wain v. Warlters, 5 East 17; 2 Leon. 225; followed in Alexander v. State, 28 Tex. App. 186.

Whether It Imports a Consideration.—

In Thompson v. Blancard, 3 N. Y. 335, it was held that the term "undertaking" did not ex vi termini import a consideration; and, therefore, that, where a statute required an "undertaking" to be entered into, an instrument containing the requisite stipulations was valid, although not expressing the consideration. See also Alexander v. State, 28 Tex. App. 186.

3. Perkins v. Cooper, 87 Cal. 241; Scott v. Glen, 97 Cal. 513; Von Schmidt v. Widbur (Cal. 1893), 32 Pac. Rep. 531; Case v. Spiegel, 44 Ill. App. 588; Corbin v. Laswell, 48 Mo. App. 626; Santom v. Ballard, 133 Mass. 464; Reed v. Creditors, 37 La. Ann. 907; Architectural Iron Works v. Brooklyn, 85 N. Y. 652; Mann v. Lowry, 58 Miss. 73; Sutherland v. Putnam (Arizona, 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 320; State v. Walker, 82 N. Car. 696; State v. Patrick, 72 N. Car. 217; State v. Donaldson, 83 N. Car. 683; State v. Spurtin, 80 N. Car. 362.

statutory bond on appeal or error.¹ Another exception to the general rule is frequently made for the benefit of those who are financially unable to furnish a bond. Where this exception exists, the appellant files, in place of a bond, an affidavit stating that he is unable to pay the costs or to give security therefor, whereupon the court permits him to prosecute his appeal in forma pauperis.² Again, it is not an uncommon statutory provision that municipal corporations shall not be required to furnish bonds on appeal.³ And as the sovereign power is not included in such statutes, unless expressly mentioned, the state may appeal or sue out a writ of error and prosecute it to a final determination without filing the statutory undertaking.⁴

III. REQUISITES OF THE BOND.—1. Description of Judgment Appealed From.—The appeal bond should contain a sufficient description of the judgment or order appealed from to render its identity certain. This may be done by indicating the trial court and giving the number of the cause, the names of the parties to the action, and that of the party against whom the judgment was rendered, and by giving the date of such judgment or order and stating the effect thereof, or, if it is a money judgment, by

The appellee's waiver of an appeal bond does not help appellant in perfecting his appeal. Chicago, etc., R. Co. v. Marseilles, 104 Ill. 91.

1. Freeman v. Hill, 45 Kan. 435; Tompkins v. Page, 70 Wis. 249; Stinson v. Leary, 69 Wis. 269; Ruch v. Biery, 110 Ind. 444; Bake v. Smiley, 84 Ind. 212; Kirsch v. Derby, 93 Cal. 573; Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413.

An administrator is not relieved from giving bond on appeal from an order revoking his letters and appointing another in his stead. Erlanger v. Danielson, 88 Cal. 480.

A judgment surcharging and falsifying an administrator's account, is one in which he is personally interested, and upon appeal from such judgment, he must give bond. Hicks v. Oliver (Tex. Civ. App. 1894), 26 S. W. Rep. 641.

The privilege extends only to appeals from a judgment or order in proceedings upon the estate of the decedent. In re Skerrett's Estate, 80 Cal. 62.

Where the intestate had appealed, but had filed no bond before his death, it was held that the administrator could not prosecute such appeal without filing the bond, as the privilege extended only to appeals taken by him after his appointment. Hanlon v. Silk (Tex. 1887), 3 S. W. Rep. 290.

Receivers appointed by federal courts, who in good faith appeal from the judgments of state courts, should not be required to give supersedeas bonds, because they are officers of the court, and their possession is that of the court. Central Trust Co. v. St. Louis, etc., R. Co., 41 Fed. Rep. 555.

2. State v. Duncan, 107 N. Car. 818; State v. Wylde, 110 N. Car. 500; Leach v. Jones, 86 N. Car. 404; Fite v. Black, 85 Ga. 413; Golightly v. Irvine (Tex. App. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 48; Perry v. Scott, 68 Tex. 208; Harvey v. Cummings, 62 Tex. 186; Holmes v. McIntyre, 61 Tex. 9; Hearn v. Prendergast, 61 Tex. 627; Stewart v. Heidenheimer, 55 Tex. 644; Lynn v. Tellico Mfg. Co., 8 Lea (Tenn.) 29; Blair v. North British, etc., Ins. Co., L. R., 15 App. Cas. 495; Fuller v. Montague, 53 Fed. Rep. 206, decided under Act of Congress, July 20th, 1892, ch. 209, § 1. But the privilege does not extend to a non-resident plaintiff. Christian v. Gouge, 58 How. Pr. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 445.

3. State v. New Orleans, 34 La. Ann. 467; McClay v. Lincoln, 32 Neb. 412; Havana Tp. Drainage Dist. v. Kelsey, 120 Ill. 482; Miller v. Jacobs, 70 Wis. 122.

4. State v. Cannon (La. 1893), 14 So. Rep. 130; Merchants' Mut. Ins. Co. v. Board of Assessors, 40 La. Ann. 371; State v. Coahoma County, 64 Miss. 358.

By express enactment, no bond is required of the United States, or of reciting the amount for which judgment was rendered.¹ A laborious description, however, is not required. It is sufficient if the judgment is described with such certainty as will clearly reveal its identity.²

2. Condition of Undertaking.—A supersedeas bond should be conditioned that the appellant or plaintiff in error will prosecute his appeal or writ of error with effect, and in case the judgment is affirmed in whole or in part, will perform and satisfy the same or such part thereof as may be affirmed; and, also, pay all damages and costs.³ If the condition of the bond is such as to secure to the respondent or defendant in error all that is contemplated anyone acting under the direction of any of the departments of the government. United States Rev. Stats., § 1001.

1. Sutherland v. Putnam (Arizona, 1890), 24 Pac. Rep. 320; Jackson v. Relf, 24 Fla. 198; McMichael v. Eckman, 26 Fla. 43; Dinkel v. Wehle, 61 How. Pr. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 159; Morgan v. Richardson (Tex. Civ. App. 1894), 25 S. W. Rep. 171; Cockrill v. Eason, (Tex. Civ. App. 1894), 26 S. W. Rep. 464; In re O'Hara's Estate, 60 Tex. 179; Howard v. Malsch, 52 Tex. 60; Putnam v. Boyer, 140 Mass. 235; Kellogg v. Smith, 10 Wis. 135; New Orleans Ins. Co. v. Albros Co., 112 U. S. 506.

A bond which misdescribes the judgment as to the date and amount, and omits to state the names of some of the parties in whose favor it is rendered, is not good as a supersedeas bond. White v. Harris, 83 Tex. 42.

If the bond does not give the number or title of the cause, the amount or character of the judgment, or the court in which it was rendered, it is fatally defective. Thebodeaux v. Thebodeaux (La. 1893), 13 So. Rep. 805.

But the bond need not set out the judgment appealed from. Daniel v. Phelps, 86 Ga. 363.

2. Witten v. Caspary (Tex. App. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 47; People's Brewing Co. v. Boebinger, 40 La. Ann. 277; Acker v. Alexandria, etc., R. Co., 84 Va. 648; Smith v. Nescatunga Town Co., 36 Kan. 758; Mathews v. Morrison, 13 R. I. 309.

The identification in the appeal bond of the judgment appealed from is sufficient if it is certain, even though it be inartificial. Forbes v. Porter, 23 Fla. 47.

An appeal bond should recite the date of the judgment appealed from. Shuster v. Overturf, 42 Kan. 668; Din- kel v. Wehle, 13 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y. C. Pl.) 478.

If the record shows no judgment of the date of that described in the bond and notice of appeal, the appeal should be dismissed. Atkinson v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 69 Wis. 362.

A misrecital of the date of the judgment appealed from, is not fatal to the appeal, where the trial court, the amount and effect of the judgment, the number of the case, and names of the parties are correctly stated. Forbes v. Porter, 23 Fla. 47; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Stanley, 76 Tex. 418; Warren v. Marberry, 85 Tex. 193; Bauer v. Fields (Tex. Civ. App. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 180; Bauer v. Adkins (Tex. Civ. App. 1893), 22 S. W. Rep. 181; Alderman v. Jones, 2 Tex. Civ. App. 336; Eichman v. State, 22 Tex. App. 137; Johnson v. King, 83 Wis. 8.

Where more than one appeal is taken in a case, and but one undertaking is filed, it should refer separately to the different judgments or orders appealed from, otherwise it is a nullity. McCormick v. Belvin, 96 Cal. 182; Field v. Andrada (Cal. 1894), 37 Pac. Rep. 180; Berniard v. Bucher (Cal. 1888), 16 Pac. Rep. 510; Sebree v. Smith, 2 Idaho 327.

3. Richardson v. Richardson, 82 Mich. 305; Hollister v. McNeill, 31 Hun (N. Y.) 629; Anderson v. Meeker County, 46 Minn. 237; Southern Pac. R. Co. v. Stanley, 76 Tex. 418; Halbert v. Alford (Tex. 1891), 16 S. W. Rep. 814; Allison v. Gregory, (Tex. App. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 416; Davis v. Estes, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 207; Prewitt v. Day (Tex. 1893), 23 S. W. Rep. 982; Caldwell v. Ballow (Tex. 1888), 7 S. W. Rep. 677; Clark's Code of Civ. Proc. (N. Car.), § 554; Wisconsin Stat., § 3053.

Where the appellant can be subjected by the statute, it is sufficient, although it does not follow the language of the statute.¹

In some jurisdictions a party may have a judgment reviewed without obtaining a supersedeas or stay of proceedings pending appeal. When this is the course pursued, it is sufficient to file a bond for costs only and permit the opposing party to proceed with the enforcement of his judgment at the risk of a reversal.²

3. Penalty of the Bond.—The amount for which the bond must be given in any particular case must be ascertained by the statutory law of the jurisdiction, being made in many cases by statute to depend on the character of the case or the amount of the judgment appealed from; in other cases, being left to the discretion of the trial court.³

4. To Whom the Bond Should Run.—The bond should run to all parties interested adversely to the appellant or plaintiff in error, whether they are plaintiffs or defendants below.⁴

5. Signature of Appellant.—The decisions are not in harmony as to whether the appellant or plaintiff in error must join in the execution of the bond. In some jurisdictions, it is held that the

to no greater judgment than one for costs, a bond conditioned to pay costs is sufficient. State v. Rightor, 44 La. Ann. 564; State v. King, 42 La. Ann. 1191.

Thus, on appeal from a judgment for costs only, it is sufficient if the bond is conditioned to pay the costs in both courts, in case the judgment is affirmed. Moove v. Alston (Tex. App. 1890), 15 S. W. Rep. 47.

It is a necessary part of the condition, that the appellant will prosecute his appeal with effect. Russ v. Creditors (La. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 627; Prudhomme v. Williams (La. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 628; Figures v. Dunkin, 68 Tex. 644.

It is not sufficient that the bond declares the obligors to be held and firmly bound; it should also recite what they are held and firmly bound to do. Munzesheimer v. Wickham, 74 Tex. 638.

"Every justice or judge signing a citation on any writ of error, shall, except in cases brought up by the United States, or by direction of any department of the government, take good and sufficient security that the plaintiff in error or the appellant shall prosecute his writ or appeal to effect, and if he fails to make his plea good, shall answer all damages and costs, where the writ is a supersedeas and stays execution, or all costs only, where it is not a supersedeas as aforesaid." United States Rev. Sts., § 1000. See Gay v. Parpart, 101 U. S. 391.

1. Riley v. Mitchell, 38 Minn. 9; Goodwin v. Bunzl, 102 N. Y. 224; Miller v. Holding, 5 Del. 494; Walker v. Williams, 88 N. Car. 7.

The fact that the bond is given for a definite amount will not be fatal, although the statute does not provide that the obligation shall name any particular amount. Howard v. Russell, 75 Tex. 171; Hicks v. Oliver, 71 Tex. 776.

2. United States Rev. Sts., § 1000; Steward v. Corneau, 102 U. S. 161; Kelley's Minnesota Stat. (1891), § 5074; Minnesota Gen. Stat. (1878), ch. 86, § 9. See Erickson v. Elder, 34 Minn. 370.

3. Consult the statutes of the United States and the various states.

4. First Nat. Bank v. Preston Nat. Bank, 3 Tex. Civ. App. 545; Terry v. Cutler (Tex. Civ. App. 1893), 21 S. W. Rep. 726; Grant v. Collins, 5 Tex. Civ. App. 45; Cockrill v. Eason (Tex. Civ. App. 1894), 26 S. W. Rep. 464; Stafford v. Blum (Tex. Civ. App. 1894), 27 S. W. Rep. 12; Meade v. Bartlett, 77 Tex. 366; Young v. Russell, 60 Tex. 684; Smith v. Parks, 55 Tex. 82; Johnston v. Letson (Arizona, 1892), 29 Pac. Rep. 893; Kasson v. Broucker, 47 Wis. 79.

In an appeal by an intervenor, the bond should run to both plaintiff and defendant. Greenwade v. Smith, 57 Tex. 195.

The fact that some parties not interbond is invalid unless he signs it as principal obligor;¹ while in others, it is held that it is not necessary for him to sign the undertaking, because he is bound by it without signing it.²

6. Sureties.—It is essential to the validity of an appeal bond that it be signed by at least the number of sureties required by statute.³ But a surety and guaranty company, duly empowered by its charter to transact such business, has been accepted as sufficient surety in lieu of the two or more individuals required by statute.⁴ A necessary party to an appeal is not competent to sign the appeal bond as a surety.⁵ It has been held that an appeal bond given by a defendant in replevin, is not sufficient where the ested in the appeal are named as obligees will not invalidate the bond. Hill v. Chicago, etc., R. Co., 129 U. S. 170.

If no obligee is named in the bond, it is void. Garrett v. Shove, 15 R. I. 538.

And a bond running to the state is void, unless there is a statute authorizing such a bond. Dorsey v. Raleigh, etc., R. Co., 91 N. Car. 201.

1. Savannah, etc., R. Co. v. Clark, 23 Fla. 308; Hileman v. Beale, 115 Ill. 355; McGean v. McKeller, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 277.

The principal should execute the bond in the same capacity in which he is a party to the action. Thebodeaux v. Thebodeaux (La. 1893), 13 So. Rep. 805.

It is sufficient if the bond is signed by the obligor's attorney in fact, duly authorized so to do by power of attorney. Jackson v. Haisly, 27 Fla. 205; Scotfield v. Felt, 10 Colo. 146.

But a bond executed by an attorney at law in the name of his client is voidable unless ratified under seal by the client. Bowen v. Johnson, 17 R. I. 779.

A joint appeal will be dismissed unless all the appellants sign the bond. Dingler v. Strawn, 36 Ill. App. 563; Hileman v. Beale, 115 Ill. 355.

An appeal bond signed by a surety only, and with the amount of the penalty not named, is a nullity. St. Louis, etc., R. Co. v. Morse, 50 Kan. 99.

2. Easton v. Wash. (Tex. App. 1890), 16 S. W. Rep. 788; State v. Cochran, 28 Neb. 798; Walker v. Williams, 88 N. Car. 7.

A guardian ad litem need not sign an appeal bond as principal; it is sufficient if the bond be executed in behalf of the appellant with sufficient surety. Dahl v. Tibbals, 5 Wash. 259.

3. Bartlett's Appellant, 82 Me. 210; Harris v. Regester, 70 Md. 109; Grim- wood v. Wilson, 66 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 283; 31 Hun (N. Y.) 215; Pfiefer v. Hartman, 60 Miss. 505; Hudson v. Gray, 58 Miss. 591.

And a bond without sureties cannot be made good by stipulation of the parties where the statute requires a bond with sureties. Henderson v. Benson, 141 Mass. 218.

The firm name of a copartnership as sureties on the bond, is not sufficient; the members should sign as individuals. Buchard v. Cavins, 77 Tex. 365; Frees v. Baker (Tex. 1887), 6 S. W. Rep. 563.

4. Travis v. Travis, 48 Hun (N. Y.) 343; Hurd v. Hannibal, etc., R. Co., 33 Hun (N. Y.) 109; 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 516; McGean v. McKellar, 67 How. Pr. (N. Y.) 273; Gutzeit v. Pennie, 95 Cal. 598.

But a bond with such surety will not be approved when there is reason to question the power of the security company to bind itself by such an obligation. Black v. Black, 53 Fed. Rep. 985.

Such corporation must justify in the same manner as natural persons, if exception is taken to the sufficiency of the security, in which case, it must not only show authority to do business, but also surplus assets equal to the amount of its undertaking. Fox v. Hale, etc., Silver Min. Co. (Cal. 1893), 40 Am. & Eng. Corp. Cas. 388.

But aside from the matter of justification, such corporation need not possess the qualifications required of natural persons. Earle v. Earle, 49 N. Y. Super. Ct. 57.

5. Barrow v. Clack (La. 1893), 12 So. Rep. 631; Morse v. Hasbrouck, 63 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 84; 10 Abb. N. Cas. (N. Y.) 407; Nichols v. MacLean, 98 N. Y. 458.

The fact that a party to the action signed the bond as a surety, is not a sufficient ground for dismissing the sureties therein are the same as those in the delivery bond;¹ but a surety for costs below may, also, be a surety on his principal's appeal bond.² It is not necessary that the names of the sureties be given in the body of the bond.³ Where each surety on an appeal bond is required to make affidavit that he is worth double the penalty of the bond, a bond unaccompanied by such affidavits is of no effect.⁴

UNDERTOOK.—(See generally ASSUMPSIT, vol. 1, p. 882).—Agreed; promised. The technical word by which the promise is alleged in assumpsit.

UNDERWOOD.—Underwood is described to be coppice of any wood not accounted timber.⁵

UNDERWRITER.—An underwriter is one who agrees to insure another on life or property in a policy of insurance. He is also called the insurer. The title is almost exclusively confined to insurers on marine risks, and is derived from the method of obtaining such insurance formerly in vogue, usually as follows. A premium having been agreed upon between the insured and an insurance broker, a statement of such premium and of the ship or cargo, and of the voyage or time, was written at the head of a sheet, which was laid on the broker's table. Then such merchants as were willing to insure such property on the terms named, subscribed their names to the statement, stating the amount they were willing to insure; and so on until the desired amount was obtained.⁶

UNDIVIDED.—The term "undivided," when applied to lands by proprietors of common and undivided lands, implies land set apart from their general domain, and not subject to partition, or to be divided, set off, or allotted to individuals to hold in severalty.⁷

appeal, the bond having been approved by the court below. Voss v. Feurmann (Tex. Civ. App. 1893), 23 S. W. Rep. 936.

And a bond signed by a party to the action as surety, is good, where the record shows that his interest is not affected by the appeal. Syme v. Badger, 91 N. Car. 272; Leffel v. Obenchain, 90 Ind. 50.

1. Lee v. Lord, 75 Wis. 35.

But in that case, the delivery bond is not rendered invalid. Lee v. Lord, 75 Wis. 35.

2. Trammell v. Trammell, 15 Tex. 291; Saylor v. Marx, 56 Tex. 90; Sampson v. Solinsky, 75 Tex. 663; Long v. Cruger, 4 Tex. Civ. App. 145.

3. Guez v. Dupuis, 152 Mass. 454; Factors', etc., Ins. Co. v. New Harbor Protection Co., 39 La. Ann. 583; Vignie v. Brady, 35 La. Ann. 560; Coyle v. Creevy, 34 La. Ann. 539; Union Bethel, etc., Church v. Civil Sheriff, 33 La. Ann. 1461.

4. Turner v. Quinn, 91 N. Car. 92; State v. Wagner, 91 N. Car. 521; Bailey v. Rutjes, 9 N. Car. 420; Morpheus v. Tatem, 89 N. Car. 183; Bryson v. Lucas, 85 N. Car. 397.

Each surety must be worth double the penalty of the bond. It is not enough that the justification of the two may show that they are together worth said amount. Anthony v. Carter, 91 N. Car. 229.

5. King v. Ferrybridge, 1 B. & C. 379; 8 E. C. L. 160. And see note to that case for an exhaustive review of the authorities upon the question of what constitutes underwood in England when the question arises in actions for waste.

6. Bouv. Law Dict.; 1 Pars. Mar. Ins. 14; MARINE INSURANCE, vol. 14, p. 319.

7. Wellington's Petition, 16 Pick.

UNDUE INFLUENCE.—(See also AGENCY, vol. 1, p. 331; ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 942; CATCHING BARGAIN, vol. 3, p. 37; CONTRACT, vol. 3, p. 823; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635; GIFTS, vol. 8, p. 1308; GUARDIAN AND WARD, vol. 9, p. 85; HUSBAND AND WIFE, vol. 9, p. 789; MARRIAGE SETTLEMENTS, vol. 14, p. 538; PARENT AND CHILD, vol. 17, p. 331; TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, vol. 27, p. 1; WILLS.)

- I. In General, 453.
 1. Definition, 453.
 2. Effect, 454.
 3. Transactions Affected (See also GIFTS, vol. 8, p. 1308), 454.
- II. Kinds of Undue Influence, 455.
 1. Actual Undue Influence, 456.
 2. Presumptive Undue Influence (See also FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635), 456.
- III. In Transactions Inter Vivos, 457.
 1. Upon Persons of Weak Mind, 457.
 2. Seamen, 459.
 3. Expectant Heirs, Reversioners, etc., 460. [461.]
 4. Those in Confidential Relations,
 - a. The General Rule, 461.
 - b. Trustee and Cestui Que Trust (See also TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, vol. 27, p. 1), 462.
 - c. Attorney and Client, 465.
 - (1) Contracts, 465.
 - (2) Gifts, 468.
 - (3) Who Is an Attorney, 470.
 - d. Physician and Patient, 472.
 - (1) Gifts and Contracts, 472.
 - (2) Who is a Physician, 474.
 - e. Clergyman and Parishioner, 474.
 - f. Principal and Agent, 477.
 - g. Husband and Wife, 480.
 - (1) Exerted Upon the Wife, 480.
 - (a) Contracts, 480.
 - (b) Gifts, 483.
 - (2) Exerted Upon the Husband, 484.
 - (3) Similar Relations, 484.
 - h. Parent and Child, 485.
 - (1) Exerted Upon the Child, 485.
 - (2) Exerted Upon the Parent, 488.
 - (3) Parties Within the Relation, 490.
 - i. Guardian and Ward, 491.
 - j. Miscellaneous Confidential Relations, 492.
 5. Remedies, 494.
 6. Pleading and Evidence, 494.
 7. Laches, 494.
- IV. In Wills, 495.
 1. In General, 495.
 - a. Introductory, 495.
 - b. Definition, 495.
 - c. Its Relation to Testamentary Capacity, 497.
 - d. Coercion a Necessary Element, 498.
 - e. What Influence not Undue, 498.
 - f. When Exerted, 499.
 - g. Effect, 500.
 2. How Established, 501.
 - a. Burden of Proof, 501.
 - b. Nature of the Proof, 501.
 - (1) Declarations of Testator, 505.
 - (2) Declarations of Beneficiary, 507.
 - (3) Surrounding Circumstances, 507.
 3. Effect of Confidential Relationship—The General Rule, 508.
 - a. Attorney and Client, 510.
 - b. Physician and Patient, 511.
 - c. Clergyman and Parishioner, 511.
 - d. Guardian and Ward, 512.
 - e. Husband and Wife, 512.
 - f. Man and Mistress, 514.
 - g. Parent and Child, 515.
 - h. Testator and Draughtsman of Will, 515.
 - i. Persons in Other Confidential Relations, 516.
 4. Undue Influence in Revocation of Wills, 516.
 5. Validation of Wills Induced by Undue Influence, 516.

(Mass.) 98. In this case it was held that where by a vote of the proprietors a certain tract of land was to remain "undivided," that this did not mean that the land should not be divided in parcels; but that it should not be set off in severalty to individual proprietors.

I. IN GENERAL.—1. Definition.—Undue influence has been defined to be any improper or wrongful constraint, machination, or urgency of persuasion, whereby the will of a person is overpowered, and he is induced to do or forbear an act which he would not do, or would do if left to act freely.¹ What will constitute such "constraint, machination, or urgency of persuasion" will depend largely upon whether the term is used with regard to wills or instruments inter vivos. In both connections, however, the underlying idea is that the influence, to be undue, must be such as to destroy free agency, and substitute the will of another for that of the person nominally acting.²

1. Definitions.—2 Abb. L. Dict., p. 615; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 649.

"Influence: Most frequently used in connection with 'undue,' and refers to persuasion, machination, or constraint of will presented or exercised to procure a disposition of property by gift, conveyance, or will." Anderson's Law Dict.

Undue influence "consists in acts which, though not fraudulent, amount to an abuse of the power which circumstances have given to the will of one individual over that of another." Holland's Elements of Jur. (5th ed.), p. 231.

Black's Law Dictionary adopts the definition of the California Civil Code, § 1575, which is as follows: "Undue influence consists (1) in the use, by one in whom a confidence is reposed by another, or who holds a real or apparent authority over him, of such confidence or authority, for the purpose of obtaining an unfair advantage over him; (2) in taking an unfair advantage of another's weakness of mind; or (3) in taking a grossly oppressive and unfair advantage of another's necessities or distress." See also Dakota Civil Code, § 886.

Pomeroy considers undue influence as a "moral, social or domestic force—there being no coercion amounting to duress—exerted upon a party, controlling the free exercise of his will and preventing any true consent." Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951.

In Haydock v. Haydock, 33 N. J. Eq. 494; 38 Am. Rep. 385, it is said by the court, speaking by Van Fleet, V. C.: "No definition of what the law denominates undue influence can be given. Every case must stand upon its own special facts. All that can be said in the way of formulating a general rule on this subject is, that whatever destroys free agency and constrains the person whose act is brought in judgment to do what is against his will, and what he would not have done if left by himself, is undue influence."

Distinguished from Duress.—The distinction between duress and undue influence is not very clearly marked. Duress implies physical force either actually used or threatened. Holland's Elements of Jur. (5th ed.) 231. Undue influence embraces those more subtle forces which operate upon the mind. Anderson's Law Dict.; Munson v. Carter, 19 Neb. 293; Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951; Story's Eq. Jur. (12th ed.), § 239; FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 649.

The authorities pretty generally agree in excluding actual violence, but influence through threats is often included. Abbot's Law Dict. But see Haydock v. Haydock, 33 N. J. Eq. 494; 38 Am. Rep. 385, where actual violence is considered undue influence. The more accurate use of terms, however, would cause such influence to be relegated to the head of duress.

In testamentary law, the term "undue influence" has a much wider significance, and is used as embracing duress. Schouler on Wills (2d ed.), § 228.

In Criminal Law.—The term "undue influence," in criminal law, is used in reference to elections, and signifies the interference with the free exercise of a voter's franchise, by violence, intimidation, or otherwise. Such undue influence is a misdemeanor. Black's Law Dict.

2. Elkinton v. Brick, 44 N. J. Eq. 165; Haydock v. Haydock, 33 N. J. Eq. 494; 38 Am. Rep. 385; Eckert v. Flowery, 43 Pa. St. 46; Schmidt v. Schmidt, 47 Minn. 457; Mitchell v. Mitchell, 43 Minn. 73; Schulz v. Schaeffe, 16 Jur. 909; Schouler on Wills, (2d ed.) § 229.

In order to vitiate an act, the influence must be such that the actor stands in vinculis. Conley v. Nailor, 118 U. S. 135. It must be equivalent to moral Influence which exists through attachment, affection, or a desire to gratify,¹ or which results from argument and appeals to reason and judgment,² is not undue.

2. Effect.—Undue influence is a species of fraud.³ It renders all transactions inter vivos tainted by it voidable.⁴ Until avoided, they stand, and the privilege of avoiding them is generally barred if the rights of innocent purchasers have intervened.⁵

In order that undue influence may affect a transaction, it must be an influence, whether actually proven or presumed, operating at the time of the transaction, and inducing it. The particular contract, gift, or will must be brought about by the influence.⁶

3. Transactions Affected—(See also GIFTS, vol. 8, p. 1308).—Of all coercion. In re Carroll's Will, 50 Wis. 437.

It "must amount to force and coercion, destroying free agency." It must be "fraudulent and controlling." Anderson's Law Dict.

There must be some ascendancy preventing the person acting from exercising an unbiased judgment. In some measure, at least, free agency must be destroyed. Herster v. Herster, 122 Pa. St. 239.

"If such influence be exerted upon him (any party conveying or contracting), such mental, moral, or physical coercion employed towards him, that the act is not really his own, but is another's, then it is voidable. But within this limit there is no objection to argument, persuasion, or even influence brought to bear upon a party, provided his mind is able to act and is left free to decide and act upon the considerations which are addressed to it, so that the agreement is really his own voluntary act. Still, persuasions and other such conduct by the one benefited are always looked upon as suspicious; they throw upon him the burden of showing that the other party acted freely." Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951, n. 1. To constitute undue influence the actor's will must be overcome. Dunlap v. Robinson, 28 Ala. 100.

It is impossible to lay down any hard and fast rule as to what acts will overcome the actor's will, and render the influence exerted thereby undue. The effect of all acts must depend upon the relations of the parties, the character, strength, and condition of each. Each case must stand largely upon its own merits. Elkinton v. Brick, 44 N. J. Eq. 154.

In most cases influence will not be undue if there is no motive of wrong, and if the act done results to the advantage of the person influenced. Thus, inducing an old and feeble person to do that which is just and for his own good has been held not to be an instance of undue influence, even though an incidental advantage resulted to the one inducing. Dailey v. Kastell, 56 Wis. 444.

1. Anderson's Law Dict.; Schofield v. Walker, 58 Mich. 96; Hoges' Estate, 2 Brews. (Pa.) 450; 2 Warvelle on Vendor and Purchaser, p. 867.

2. But influence obtained by flattery is undue. Schofield v. Walker, 58 Mich. 96.

3. See EQUITY, vol. 6, p. 717.

4. See CONTRACT, vol. 3, p. 933; Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 944; Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), §§ 202, 234; Robinson's Elementary Law, § 320; Bayliss v. Williams, 6 Coldw. (Tenn.) 440. The interest of the one from whom property has been gotten by means of undue influence is not a right only, but is a devisable estate. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 198; Gresley v. Mousley, 4 De G. & J. 78; Stump v. Gaby, 2 De G. M. & G. 623. See also the California and Louisiana Codes.

5. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 709.

But the one receiving property obtained by the one transferring it through undue influence, must be a purchaser for a valuable consideration. If he took it as a gift, "let the hand receiving it be ever so chaste, yet if it comes through a polluted channel, the obligation of restitution will follow." Huguein v. Baseley, 14 Ves. 289; 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. 406, per Eldon, Chancellor.

6. Brownfield v. Brownfield, 43 Ill. 147; Monroe v. Barclay, 17 Ohio St. 303; 93 Am. Dec. 620.

transactions, gifts are most closely scrutinized by the courts.¹ If a confidential relationship exists, the presumptions arising from it are the hardest to overcome.² If there is actual undue influence, the gift, though trifling, will be tainted and rendered voidable.³ All contracts and conveyances obtained by undue influence are on similar principles voidable.⁴

Wills and testaments may be refused probate, either in whole or in part, upon the same ground.⁵

II. KINDS OF UNDUE INFLUENCE.—For purposes of convenience, undue influence is considered as of two kinds—actual and presumptive. The former is established by actual proof; the latter is presumed from the existence of confidential relationship and certain other circumstances. The two kinds differ only in the method employed in establishing each; in their nature and effect they are alike.⁶

The two classes of undue influence certainly exist in matters of contract and gift. In regard to wills there is a difference of opinion. Some authorities hold that the presumptions existing in

1. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951; Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 231. The case of Cook v. Lamont, 15 Beav. 240, pushes the rule to the extent of holding that there is a presumption against every gift, whether a fiduciary relation exists or not.

2. Gifts.—Thus, if a wife makes a gift of her sole and separate property to her husband, it will only stand if there be clear and satisfactory evidence that the transaction was intended as a gift. Comstock's Appeal, 55 Conn. 214. See also Darlington on Personal Property, p. 73.

The leading authority on the subject of gifts is Huguein v. Baseley, 14 Ves. 273; 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. 406, where a widow executed a voluntary settlement upon a clergyman, who had ingratiated himself with her, and had induced her to withdraw her affairs from the hands of her solicitor, by whom they had been previously managed. The settlement was set aside on the ground of the confidential relationship of the parties; the court, by Lord Eldon, saying: "The question is not whether she knew what she was doing, had done, or proposed to do, but how the intention was produced; whether all care and providence were placed around her, as against those who advised her, which, from their situation and relation in respect to her, they were bound to exert in her behalf." The subjects of both contracts and gifts—but especially the latter—were thoroughly considered, and the rules stated in the text enunciated.

3. The case of Rhodes v. Bate, L. R., 1 Ch. 258, draws a distinction in this regard between gifts tainted with actual undue influence and presumed undue influence, holding that the former may be avoided, even if trifling, while the latter must be a substantial donation to call for interference.

4. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951.

5. See infra, this title, In Wills. A part of a will may be set aside and the rest admitted to probate. Rockwell's Appeal, 54 Conn. 119; Matter of Baker's Will, 2 Redf. (N. Y.) 179.

6. "In the vast majority of cases, undue influence naturally has a field to work upon in the condition or circumstances of the person influenced which render him peculiarly susceptible and yielding—his dependent or fiduciary relation toward the one exerting the influence, his mental or physical weakness, his pecuniary necessities, his ignorance, lack of advice, and the like. All these circumstances, however, are incidental, and not essential. Where an antecedent fiduciary relation exists, a court of equity will presume confidence placed and influence exerted; where there is no such fiduciary relation, the confidence and influence must be proved by satisfactory extrinsic evidence. The rules of equity and the remedies which it bestows are exactly the same in each of the two cases." Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951.

the case of transactions inter vivos prevail; ¹ others either discard them entirely and consider that the conclusions drawn from the existence of certain relations are inferences of fact only, or else confine them within much narrower limits than those existing in case of transactions inter vivos.²

1. Actual Undue Influence.—In cases of actual undue influence, the influence is established as a fact without the aid of any presumption. A fiduciary relation between the party influencing and the party influenced may be present, but its existence is accidental and immaterial.³ Neither need the person influenced be under any disability.⁴ If disability does exist, it is always a material fact as determining the amount of influence necessary to move the acting party, and as furnishing evidence from which the inference of influence may be drawn.⁵

The burden of proving such undue influence is on the party alleging it.⁶ Direct proof of the very fact of the influence itself can seldom be had, and is never required. It can be inferred from other facts proved,⁷ but never from mere opportunity.⁸ The relation of the parties may be shown, but not declarations of the testator or grantor, either before or after the execution of the will or deed, unless to establish mental condition.⁹

2. Presumptive Undue Influence.—(See also FRAUD, vol. 8, p. 635).—Certain transactions are presumed, on grounds of public policy, to be the result of undue influence.¹⁰ Such transactions are generally those occurring between persons in some relation of confidence, one toward the other. The presence of such relationship creates a presumption of influence,¹¹ which can generally

1. Harvey v. Sullins, 46 Mo. 147; 2 Am. Rep. 491; Boyd v. Boyd, 66 Pa. St. 283.

2. Schouler on Wills (2d ed.), § 246; Post v. Mason, 91 N. Y. 539; 43 Am. Rep. 689; Matter of Smith, 95 N. Y. 516; Parfitt v. Lawless, L. R., 2 P. & M. 462.

3. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 955.

4. Watkins v. Brant, 46 Wis. 419.

5. Haydock v. Haydock, 33 N. J. Eq. 494; 38 Am. Rep. 385, lays down the rule that for the same reason the physical health of the person is material. In this case a gift from a husband seventy-five years old, very weak in mind and body, of $9,000, over one-third of his fortune, to his wife, who had great influence over him, who talked over his money matters with him daily, and urged him to give her his property, was set aside.

6. Schouler on Wills (2d ed.), § 239; Boyse v. Rossborough, 6 H. L. Cas. 2; Webber v. Sullivan, 58 Iowa 260; Ireland v. Geraghty, 15 Fed. Rep. 35; Davis v. Davis, 123 Mass. 590.

7. Drake's Appeal, 45 Conn. 9; Saunders' Appeal from Probate, 54 Conn. 108; Main v. Ryder, 84 Pa. St. 217; Woodbury v. Woodbury, 141 Mass. 329.

8. Cudney v. Cudney, 68 N. Y. 148; Kimball v. Cuddy, 117 Ill. 213.

9. Massey v. Huntington, 118 Ill. 80.

10. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), §§ 168, 194.

11. Benjamin's Principles of Contracts (3d ed.), p. 82.

In this connection, the only fact really in issue is "the existence of some fiduciary relation, some relation of confidence subsisting between two parties. No mental weakness, old age, ignorance, pecuniary distress, and the like, is assumed as an element in the transaction; if any such fact be present, it is incidental, not necessary; immaterial, not essential. . . . Nothing can tend more to produce confusion and inaccuracy in the discussion of the subject than the treatment of actual undue influence and fiduciary relation as though they constituted one and the same doctrine." 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jur.

be rebutted by proof that the parties dealt as strangers, at arm's length, that no unfairness was used, and that facts in the knowledge of the one in the position of influence affecting the matter were communicated to the other.¹

III. IN TRANSACTIONS INTER VIVOS.—While undue influence frequently exists over persons under no technical disability, most of the cases are referable to other heads and are considered elsewhere. Among those of whom advantage is most frequently taken, but who are sui juris, are aged persons, persons of slight intelligence, although not insane, and sailors.²

1. Upon Persons of Weak Mind.—Weakness of mind may or may not be sufficient to destroy the capacity of contracting. If the person whom it is sought to hold upon his agreement be insane, or if his weakness of mind be very great, he lacks the requisite capacity to contract, and his attempted contract, if made, will, except in certain special cases, be either void or voidable.³ With such incapacity we have here no concern. The weakness of mind to be considered is such as does not take away capacity, but renders the party peculiarly susceptible to the undue influence of others. If no such influence be exerted, the contract is perfectly valid.⁴ The condition of the contractor's mind is important only

(2d ed.), § 955. While this is so, and the importance of keeping the two kinds of influence clearly separated is great, the matter has been much confused in the courts. The two classes are hence considered together in this article, but an effort will be made to indicate in each case whether the influence is actual or presumed.

1. Greenfield's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 505. In Hunter v. Atkins, 3 Myl. & K. 135, Lord Brougham said: "There are certain relations known to the law, as attorney, guardian, or trustee. If a person standing in these relations to a client, ward, or cestui que trust, takes a gift or makes a bargain, the proof lies upon him that he has dealt with the other party, the client, ward, etc., exactly as a stranger would have done, taking no advantage of his influence or knowledge, putting the other party on his guard, bringing everything to his knowledge which he himself knew. In short, the rule rightly considered is, that the person standing in such relation must, before he can take the gift, or even enter into a transaction, place himself in exactly the same position as a stranger would have been in, so that he may gain no advantage whatever from his relation to the other party, beyond what may be the natural and unavoidable consequences of kindness arising out of that relation." See also 1 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 195; Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 268; Georgia Code (1882), § 3175.

2. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 951; Benjamin's Principles of Contract (3d ed.), p. 84.

The principle that undue influence may exist, in the absence of technical disability, is illustrated by the case of Watkins v. Brant, 46 Wis. 419, where a conveyance by a younger married sister, of full age, to an older sister, much stronger in will and of greater intelligence, made without the knowledge of the grantor's husband and without legal advice, was set aside.

Age is always an important fact in this connection. From its existence alone, however, weakness of mind will never be presumed. Cowee v. Cornell, 75 N. Y. 91; 31 Am. Rep. 428.

3. Benjamin's Principles of Contract (3d ed.), p. 59; 1 Parsons on Contracts (7th ed.), *383; Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 947; Smith's Law of Contracts (7th Am. ed.), *356 et seq.; INSANITY, vol. 11, p. 132. So in California, under the code. Deering's California Code, vol. 2, § 39.

4. Benjamin's Principles of Contract (3d ed.), p. 85; Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 190; Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506.

as determining the amount of influence likely to overcome it, and as affording grounds for the inference that it was so overcome.¹

Within these limits, however, the question of mental strength is an important one. Its effect will be to lessen the amount of evidence necessary to support the allegation of undue influence. If mental weakness is present, slight circumstances of imposition or ascendancy will establish the existence of undue influence.²

Such influence must, in most cases, be actual, but there is an exception to this rule. If one of the parties to a contract be of weak mind, and there is either no consideration or a very inadequate one, a presumption against its validity arises; undue influence is presumed without proof of other circumstances.³

While, on the one hand, the weakness of mind, as the term is used in this connection, does not amount to incapacity, on the other hand, it must be sufficient to give the other contracting

1. Bispham's Principles of Equity, (4th ed.), § 230; Oakey v. Ritchie, 69 Iowa 69; Jones v. Thompson, 5 Del. Ch. 374; Harding v. Handy, 11 Wheat. (U. S.) 125; 2 Warvelle on Vendor and Purchaser, p. 872; Perry on Trusts, (4th ed.), § 189.

2. Thus, a deed by one in a weak state of mind, of all his property to his brother, in whom he had entire confidence, and who had great influence over him, and where a fair consideration is not clearly shown, will not be supported. McCraw v. Davis, 2 Ired. Eq. (N. Car.) 618. This will be so, especially if the consideration is very inadequate. McFadden v. Vincent, 21 Tex. 47; Hale v. Brown, 11 Ala. 87; Wilson v. Oldham, 12 B. Mon. (Ky.) 55; McLean v. Equitable L. Assur. Soc., 100 Ind. 127; 50 Am. Rep. 779.

Where both confidential relationship and weakness of mind exist, the court will scrutinize the contract with the greatest care. Graves v. White, 4 Baxt. (Tenn.) 38.

The presence or absence of an adviser at the making of the contract, will affect the amount of evidence required to set it aside on the ground of undue influence. Hinchman v. Emmons, 1 N. J. Eq. 100.

3. 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 947; Allore v. Jewell, 94 U. S. 506, note, where a woman between sixty and seventy years of age, of feeble mind and subject to vagaries of different sorts, executed a conveyance of all her property, upon a very inadequate consideration. A decree refusing to set aside the deed was reversed, although no actual undue influence appeared other than the circumstances stated. The court by Field, J., said: "It is sufficient to show that, from her sickness and infirmities, she was at the time in a condition of great mental weakness, and that there was gross inadequacy of consideration for the conveyance. From these circumstances, imposition or undue influence will be inferred. . . . It may be stated as settled law that whenever there is great weakness of mind in a person executing a conveyance of land, arising from age, sickness, or any other cause, though not amounting to absolute disqualification, and the consideration given for the property is grossly inadequate, a court of equity will, upon proper and reasonable application of the injured party, or his representatives or heirs, interfere and set the conveyance aside, and the present case comes directly within this principle." This case was approved in Griffith v. Godey, 113 U. S. 89, where a conveyance of property worth twelve thousand dollars, for a consideration of five hundred dollars, by a man of weak mind who could barely read and write, was held of no avail, and the purchasers compelled to account as trustees for the proceeds. Conley v. Nailor, 118 U. S. 133. Where a woman laboring under great mental and physical prostration, it being the second day after the funeral of her husband, and she being pregnant and without independent advice, conveyed the entire interest in her late husband's estate worth $47,000 without consideration, a demurrer to a bill al-party some real ascendancy.¹ To establish or disprove this weakness, the declarations of the testator as to his intention in regard to his property, taken in connection with other facts, are admissible.²

Substantially the same principles as those enunciated above apply to contracts with persons in a state of intoxication.³

Illiteracy also, and the lack of professional advice, are material facts in questions of undue influence.⁴

2. Seamen.—The carelessness and improvidence of seamen have always caused courts to be especially jealous of their interests.⁵ As to their contracts generally, there is no presumption against validity, unless prohibited by statute.⁶ It is only when they affect some matter peculiar to their occupation—as agreements about wages or prize-money—that they are subject to any different rules of law than those governing other men. In such cases their occupation becomes a circumstance affecting the amount of evidence required to annul them.⁷ In England, courts of equity leging the above facts, but setting up no undue influence in express words, was overruled. Moore v. Moore, 56 Cal. 89. Where a father, old and dotting, makes a conveyance of all his property to a person not a relative, it may be set aside after his death. Keeble v. Cummins, 5 Hayw. (Tenn.) 43; Paris v. Cobb, 5 Rich. Eq. (S. Car.) 450.

Where a man of seventy, of weak mind and eccentric, having no legal advice and being much worried by a debt of £100, conveyed property worth £900 to his creditor, on consideration that the debt should be cancelled, and of an annuity of £1 a week, the conveyance was set aside as an absolute deed, but allowed to stand as security for the debt. While no undue influence was proven, it was presumed from the facts above. Longmate v. Ledger, 2 Giff. 157. See also Gates v. Cornett, 72 Mich. 420; Sand v. Sand, 112 Ill. 225; Dickson v. Kempinsky, 96 Mo. 252; Wilkinson v. Sherman, 45 N. J. Eq. 421; Jones v. Thompson, 5 Del. Ch. 374.

It has been held that the burden of proving an adequate consideration, is upon the one dealing with the person of weak mind. Neely v. Anderson, 2 Strobb. Eq. (S. Car.) 267.

The rule substantially as stated in the text, exists in Georgia. Georgia Code (1882), § 3179.

1. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 230.

A deed by which an elderly woman transferred to her nephew and his wife her estate, reserving a life interest, executed without solicitation, and understandingly, the consideration being the repair of her house and her support for life, to carry out which agreement they had come from a distant state, will not be set aside. Creswell v. Welchman, 95 Cal. 359.

2. Howe v. Howe, 99 Mass. 89.

3. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 191; Huguenin v. Baseley, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (Phila. ed. 1851) *441, note; Pittenger v. Pittenger, 3 N. J. L. 156; Conant v. Jackson, 16 Vt. 335.

4. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 948; Fish v. Leser, 69 Ill. 394; Lightfoot v. Heron, 3 Y. & C. 586; Haberdashers' Co. v. Isaac, 3 Jur. N. S. 611; Connelly v. Fisher, 3 Tenn. Ch. 382, which held that where a contract was made between an intelligent man, acting under legal advice, and an illiterate old woman who had no such advice, the burden of proving that the contract was intelligently entered into was upon the man; the court saying, however, that the presence or absence of legal advice is immaterial where the parties are upon an equal footing. But a complaint seeking to set aside a contract and settling up only that one of the parties was illiterate and signed the contract without reading it, is demurrable. Hawkins v. Hawkins, 50 Cal. 558.

5. Story's Eq. Jur. (13th ed.), § 332; 1 Parsons on Contracts (7th ed.) *389; Baldwin v. Rochford, 1 Wils. 229.

6. The Atlantic, 1 Abb. Adm. 470; 3 Kent's Com. (11th ed.) *193. As to the statutory provisions, see United States Rev. Stat., tit. 53; 24 Stat. at L. 79; 23 Stat. at L. 53.

7. See authorities cited in the two preceding notes.

often take cognizance of the peculiar contracts made by seamen for the purpose of avoiding them if unfair.¹ In the United States, the same jurisdiction exists in theory, but is seldom exercised,² owing to the specific statutory provisions and the wide jurisdiction of the admiralty courts,³ which carefully scrutinize such contracts—especially those made in reference to wages and prize-money. If their contracts for wages differ from those in ordinary use, there is a presumption against their validity, and they will be upheld only if there has been full explanation to the sailor and an additional advantage secured to him thereby.⁴

3. Expectant Heirs, Reversioners, etc.—Contracts affecting interests in expectancy, as those with heirs, reversioners, and the like, are jealously watched by courts of equity for two reasons: they are generally hard bargains, made with persons peculiarly exposed

1. Thus, where one purchased from two sailors their prize-money, on an inadequate consideration, viz.: about one-fourth of its value, having made inquiry as to its value and ascertained the same; having represented to them the danger of loss of the prize-money through peril of the sea and punishment by the captain, the court of equity held that there had been imposition, and set aside the contract; but decreed that it should stand as security for money actually due. Baldwin v. Rochford, 1 Wils. 229; Taylor v. Rochford, 2 Ves. 281; How v. Welden, 2 Ves. 516.
2. Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 443.

3. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 952, note.

4. 1 Parsons on Contracts (7th ed.) *389; Brown v. Lull, 2 Sumn. (U. S.) 443, in which case the shipping articles, which were otherwise in the ordinary form, provided that in case the vessel was taken or lost in the course of her voyage, no wages should be demanded nor received except the advance wages received at the time of entry on board; and that if the vessel should be restrained for more than thirty days at any one time, the wages should cease during such restraint. It did not appear that this provision was explained to the seamen, nor that they received on account of it any extra wages. The court of admiralty held that it therefore had no effect, saying, by Story, J.: "Whenever, therefore, any stipulation is found in the shipping articles which derogates from the general rights and privileges of seamen, courts of admiralty hold it void, as founded upon imposition or undue advantage taken of their necessities and ignorance and improvidence, unless two things concur: first, that the nature and operation of the clause is fully and fairly explained to the seamen; and secondly, that an additional compensation is allowed entirely adequate to the new restriction and risks imposed upon them thereby."

To a libel by seamen for wages, the defense was that the libellants agreed to look to the charterer only for their pay, and to relinquish their lien upon the vessel. It did not appear that the effect of this agreement was explained to them nor that an additional compensation was paid because of it. It was held not to be binding upon them. The Schooner Highlander, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 510.

A clause in the shipping articles reading: "If any of the said crew disobey the order of master or other officer of said vessel, or absent himself at any time without liberty, his wages due at the time of said disobedience or absence shall be forfeited; and in such case such person or persons so forfeiting wages shall be reinstated and permitted to do further duty, it shall not do away with such forfeiture," is in derogation of the general rights of seamen, and is not a defense to a suit for wages, it not appearing that its effect was explained or additional compensation given. The Almatia, Deady (U. S.) 473.

A clause of the shipping articles forfeiting all wages and property of the crew upon an unauthorized absence from the vessel for forty-eight hours, is void in a case where it was not properly explained to them. The Quintero, 1 Low. (U. S.) 38.

A stipulation to sue for wages in a to temptation to sacrifice future advantages for present and temporary gain, on the one hand; and on the other, they cause a violation of moral if not legal duties toward the ancestor or particular tenant. Such contracts are presumed to be invalid. The burden of proof is upon the one contracting with the holder of the expectancy to establish validity. To do this, he must show that the contract was fair and that it was upon an adequate consideration.¹

4. Those in Confidential Relations—a. THE GENERAL RULE.—This head embraces a large proportion of the cases involving undue influence. While the fact of relationship is always important, as assisting in the determination of the question whether or not there has been actual undue influence, the principal importance of the subject is in the presumption to which it gives rise—the rule being that, the existence of a fiduciary relation once established, there is a presumption against the validity of a transaction between the parties,² on the grounds of public policy.³

The term fiduciary or confidential relation, as used in this connection, is a very broad one. It has been said that it exists, and that relief is granted in all cases in which "influence has been acquired and abused—in which confidence has been reposed and betrayed."⁴

The origin of the confidence and the source of the influence are court of common law alone is binding only if fully explained. The Sarah Jane, B. & H. Adm. 401.

An agreement to forfeit wages on the seaman's leaving the ship without leave, unless explained, is void. Heard v. Rogers, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 556.

A stipulation that the master might displace a seaman whom he judged incompetent, and decrease his compensation, which was not brought especially to the attention of the seaman, was held void in Matern v. Gibbs, 1 Sprague (U. S.) 158. See also The Juliana, 2 Dods. 504; Harden v. Gordon, 2 Mason (U. S.) 541; The Australia, 3 Ware (U. S.) 240; The San Marcos, 27 Fed. Rep. 567; 3 Kent's Com. (11th ed.) *193.

1. CATCHING BARGAIN, vol. 3, p. 37; PARENT AND CHILD, vol. 17, p. 336; POST OBIT CONTRACT, vol. 18, p. 871.

English Rule.—The law is now changed in England by statute. No purchase of an expectant interest, if made bona fide without fraud or unfair dealing, can be set aside on the ground of under value only. 31 and 32 Vict. ch. 4.

2. Dunn v. Dunn, 42 N. J. Eq. 431; Tate v. Williamson, L. R., 2 Ch. 61.

This presumption is generally rebuttable by testimony which differs according to the relation in which the parties stand. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 232; Darlington on Personal Property, p. 73.

Independent advice to the party presumed to be influenced will go far toward rebutting the presumption. Rhodes v. Bate, L. R., 1 Ch. 252.

In Darlington's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 519; 27 Am. Rep. 726, the general requirements to rebut the presumption are stated by the court, by Trunkey, J., as follows: "To show the utmost good faith on his part, that he took no advantage of his influence or knowledge, and that he brought everything to the knowledge of the party which he himself knew."

3. Caspari v. First German Church, 12 Mo. App. 314. The doctrine that transactions between persons in confidential relations are prima facie voidable, rests "upon the importance of preventing a general public mischief, which may be brought about by means secret and inaccessible to judicial scrutiny, from the dangerous influences arising from the confidential relations of the parties." Trunkey, J., in Darlington's Appeal, 86 Pa. St. 519; 27 Am. Rep. 726.

4. Wherever one is in such a relation that he can exercise dominion over immaterial.¹ The rule embraces both technical fiduciary relations and those informal relations which exist whenever one man trusts in and relies upon another. The only question is, Does such a relation in fact exist?²

b. TRUSTEE AND CESTUI QUE TRUST.—(See also TRUSTS AND TRUSTEES, vol. 27, p. 1).—The application of the principle under discussion to the relation of trustee and cestui que trust results from the existence of the broader one, that a trustee cannot place himself in a position antagonistic to his cestui que trust,³ a principle which not only prevents him from purchasing or acquiring any adverse rights in the trust property,⁴ but which goes farther and creates a presumption against his dealings with his beneficiary. The rule as now established is as follows: All dealings between trustee and cestui que trust are presumed to be voidable as effected through undue influence exerted by the trustee upon the cestui que trust; they are binding upon the trustee, but prima facie voidable at the election of the cestui que trust.⁵

This presumption is rebuttable, however, by proof of perfect fairness on the part of the trustee, and thorough understanding and voluntary action on the part of the cestui que trust. This requirement will be met by satisfactory evidence that there was no actual undue influence, fraud, or imposition; that all material facts within the knowledge of the trustee, or which should have another, relief is given from all transactions which are not affirmatively shown to be fair and voluntary. Dent v. Bennett, 4 Myl. & C. 277.

1. McCormick v. Malin, 5 Blackf. (Ind.) 509; Huguein v. Baseley, 2 Lead. Cas. Eq. (Phila. ed. 1851), p. 74, note.

2. 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 956. The age of the party is not a controlling circumstance. Rhodes v. Bate, L. R., 1 Ch. 252; Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Cas. 770.

In Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Cas. 750, the rule is thus stated by the court, by Lord Wensleydale: "The relations with which the court of equity most ordinarily deals are those of trustee and cestui que trust, and the like. It (the principle under discussion) applies especially to those cases, for this reason and this reason only, that from these relations, the court presumes confidence put and influence exerted. Whereas, in all the cases where those relations do not subsist, the confidence and the influence must be proved extrinsically; but where they are proved extrinsically, the rules of reason and common sense and the technical rules of a court of equity are just as applicable to the one case as in the other." Beach on Modern Eq. Jur., § 114;

Cowee v. Cornell, 75 N. Y. 91; 31 Am. Rep. 428.

3. Trustee and Cestui que Trust.—Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 92; Ashuelot R. Co. v. Elliot, 57 N. H. 397; Puzey v. Senier, 9 Wis. 370. This principle is recognized by the code in California. Deering's California Code, vol. 2, §§ 2228-2233.

4. Staats v. Bergen, 17 N. J. Eq. 297; Winter v. Truax, 87 Mich. 324; 24 Am. St. Rep. 160; Morse v. Hill, 136 Mass. 60; Colburn v. Morton, 42 N. Y. 296; Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224.

5. Leach v. Leach, 65 Wis. 284; Schwarz v. Wendell, Walk. (Mich.) 267, where an agreement by which one-half of the benefit of a transaction into which a trustee entered on behalf of his cestui que trust, should go to the trustee, was declared not binding in equity, no evidence being produced to rebut the presumption against it. Where a conveyance from the cestui que trust to the trustee is avoided, the court will decree that the complainant repay the money which actually passed as purchase-money with interest, together with the amount expended by the trustee for permanent improvements. Smith v. Townsend, 27 Md. 390; 92 Am. Dec. 637. This presumption ex-been within his knowledge, were communicated to the beneficiary, and that the beneficiary acted knowingly, voluntarily, and freely.¹

Independent advice to the beneficiary is not essential,² but will go far to assist in rebutting the presumption.

The rule is most strictly applied to gifts.³ It must clearly appear that the gift sought to be upheld was intended as such.⁴

Contracts and conveyances stand upon the same principle and differ only in the amount of evidence required to sustain them.⁵ Inadequacy of consideration is a material circumstance, but not conclusive against validity.⁶ In all these transactions, the beneists in California under a provision of the code. California Civil Code, §§ 22, 35.

1. Miggett's Appeal, 109 Pa. St. 520; Spencer's Appeal, 80 Pa. St. 317; Coffee v. Ruffin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 509; Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 237; Beach's Modern Eq. Jur., § 118; Nichols v. McCarthy, 53 Conn. 299; 55 Am. Rep. 105; Sallee v. Chandler, 26 Mo. 124; Colton v. Stanford, 82 Cal. 351; 16 Am. St. Rep. 137, which held that where certain persons who stood in the position of trustees disclosed all the facts within their knowledge, there being no imposition or actual undue influence, and the one in the position of cestui que trust availed herself of independent advice and relied upon it, any presumptions of undue influence that might have existed in regard to contracts between them were fully rebutted.

Waldrop v. Seaman, 30 S. Car. 449, where an assignment to a trustee, of an interest in an estate by a cestui que trust, of full age and understanding, having independent advice, and no information being withheld by the trustee, was sustained, in spite of the fact that the price paid was a low one. The court, by Simpson, C. J., said: "If the parties are of full age, sui juris, and capable of understanding their rights, with full opportunity of ascertaining them, under no disability, advised of all the circumstances surrounding the matter or in a situation by reasonable and proper diligence to be thus advised, and they proceed, they must abide the result; and should their action subsequently result in loss, there is no reason . . . why the court of equity, or any other, should be called to protect them from loss."

In sales by a cestui que trust to his trustee, the test is defined as follows: Did he intend the trustee to buy? Was there any fraud, concealment, or advantage taken by the trustee of information acquired by him in his character of trustee? Bryan v. Duncan, 11 Ga. 77.

Farnam v. Brooks, 9 Pick. (Mass.) 234, where the rule is laid down that if the subject-matter of the contract is complicated, such as an account running through many years, all that is required on the part of the trustee in the way of disclosing the facts to the cestui que trust, is to give fairly and without equivocation such facts as lie in his mind and will be sufficient to put him on his guard as to the other circumstances.

The cestui que trust must be informed that the trustee is the purchaser, where a contract of sale between them is sought to be enforced. Otherwise there is no complete disclosure of all the circumstances. 1 Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 195; Randall v. Errington, 10 Ves. 423. The rule laid down in the text is substantially that in California, under the code. Deering's California Code, vol. 2, § 2230.

2. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 958.

But see Caspari v. First German Church, 12 Mo. App. 316, where a gift made by an aged widow to the church to which she belonged, at the solicitation of the pastor, who was also her business adviser, and having no independent advice, was set aside.

3. 2 Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 958. See Georgia Code (1882), § 2666.

4. Leach v. Leach, 65 Wis. 293.

5. The rule applies not only to a sale, but also to a conveyance of property as security for debt. Pairo v. Vickery, 37 Md. 485, where such a conveyance was set aside.

6. Juzan v. Toulmin, 9 Ala. 686; 44 Am. Dec. 448, which holds, however, that very great inadequacy is a badge of fraud, and from it undue influence may be presumed. But see Richardson v.

ficiary seeking to avoid them must act promptly.¹ Third parties have no interest and no right to avoid; as to them, they are valid and binding.² Like other voidable transactions, they may be ratified; but confirmation to be effectual must be intentional, and made with full knowledge of all the facts, the ignorance of which made the transaction originally voidable.³

Not only trustees proper are embraced in the rule, but quasi trustees of various kinds, as well as administrators and the like;⁴ but mere passive trustees, as trustees to preserve contingent remainders, are not, the reason of the rule failing as to them.⁵

Spencer, 18 B. Mon. (Ky.) 450, where a contract between a trustee and cestui que trust was set aside, the court saying that the inadequacy alone was a sufficient ground of avoidance. To the same effect is Pugh v. Bell, 1 J. J. Marsh. (Ky.) 399.

1. The question of laches is in one sense independent of the Statute of Limitations, but in another sense the two are related. Thus, where the matter in dispute is land, the court grants a longer indulgence than when it is personal property; the statutory period of limitations being longer. Hammond v. Hopkins, 143 U. S. 224. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 97, held a delay of eleven years, after discovery of the wrong, laches. In Pairo v. Vickery, 37 Md. 488, where a voidable mortgage was made in 1865; the grantor died in 1869; and a bill was filed by his representatives to set it aside in 1870, at which time the parties first had the benefit of legal advice and first ascertained their rights. It was held that there was no laches. See also article on "Effect of Lapse of Time on Suits in Equity," by George Wharton Pepper, Am. Law Reg. & Rev., vol. 32, no. 4.

2. Baldwin v. Allison, 4 Minn. 25.

3. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 96, where a bill for an account and settlement of an estate in the hands of an administrator who stood in the position of quasi trustee, and also in loco parentis to the complainant, was filed. It was held that a voidable settlement between the parties was not confirmed by the subsequent execution of a distributee's bond, the object of such a bond not being in any way to confirm a previous act, but merely to provide indemnity for future debts against the estate, and it not being in the contemplation of the parties that it would have any such effect. There was, therefore, no intention to confirm, and no confirmation.

Pairo v. Vickery, 37 Md. 485, where a deed of trust referring to a voidable mortgage, but not made with the intention of confirming it, was held not to have the effect of a confirmation.

4. Johnson v. Johnson, 5 Ala. 90; Maryland F. Ins. Co. v. Dalrymple, 25 Md. 242; 89 Am. Dec. 779.

Williams v. Powell, 66 Ala. 20; 41 Am. Rep. 742, where a bill to set aside a sale of an interest in an estate, made by a distributee to the administrator, was dismissed, there being no fraud nor neglect to disclose material facts. There was an adequate consideration, although the court did not regard this as a necessary element to the validity of the agreement.

Wright v. Smith, 23 N. J. Eq. 106, where relief was granted against a mortgagee to one who, although not strictly a trustee, yet stood in a trust relation. The court, by Dodd, V. C., said: "That he was not formally constituted an agent, with authority to bind the complainant, or that his agreement to act for him was not formally made, are points which, if true, are of no sort of importance. Nor is it important that no agreement was made to compensate him for his services. It is sufficient that he accepted and held a situation of trust in reference to procuring the lands. Every man has a trust to whom a business is committed by another. Every man is a trustee whose office is to advise or to operate, not for himself, but for others. . . . The rule extends to all cases in which confidence has been reposed, and applies as strongly to those who have gratuitously or officiously undertaken the management of another's property, as to those engaged for that purpose, and paid for it."

5. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 195;

c. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT—(See ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 942)—(1) Contracts.—For obvious reasons of public policy, dealings between attorney and client are closely scrutinized by the courts, and are sustained only if there be uberrima fides.¹ As to contracts between parties in such a relation, the rule is substantially the same as that applying in case of trustee and cestui que trust.² The same presumption arises, and it is rebutted in the same manner.³ The proof required for this purpose has the same elements as that which the trustee must produce, with the qualification that there are minor differences resulting from the nature of the relation between the parties, as Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 237; Pooley v. Quilter, 4 Drew. 189; Sutton v. Jones, 15 Ves. 587.

1. ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 959.

2. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 236; Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 268.

3. Burnham v. Haselton, 82 Me. 495, where an attorney, to whom a note had been given for collection, purchased it for less than one-third of its face value, without communicating to his client the facts, which were in his knowledge, that the debtor was perfectly able and willing to pay the note in full. The matter came before the court on an appeal from the lower court in a suit brought for money had and received, the client thereby seeking to recover the difference between the amount collected, and that paid the client for the note. It was held that there was a presumption against the validity of the transaction, and that it was error for the court to charge that the jury might consider the presumption of innocence, and the improbability that an attorney of established reputation would commit a wrong of this character, the court considering that these presumptions do not apply to an ordinary civil case of this character. The court, by Emery, J., laid down the rule that the attorney must "affirmatively show that there was in fact no abuse of confidence; that the contract was in fact fairly made; that the other party was in truth made acquainted with all the material facts and reasons known to the fiduciary. The very making of the contract is incongruous—prima facie inconsistent with the fiduciary relation. The transaction may be valid, but there is no presumption in its favor. The presumption is of invalidity, which can only be overcome, if at all, by clear evidence of good faith, full knowledge, and of independent consent and action.

... He cannot get behind the presumption of innocence and await the coming of hostile evidence. He must be aggressive, and advance against the presumption of invalidity and overcome it, if he can, by evidence of 'the perfect fairness, adequacy and equity of the transaction,' and particularly must he show that his client was informed of all material facts known to himself." To the same effect is Marshall v. Joy, 17 Vt. 546.

James v. Steere, 16 R. I. 367, where a man, sick and troubled by domestic affairs, conveyed property to his counsel in trust for his children, for the purpose of coercing his wife to a separation and settlement on advantageous terms, and with the understanding—although a mistaken one—that the lawyer had power to reconvey on the accomplishment of the object which he had in mind. The court set aside the conveyance, on the ground that it was the lawyer's duty to see that he acted understandingly, and it was immaterial whether there was any actual undue influence or not. It was held no defense that the conveyance was contrary to public policy, and that, were it not for the relation which existed, the parties would have been in pari delicto.

Similarly it was held in Goodenough v. Spencer, 15 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 248, that a conveyance from a client to an attorney, intended by both parties to hinder and delay creditors, might be set aside as against the attorney's grantee with notice. The presence of the fiduciary relationship prevents the usual effect of transactions between parties in pari delicto from attaching. To the same effect are Ford v. Harrington, 16 N. Y. 285; Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 270; Merryman v. Euler, 59 Md. 588; that the attorney must give in good faith legal advice as to the rights of the client in the matter.¹ The presence of independent 43 Am. Rep. 564, where an assignment of the mortgagee's interest in property to his attorney was declared invalid as an absolute assignment, but allowed to stand as security for money actually due, on the ground that it was prima facie voidable, although there was no proof of actual undue influence.

Mills v. Mills, 26 Conn. 213, where an ignorant man, in consideration of an agreement on the part of his attorney to give a bond for the costs of a suit, of a small loan, and of the expenses of the suit which the attorney advanced, conveyed to him real property worth three hundred dollars, the lawyer agreeing in writing to reconvey on the satisfaction of the client's obligations to him as above. It was held that the agreement was a mortgage, and the right to redeem it was not barred by the acceptance of ten dollars by the client, who did not intend it as a settlement, although it was so understood by the attorney.

The prima facie right which a client has to set aside a conveyance to his attorney, is a real interest and a devisable estate. Gresley v. Mousley, 4 De G. & J. 78; Stump v. Gaby, 2 De G. M. & G. 623. Greenfield's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 509, where a woman, aged eighty-six, and infirm, executed a deed conveying all her property of the value of $200,000, to four trustees, one her lawyer, who drew the deeds, two others, her confidential advisers who had great influence over her, and the fourth introduced to her by the others, for the purpose of acting as trustee, and the trust provided that $40,000 should be paid to the trustees for their services. The deed was set aside on the ground of presumptive fraud, although there was absolutely no evidence of actual fraud. The court, by Bell, J., said: "In this feature, the case presents what is called constructive fraud, springing from the confidential relations existing between the parties. This peculiarity, withdrawing it from the operation of ordinary rules, throws upon the beneficiaries the duty of showing expressly that the arrangement was fair and conscientious, beyond the reach of suspicion. . . . (The principle) has been beneficially applied to those confidences which owe their birth to the relation of parent and child, guardian and ward, trustee and cestui que trust, and, above all, attorney and client."

The attorney must show that his client executed the instrument under which he claims understandingly and freely in pursuance of a well-considered, defined, and settled purpose. Brock v. Barnes, 40 Barb. (N. Y.) 521. Where an attorney at law, who had acquired, as such, a knowledge of the title of his client to certain goods, purchased of claimants their right for a very inadequate consideration, recovered judgment for the whole amount for his own benefit, the assignment was adjudged to be void, and on the assignors refunding the consideration paid, a perpetual injunction was awarded. Arden v. Patterson, 5 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 44.

Montesquieu v. Sandys, 18 Ves. 313, where a purchase was made by an attorney of a reversionary interest held by his client, both parties being ignorant of its value, and the proposition to make the contract coming from the client, a bill to set aside the purchase was dismissed.

Cooper v. Lee, 75 Tex. 114, which applies the rules to purchases by a client from an attorney. And see Tancré v. Reynolds, 35 Minn. 476; Downing v. Major, 2 Dana (Ky.) 228; Smith v. Thompson, 7 B. Mon. (Ky.) 305; Gray v. Emmons, 7 Mich. 533; Starr v. Vanderheyden, 9 Johns. (N. Y.) 253; 6 Am. Dec. 275; Miles v. Ervin, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 524; 16 Am. Dec. 623; Bibb v. Smith, 1 Dana (Ky.) 582; Kisling v. Shaw, 33 Cal. 425; 91 Am. Dec. 644; De Rose v. Fay, 4 Edw. (N. Y.) 40; Taylor v. Barker, 30 S. Car. 238; Bingham v. Salene, 15 Oregon 208; 3 Am. St. Rep. 152; Place v. Hayward, 117 N. Y. 497, and cases cited in ATTORNEY AND CLIENT, vol. 1, p. 959.

1. Beach on Modern Equity Jurisprudence, § 121; Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 273; Morrison v. Smith, 130 Ill. 319; Felton v. LeBreton, 92 Cal. 457, where it was held that, when a client, through the inducement of his counsel, included certain property in a trust deed, the burden rested upon the counsel of showing that he fully advised his client of the legal effect and consequences of his act.

advice, whether legal or otherwise, is a circumstance peculiarly important in this connection, although it is not essential if the transaction be otherwise fair and valid.¹ The requirement that all material facts in the possession of the attorney must be communicated is very strict, and it is no defense that the attorney did not in fact have the information, if he might have procured it by the exercise of ordinary diligence.²

The prima facie disability of attorneys applies to purchases of the subject-matter of the litigation from their clients,³ to agreements other than with reference to such subject-matter,⁴ to assignments of mortgages,⁵ agreements as to compensation made after the relation has begun,⁶ to assignments of judgments, and,

In Dunn v. Dunn, 42 N. J. Eq. 431, where an assignment from a woman to her counsel was held invalid on the ground of presumed undue influence, the court, by Magie, J., held that the attorney was bound to give to the client disinterested advice, while she on her part must act freely and with knowledge. "We are not required to determine that the attorney actually failed in the performance of these duties. The invalidity of the transaction will result from a judicial determination that he has failed to show that he performed those duties." It must appear, in order that a contract between an attorney and client be upheld, that the client is no worse off than if he had consulted a disinterested lawyer. Rogers v. R. E. Lee Min. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 722. See also Miles v. Ervin, 1 McCord Eq. (S. Car.) 548; 16 Am. Dec. 623.

1. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 960; Readdy v. Pendergast, 55 L. T. N. S. 767, where a sale of a reversion, by the reversioner, to his solicitor was allowed to stand, although the seller had no independent advice. Contra, Lercombe v. Saunders, 34 Beav. 386.

2. Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 273; Howell v. Ransom, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 538; Rogers v. R. E. Lee Min. Co., 9 Fed. Rep. 722; 3 McCrary (U. S.) 76.

3. Yeaman v. James, 27 Kan. 195, where a conveyance of property in litigation was made by a client to his attorney upon an adequate consideration, and the jury found that the transaction was fair, and that the attorney had communicated to his client all material facts. It was held that the contract was unimpeachable. Taylor v. Young, 56 Mich. 289; Dunn v. Record, 63 Me. 17.

It has been held in some jurisdictions, that such transfers are void for champerty. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 202; West v. Raymond, 21 Ind. 305; Berrien v. McLane, 1 Hoffm. Ch. (N. Y.) 421; Merritt v. Lambert, 10 Paige (N. Y.) 358. But this doctrine is opposed to the current of authority. See article by Frank Hagerman, 14 Cent. L. J. 168, 172, and cases cited above.

It has been held that a sale by a client to an attorney, where it appears that the attorney, while negotiating for the property, was, at the same time and as a part of the same transaction, advising the client as to the probable outcome of the litigation concerning it, is void, even if made with good faith on the part of the attorney. Rogers v. Marshall, 3 McCrary (U. S.) 76; 9 Fed. Rep. 722 (annotated by Marshall D. Ewell); 14 Cent. L. J. 168 (annotated by Frank Hagerman). But see in this connection, Pacific R. Co. v. Ketcham, 101 U. S. 289.

Statutory provisions allowing attorney's fees to be settled by agreement of the parties, do not abrogate the rules governing purchases by attorneys of the subject-matter in litigation. Anonymous, 16 Abb. Pr. (N. Y. Super. Ct.) 423; Barry v. Whitney, 3 Sandf. (N. Y.) 696.

4. Tancré v. Reynolds, 35 Minn. 479; Jennings v. McConnel, 17 Ill. 148. It is immaterial that the conveyances sought to be impeached were not actually drawn by the attorney. Carter v. West (Ky. 1892), 19 S. W. Rep. 592.

5. Lewis v. J. A., 4 Edw. Ch. (N. Y.) 599.

6. Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 276; Phillips v. Overton, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 291; Bibb v. Smith, 1 Dana (Ky.) 580; Rose v. Mynott, 7 Yerg. (Tenn.) 30. An agreement after employment, that compensations shall be generally speaking, to all contracts and agreements between the parties.¹

In all of these matters the attorney, to be protected, should disclose to the client that he is the party with whom he is contracting. Concealment is a badge of fraud.²

(2) Gifts.—In regard to gifts the law is even stricter. As to them, there are three rules, each supported by authority. Some cases declare that all gifts from client to attorney are void;³ others pronounce them prima facie voidable and subject to the same rules as contracts between attorney and client;⁴ while a third class of increased, is invalid. Lecatt v. Sallee, 3 Port. (Ala.) 115; 29 Am. Dec. 249.

A contract between a client and an attorney, in which the attorney undertakes to resist a motion for a new trial, in consideration of a portion of the land involved, is binding on the client, if no concealment or improper practices were to be used, or were in fact used by the attorney in performing his part of the contract, and a court of equity will not refuse to enforce specific performance of such contracts. Ballard v. Carr, 48 Cal. 74.

But it has been held that the principle under discussion has no application to ordinary suits to recover professional fees. Isham v. Parker, 3 Wash. 755.

But a contrary rule is laid down in McMahon v. Smith, 6 Heisk. (Tenn.) 167, where a contract for fees of a lawyer was upheld only when he had cleared it of the presumption of unfairness and unreasonableness.

A statute allowing an attorney and client to contract for higher fees than those provided by law, does not abrogate the rule that, where the relation exists at the time of the contract, the onus of proving its fairness is upon the attorney. Thomas v. Turner, 87 Va. 1. See also Burling v. King, 46 How. Pr. (N. Y. Supreme Ct.) 452.

Such is certainly the rule where the relation exists and contracts for further and other services are made. Planters' Bank v. Hornberger, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 578.

1. As to assignments of judgments, Morrison v. Smith, 130 Ill. 304; Howell v. Ransom, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 538, where a client assigned a judgment for one-tenth of its value to his attorney. The transaction was set aside, it not appearing that the attorney communicated all the facts to his client. The question of whether or not there was actual fraud, was considered immaterial.

As to securities for loans which must be in ordinary form, or so explained that the client fully understands them, Beach on Modern Eq. Jur., § 121; Cockburn v. Edwards, 18 Ch. Div. 449, where a mortgage from a client to a solicitor, containing a provision for sale without the usual notice, on default of which provision was not explained to the mortgagor, was held void. The court, by Jessel, M. R., said: "The defendant, therefore, in the present case, is bound to show that he explained to his client, the plaintiff, the nature of the power of sale, supposing it to be in an unusual form. He was bound to take care that his client had the same protection as if he had employed an independent solicitor. A solicitor who lends money on mortgage to his client on any but strictly usual terms, would be wise if he always required the intervention of another solicitor. If that is not done, he must preserve evidence that the circumstances were explained to the client."

2. McPherson v. Watt, L. R., 3 App. Cas. 254, where the court considered a non-disclosure a fatal objection to the validity of a sale, and set it aside therefor. Howell v. Ransom, 11 Paige (N. Y.) 538. But see contra, Yeamans v. James, 27 Kan. 209.

3. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 236; Welles v. Middleton, 1 Cox 125; Tomson v. Judge, 3 Drew. 306; 24 L. J. Ch. 787; Holman v. Loynes, 4 De G. M. & G. 282; Newman v. Payne, 2 Ves. Jr. 200; Lecatt v. Sallee, 3 Port. (Ala.) 115; 29 Am. Dec. 249; Berrien v. McLane, 1 Hoffm. Ch. (N. Y.) 421.

4. Darlington on Personal Property, p. 73; Hunter v. Atkins, 3 Myl. & K. 135; Jennings v. McConnell, 17 Ill. 148; Greenfield's Estate, 14 Pa. St. 506. And see Edwards v. Meyrick, 2 Hare 60. In Nesbit v. Lockman, 34 N. Y. 167, where a client made a gift to the clerk of her attorneys, during the existence authorities lays down a rule which goes far to harmonize the cases in so far as they are not absolutely inconsistent, as follows: a gift from a client to an attorney is presumed to be voidable. This presumption can be rebutted by proof of knowledge and fairness, and by the further proof that, as to the matter in question, the relation of attorney and client did not exist, viz., that the client acted under independent advice.¹ The age, position, and intelligence of the client are not material; the relation must either have terminated or must at least pro hac vice have been suspended.²

of the relation, and it was found that it was "freely and voluntarily made and given by said Mary (the client), as and for a gift and donation by said Mary to said Lockman, with intent to transfer and deliver the said bonds and mortgages and check to him as his own, without any fraud, deceit or undue influence on the part of said Lockman, or advantage taken by reason of his business relations to her, and without suggestion or inducement on his part, but of her own free will and purpose," it was held that the complaint was rightly dismissed. It is to be observed, however, that the case does not consider the effect of the fact that it was an attorney's clerk, and not the attorney himself with whom the dealings were had. The opinion implies, however, that the rule is the same in all confidential relations.

In Whipple v. Barton, 63 N. H. 613, where an action of assumpsit was brought by a client against his attorney, the defense was that the money claimed was a gift. Judgment was given for the plaintiff, on the ground that there was no preponderance of evidence in favor of the defendant, the court, by Carpenter, J., saying: "To establish a gift from a client to his attorney, in whatever form the question may arise, it is incumbent upon the latter to show affirmatively, not only that it is voluntary, but also that it is made with full knowledge on the part of the client of all material facts known to the attorney, and that it is not brought about by undue influence, either actually exerted or arising from the relation between them."

1. Beach on Modern Eq. Jur., § 122, where it is said: "It is not necessary, in order to sustain such a gift, that the relation of attorney and client should cease in general and in respect to other matters; it is enough that the client has independent advice in respect to the matter of the gift, and that the attorney is not the advisor in hoc re. The circumstance that there was or was not independent advice is the all-controlling one." To the same effect is Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (4th ed.), § 960, note. Re Holmes' Estate, 3 Giff. 337, 346, where the Vice Chancellor thus states the rule: "That relation (attorney and client) is only looked at as creating the influence; and as soon as circumstances of evidence are introduced which remove all effect of the influence, whether the relation subsists or not, if the influence of the solicitor is removed, there is no incapacity on the part of the solicitor to become the object of his client's bounty and to be the recipient from his client of a gift which will be valid at law and in equity."

2. In Morgan v. Minett, 6 Ch. Div. 645, where releases of debts given by a client to an attorney were set aside, on the ground that while the relationship continued there could be no gift, it was held to be immaterial that the attorney had sent another and disinterested attorney to the client, who to him affirmed his previous act, no independent advice being given by that attorney. In order to render a gift good, the relation must be severed, and there must be independent advice. See also Walker v. Smith, 29 Beav. 394.

"In regard to gifts, the rule is definitely settled, although it may not always have been followed by American courts, that no gift from a client to his attorney, made while the relation is still subsisting, is valid. In order that a gift from a client to his own attorney may be sustained, the donee must not only show affirmatively the perfect good faith of the transaction, the absence of any pressure or influence on his own part, the complete knowledge, intention, consent and freedom of action on the donor's part, but it must also appear that, pro hac re—that is, in all the dealings connected with the gift itself—the relation of attorney and

(3) Who Is an Attorney.—In determining who is an attorney within the rule above stated, courts do not closely regard the technical significance of the word. The term includes not only a lawyer regularly admitted to practice, but one who, though unadmitted, assumes to give legal advice and attend to legal business.¹ Any other rule would put it into the power of a man to shield himself behind his own wrong.² An attorney's clerk comes within the meaning.³

The principle applies only to dealings between a man and his attorney.⁴ Where such a relation does not exist, it is immaterial that one of two parties to a contract is a lawyer.⁵

In order that the usual presumptions may arise, the contract or gift must be made after the relation is established. If the client between the two parties has been suspended, by means of independent advice furnished to the client by some disinterested and competent third person, through which the client was instructed and upon which he acted." Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 960.

As to gifts to an attorney by one lately a minor, in Georgia, see Georgia Code (1882), § 2666.

1. Pomeroy's Eq. Jur. (2d ed.), § 960; Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 203. Thus, one who, although not a licensed attorney, attends to suits before the justice courts, and advises in legal matters, comes within the rule. Freelove v. Cole, 41 Barb. (N. Y.) 318. And one who, although not a lawyer, acts as the confidential advisor of a party in a suit before a magistrate, and represents him in the magistrate's court, is also embraced. Buffalow v. Buffalow, 2 Dev. & B. Eq. (N. Car.) 241.

2. Article by Frank Hagerman, 14 Cent. L. J. 172.

3. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 203; Hobday v. Peters, 28 Beav. 349; 6 Jur. N. S. 794; Nesbit v. Lockman, 34 N. Y. 167; Poillon v. Martin, 1 Sandf. Ch. (N. Y.) 569, where a managing clerk in the office of an attorney, purchased from a client of his employer a mortgage, paying therefor bills of little value. It was held that there was a presumption against the validity of the transaction, which was not rebutted; and it was decreed that the mortgage be restored to the client. The court, by Sandford, Ass't V. C., said: "Nor do I feel any difficulty in extending to this transaction the principle so justly applied to purchases by attorneys and solicitors. Not that I would say that in every case the principle should be applied to a clerk in the office of the attorney. Each case must depend upon its circumstances. It is well known that in the course of professional business, where there are two or three partners, and, as is usual, a principal clerk, the latter will necessarily be brought into contact with many of the clients, oftener than either one of the partners, and not unfrequently obtain the confidence of some clients to a far greater extent than the partner who has but seldom met with these clients. Yet such partner, although there may be no sort of intimacy between him and the client, nor any real confidence or influence, cannot purchase of that client without subjecting himself to the burden of proving that he advised the client against himself, as he would have done against a stranger bargaining for the same property. And it would be trifling with this great and valuable principle of equity to say that while the partner is thus restricted, the clerk having the client's confidence, could buy of him property, the existence and situation of which came to his knowledge as clerk, and negotiate and consummate the purchase in the office of the attorneys, on the same footing that he could deal with an entire stranger. . . . I do not consider the rule of equity so lame, as not to afford protection to clients against the influence thus naturally and inevitably acquired."

4. But the rules apply in the case of a purchase by an attorney from the trustee of his bankrupt client, the theory being that the client has an interest still, and is really one of the contracting parties. Luddy v. Peard, 33 Ch. Div. 520.

5. In Stout v. Smith, 98 N. Y. 25; parties stood "at arm's length" at the time of the transaction, any relationship subsequently arising will not affect its validity.¹ The relation continues until the business in which the attorney is employed is finished,² and until the influence resulting from the relation is at an end, even though considerable time has elapsed since the employment was ended.³ If the influence is no more, the fact of the prior relationship is immaterial.⁴

A relation of attorney and client once proved is presumed to continue until the contrary is shown.⁵ Its cessation may be proved by affirmative acts or lapse of time,⁶ but the mere fact that the services of the attorney are not called into play of itself proves nothing. There may have been no occasion for them.⁷ Where the attorney has assumed the attitude of a pressing creditor, and as such deals with his former client, the presumptions no longer apply.⁸

The lawyer, however, must be employed in a professional capacity, such as trying a case, advising on points of law,⁹ searching titles,¹⁰ representing clients in insolvency proceedings,¹¹ and the like. If the business is altogether minor and such as gives the attorney no insight into the client's affairs and no control over his will, no presumption arises against the validity of the transactions.¹²

50 Am. Rep. 632, the rule is laid down that the fact that a party to a contract is an attorney, and, offering himself to do so, draws the papers, making no charge, does not establish the relationship of attorney and client, nor impose upon the attorney the duties of that relationship, nor raise any presumption of undue influence exerted by him upon the client.

1. Davis v. Freethy, 24 Q. B. Div. 519. But where a man is about to employ a lawyer as his attorney, and the latter visits him for the purpose of arranging the terms of the employment, the relation has begun, and the usual presumptions exist. Ryan v. Ashton, 42 Iowa 365.

2. Weeks on Attorneys at Law (2d ed.), § 268. In Rhodes v. Bates, L. R., 1 Ch. 252; 4 Giff. 670, where the solicitor advised his client to employ his London agent, but continued to actively interfere in the client's behalf, the relation of attorney and client was held to continue.

3. Bispham's Principle of Equity (4th ed.), § 236; Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 202; Mason v. Ring, 2 Abb. Pr. N. S. (N. Y. Ct. App.) 322, where transactions which took place eight months after the technical relationship had ceased, the influence still continuing, were set aside. Coffee v. Ruffin, 4 Coldw. (Tenn.) 509.

4. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 202; Oldham v. Hand, 2 Ves. 259; Wood v. Downes, 18 Ves. 127; Tancré v. Reynolds, 35 Minn. 476; Phillips v. Overton, 4 Hayw. (Tenn.) 291.

5. PRESUMPTIONS, vol. 19, p. 75; 1 Greenleaf on Evidence (15th ed.), § 41; Rhodes v. Bates, L. R., 1 Ch. 259; 4 Giff. 670.

6. Beach on Modern Eq. Jur., § 115.

7. Rhodes v. Bates, L. R., 1 Ch. 260; 4 Giff. 670, where the court, by Turner, J., said: "Where a relation of confidence is once established, either some positive act or some complete case of abandonment must be shown in order to determine it. The mere fact that the relation is not called into action, is not, I think, sufficient of itself to determine it, for this may well have arisen from there having been no occasion to resort to it." To the same effect is Ahearn v. Hogan, 1 Drury 323.

8. Bispham's Principles of Equity (4th ed.), § 236; Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 202; Johnson v. Fesemeyer, 3 De G. & J. 13.

9. See notes 4 and 5 page 470.

10. The rule extends also to non-professional men who, as a business, examine titles and make abstracts. Vallette v. Tedens, 122 Ill. 607; 3 Am. St. Rep. 502.

11. Broder v. Conklin, 77 Cal. 330.

12. Perry on Trusts (4th ed.), § 202;

d. PHYSICIAN AND PATIENT—(1) Gifts and Contracts.—The same presumption arises in regard to contracts and conveyances between a physician and his patient as in the case of like dealings between an attorney and client,¹ with this qualification, that it is one not so difficult to overcome, for the reason that, as the physician does not deal with property matters, his influence as to them will probably be less than that of the attorney or other confidential business agent.² The presumption is, however, of the same kind, and is rebutted by the same evidence of fairness, good faith, knowledge, and free agency on the part of the persons contracting.³ As the physician has to do generally with those either Devinney v. Norris, 8 Watts (Pa.) 314; Wendell v. Van Rensselaer, 1 Johns. Ch. (N. Y.) 350, where it was held that the fact that one party to a contract was an attorney, and occasionally did small business for the other as a scrivener, did not raise a presumption of fraus annexa clienti.

